If raked and bunched by my Improved "Acme" Rake, the hay is in very much better shape to reload and deliver on the Stacker evenly and level (loading the rakes all they will carry to the stack), and spreads well over the stack, saving labor in stacking, because it has not been tangled, as it is when gathered with the sulky or revolving rake. It also saves waste of leaves and seeds, and gathers the hay clean of trash, such as old stubble, stalks and lumps of dirt. Bear in mind that windrowing hay with any rake is labor thrown away, and is detrimental to the neat and most economical working of the "Acme" Hay Harvesting Machinery.

The "L. C. Smith" Guns.

As PRIZE WINNERS we challenge any other make of Gun to make a showing like the following:

All Previous Records Broken.

Never before were 100 live pigeons killed straightly in a similar match under same conditions, until the L. C. SMITH GUN was made and did it. In the hands of Mr. Al Bandle, of the firm of Bandle Arms Co., Cincinnati, Ohio, this wonderful score was made. Capt. A. H. Bogardus scoring with a 12-gauge L. C. Smith in the match against Bandle, the very high score of 95. A remarkable score with a 12-guage.

Whensoever you Hold your Hand Even with the Pommel, it Slackens the Curb; if in the Middle of the Pommel, it is Slacken'd more; if upon his Neck, it is Slackned most, because it is Farthest from the Perpendicular Line: and the Higher you hold your Bridle-Hand above the Pommel, the Curb is Straightned the more; because you can pull Harder, and go Neerer, by that means, to the Perpendicular Line. The Hand should never be above two or three Fingers above the Pommel, a little Forwarder, and Easie, but Firm; for there is nothing makes a Horse go more of the Hanches, than a Light Hand, and Firm; for when he hath nothing to Rest on Before, he will Rest Behind; for, he will Rest on something; and when he Rests Behind, that's upon the Hanches: A Leight Hand is the greatest Secret we Have; but there is no Horse can be Firm of the Hand, except he Suffers the Curb, and Obey it.

MY OPINION for SPURRS.

The Spurrs ought rather to be Long-Neckt, than Short-Neckt; because with Long-Neckt Spurrs, the Rider makes less Motion, either in Correcting, or Helping his Horse, which a good Horseman should alwayes Do; for he that is the Quietest on Horse-Back, is the Greatest Master; for ill Horse-Men cannot sit still on Horse-Back

The Fashion of the Spurrs should be A la Conestable, the Wans not too Long, and Compas'd, and Black Sanguine; the Buckles and Rowels of Silver, not Burnisht; because they do not Rust as Iron, and therefore Ranckles not a Horse's sides so much. The Rowels should contain Six Points, for that Hits a Horse Best; Five Points are too Few: And the Rowells should be as Sharp as possible can be; for it is much Better to let him Bleed Freely, than with Dull Spurrs to raise Knobs and Bunches on his Side, which might give him the Farsey; but Bleeding can do him no Hurt, when Dull Spurrs may: Besides, there is nothing doth a Horse so much Good, as to make him Smart, when you Correct him: There is, therefore, nothing like Sharp Spurrs, being used Discreetly, to make all Horses whatsoever Know them, Fear them, and Obey them; for until they Suffer, with Obedience, the Spurrs, they are but Half Horses, and never Drest.

The Shambriere is too Dull a thing; and so are all Whips, Hand-whips, and all; Whips of Wyre fetch Blood, but not in the Right place, as Spurrs do. A Bulls-Pisle is good for a Colt, before you wear Spurrs, but afterward it is too Dull; a Smart Rod is much Better than any of them; but the Spurrs beyond all.

Of the Several CORRECTIONS, and HELPS with the SPURRS.

First, the Correction of the Spurrs being a Punishment comes After a Fault is Committed, either to put In his Buttock or Croup, when he puts it Out; or else to put it Out, when he puts it too much In, when he should be Entier; this is to be done with one Spur, and sometimes with both Spurrs: He is to be Corrected with both Spurrs when he is Resty, and will not go Forward; or to Settle him on the Hand, when he Joggles his Head, then both the Spurrs will do him Good; or when he is Apprehensive, and Ombrageux, the Spurrs may do him good; or that he offers to Bite or Strike, then the Spurrs will divert him; or that he Rises too High, or Boltes, then give him the Spurrs; when he is falling Half-way down, then the Spurrs will Cure him; but if you give him the Spurrs, just when he is Rising, then it may bring him Over, if he will not Advance, which is to Rise before: then a good Stroke with both the Spurrs, will make him Rise; if he be a Dull Jade, then Smartly to give him the Spurrs is good; or that he is Lazy, or Slack of his Mannage, then to give him the Spurrs Quickens him.

And so the Spurrs are for many things as a Correction, and therefore you must give them as Strongly, and Sharply, still as you can, with all your Strength; and have very Sharp Spurrs too, that he may Feel them to the Purpose, so that Blood may follow; for otherwise it is not a Correction: You must Strike the Horse alwayes some three or four Fingers behind the Girthes, and sometimes towards the Flancks, if it be to put In his Croup: And, believe it, there is nothing like the Spurrs; for, What makes him Sensible to the Heel, but the Spurrs? Therefore, use them, and Use them until he Obey you; for no horse can be a Ready-Horse, until he Obeys the Heel.

But, Remember you do not Dull him with the Spurrs; for then he will not Care for them no more than a Stone, or a Block; therefore you must give them Sharply, when you give them; but give them but Seldom, and upon just occasion.

When he Maliciously Rebells against What you would have him Do, leave not Spurring of him, and Soundly, until he Obey you: And when he Obeys you in the least Kind, Leight off, and send him to the Stable, and the next morning Try him again; and if he Obey in the least Kind, Cherish him, and make Much of him; and Forgive him many Faults the next morning, that he may see you have Mercy as well as Justice, and that you can Reward, as well as Punish.

And now you see, Corrections are Better than Helps, and of what great Efficacy the Spurrs timely and discreetly given, are for the Dressing of Horses: for there is but the Hand and the Heels, and so the Spurrs are Half the Business in Dressing Horses; only the Hand hath the Pre-eminence: Though there be two Spurrs, and but one Bridle, because the Horse hath but one Mouth, and two Sides; yet, if the Horse be not Settled upon the Hand, you cannot make him Subject to the Heels. But the Correction of the Spurrs is so Necessary, and Effectual, as no Horse can be made a Ready-Horse without them; and therefore esteem them Highly, next setting a Horse upon the Hand; which must be First.

All Helps are to Prevent Faults, and to go before Faults; as Corrections come after Faults, to Punish for Offending. The Spurrs are to be used as a Help thus: When the Horse goes Terra a Terra, your outward Legg close to him when he Slacks, turn your heel to him to Pinch him with the Spurrs; which you may easily do, even to Blood, and no Body perceive it; for that ought to be done Neatly, and Delicately, because the Spurrs are a neat, and most Excellent Help, and the Quintessence of all Helps in the Mannage; and if the Horse Suffer and Obey this, whilst you stay him on the Hand, you may say, he is an Excellent Horse.

This Quickens him, and puts him Forward; but yet let me Tell you, Though this is an excellent help for Terra a Terra, yet it is not so good a help for Terra a Terra, as it is for all Ayres; either to Pinch him with both the Spurrs, or but with one: And the Reason, is, Because it makes him Croup more, and puts him Together on his hinder-Parts, then puts him Forward; and therefore more proper for all manner of Ayres, than for Terra a Terra, though very good for both.

There is another help with the Spurrs, which I call a help, because it is not so Violent as a Correction, and is not so Pressing as Pinching; but between Spurring and Pinching; And that is Thus: When the horse Gallops his Croup In, or Terra a Terra, if he Obeys not the Legg enough, being close to him, or very near it, then make the Motion with your Legg, as if you did Spurr him, and hit him with your Spurr, with as gentle a Touch as can be; and no more than to let him Feel it a little; and this is the Gentlest of all things, with the Spurrs, which makes him Obey the Spurrs, and puts him Forward, and is excellent for Terra a Terra, or Le petit Gallop his Croup In, and much Better than Pinching; for it puts him Forward, and makes him Obey the Spurrs at the same time; but it is not good for Ayres; for there he should Leap Upwards, and go Forward, but very Little; and therefore Pinching is Best for Ayres, because it Raises his Croup, and therefore goes not Forward; and that little Touch with the Spurr, like Sparring, is good for Terra a Terra, and Le petit Gallop his Croup In, because it puts him Forward, and makes him Obey the Spur.

If your horse Understands this Correction, and the two several Helps with the Spurrs, being made Sensible to him, you may be well Assured he will Need none of them after a while, but be so Sensible, as he will go Freely, and Obey you Willingly, only with the Calf of your Legg; for the Help of the Thighes is a Ridiculous conceit: for indeed, there is no Helps but the Spurrs, and the Calf of the Legg, that the Horse can possibly Feel.

When you are Stiff in the Hamms, which is putting Down your Heel, then the Calf of the Legg comes to the Horse, but the heel is removed from him. When you Bend in the Hamms, which is to put Down your Toes, then the Calf of the Legg is removed from him, but the Heel comes to him. These are as Great Truths, as they are Secrets.

There is nothing in the world makes Horses Resty and Vitious many several Wayes like the Spurrs, given out of time: and nothing in the world Dresses horses perfectly, like the Spurrs given in time.

Now you have the Perfection of the Hand and the Heels, which is the only thing to Dress Horses perfectly withal, and nothing else.

Of THE ROD.

The Rod we use seldom for a Correction, but for Helps, and that many times more for Grace, than Use; for one Rod will serve us half a Year: 'Tis the Hand and the Heels that Dresses horses, and nothing else.

The Helps with the Rod, are not so good for Souldier's Horses, for they should go only with the Hand and the heel; for the Sword must be in your Right hand, and not the Rod: But you may use it, to Shew it still on the contrary side on which he Goes, or hold it up with a Grace at every Change.

For Terra a Terra with the Rod.

On the Right Hand, hold Up your Rod high, with a Grace, and give him sometimes a Blow on the Shoulders, if there be need; and sometimes a Blow over the Shoulders upon the Croup, if he Requires it.

For Terra a Terra on the Left hand, hold the Rod up high, or put it to his Flanck, with a Grace, and hold it there during his Voltoes, or give him a Blow with it on the Flank, or on the Shoulder, if he requires it.

Use the same helps with the Rod, upon Demy-Voltoes, or Passadoes: For the Piroite, hold it on the Contrary side still.

For Corvets with the Rod.

On the Right hand in Voltoes, hold the Rod somewhat Short, and Help him cross the Neck, with a Grace, sometimes Touching him, and sometimes not; and a good Blow now and then, if he Requires it: On the Left hand in Corvets, Help him on the Right Shoulder, with a Grace, and a Just time.

Another Help with the Rod in Corvets, is, To hold the Rod a little Long, and to Whisk, and Shake it Forwards and Backwards, with your Arm up, but not Straight, rather Bowing a little in the Elbow: When you go Forward, the Horse's right side to the Wall; there is no Help with the Rod more Graceful, than to Strike the Wall perpetually with the Rod.

TO
Leaps.

To Whisk the Rod Forward, and Backward, is a Graceful Help, but it Forces a Horse a little too Forward, until he be Used to it.

To help the Horse with the Rod, not over your Shoulder, but over the Bent of your Arm, your Arm from your Body, and a little Bowed, so that the Point of the Rod falls in the middle of his Croup, is a graceful Help, but sometimes difficult to do.

But the best and surest Help, though not so Graceful; is, To turn the Rod in your Hand, the Point toward the Horse's Croup, and help him so every time, and in time, one Stroke only; but if he Raises not his Croup enough, then Help him De tout temps, which is with two or three Strokes together, in Time: And this is the Surest help

If your Horse be very Leight Behind, which few are, then Help him only before with the Rod, and in Time.

If you would make your Horse only Croup with his Hinder-parts, and not strike out, then Help him on the middle of his Croup; if you would have him strike Out, then Help him with your Rod, on the setting on of his Dock: And if you would have him put both his Hinder-Leggs under his Belly, then Strike him with the Rod a little above the Gambrels. So these three several helps with the Rod, makes your Horse to Croup, to Strike out, and to put his Hinder-Leggs under his Belly.

But there is no help with the Rod, like Helping him with two Rods; one to Raise him before, and the other Rod to help him under his Belly; which puts him so much upon the Hanches, as nothing is like it, or near it, upon Corvets, when he is Tyed Short, my New Way, at the Single Pillar.

Of THE VOICE.

The Voice is used three manner of Ways; Either as a Correction, by Threatning; or as a help, to Incourage the Horse; or as a Courtship to him, by Flattering of him; which all Three, we seldom or never Use: For it is not the Sense of Hearing, or Sight, but the Sense of Touch, and only the Hand, and the Heels, that Dresses Horses perfectly.

Of The TONGUE.

The Help of the Tongue is an Excellent help to Incourage, and to put a Horse Together, either in Terra a Terra; but especially in all Ayres, nothing Better.

How Horses are to be REWARDED & PUNISHED:
And That FEAR doth Much; LOVE, Little.

It is Impossible to Dress any Horse, but first he must Know, and Acknowledge me to be his Master, by Obeying me: That is, He must Fear me, and out of that Fear Love me, and so Obey me. For it is Fear makes every Body Obey, both Man and Beast; and therefore see that he Fears you, and then it is for his own sake he Obeys you; because else he would be Punished: And Love is not so sure a Hold, for there I Depend upon his Will; but when he Fears me, he Depends upon Mine; and that's a Ready Horse: But if I Depend upon his Will, that's a Ready-Man. Therefore Love doth no good, but Fear doth all: And so let them Fear you, which is the Ground of Dressing all Horses whatsoever. And this is the Counsel of a Friend.

Pluvinel, and most of the Great Masters in Horse-manship, Praise always Gentleness, and Flatteries, and making much of horses, either by Clapping, Stroking them, or speaking Flatteringly unto them, or giving them some Reward to Eat: And Pluvinel says, One ought to be a Prodigal in Caressing, and making much of them, and a Niggard in Corrections, and careful not to Offend them; and that there is no other way to Dress horses but this. But some Horse men Never make much of them, or very Rarely; neither Abroad, before they get Up, when you Ride them, nor when they Light, nor in the Stable; and yet these horses go Well. They do not Threaten them with the Voyce, or ever Speak to them, and no doubt but they do it on Purpose to keep them in Subjection, and Fear of them: For Familiarity breeds Contempt; and Curtesie doth no Good, but makes them Presume; and fear makes them Diligent still to Obey.

Neither do they use the Rod at all; no more do I; for one Rod will serve me almost a Year; nor use the Voyce, but a good hand, and Good heels, which only Dresses horses; and seldom lets a Fault escape without Punishment. When they have Corrected them one Morning, it may be they will Spur them the next Morning; but Otherwise never Correct them without a Fault; and if they make none, they are not Punisht; and there's their Reward. Certainly this may be good for Dressing of horses.

For my part, when they do Well, I Cherish and Reward them; and when they do ill, I Punish them; for, Hope of Reward, and Fear of Punishment, Governe this whole World; not only Men, but horses: And thus they will Chuse the Reward, and Shun the Punishment. They are Punisht with nothing but the Spurrs, for all Whippe, even of Wyre, Chambrieres, or Bulls-Pisles, are Toyes. The Rod is more for Grace than Use; but Reward, or no Reward, is nothing at all in Comparison of the Art of Riding: For, let an Ignorant Fellow (which most are for any thing I can perceive) Flatter his horse and not Punish him; or Punish him, and not Flatter him; or Punish and Flatter him; yet I will not Flatter the Rider, but will tell you, He shall Spoil your Horse, let him do what he will; because he wants Art.

Opposition in Horses
AGAINST the RIDER,
A Signe of STRENGTH and SPIRIT.

Be not Discouraged if your Horse do Oppose you, for it shews Strength, Spirit, and Stomack; and a horse having all Those, cannot chuse but be made a Ready-Horse, if he be under the Discipline of an Understanding Hand, and Knowing heels.

When a Horse doth not Rebel, it shows Weakness, and faintness of Spirit, and no Courage; and where Nature is so much Wanting, it is hard for Art to Supply it: But truly I never knew any Horse in my Life, but before he was perfectly Drest, would Rebel, and Extreamly too, and a great while before he would go Freely; but a little still, against his will, until he be perfectly Drest.

Certainly there is no Horse but will Strive at the first in the Dressing, to have his own will, rather than to Obey your will; nor doth any Horse love Subjection, nor any other Creature, until there is no Remedy, and then they Obey; and the Custom of Obedience makes them Ready-Horses: They will Strive all the Wayes possibly they can, to be Free, and not Subjected; but when they see it will not be, then they Yield, and not before. So they Deserve no Thanks for their Obedience.

No man in the World, no, not the Wisest, if he were put in the Form of a Horse, with his Supreme Understanding, could possibly find out more subtle Wayes to Oppose a Man, than a Horse will; nay, nor near so many, I dare say: Whence I conclude, That the horse Must know you are his Master; that is, he must Fear you, and then he will Love you for his own Sake: Fear is the Sure hold; for Fear doth All things in this World: Love little; and therefore let your horse Fear you.

Death of a Noted Brood Mare.

The famous old broodmare Countess by Whipple's Hambletonian, dam of Dawn (2:19½) and Strathway (2:26), died at Lakeport, Cal., on March 27th. For two months she had been unable to rise without help, but when lifted to her feet would with great courage, walk rapidly away, and ate heartly to the time of her death. She was due to foal by Anteeo, on the third of April.

Alcona Jr.

Frequently of late enquiries have come to this office asking for the pedigree of Alcona Jr., and as there seems to be a difference of opinion in regard to the matter, we publish the following, the original documents being in our possession:

About two years ago Alcona Jr. was brought from Oregon (where he had been taken by his present owner, Mr. McLafferty) to California, and stood in Sonoma County. It was while there that a report was spread that Alcona Jr. was by Almont and not by Alcona. Mr. W. T. Withers, from whom Mr. Skinner purchased Alcona and five brood mares, Madonna being of the number, sent Mrs. Skinner the annexed letter, signed by his son:

LEXINGTON, KY., March 18, 1889.

MRS. SILAS SKINNER, Napa City, Cal.

DEAR MADAM: Yours of 9th just received. Some time since Mr. Roadheaver wrote to me inquiring about some stock, and in speaking of Alcona Jr. he said that he looked so much like a son of Almont that he felt confident that there was some mistake about his being by Alcona. He asked me to look and see if Madonna was bred to Almont before being shipped to California. On referring to Almont's book, I find that Madonna was bred to him on May 4, 1880. Mr. Rodeheaver did not know on what day Alcona Jr. was foaled, and of course I could not tell whether the horse was by Alcona or by Almont. If Alcona Jr. was foaled after May 15th, he cannot possibly be a son of Almont as no mare ever carries her foal over 12 months and 15 days, and not one in a hundred will carry it 12 months, and young mares very seldom run longer than 11 months and 15 days and frequently foal before 11 months expire. If Alcona Jr. was foaled May 27 as you state, then he is certainly a son of Alcona.

I did not intend to cast any reflections on your husband's honesty, but simply furnished Mr. R. with the facts in the case. I knew that if Alcona Jr. was by Almont, Mr. Skinner was deceived, and badly deceived, for the foal would have been much more valuable, being by Almont, and as the season was settled for before the mare left Kentucky, it could not possibly be to his interest to misrepresent the matter unless he thought it would be a credit to his horse Alcona to be the sire of such a colt as the produce of Madonna was. This, I have no idea, can be the case. Respectfully,

WM. T. WITHERS, JR.

After reading the above it is hoped that there will be no more dispute as to the sire of Alcona Jr., for the books and Mr. Withers' letter prove the matter conclusively.

A Suggestion About the Produce of Brood Mares.

A full sister to Prince Wilkes has been foaled in Kentucky. She is a bay in color, well formed, and has been named Princess Wilkes, says the Breeders Gazette. The foal of last year from the dam of Prince Wilkes was a bay colt, and after Mr. France, its owner, had refused $5,000 for the youngster, it took sick and died. As a rule the brothers and sisters of famous trotters have never shown anything like the speed of their distinguished relatives. There are four brothers and sisters of Maud S., but from one cause or another they have never developed the ability to trot fast. Lord Russell, the brother to the Queen of the Turf, was a fast colt, but an accident in the stable injured one of his legs so that he was not trained. There was a full brother to Rarus that could never trot fast enough to sweat, and instances of this kind could be multiplied almost indefinitely. The family to which St. Julien belonged was an exception, as his full sister Unalala made a record of 2:22¼, which is certainly a respectable one, and his brother St. Remo got a mark a trifle below 2:30, so that three of the family were in the 2:30 list and will have their names on the books as being standard by performance. Huntress, a daughter of Volunteer that placed to her credit the record at three miles and subsequently got a record of 2:20¼ at a mile, is a full sister to Trio, that placed 2:23¼ to her credit, and still another sister very appropriately named Sister, got a record of 2:30¼ at a time when she could easily have beaten 2:30, but an accident prevented her doing this, so that she is still just outside the line.

This incident shows that in many cases it would be unfair to judge a brood mare wholly by what representatives she has in the 2:30 list, as provided she have two or more only those that are standard by performance will be mentioned in the tables where her name will appear, whereas as a matter of fact she may have, just as in the case of Lady Sears, dam of Huntress and Trio, another son or daughter that is outside the line by a fraction of a second only; and of course in considering the mare's position in the breeding ranks this outsider would be taken very seriously into account by men who were giving the subject intelligent thought and yet in nine cases out of ten they would never know anything about the outsider simply because its name did not appear in the list. It would be a good scheme, and add greatly to the value of lists of great brood mares, to have all of their produce that have made records of 2:40 or better given under the dam where she is entitled by virtue of having produced two or more that have beaten 2:30, to appear in the lists of notable brood mares.

An English Letter.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—According to promise I send you a short letter, hoping to do better in the future, but if this mail is not caught it will be old news before it reaches you. Well, to business. I arrived here from the Northampton and Pytchley Hunt meeting, where we had a glorious time, the weather being of the best, the crowds large, and the sport very exciting. The only races which will interest you are the two big events, the first being the Ascot Plate, a five furlong dash, which was a source of surprise to all the touts, as a rank outsider carried off the prize. The strong tip was Mr. Leopold de Rothschild's Wayland, the winner of the Althorpe Parks stakes. Eight starters came to the post, all of which were more or less supported in the books, Carthusian being a good second choice.

The field got off well together, Carthusian having a shade the best of it. For the first three furlongs they were all bunched and it looked anyone's race, but at the half, Ulva began a fine finish, which was participated in by Carthusian and the favorite. A better bit of work was never witnessed, and it was only the superior preparation which Rothschild's horse had received that enabled him to beat out Calmont's bay colt by a couple of lengths, Wayland quitting when four and a half furlongs had been negotiated. The following are the conditions and

SUMMARY.

The Ascot Plate of £450 for two year-olds; entrance £3, the only forfeit if declared by the first Tuesday in February, or £10 in addition if left in after that date; the second to have £50; colts to carry 126, fillies, 123 pounds; winners of £300, 3 pounds, twice, or one of £600, 7 pounds; of the Brocklesby or Althorpe Park Stakes, 10 pounds extra; closed Oct. 30, 1888, with 41 subscribers, of which 17 declared; five furlongs.

Duke of Portland's ch f Ulva, by Master Kildare, dam Staffa, 121.... 1
H. McCalmont's b c Carthusian by Trappist, dam Pope Joan, 126 2
Mr. Leopold de Rothschild's b c Wayland by Fetterlock, dam Chopinette, 123, including 10 extra..... 3
Five others ran.
Bookbetting:—Wayland 6 to 4; Carthusian 4 to 1; Ulva 20 to 1.

The winner is a fine, large chestnut colt, with a good bit of speed, and it is a great pity that he only has eight engagements, for I think he would make his mark.

The Great Northamptonshire stake fell to the stable of Lord Howe, who in Claymore has a good all round horse, although he has not had many opportunities to show what he can do. Last year he was only started twice, running unplaced for the Royal Hunt Cup at Ascot, but winning the November handicap at Manchester, with consumate ease, when the odds were 15 to 1 against him. The handicapper evidently undurated him for yesterday's race, as he gave his field an easy fifteen pound beating, winning with ridiculous ease by five lengths from Mr. Rothschild's Cotillon, who was three lengths in front of Mr. Burton's Barmeceide. Conditions and

SUMMARY.

Great Northamptonshire Stakes of £600, by subscription of £4, the only forfeit if declared by Messrs. Weatherby on February 5, or £10 in addition if not so declared, and a further subscription of £10 each for starters; a handicap for three-year-olds and upward; winner of any race of the value of £200 after the publication of the weights (Jan. 30th), to carry five pounds extra; twice, or one of £400, 10 pounds extra; the highest weight accepting was 128 pounds; it was raised to 124 pounds, and the others in proportion; closed January 1, 1888, with 29 subscribers, of which 13 declared; mile and three-quarters.

You will remember of course, when the Kempton Park folks announced their great guarantee stake of £10,000, and the surprise created among sporting people when the handicap filled and was carried to a successful conclusion. The folks in the black country not to be outdone, then instituted the Lancashire Plate, guaranteed to be worth £11,000, and now last but not least, comes this little Hosiery city and gives a purse the value of which is £12,000. It had been confidently expected that Chitabob would also start, but a few days ago he was scratched, his owner not thinking him fit to go a punishing race in such company as he was liable to meet. Your old friend Waters, of the White Swan Hotel, paid me every attention and wants to be kindly remembered to you. I drove out to Oadby in his carriage and met there many of your English friends, who think it a shame you do not write them. I saw Tom Emmett, of the Manchester Umpire, and also Bro Hill, of the Sporting Telegraph. The accommodations are far superior to what they were, when we last visited this course together. The stand is much improved, the new spirit in the club having turned things topsy turvey and made the surroundings much more pleasant than when you were here last. Naturally, Donovan was the favorite, and was the only object of attention from the great crowd present. His appearance was all that could be desired, favorable comment being heard everywhere. Still there were some who seemed to think that he had not improved as much as a three-year-old should, and money was not lacking for the other sixteen starters. By permission of the H. R. H., the stakes had been named, the Prince of Wales Stake and the heir apparent was present to witness the sport, although his person was guarded by a large force of detectives, information having been sent to the authorities, that a plot was on foot to assassinate the coming king. There was no occasion for the sensational rumor, as everything passed off in good shape, and there was no trouble of any kind to mar the pleasure of the day. The race is hardly worth describing for from the fall of the flag to the finish there was not a horse in the field that could make the favorite extend himself, and the mighty son of Galapin won in a common canter by two lengths from Pioneer, who was second, with Minthe third, three lengths behind Pioneer. The winner as you are aware, was our great sensational two-year-old, and landed about £16,500 in stakes and purses for his owner, the Duke of Portland last year. He is a grandly put up colt and will take a world of beating, in fact to my notion he will prove another Ormonde. I know this will make you annoyed owing to your decided preference for the Duke of Westminster's grand horse, but I am honest in my convictions, and you will have to give in before the snow flies that I am right. I have bored you enough already, so will finish by giving you the Horse Records.

A Perfect Pen Picture of the Principal Horses on the Turf.

Here is a description of the 27 leading horses of the turf, with their best records. The list will be found extremely useful to all lovers of horse racing, says an exchange. It is arranged in alphabetical order.

ARAB.—Bay gelding (trotter), out of Hercules, by Gen. Benton; foaled in 1878. Best record 2:15, when 10 years old, at San Jose; Cal., on Sept. 29, 1888.

ARROW.—Bay gelding pacer, out of Crichton's first, by A. W. Richmond; foaled in 1883. Best record 2:14¼, when five years old, at Cleveland, O., on Aug. 1, 1888.

BELLE HAMLIN.—Brown mare (trotter), out of Troy, by Hamlin's Almont; foaled in 1879. Best record 2:13¾, when six years old, at Cleveland. O., on Sept. 16, 1887.

BUFFALO GIRL.—Bay mare (pacer), out of Kit Freeman, by Pocahontas Boy; foaled in 1873. Best record 2:12½, when 10 years old, at Buffalo, N. Y., on Aug. 2, 1883.

CLINGSTONE.—Bay gelding (trotter), out of Gretchen, by Rysdyk; foaled 1875. Best record 2:14, when seven years old, at Cleveland, O., July 28, 1882.

FAVONIA.—Bay mare (trotter), out of Fadette, by Wedgewood; foaled in 1879. Best record 2:15, when nine years old, at Buffalo, N. Y., Aug. 10, 1888.

FLORA BELLE.—Black mare (pacer), out of Untraced, by White Cloud; foaled in 1874. Best record 2:13¾, when nine years old, at Buffalo, N. Y., Aug. 10, 1883.

FULLER.—Bay gelding (pacer), out of Dolly, by Clear Grit; foaled in 1878. Best record 2:13¾, when five years old, at Mayville, Md., May 17, 1883.

GUY.—Black gelding (trotter), out of Flora Gardner, by Kentucky Prince; foaled in 1880. Best record 2:12, when eight years old, at Cleveland, O., Oct 29, 1888.

GOSSIP, JR.—Brown gelding (pacer), out of Nelly, by Gossip; foaled in 1877. Best record 2:13¾, when 11 years old, at Buffalo, N. Y., on Aug. 8, 1888.

GEM.—Bay mare (pacer), out of Lady Gem, by Tom Ralfe; foaled in 1874. Best record 2:13¾, when nine years old, at Rochester, N. Y., on Aug. 14, 1883.

HARRY WILKES.—Bay gelding (trotter), out of Mollie Walker by Geo. Wilkes; foaled in 1876. Best record 2:13½, when 11 years old, at Sacramento Cal., on April 2, 1887.

JAY-EYE-SEE.—Black gelding (trotter), out of Midnight by Dictator; foaled in 1878. Best record 2:10, when six years old, at Providence, R. I., Aug. 1. 1884.

JOHNSON.—Bay gelding (pacer), out of Dam, by Ned Forrest, by Joe Bassett; foaled in 1877. Best record 2:06¾, when seven years old, at Chicago, Ill., Oct. 3, 1886.

LITTLE BROWN JUG.—Bay gelding (pacer), out of Lizzie, by Tom Hal; foaled in 1875. Best record 2:11¾, when six years old, at Hartford, Conn., Aug. 4, 1881.

MAUD S.—Chestnut mare (trotter), out of Miss Russell, by Harold; foaled in 1874. Best record 2:08¾, when 11 years old, at Cleveland, O., July 30, 1885.

MAJOLICA.—Bay gelding (trotter), out of Jessie Kirk, by Startle; foaled in 1876. Best record 2:15, when nine years old, at Providence, R. I., Sept 5, 1885.

MATTIE HUNTER.—Chestnut mare (pacer), out of Unknown, by Prince Pulaski; foaled in 1872. Best record 2:12¾, when nine years old, at Pittsburg, Pa., July 16, 1881.

PATRON.—Bay stallion (trotter), out of Beatrice, by Pancoast; foaled in 1882. Best record 2:14¼, when five years old, at Cleveland, O., July 29, 1887.

PRINCE WILKES.—Chestnut gelding (trotter), out of Rose Chief, by Red Wilkes; foaled in 1881. Best record 2:14¾, when seven years old at Cleveland, O., Aug. 3, 1888.

ROSALINE WILKES.—Bay mare (trotter), out of Cigarette, by Conn's Harry Wilkes; foaled in 1882. Best record 2:14½, when six years old, at Poughkeepsie, N. Y., Aug. 24, 1888.

RICHBALL.—Brown gelding (pacer), out of Geneva, by King Pharaoh; foaled in 1876. Best record 2:12½, when seven years old, at Pittsburg, Pa., July 27, 1883.

ROWDY BOY.—Black gelding (pacer), out of Untracted, by Bull Pup; foaled in 1871. Best record 2:12¾, when eight years old, at Rochester, N. Y., Aug. 14, 1879.

STAMBOUL.—Brown stallion, out of Fleetwing, by Sultan; foaled in 1882. Best record 2:14¾, when six years old, of San Francisco, Cal., Oct. 26, 1888.

WESTMONT.—Chestnut gelding (pacer), out of Annie, by Almont; foaled in 1876. Best record 2:13¾, when eight years old, at Providence, R. I. Sept. 11, 1888.

First on the list of trotters comes the queen of the turf, the $40,000 purchase of Robert Bonner from the late W. R. Vanderbilt. Maud S. early showed an ability to trot fast, and with the exception of the short day for which Jay-Eye-See held the supremacy her mark has been the object for the attack of the whole trotting world for years. Maud S is by Harold, by Hambletonian 10, from Enchantress, by Abdallah, and has the blood lines which have produced almost all that are known in the trotting world as phenomenal performers. She has been owned by gentlemen who would not let her campaign, and it has long been the opinion of the best judges, says the Boston Globe, that she could lower her mark any time during the past three years. Maud S. was foaled in 1874, and is now fifteen years old. She was eleven when she made her record, and is to-day, in the opinion of her owner, faster than ever before.

There are thirteen horses living that have trotted in 2:15 or better, and the average age of the lot when they have attained their maximum speed is 7.923. This is no criterion of the age at which a horse is at his best, for it can be seen by reference to the table that during 1888 six horses made a record which it is reasonable to suppose will be lowered as they mature.

The horses which have shown extreme trotting speed at an early age have been Patron, Jay-Eye-See, Rosaline Wilkes, Belle Hamlin and Stamboul. All outside of Patron beat 2:15 as six-year-olds. Jay-Eye-See made his record in 1884, and is now eleven years old. Belle Hamlin trotted her fast mile in 1887, and was not worked out last season to such an extent. Rosaline Wilkes and Stamboul showed their speed last season, and Stamboul has probably been given all the track work he will ever have. Next in order come Clingstone and Prince Wilkes, all within a quarter of a second of each other. Clingstone was foaled in 1875, and is, therefore, a year younger than Maud S. Patron has been in the stud since his wonderful appearance in 1887, and to Prince Wilkes falls the prospective honor of disputing the supremacy with Maud S. This great youngster is thought by horsemen to be the fastest trotter living, and his breeding warrants the assumption. His mark was obtained last August at Cleveland in a race. He is by Red Wilkes, and his dam is by Mambrino Chief. His sire has shown the potency of the old Wilkes strain. Up to last year Prince Wilkes had shown 29 heats better than 2:30, and his mark of 2:16 when he opened last season's campaign was easily broken. He has demonstrated his ability to train on, and this year will be a great horse.

Guy was the sensational horse of last season. He is third in all the list of fast trotters, and even at that looked as if he were to encroach on the lines shown by the little black son of Dictator. He was comparatively unknown the year before. He is now nine years of age.

Stamboul, the great son of Sultan, is one of the three trotting stallions now living that have gone better than 2:15. Stamboul is seven years of age, by a great sire out of a well bred dam, whose only produce have been fast or producers of speed. Stamboul is a grand instance of the advance of the trotter. As it is an acquired gait, the best son of a sire should be a better horse than his father, and it is to this principle that such breeders as Backman, Rose and Stanford owe their prominence. Arab is noted as the purchase of John Shepard, the well known Bostonian. He will be used as a roadster, though should he be seen on the circuit piloted by that great reinsman, James Golden, it would not surprise those who take interest in the sport.

The fastest clip ever shown at any gait recognized by the the National Association of Trotting Horse Breeders is the 2:06¾ of pacer Johnson, which was made in Chicago in 1884. In connection with this it may be stated that the improvement in trotting is more marked in recent years than in the side wheel gait. Only two of the phenomenal marks were made last season, these being by Arrow and Gossip Jr.

The long jump between Johnson and the next in order is one which four years of work has not served to lesson. Not a single one of the full 27 date their performance beyond 1879, and of the number eight were not foaled when Rowdy Boy made his record.

In the alphabetical list at the head of this article appear the names of 27 of the fastest horses living. Of the number 16 are geldings, eight are mares and only three are stallions. There are two fast ones of the latter class which are not included. These are Maxie Cobb, 2:13¼ (dead), and Phallas, 2:13¾, who is in the stud.

The improvement in the track could not be attested by any statement of facts to such an extent as a careful study of the table will show. The better to testify to the work of progress the accompanying statement of the record at different decades since 1800 may be found interesting.

From 1800 to 1810 the only mark better than three minutes was held by Yankee, and was made at Harlem, June 18, 1806. Wallace claims that this mark was made on a short track. From 1810 to 1820 two horses got marks as good as three minutes. One of these was Boston Blue, who, at Jamaica, N. Y., in 1818, trotted in three minutes flat. Eight years prior to that Boston Horse went a mile in 2:48½.

In the next decade only long distance records were the order, but in the following 10 years Edwin Forrest trotted in 2:31½, while Sally Miller completed a mile in 2:37. Oneida Chief pased a mile in 2:31, and in 1839 Dover got under the wire in 2:28. The year 1844 saw Lady Suffolk trot in 2:26½, and Moscow, in 1845 got a heat in 2:30. The following three years produced no good record, while in 1849 Lady Sutton trotted in 2:30 and James K. Polk paced in 2:27. In the same year that Lady Suffolk made her record, the chestnut gelding Unknown paced a mile in 2:23.

Between the years 1850-60 Flora Temple flourished as the greatest living trotter. In 1859 she made her great 2:19¾ record, which stood till 1867, when Dexter cut it down by two and a half seconds. 1852 the roan gelding Pet paced a mile in 2:18½, and a year after Dexter made his record Billy Boyce paced in 2:14¼. St. Julien made the mile in 2.13¾, which supplanted Dexter, and the present 10 years is shown in the above table. In St. Julien's time Sleepy Tom, 2:12½, and Rowdy Boy, 2:13¾, were the great pacers. Thus gradually succeeding years have witnessed the growth of the American trotter from the time when three minutes was the greatest speed attained.

The fastest stallions by records that have ever lived are Maxie Cobb, Phallas, Patron and Brown Hal (the pacer). Mares are Maud S., Belle Hamlin, Goldsmith Maid and Trinket; geldings, Jay-Eye-See, St. Julien, Rarus and Harry Wilkes.

Of the horses above mentioned, some enjoy some special distinction. Maud S. not only has the fastest mile on record, but has the best mark in a race, 2:13½, and with Aldine has the record (double) against time, 2:15½. The record (double) in a race is held by Arab and Conde, 2:18¾. Johnson is the fastest pacer against time and in a race to wagon. Westmont, 2:13½, has a mark of 2:01¾ with running mate against time.

It is interesting to note that since 1830 the side wheelers have always led the van. They have had the best of the gait from first to last. Oneida Chief beat Edwin Forrest's time. The gelding Unknown beat Lady Suffolk's record. Pet and Pocahontas were faster than Flora Temple. Billy Boyce and Yankee Sam were faster than Dexter. Sleepy Tom paced a mile at a quicker gait than St. Julien could trot it, and now Johnston has two seconds and a half the better of Maud S.

The yearling class has three prominent representatives. The first and greatest is Norlaine, by Norval, from Elaine. She trotted a full mile in 1887 in 2:31½. Sudie D., the daughter of Fanny Clay, by Sherman Hambletonian, has shown a mile in 2:35¾, while Hinda Rose, by Electioneer, dam Beautiful Bells, by the Moor, has 2:36½ to her credit at this age. Sunol is the most wonderful two-year-old the world has ever seen, and her 2:18 is by far the greatest performance of last season. Sable Wilkes has 2:18 as a three-year-old, and there are others in the 2:30 list. The four-year-olds are a large body, and as five-year-old performers Jay-Eye-See 2:10, and Patron, 2:11¼, take the lead.

The Blood Horse Association.

Last Monday night the Directors of the Pacific Coast Blood Horse Association met at the Palace Hotel to conclude final arrangements, prior to the coming meeting. M. F. Tarpey was in the chair, the others present being Ariel Lethrop, Col. H. I. Thornton, P. A. Finigan and Joseph C. Wolfskill, the absentee being J. B. Haggin, who is in Europe at present. The opening business was the consideration of the bids for the bookmaking privileges, there being quite a number who had made application for the right. After some discussion the board awarded the privilege to the San Francisco Bookmakers Association, for the sum of $1,000 per day. It was stated that the Association would grant to responsible outside "bookies" the right to ply their business on payment of a fee which was to be named later on. As usual the poolselling was relegated to the firm of S. B. Whitehead & Co., they agreeing to pay over to the Directors, 70 per cent. of the gross commission.

On the conclusions of the "penciling" business, the meeting talked over necessary improvements in the manner of manageing track affairs, and many decided improvements were agreed upon. Hereafter all jockeys will carry a number on the arm next to the grand stand corresponding with the number on the programme, so that spectators can tell at a glance, what the name of the horse is; there are several stables that have colors so near alike that mistakes have frequently occured in trying to distinguish one horse from another.

Another innovation, carried on motion of P. A. Finigan, was, that hereafter no liquor shall be allowed in the judges stand. It is therefore presumed that the gentlemen officiating in the stand will have but few callers. Three of the directors have full authority to appoint judges, timers, etc., J. C. Wolfskill, of Solano, being the member of the board selected as one of the judges for the entire meeting, to represent the association in the stand. A saddling paddock will be arranged just inside the inner rail and no outsiders under any consideration will be allowed therein. No person will be allowed on the stand unless he be connected with some one of the stables. The reporters' stand will be kept exclusively for working newspaper men and only those having a reporters badge will be allowed to pass the guardian, who will have charge of the steps leading up to the stand. Each day a director will have charge at the gate to supervise and control the employes, who handle the money and take the tickets, while another of the members of the Board will superintend matters in front of the stand and weighing room.

A proposition was laid before the Board relative to the race programmes issued on each day of the meeting, the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN offering to provide correct cards of the various events and distribute them free of charge to the patrons of the association. On motion the propcsal was accepted, the idea of free programmes striking the Board as an excellent suggestion. We were actuated in this move by a desire to return, in a slight degree, the many obligations which we are indebted for to the members of the association who have so generously assisted us in the past in trying to forward the interests of this paper, and establishing it as the turf authority of the great Pacific Coast.

Mr. Thomas Francis Meagher was appointed to the very thankless position of starter, but he is made of the stuff that will be obeyed, and the masses will undoubtedly be pleased when the flag falls for each race, for Mr. Meagher will use every precaution to see that all the horses get an equal start. Mr. Harry Lowden, as usual, was selected as superintendent of the track and clerk of the course. His work we all know will be well done.

Spanish Charley.

Sible, the jockey who rode Galgo in the race against Dave Douglas on Friday has an interesting history, says the Los Angeles Tribune. He is known throughout Southern California as "Spanish Charley," and is the oldest jockey in California, and in the United States, with probably one or two exceptions. It is twenty years since Sible rode in this city last, and there are few in Los Angeles who remember "Spanish Charley," the celebrated jockey in the pioneer or golden days. It was Sible who rode Salaya in the match race against Mountain Boy at San Juan, in which over $60,000 was dependent upon the result. Salaya won the race in 1:43 in the year 1869. Sible has lived in Central America for the past twenty years, and gave the writer considerable information about racing in that faraway country.

"I have been training horses for Mr. Edwards, the Minister of Finance of Santiago," said Spanish Charley to Dagworth. "He is a millionaire and owns a large ranch. The Ensays is the principal race in Chili. It is worth about $5000 and corresponds with the Derby in this country. The Pineba is for four year-olds, and the Final for five-year-olds and upwards. La Capa, or Cup, is a weight for age race, but a different scale is in vogue in Chili. It is modeled more after the English plan, with the American scale of weights. There is very little betting on the races at Santiago. The trainer and driver generally receives the bulk of the winnings as the patrons of races down there just race for the sport. When I first went to Santiago I brought a string of horses with me from America, and won nearly all the big races with them. Lady Washington, by Woodburn, won a mile race in 1:42½, which is the fastest time ever made in that part of the country."

"I trained By-the-Sea in the race against Catamaran at Lima Peru in 1874. The match was for $50,000 with gentlemen riders up. By-the-Sea was imported from the States. He won the race with 124 pounds up, and made the mile in 1:43½.

"Sible trained for Tom Mott in 1858 and 1859 at the old Los Angeles track, which was distant about a mile and a half from the center of the town. He also trained and rode for Theodore Winters in '63, '64 and '65."

CORRESPONDENCE.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—In your report of the races at San Jose, I noticed the following errors, which I wish you would please correct in your next issue:

Race No. 5—The weights should be: Nerva, 111; Welcome, 111; Lady Helen, 97; Black Pilot, 107, and Vidette, 115.

No. 9—Milpitas stakes, half mile heats. April 2d. The placing was as follows:

(1) White Cloud	1	1
(2) Bogus	2	2
(3) Nerva	5	3
(4) Johnny Grey	3	4
(5) Ito	4	5

Nerva being third instead of Johnny Grey.

No. 12—Almaden stakes, for three-year-old. The placing should be as follows:

Geoffrey	First
Faustine	Second
Glen Ellen	Third
Wild Oats	Fourth

In the race between Al Farrow and Geraldine, each carried 95 pounds, being 2 pounds over weight. Geraldine ran the one-quarter in 23, the half in 48, the five-eighths in 1 minute, the three-quarters in 1:13, and the mile in 1:40¼; Jack Brady the mile in 1:41½, and Nerva in 1:41¾.

In regard to the forfeits against Susie S., to the credit of the horsemen, I think the following should be published instead of what was printed in your last issue:

Before the races at San Jose, it was understood by general consent, that whoever won the races would not hold the forfeits against Mr. Stephenson, and the following gentlemen having won the races on which Mr. Stephenson was entered destroyed the forfeits; Mr. R. P. Ashe, two forfeits; Mr. C. V. Tupper, one forfeit, and Mr. H. Stover, one forfeit. Yours very truly,

CHARLES T. BOOTS,
Secretary San Jose B. H. A.

San Jose, April 14, 1889.

The Wonderful Arab, 2:15.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—There is no subject of national interest in which the public has been so villianously deceived as in that of the breeding of our trotting performers. The most barefaced frauds have been perpetrated over and over again, and allowed to pass into history without protest. I have watched this rascally effort to befool the public in regard to the true breeding of this wonderful horse very closely, and am satisfied that the word of the breeder should be taken in the matter.

The letter of Mr. F. S. Malone, which appears in the issue of February 23d of your valued paper, I am carefully preserving for future use. It bears on its face convincing evidence of a very deep-seated indignation that, having bred the horse himself, his testimony should be disputed for the purpose of making capital for a "stud hoss" that never saw the dam of Arab. And your comments, Mr. Editor, on Mr. Malone's letter bear conclusive evidence of a very deep-seated indignation and disgust on your part with the whole villainous affair. I have watched every issue of your valued paper since Mr. Malone's letter appeared, to find a reply to his letter, but he has evidently silenced the whole gang.

When Arab first demonstrated his wonderful powers you gave his breeding as follows: Sired by Electioneer, dam Lady Hercules by imp. Hercules; second dam Nettie George by Norfolk, son of Lexington. It now appears that General Benton was his sire. That mistake is unimportant, however, the breeding of the mother of such a wonder is of vastly more interest at the present day than that of the sire. Your able and interesting correspondent, Mr. Peck, says (and truly says), that the mare is sixty per cent. of the foal. Had he made it seventy-five he would have been nearer the truth.

These fellows attempted to carry water on both shoulders, as you must have noticed, as while this fight about the paternity of Arab was going on, his dam was suddenly transformed into a "myth" called Lady Hamilton, "breeding unknown." It is perfectly safe to say that this Lady Hamilton never had an existence, and you know, and I know, and everyone knowing a horse from a jackass, knows that it is a physical impossibility for a cold blooded mare to produce such a wonder to the cover of any stallion of any breeding whatever that ever lived, much less a "stud hoss" that never possessed the ability to "run" a mile in 2:15 and carry a monkey. I see that a trio of "omniscient" censors in New York have decided "by the evidence" that Arab was sired by Arthurton (son of Rysdyk's Hambletonian), and his dam Lady Hamilton, breeding unknown.

This, I believe, is the same trio of brilliants who assuming infinite knowledge, decided that the dam of Pilot Jr. (whose breeding had stood undisputed for nearly forty years) was unknown—and not one of whom possessed sufficient gumption to discover that it was simply the entering wedge to a ganzy scheme to destroy the pedigree of Maud S., she being a fearful black eye to the "not a drop of running toolishness in the trotter" doctrine—and not until the attempt to prove Sally Russel a "dunghill," did they get their eyes open to the true inwardness of the scheme.

Now, Mr. Editor, unless it can be shown that the dam of this trotting wonder was a "winged prostitute," flying to the embraces of every stallion on the Pacific slope, this whole affair is an insult to an intelligent public. What is the meaning of all this tomfoolery about the breeding of this particular horse? That somebody bred him is certain—Mr. Malone says he bred him, can it be shown that he was not his breeder? If not, is it not a piece of sublime impudence for a trio of plyant tools three thousand miles away to assume infinite knowledge, and tell the world how he was bred? They know as much about his breeding as my canary, and not one whit more. We want no more Dexter and Goldsmith Maid tricks (to say nothing of the hundreds of other lies), to pass into history as truth.

Of Mr. Malone I know absolutely nothing. His letter, however, has the ring of the true metal, and inasmuch as no one has replied to him he has evidently told the truth. In your notice of his recent sale, you give his breeding the same as at first, viz: By Electioneer, dam a thoroughbred daughter of Imp. Hercules. This Mr. Malone says is correct as to the dam, but that General Benton, (and not Electioneer) was his sire.

Had this horse been an ordinary performer instead of one of the greatest combinations of speed and stamina that the world has ever seen, we could have afforded to allow his bogus pedigree to be added to the hundreds of other barefaced lies with which the register abounds, but to be asked to believe that the trotting wonder is the result of the union of any stallion with a "nothing" is simply an insult to an intelligent public.

There has been sufficient perjury committed in regard to the breeding of this horse to sink the whole Pacific Slope. Walter T. Chester, of the Turf Field Farm, in his complete 2:30 list has got him by Arthurton, dam Lady Hamilton by Ethan Allen—next—

Until this trio of Wiseacres undo what they have done in this matter, they will have a buzzing about their ears that will be anything but pleasant.

Wallace gives the dam of Joe Arthurton as said to be by Langford. Was she also a winged prostitute?

How to Feed Horses.

Those who have examined the stomach and bowels of the horse and the ox are aware that the former is not one quarter the capacity of the latter. Physiologists and anatomists inform us that the stomach of a horse will hold about sixteen quarts and the intestines a hundred and nine quarts, while the stomach of an ox will hold two hundred and fifty quarts and the intestines only one hundred quarts. Considering digestion takes place in the stomach of each, it is important to know how each should be fed. Food passes from both animals frequently undigested, and it were well to know the cause in both cases. The ox chews a cud, i. e., masticates the food the second time. Consequently, such food as requires the most mastication should be given him last, or just before his hours of rest and repose. And thus it is that when corn is fed him in the morning, just before turning out to pasture, or the first thing in the evening, before his rough food or that containing less nutriment is given him, the former is seldom if ever sufficiently masticated, and so passes out of the system with much of its nutritive qualities still in it. With the horse the thing is quite different. The mastication is all done at one and the same time, and therefore it is important that the strongest and most concentrated food be given him first, so that the digestive organs may have time to act upon it. The stomach only holds a certain amount of food, with the necessary quantity of saliva, (generally about four times the weight of the food) to aid in its digestion. And if he is fed with hay immediately after eating his oats or corn, the latter is forced out of the stomach into the intestines before its full strength is appropriated by the system, and so passes out with much of its nutritive qualities still retained. So with watering a horse immediately after eating his oats or corn, the latter is forced along before it has been properly digested. The stomach of all domestic animals is an intricate laboratory, worthy the research of the best minds. Notwithstanding which a large class of feeders act as if there was a straight channel through the animal, and therefore think that one who is capable of feeding a threshing machine is just as well qualified to feed horses and cows; whereas really in the latter case, the field of thought and experiment is so large that much of the time now spent in idleness could be profitably employed in learning the habits and requirements of our domestic animals, teaching the same to our sons and employes who do the feeding.—Clark's Review.

How to Get a Mare in Foal.

A correspondent writes the Rural World as follows on a subject of importance to breeders:

"Sometimes it is difficult to get mares to breed. It may be they are valuable mares, and mares with splendid pedigrees, and their foals would command high prices if bred to good sires. There is scarcely a breeder that has not one or more mares to trouble him this way. The writer had a mare of this kind that he had purchased for breeding purposes, by Ethan Allen, and out of a fast pacing mare. She was somewhat advanced in years, and for four years I had tried to get her in foal. I had bred her to different stallions. She would periodically come in season, and was as regularly bred, receiving one, and perhaps two services at each of such periods. Believing that she was permanently barren, I was trying to dispose of her at a merely nominal sum. Being at Kalamazoo, Mich., about a year ago, inspecting the trotting stock of S. A. Browne & Co., of that city, I was telling him of my trouble with this mare—that I had tried for years to get her in foal, and that I was confident she would never breed.

Mr. Browne—who, by the way, I consider one of the best horsemen in the United States and one of the cleverest of gentlemen—said to me, 'Send her to me, and I will see that she gets in foal.' He said he had a number of just such cases, and he had never failed to get them to breeding; but I was so positive that it could not be done that I would not send the mare to him. I asked him, however, what he would do to cause her to breed, and he said it might be necessary to insert the hand to open the passage-way of the womb, if closed, which horsemen understand, at the time she came in season, and then let the stallion cover her once a day during her entire period of heat, and the mare would be almost certain to conceive; that sometime during the period the egg that is deposited would become fertilized, and the mare in due course of time would have a foal. He said that he had never failed to succeed in this way. I received this information last January a year ago, and immediately wrote to my superintendent to try the experiment the first time the mare came in season. She did come in season the 1st of February, and the stallion was bred to her for five days in succession, when she refused him, and on the 5th of January of this year, she dropped a fine horse foal, and both are doing well. By not having this information I had kept this mare for four years at heavy expense, and had wasted time and effort to accomplish a result which could have been very easily obtained at any single period of heat, probably, during that four years. I shall feel under lasting obligations to Mr. S. A. Browne for the information he gave me."

A few days ago a self-made man and a mule met in Fresno, says the Republican. The self-made man was a veterinary surgeon, he said, but the mule was sick and said nothing. The doctor prescribed a large able-bodied pill for the mule, about the size of an English walnut, composed of aloes, Turkish rhubarb, jalop and a few other motive powers. He hauled the mule out in a back alley and endeavored to blow the portion down the mule's throat by means of a tin tube about two feet long. The doctor will probably be able to get around town in a pale and dilapidated state about ten days from the appearance of this issue. The mule blowed first.

H. H., Cedarville.

Please give me through the columns of your valuable paper the breeding of Gilpatrick or Kilpatrick, formerly owned by John Poe at Healdsburg, Cal.

Answer—We do not know the horse; probably some of our readers can give the necessary information.

Alvin Egbert.

Please give pedigreee of Dick Jay, his age, owned and bred by whom, and where bred?

Answer—The Year Book says Dick Jay, b g foaled 18— by Gen. McClellan Jr. (?) dam not traced.

E. D. Knott.

Answer—No.

E. C. Fortier:

Please let me know the pedigree, and best record time of Trovato.

Answer—We do not know the horse.

A. B. Wise:

What is the pedigree of a bay colt by Mr. Winters in 1881 or 82, by Joe Hooker, dam Laura Barnes?

Answer.—The only colt Laura Barnes ever had was brown in color, foaled in 1879, and was called Reel Terry; he was by California. In all other years from 1876 to 1885, her produce were fillies.

Burbeck and Copeland, National City, Cal.

Will you be kind enough to send us what you can of the pedigree of Bertie Hayward? Also records of ancestors?

Answer—Bertie Hayward, foaled 1880, by Billy Hayward, 2:31¾, he by Geo. M. Patchen Jr., 2:27; 1st dam Poscora Maid by Leonard's Poscora, son of old Poscora; 2d dam Scotty by Horner's Black Hawk. Bertie Hayward is a full brother to Poscora Hayward, record 2:23½.

A constant breeder.

By giving the following information you will greatly oblige. Please give name and pedigree of a stallion brought from New York to Stockton about eight or ten years ago, and was poisoned shortly before one of the annual agricultural fairs held there.

Answer—We have no record of such a horse, and on the question being sent to J. L. Phelps of the Stockton Independent, and J. M. LaRue, they both say that the closest of inquiries fails to reveal any such an occurance having taken place there.

T. W. Barstow.

Please publish the pedigree of Jennie Noyes and her record if she has any.

Answer—It has been supposed for many years that Jennie Noyes was bred in San Mateo county, and was by Belmont, or a son of Belmont, but late investigation determines the fact that she was bred in New Jersey. While at present she stands "pedigree untraced," it is to be hoped that before long it will be cleared up. Her record is 2:40 made March 15, 1865.

A Regular Reader.

Will you kindly answer the following question through the columns of your valuable paper:

A hires from B a brood mare for breeding purposes for two seasons, the mare at the time being guaranteed to be with foal. She had her colt Aug. I, 1888, and was bred again in eight or nine days afterward. In February, 1889, B notifies A that the mare is not with foal and proposes to breed her at once on his own account, leaving A out. If the mare had gotten with foal as soon after her colt of Aug. 1888, as possible, she could not have had a second colt before about July 10, 1889. Has B any right, legal or moral, to breed the mare before that time without A's consent?

Answer—No.

Please answer through your columns the following questions: (1) Pedigree of Rifleman; (2) Pedigree of Geo. M. Patchen Jr.; (3) Is there a horse by the name of Dave, who has a record of 2:23½ or thereabouts, and what is his breeding. I think he made his record in Sacramento.

Answer—(1) Rifleman, br c, foaled 1855 by imp. Glencoe, dam Rodolph mare by Rodolph; 2d dam Butterfly by Sumpter; 3rd dam by imp. Buzzard, etc. (2) Geo. M. Patchen Jr., sometimes called California Patchen, bay horse, foaled 185–, by Geo. M. Patchen 30, dam Belle by Top Bellfounder; 2d dam a Hoot-a-Laddie mare. (3) We have no knowledge of the horse you allude to, and certainly no such record was ever made at Sacramento.

Ben Allison.

Please answer the following questions in your valuable columns. (1) When did Williamson's Belmont die? (2) What is Belle Alta's record, when and where made, and name of owner at that time?

Answer.—(1) Belmont was foaled in the spring of 1847, and died July 4, 1865. (2) We do not know his record, but he trotted a race at San Jose in September, 1860, in 3:00½, distancing his field in the first heat. It was for three-year-olds, and the track was very heavy and deep, causing slow time to be made. He was owned at that time by Martin Mendenhall, of Livermore. After the race mentioned above, Mr. W. M. Williamson, of San Jose, offered the owner of Belle Alta $3,500 for the colt, but the offer was refused. It is from Mr. Williamson's information that we are enabled to furnish the above.

Will you kindly let me known in your next issue what are the performances of Geo. Oyster and Judge Murray, entered for the Suburban Handicap, and if the first named has gone amiss in anyway during the past year. Also, who owns Judge Murray, and at what distance did he beat Raceland and Los Angeles, and in what time?

Answer.—Geo. Oyster started as a two-year-old 16 times, winning 6. As a three year-old he started 11 times, winning once only. It is a hard matter to decide whether a horse has gone amiss when he is started right along, but if an individual opinion is of any benefit to you, the writer would state that George Oyster was not in such good form late in the season as he was in early summer. Judge Murray is the property of G. H. Kernaghan; started 13 times last year and won 5 races. The race to which you allude was a mile and a quarter; Judge Murray 118 pounds, Los Angeles 113 pounds, and Raceland 115 pounds. Time, 2:12½.

J. N. Johnson, Santa Barbara.

(1) Can a horse be registered as standard bred when sire is standard bred and dam that has foaled two colts with better records than 2:30? (2) You will also find enclosed pedigree of horse Cashmere. Please tell what will make him standard.

Answer.—(1) Yes. (2) He is standard under Rule 6.

G. M. G., Santa Rosa.

Please let me know the pedigree of Josie B., formerly owned by Mr. Spreckles, and sold by him to Mr. Seymour of the Russ House.

Answer.—Josie B. by Speculation, dam Elizabeth by Alexander. The second dam is said to be Nora by imp. Glencoe, but it cannot be substantiated.

(1) Was Three Cheers at Smoke Creek, which is probably in Lassen, Modoc, or near there? (2) What is the pedigree and performance of Copperhead, a trotter?

Answer.—Three Cheers was at Madeline Plains, with a lot of common mares about 1883, and it is just possible that he was at Smoke Creek. (2) The Copperhead you allude to is probably the one P. Goodhue had, that trotted in San Francisco and Marysville in 1871. There is no pedigree given for him, and his record is 2:35¾.

Racing at Los Angeles.

The threatening weather kept many from attending Agricultural Park on Thursday, April 11th, the third day of the Spring Meeting. In more races than one the talent received a set back, which was the occasion of a great deal of kicking by those who were supposed to understand the merits of the various horses. The first event of the day was the Inaugural sweepstakes, for three-year-olds, for which there were only four starters, the favorite being a Joe Hooker colt called Louis P., entered in the name of Albert Cooper. E J. Baldwin's Gladiator had a little support, while Lilliti and Hotspur were almost friendless. Two or three false starts were made before the flag fell, which when it did was to a good send off, except in the case of Baldwin's Lilliti, who acting meanly at the pole was almost three lengths to the bad, when the field got the word. When well underway the Santa Anita mare took it into her head to do a bit of running, and developed a rare turn of speed much to the astonishment of the spectators, who fancied she was no good, but Louis P. had forged so far ahead that the mare could not catch him, but came in second, Hotspur beating Gladiator out by a nose for third place.

SUMMARY.

First race—Running; Inaugural sweepstakes for three-year-olds and upwards, of $20 each, half forfeit, with $150 added, the second horse to receive $50; distance one mile.

The second race gave the "short horses" a chance, it being a half mile and repeat. As a natural consequence Gladstone was a hot favorite, and he won both heats handily, Alaho pressing him for a short distance in the first heat.

The third race was for trotters, two years old, same conditions as the Rodman Scramble, but only one horse appeared for the money, so he had a walk-over.

J. B. Mason's b f Zelda H., 2, Stamboul—Blonda .....Walk-over

Gentleman's roadsters were next given a chance to air themselves, there being three of them to contend for the money. It was the universal notion that Mr. Covarrubias' chestnut gelding, had no opposition for first money and he was played in the pools for a very large amount by the talent, he selling at two to one over the field. Charlie D. won the first heat with ease but the second one was captured by Pond Lily after a lively brush down the homestretch, while the third heat was also taken by the mare much to the chagrin of those who had gambled so recklessly on the gelding. Kicking was the order of the day and to appease the crowd, Walters was taken from behind Charlie D., and Mr. Williams given an opportunity to display his talent. In the fourth heat Pond Lilly got a very bad send off, being over two lengths behind, when they were sent off. The favorite was never in danger of losing this heat as Williams handled him beautifully winning by about three open lengths. For the fifth and last heat, a better send off was given, and the mare went to the front almost immediately, never being headed winning, as she pleased by several lengths.

FOURTH DAY, FRIDAY, APRIL 12th.

There was a decided improvement in the weather and the attendance was much larger than on any previous day. The association so far have had to contend against the elements, which will surely mean a pecuniary loss, which is much to be regretted, as the contests have been of a high order, and every effort has been put forward by the officers and members to make the meeting a success. The backers of the favorites again had a sorry day, the "first choices" for the running races both being beaten.

The initial race of the day was the dash of five-eighths for the Lullaby Stakes for two-year-olds, for which event five youngsters appeared. The Wildidle-Duchess filly was a pronounced favorite, but Rettie B. had many admirers who backed up their faith with plenty of money, while the Baldwin stable still found a few supporters notwithstanding the run of bad luck it had had. The childrenwere very fractious at the post, and there was considerable delay before the flag fell, Atalanta having a little the best of the send off.

As they went down the back stretch it looked a very open race, but on rounding in toward home, the Santa Anita entry was a couple of lengths to the good. Clifford on the Duchess filly now made a punishing race of it, but was unable to over take Atalanta, who won by a short head. As the stable had sold for $10 in pools of $50 and $60 the "short enders" were corresponding happy.

SUMMARY.

Those who had lost heavily on the last race now plunged with a vengence on Louis P., his running of the day before being enough to convince the majority that he was in very moderate company, and could win easy. Pools sold about as follows: Louis P. $60, Santa Anita stable $20, G. W. $13, Naicho B. $15, John Treat $4. The field was sent away to a fairly good start, the colors of Naicho B. being the first to show in front. At the half the entire party were nearly bunched, with the nose of Louis P. just ahead of his field, all going at a clinking pace. As they turned into the stretch it was seen that the terrific pace was beginning to tell on the leaders and they gradually fell back, Devoy on Treat, keeping the horse with the unknown pedigree at the same gait which he had maintained throughout. Although the jokeys tried their utmost Treat would not be denied, and won very handily by about three lengths, much to the admiration of the local betters who had played their small change on the Los Angeles horse.

The concluding race of the day was a trotting contest for the 2:25 class and had six starters. Pool sold Belle B., $10; Oliver J., $3; What Ho, $2; Pond Lily, $2; Field, $2.

The first heat was won by What Ho after a sharp finish with Belle B. Pond Lily, the winner of the trotting race on Thursday, captured the second heat, with great ease, while Belle B. had no trouble in taking the third heat. It being now too dark to finish the race it was postponed until next day.

SIXTH DAY—SATURDAY, APRIL 13TH.

Owing to fine weather and the great interest manifested by all classes in the races, due to the grand contests of the week, a very large attendance was present on this, the last day of the meeting. The card showed a special trot as the first event of the day, the contestants being Oliver J. and Glendine, whose owners had made a match race for their horses. Mr. Felton's entry was far from being as fast as his opponent, who ably driven by Knap McCarthy, won as he pleased.

One of the best betting races of the meeting now ensued, it being an all aged contest, three-quarter mile heats and had only three starters, but the money flowed into the pool box in showers. At the commencement of the betting Canny Scot was installed favorite, but shortly before the start the friends of Alaho made her the choice in the pools. The old horse John Treat had a few followers, but it was only the inducement of a long shot that tempted them to back the grey. There was no delay at the start, the flag falling on the first attempt. Canny Scot was the first to show in front, Treat second, and before the eighth was reached, Alaho was a length or more behind. The pace was hot from the start to finish, and at the turn into the homestretch it looked as though Alaho was out of the race, for she was more than two lengths behind. West rode the mare like a veteran, waiting until but little more than a furlong from the wire, when he sent her with a rush, beating out the other two by the shortest of heads in 1:15¼. Scot and Treat were tied for second place honors. Those who had placed their confidence in Canny Scot now hedged on Alaho, and Treat was almost forgotten in the hurry to back the Baldwin entry. The second heat proved a regular boil over for the talent, as Morine's grey gelding managed to get his nose in front of the wire first, Alaho and Canny Scot being tied for second place, after as close and exciting a finish as was ever seen on the Coast. Treat was now the fancied one at the odds of $40 to $10. He acted rather badly at the post, but the pair got off well together on the third attempt. Alaho had made such running in the two first heats that she could not keep up the gait, and Treat won in hollow fashion, time 1:17¾.

The Los Angeles Derby next claimed attention, there being five starters for this classic event, and it is safe to say that never was a race won easier. All of the horses had supporters and again money was lavishly thrown into the pool box, the favorite being Naicho B., on what course of reasoning the chestnut colt had so many followers seemed a mystery for on his performances of last year, he should have been the least favored of the lot, but when he made his running it was then seen that a special preparation was the cause of the strong tip that was out about him. Poor Four Aces had a slight following, but they were meagre in numbers for the "foolishness" of the colt is well know. The sports of Santa Barbara were out in force to back their favorite Othello, who was deemed invincible by Mr. Den's friends. There were also present many who always back the colors of Santa Anita, and they plunged on Carrientes, while the few knowing ones followed the fortunes of Dan Denison's stable and put their gold pieces on the horse, whose initials stand for George Washington, or some one else.

The horses were a trifle unruly at the post, and it took several attempts for Secretary Rodman to get them off in good shape. The never to be trusted Four Aces played his hand at the start and took the lead, with the balance almost on his flank, well bunched. Before the stand was reached, Young Denison on G. W. took the lead and during the last mile was never headed. Several attempts were made first by one and then by another to make the leader quit, but this grand son of Kyrle Daly would not be headed and won handily by two lengths, Naicho B. managing to beat Carrientes out for the place.

The Consolatian Purse brought three starters to the post, the purse offered being $200, and Mr. Baldwin was lucky enough to carry off the premium with Gladiator. The postponed race of yesterday was trotted early in the day, Belle B. proving the winner, What Ho getting second money and Jennie B. third. The meeting in its entirety was, from a racing standpoint, a grand success, and it is to be hoped that the association did not lose any money, the bad weather during the early part of the week preventing many from attending that would otherwise have gone.

At the Bay District Track.

The following horses arrived at the track last week: The Golden Gate Stable's Laura Gardiner, Black Pilot, Asa, Pawnbroker, Emma Nevada and Tom Hazlitt. Kelly & Samuels' Ed McGinnis, Welcome, Lucifer and Rosebug. The Maltese Villa Stable's (stabled at "The Villa") Mozart, Geraldine, Flood Tide, Mirope and Abdiel. C. V. Tupper's Al Farrow, Guido and Ito. T. F. Lynch's Jou Jou and Morton. Matt Storn's Kildare and Glen Ellen. T. Bally's Little Phil. F. Johnson's Reward. A. D. Harrison's Hello. John Reavey's Bessie Shannon. Monroe Johnson's Joe McCormick.

Most of the above are well known performers, and therefore do not require description. Asa (the property of Mr. Stinson) is a three-year-old chestnut filly bred by Mr. Haggin, by Longfield—Assyria. He requires more work before she will be fit to race as do Hazlitt's two-year-olds, Pawnbroker, ch c by Leinster—Belle of the Lake; Emma Nevada, bay filly by John A., dam May D., and Tom Hazlitt, a Wildidle colt. All of them are big, and require a few weeks more work. Hennessey has Lucifer, a big four-year-old who has run once or twice very badly, and Rosebug, a three-year-old gelding by Jim Brown, who is like most of Jim's get, rather weedy but still speedy looking.

Mike Kelly has Mirope, a Hooker filly; she ran fairly at San Jose, and is improving fast, and Abdiel, Jocko—Cousin Peggy, a half brother to Geraldine, a good looking bay, though not quite as blood like as Geraldine; he had a cold, and has been doing little or no work for some time, and will not start before the Sacramento meeting.

Tom Bally's Little Phil ran twice last year (as a two-year-old), never being in the hunt. Boyle has a two-year-old brother to him, Morton, who looks fairly well. Reavey's Reward will be recognized as the two-year-old who was made favorite at Sacramento last year when Don Jose won; he ran unplaced both times to Don Jose and The Czar.

Sunday very little fast work was done, most of the horses being rested. Boyle gave Jou Jou a good pipe opener of a mile in which he slightly cut his hind fetlock, luckily the white faced bay did not seriously injure himself. Jim Brown sent Al Farrow and Guido, accompanied by Bessie Shannon, after slow work, a half mile in 53 seconds, all three running easy. The remainder of the horses had only walking exercise.

MONDAY.

The heavy rain on Sunday having spoiled the track, no fast speed was shown, all the morning work being performed on the inside track, which is really not fit to exercise a horse on, being full of holes and very rough.

The morning was rather showery, but at eight o'clock Hazlitt was out on Black Pilot, followed by Emma Nevada and Brown's Ito. They were all given slow work for half an hour, when Storn's Glen Ellen was given a mile and a half at half speed.

Guido and Kildare were moved slowly, Kildare winding up with a good rasping gallop once round the track, followed by Hazlitt on Laura Gardner, who looked very fit and much improved by the last few days let up. Asa and Pawnbroker had only light work, as had McCormick and Hello, the latter having bandages on his forelegs, both of which have been fired for splints, and went rather feelingly after his hard races at San Jose. Morton was given slow work, and then Al Farrow had a mile and three-quarters, the last six furlongs being run in 1:20. The big horse looked in the pink of condition, and, being on his best behavior, was photographed by Mr. Boyd.

In the afternoon, the sun having come out and dried the track rapidly, some fair work was done. Kelly brought out Mozart, Geraldine (Hart up) and Mirope. After cantering for a few times round, Geraldine led the way in a nice half speed gallop, pulling hard, followed by Mozart, who seemed rather sore, and Mirope. Abdiel and Little Phil (Boyles) were walked in the park. At half past one, Rosebug, ridden by Cook, led Welcome in a long, slow gallop, and then Hennessey brought out his other two, Lucifer and McGinnis. Lucifer, after slow work, was sent off half a dozen lengths in front of McGinnis, and being pushed along, led all through in a fair, good mile, McGinnis, pulling double, close up.

Kelly had Flood Tide plated, and at three o'clock gave him a mile and a quarter (Hart in the saddle, and on the outside track, which of course was still heavy); he went to the quarter in 0:26, the half in 0:52½, the three-quarters in 1:20, the mile, pulling double, in 1:48, and finished up well at the mile and a quarter in 2:44.

The bay three-year-old seems to have come round again, and lost all trace of the sickness from which he suffered last fall, and though he has not grown or thickened out much, yet is very racy looking, the only doubt being his ability to carry stake weights, as he hardly looks powerful enough.

TUESDAY.

A beautiful sunshiny morning brought out all the horses at an earlier period than usual, and the track though still heavy, was much faster than on Monday afternoon.

Flood Tide was first out at half past seven and was only given easy work. Hazlitt on Black Pilot led Gardner slowly round the track and then leaving her in charge of the boy, gave Black Pilot a good, sharp gallop once round and after a breathing spell sent him along two miles at a good open gallop, the aged gelding went in his best style and finished very strongly. Hazlitt then got on Gardiner and worked a mile in 1:47¾, with Hello and Rosebug, all finishing together, Laura and Hello being hard held, especially the former, while the three-year-old had to be pushed to keep his place. Laura went on to the next quarter before stopping.

Morton was out doing light work, and at half past eight Glen Ellen with bandages (probably to prevent her from cutting), was given a mile, going to the three-quarters in 1:20, and then finished the full mile in 1:47½, very much distressed. She had a heavy boy up which probably accounts for her swerving and rolling at the finish.

Little Phil and McCormick were on the easy list, only doing slow work, while McGinnis was given a slow mile and a half, as was Welcome also.

Kelly brought his other three out, and after Hart had ridden Geraldine an easy mile, she was sent six furlongs at a little above half speed. Hart then got upon Mozart and gave him a good striding gallop of two miles, Mirope going one mile steadily.

Browns Ito and Guido, (ridden by Fred Carillo) were after warming up, given a quarter mile and repeat in 25 and 25, Guido pulling over the four-year-old all the way. Reward had a good gallop of 1½ miles at a sweating pace; Al Farrow and Bessie Shannon worked together and after long slow work, were sent a half and repeat, they went down in 54½ the first time, and repeated in 53, Al Farrow running with his mouth wide open.

Jou Jou had only slow work, with the exception of a burst of a quarter in about twenty-five and a half seconds.

Matt Storns then pulled Kildare out and sent him alone a full mile in 1:47, going to the three-quarters in nineteen, a very good gallop for the four-year-old who had about 100 pounds up and ran in his shoes, and had it not been for his going to the outside of the track at the end of the first quarter he would have done better.

Asa and Emma Nevada worked together, and after easy exercise, they were indulged in a good, sharp three-quarter the last quarter in 28 seconds. Pawnbroker and Tom Hazlitt were only moved steadliy, while Lucifer had a nice sweatting gallop.

Abdiel was not brought out.

WEDNESDAY.

The track having dried up fast on Tuesday afternoon, and the morning being fine and warm, the horses were all worked early in the day.

Hazlitt, of course, was out first riding Black Pilot with a rein on Laura Gardiner, after giving them both a slow canter, Pilot then had the leg upon Laura and worked her at half speed three times round the track. McCormick had a steady canter and then was brushed up for the last quarter. Hello and Little Phil were indulged in long slow work for half an hour when Mozart and Geraldine came out, the mare as usual having a leading rein on. After a slow canter Geraldine was sent to the stable and Mozart (Hart up) was given a half speed gallop twice round the track the reverse way. Welcome and Morton moved easy for a short time and then Welcome was sharpened up going down the backstretch in a 25 seconds.

Guido and Mirope, the former ridden by Fred Carillo, (about 120 lbs); the latter by Hart at (100) in 50¼ seconds, the first quarter in 25½. Guido was running easy all the way, pulling clean over Mirope; Guido was then sweated out and scraped. Asa was moved slowly for three miles and then Flood Tide with 117 lbs. up. Reward and Jou Jou were warmed up and given a mile, Kelly's colt on the inside, leading past the quarter in 25½, the half in 52, three-quarters in 1:20, the full mile, 1:49, and Floodtide running fairly easy was sent on to the quarter pole in 2:13¾. Reward was too slow all the way and the bald-faced gelding was nicely handled three lengths behind hard held.

Hazlitt's two colts had very steady work, never being moved at all, though Asa, (three-year-old) was sweated out. Lucifer was ridden slowly, with a rein on McGinnis, after which, Lucifer led McGinnis a nice mile, starting from the three-quarter posts, the four-year-old son of Hindoo was pushed all the way to keep clear of McGinnis, who finished pulling double in 1:47½.

Bessie Shannon (Hart) and Al Farrow (Fred Carillo) were after slow work given a mile and a quarter, Bessie leading past the three-quarters in twenty, both going easy, the filly was urged down the stretch but Al Farrow galloped away finishing in 47½. The big horse was then given 1⅝ miles (blanketed) and sweated out, he acted exceptionally well all through.

In the afternoon the following arrived:

Palo Alto Stable, (Henry Walsh in charge) Muta, Glenloch (full sister to Guenn), Pliny, Racine, all two-year-olds, Geoffrey and Faustine, three-year-olds, Brutus 4.

Matt Storns brought Lurline, Forester, both three-year-olds, and Marigold, two.

L. U. Shippee's Stable, (Ab Steinlar) included, Songstress, Picnic, three-year-oldr, Whisban and Farsalara, three-year-olds.

THURSDAY.

Everyone turned out early. Storn's Kildare worked a fast half mile from the quarter to the three-quarter pole, ridden out in 49 seconds. Henry Walsh brough Glenloch, Muta and Pliny out and after slow exercise sent the two fillies the same half in 50¼ seconds, Glenloch finished very strong two lengths in front of Muta. Glenloch is a full sister to Guenn, and is a fine racy looking bay filly. Kelly's Mozart, Geraldine and Abdiel came out together, and after a good jog the mare went five furlongs, doing the last three-eighths in 37¾ seconds easily. Mozart was given a slow mile, the last half in 55, and after a short rest went another mile in 1:40, looking and going well.

Hazlitt's string all had slow, easy work, Laura Gardner doing a nice mile and a quarter alone. Faustine and Racine after slow work, moved through the best half mile in 50½ seconds, the two-year-old going easy.

Ab Stemler had his two fillies Whisban and Farsalara out together. The former is a King Ban filly, a trifle leggy, but a race horse all over, and easily led her stable companion (by Falsetto) in a sharp spin the last half mile of the track going in 50½ seconds. The two three-year-old fillies, Picnic and Songstress were cantered slowly, both moving and looking well. Walsh's Brutus and Geoffrey were galloped a mile and a quarter in 2:14½, the last half mile of it in 1:47½, Brutus going sore and very lame all round, led the way, and Geoffrey who also is rather dicky was pushed, going very sluggishly. The pair made a very unfavorable impression.

Hello and Jou Jou were both worked quietly and then brushed up a little to finish. Moses B. was worked slowly, winding up with a good sweating gallop, looking well and as sound as a bell.

Matt Storn's Lurline, (Longfield—Katy Pease), Forester a chestnut colt with three white legs, and Marigold 2, (Milner—Katie Pease) all looked well, though Lurline is the only one that is any way near fit, and judging from her appearance she ought to race, as her breeding is unexceptionably good, they all were moved slowly as was Barney G., who went very feelingly. The remainder did slow easy work.

FRIDAY.

The following horses arrived yesterday at the track:

W. Appleby's White Cloud, Wild Oats, Lady Helen and Alfarata.

Miller & Brown's two three-year-olds, a colt and a filly, came down in the morning from Stockton.

During the afternoon, Wm. McCormick brought the Winter's string, seven head: Joe Courtney, Don Jose, The Czar, Rascal, Barham, Barrett and El Rio Rey.

Jas. Garland had three, Jackson, Emotion and Wanderer 2d.

Hanger Jones (Col. Thornton), Joe Hoge, Reata and Alice.

Joe Courtney had three, Australian McGregor, Hearst and The Duke.

Buchanan brought eight, Sorrento, Pasadena, Pandora, Wagram, C. H. Todd, G. McCarthy, Harry Mac and Dennis Doherty.

The Winters' string looked wonderfully well. Joe Courtney is a three-year-old chestnut colt by Joe Hooker, out af Abbie H. He is a very racy looking colt, with good flat legs and has plenty of speed, the only question being his ability to go the route.

Don Jose has grown and thickened out a good bit since last fall. He is perhaps a trifle leggy, but is evidently trained to a nicety, looking fit to run for a kingdom. The Czar has been fired on both hocks (for curbs), and on his near fore leg for a splint, but is coming round fast. He is short of work yet.

Rascal is a chestnut two-year-old, full brother to Snowdrop and Broncho, being by Joe Hooker, dam Laura Winston. He has good shoulders, nice withers, and strong hind quarters, but has not been worked very fast yet. Barham is a bay colt, two years old, by Norfolk, out of sister to Lottery by Monday. He is a very taking colt, and though very big, not having undergone much training yet, is liable to beat a lot of the flyers in time. He is a horse of the Volante stamp, particularly his hind quarters which are very powerful. Barrett is a two-year-old brother to Don Jose, Pocatello and other well known performers, and certainly will never disgrace the family, while last, but not least, is El Rio Rey, a chestnut colt, with a few grey hairs on his hips, brother to the celebrated Emperor of Norfolk, etc., etc.

The colt, from whom great things are expected, and his looks do not belie it, is a big, strong two-year-old, with a handsome head, well set on a muscular neck, nice sloping shoulders, withers running well back, exceptionally powerful quarters, good flat legs, short cannon bones and very good feet and pasterns, in short, a race-horse all over; he looks as though he required a little more work, being rather above himself.

Jas. Garland's Jackson is a four-year-old brother to Niagara, half brother to Bramble and Bazar, and if looks and breeding go for anything, ought to make a race-horse. Wanderer 2d has not improved as much as he ought to have done, being rather leggy, too light and narrow behind; he ran a dead heat with The Czar last fall at the Blood Horse meeting when very fat, and not half fit, and was consequently easily beaten in the run off. Emotion is a four-year-old Falsetta mare, looking as though she could run a very fast mile, though rather light in flesh.

The Australian colts (Courtney) do not look as though they would boom the importation of thoroughbreds from Australia. Hearst is a dark chestnut colt with a particularly good head and a very peculiar peaked croup; he may be speedy, but certainly does not look like a stayer. He is rather sore in his fore legs, and is soft in flesh.

The next, the Duke, is a very good looking colt, and will race some, but just now is sore all over, and has bucked shins, while McGregor is too light and shelly, and will not race here, as he has developed a very big curb.

Buchanan had a large string, but Sorrento is the only probable starter; the chestnut colt has thickened out and looks very well. He is light in flesh, in fact rather thin everywhere except his neck, which is too fat and heavy; he looks like packing his weight and making a good show later in the season. Col. Thornton's three look well, and from their breeding should show speed, but they are, although very pretty, too light for anything.

B. Holly brought Fancy and Fusilade's Last, arriving at the track about 11 o'clock on Thursday night. In the morning the Baldwin string came across the bay seven strong Carrientes, Gladiator, Alaho, Viente, Florella, Atalanta and El Rey; they all looked well, though rather tired after their journey.

It was rather a foggy morning, but Henry Walsh was out very early with his two-year-olds, all looking well and moving along easy. After breakfast he brought out Geoffrey, Brutus and Racine, and gave them slow, steady work; the three-year-old went rather gingerly, while Brutus was dead lame. McCormick's string were much admired in their work, which of course was only light. The other horses did slow work all round with an occasional brush; McGinnis working particularly well for five-eighths.

Wallace's Register and the Palo Alto catalogue gives this description of Woodnut ch c foaled 1882, by Nutwood, dam Ad lie by Hambletonian Chief, son of Hambletonian 10; second dam, called a Harry Clay Mare, pedigree not traced. A great deal of time of has been devoted trying to prove the breeding of the grandam but hitherto without success. Now, however, the mystery is cleared up, as Capt. Kennedy, who bred Addie, says she was by Hasbrouck's Hambletonian Chief, dam Nellie by Geo. M. Patchen.

A Roarer.

Some time ago a notice appeared in an English newspaper, that the Duke of Westminster had sent several horses having roaring propensities to the Cape of Good Hope, and also several to the West India Islands, with the hope that change of climate would effect a cure.

A communication was sent from the Breeder and Sportsman office to his Grace, asking if any improvement had been reported. The Duke answers on March 27th, and says that the report is incorrect, as he has sent none to the Cape, and only one to St. Kitts. The reports received from there give no encouragement the only satisfaction being, that the horse is no worse, but as yet no better. From the peculiar nature of the trouble, it would seem a bad move to send a roarer to the Islands, where the atmosphere is very moist and it is extremely doubtful whether the climate there will have a beneficial effect. Those who have made a study of this annoying trouble, all agree that a dry climate is what is necessary, and there is no reason to hope that the experiment will prove successful.

Whether the beautiful carriages and other vehicles offered through the advertising columns by Messrs. A. A. Jackson & Co., 33 Market street, are due to the laws of natural selection and evolution from the heavy and uncomfortable trucks of earlier years, is hard to decide, but the fact is that the limit in patterns, elegance, substantial worth and comfort seems to have been reached in the wares offered by the firm. The growth of the business necessitates removal to new quarters at 26 and 28 Golden Gate Avenue, and until actual removal begins most favorable opportunities will be offered to secure the finest light carriages, cabriolets, surreys, phaetons, buggies, harness etc. Their warerooms are well worth a visit even though there be no present intention to purchase.

Grim's Gossip.

It is currently rumored that Ed Corrigan, of Chicago, is the backer who has driven Clay Stockton out of the Books.

Mr. Dustin is hard at work every morning on his stable of trotters at the Oakland Park, and is fast bringing them into good condition.

Fred Carillo is reported under engagement to C. V. Tupper to ride at heavy weights during the coming meeting of the Blood Horse Association.

Mike Kelly will be in the pig skin again, having almost recovered from his accident at Fresno, where Oro kicked h m just below the knee.

The copy for the Fresno races was received too late for publication this week, and will be published in full in the next BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN.

Now that the Governer has decreed that April 30th shall be a public holiday, I expect that many of the turf associations of the State will give a special day's racing.

The new race track at Vallejo is fast approaching completion. The committee appointed have shown commendable energy in pushing the work so rapidly, and in fifteen days the course should be ready for use.

Hughey Penny does not seem to have connected with the Chicago stable. His price of $2,500, as a retainer did not strike Hankins favorably, and there was considerable talk about Hughey having a swelled head.

A most horrible conundrum was propounded at the track a few days ago. What similarity is there between the English horse Ormonde and Charlie Tupper's Guido? One is a roarer and the other is out of Aurora.

Favor was never in better condition in his life, and, barring accidents, will be heard from as soon as the flag is hoisted at Ivy City. Sam Harper, Jr., Lucerne and Barrister are well, while old Brait is round as a barrel.

Ab. Stemler ran a bluff, on Thursday, offering to bet $500 that he named a two-year-old, presumably Whisban, to beat Racine. Henry Walsh called him, but Ab. backed down in a hurry.

The reported death of Kenilworth, 2:18½, has been confirmed by a traveler who returned from the Windward Islands to New York recently, and was on board the steamer Advance when Kenilworth died, February 14.

News from Nashville by letter, is to the effect that Mr. Guest's Heron is real good for the Kentucky Derby. He has all the speed and power necessary, and if he stays the distance, the ex-governor's namesake cannot beat him.

Fred Carillo, the jockey, is undergoing that necessary evil known as training down. He will have to reduce about ten pounds to become of any use. Fred will ride Al Farr w in the heavy weight division during the coming week.

I had a look at Glen Ellen, Matt Storn's fast three-year-old, and found her a long rangy mare, with every indication of great speed. She has the appearance of a race horse, and later in the season should make some of the best of them quit.

At the track last Sunday Al Farrow held a levee in the morning and as many people kept coming to see the big horse his cute trainer locked Al's door and showed Ito to the spectators, who went away very satisfied after picking out his good points.

It was really a treat to see the vim displayed by the directors of the Blood Horse Association at their meeting last Monday evening. A complete system was adopted for the coming meeting and if carried out in its entiriety will prove that this association is the second to none in the country.

Mr. J. C. Wolfskill, of Solano County, has been selected by the Blood Horse Association to act each day of the meeting as one of the judges. Two more selections as good as this one, will be a guarantee that jobbery of any sort will be promptly punished.

Mr. Winters will go East from here after the Blood Horse Meeting. Don Jose, The Czar and El Rio Rey look very well, and I think Don Jose will prove the better of the two three year-olds and take an immense amount of beating when he gets East.

N. J. Stone, manager Bancroft History Co., has bought from Hon. B. F. Langford. of Lodi, the two thoroughbred mares Bessie Sedgwick by Joe Daniels, and Fannie by Bayswater. Bessie Sedgwick has a bay fill at her side by Hawthorne and Fannie is in foal by Dexter Prince.

Mr. Wm. Easton, in writing of California horses, says: "Whilst yet in her infancy as a race breeding state, California has produced race horses which for size, quality, constitutioned substance, and ability to beat all comers, at all distances and under heavy weights, fairly astonished the racing world."

Mozart has repayed with interest the attention he has had the last few months; he was driven in harness for over two years. Miss Ashe driving him last year to the Yosemite, where he nearly died. In the fall he was taken up to work with the colt and did it so well that Mr. Ashe decided to give him another chance.

W. H. Wilson, Abdallah Park, Cynthiana, Ky., has sold to Col. H. S. Russell, Home Farm. Milton, Mass., the bay stallion Crescent (full brother to Dubec 2:28) by Sultan, record 2:24, dam Lady Dey by California Dexter, son of Whipple's Hamblet nian; second dam Lady Mayberry s t b by Chieftain No 721.

Our Kentucky correspondent, Mr. L. M. Lasley, of Crab Orchard, Ky., is owner and trainer of Lincoln Stable, in which, if rumor be correct, there are two rattling good two year-olds by St. Martin, that will be heard from shortly. I trust it may be so for Mr. Lasley's sake as he is a sportsman of the old school.

Mr. Lovecraft. clerk of the course at Sheepshead Bay, telegraphed me this week that Galore and Egmont have both been declared out of the Suburban Handicap. From this it may be surmised that the "leg" Egmont got last year is still unsound, and the stable will depend on Terra Cotta to do the trick.

A large advertisement will be found in the proper columns, announcing a great auction sale of land by Briggs, Fergusson & Co. An extra press of matter this week prevents an extended notice, but the subject will have due attention paid it in the next issue.

Senator Hearst while on his way to Mexico, received a dispatch from Geo. Van Gordon saying that the well known racer Almont had been taken seriously ill on the overland journey, but no particulars were given.

It is generally conceded by all who have visited Newmarket, England, lately, that "Mr. Manton," (The Duchess of Montrose), has the finest lot of two-year-olds ever seen in one stable. The yearlings are also a fine collection and for form and finish cannot be excelled.

By telegraphic news in the daily papers I see that a party called Stover has at last received his just deserts at the Fresno meeting. It is rumord that the Agricultural Park Association of that place, have officially notified the P. C. B. H. A. of its action and expect that their ruling will be upheld here.

And now comes the Gombault's Caustic Balsam Co., and promise to send free to all who send their addresses, a fine direction book and discriptive circular giving full information for the use of their wonderful curative, and also a set of attractive testimonial cards. Every person who orders a bottle of the marvelous Balsam will receive an elegant lithographic banner free. Send your address to the manufacturers at once.

That the entire Eastern racing public is watching with anxious eyes the debut of the California colts, is evinced in the fact that four of the prominent Sporting Journals of the country have sent me dispatches during the week asking how the Pacific Coast entries for the Chicogo Derby are doing and whether any of them will start during the Blood Horse Meeting.

The office has been crowded all week, the approaching meeting calling the prominent horsemen of the coast to San Francisco. Among the many were Irwin Ayres, R. P. Ashe, Wilfred Page, James Dustin, H. C. Judson, Matt Storn, Thomas F. Meagher, Worth Ober, C. V. Tupper, Frank De Poyster, Dr. Latbam, J. K. Newton, N. J. Stone, C. R. Hoppin, Col. H. I. Thornton and M. F. Tarpey.

Lincoln ch c 3 years old, by St. Martin out of the dam of Santalene, had been sent from Crab Orchard, Ky, to the stock farm of Mr. Baughenaris, to make the season. Lincoln was a fairly good two year-old, at times showing a wonderful flight of speed, but one of his legs went wrong, and although given a long rest, it was found impossible to train him this season so he has been sent to the stud.

Will Riley, the well-known bookmaker of Chicago, has sent a magnificent cane to Matt Storn. It is made out of orange wood cut on the orange plantation of Mr. Riley, and has carved on it the picture of the alligator which chased Matt out of Florida a few years ago. The recipient thinks it a shame that Mr. Riley should bring up unpleasant recollections.

Thomas Gallagher, sporting editor of the Chicago Tribune, started back for the Lake City last week after a sojourn of several months on the Pacific Coast. He made many friends while here and his able and intelligent articles on breeding have attracted unusual attention. It is a great pity we have not more like him, for it is truly said, "Whatever Tom writes you can b t is true." Come again Mr. Gallagher, you will always be welcome.

Mr. Withers has adopted a new policy this year, which will be heartily approved on all sides. The Brookdale entries for the two-year-old stakes show that in almost every case Mr. Withers has given a name to his youngsters. His rule in former years was never to name a horse until the animal has won a stake, but this has caused so much confusion, annoyance and trouble, that even the stubborn Sage of Brookdale has felt compelled to give way to the march of modern ideas.

We have received from Mr. J. J. Evans a complete tabulated pedigree, nicely printed, of his trotting stallion Heraldic 8137, A. T. R., on which there are mentioned the names of 296 promient trotters or the producers of trotters, the blood lines of which run through this grandly bred horse. Mr. Evans is a careful, intelligent breeder, and will only have the very best of blood on the Frankella Stock Farm.

It is a pleasure to meet old friends, especially such friends as W. G. Hay, of Saginaw, Mich., and G. T. Porter, of El Paso, Texas. Both of them are enthusiastic horsemen, and ardently devoted to having racing meetings conducted in a gentlemanly manner, and free from any suspicion of fraud. Although only intending to stay but a few days in the city, they will remain over until after the spring meeting. As old friends, I can heartily recommend them to all readers of Grim's Gossip.

My old friend Frank Hill, of Sydny, New South Wales, arrived on the S. S. Alameda with a number of horses which he will sell before long if purchasers can be found for good stock. Among the number is the brood mare Woollahra, who was bred by Andrew Town, Esq., of Richmond, N. S. W., one of the most prominent breeders in Australia. Woollahra is by Maribyrnong, he by Fisherman (out of Mainbrace by Heron), dam Montana by Rataplan; second dam Heather Bell by Bay Middleton. Breeding like that should be snapped up quickly.

Tom Gallagher in writing about the Santa Anita Ranch says: Ganymede, the stable's reliance for the American Derby, is a good looking chap. He is nearly 15¾ hands high, stout and compact—built considerably like Volante. Everything depends on his speed. Bone and substance are not wanting. In appearance he is decidedly above the average. He is of the kind to carry weight and go a distance. Campbell has some faith in him."

Volante, winner of the American Derby in 1885, leads the all-aged string at exercise. The quarter crack which troubled him last season has disappeared, new and solid horn having grown down on his hoof. the swelling on his ankle has gone, and he looks as well as ever before, if not better. Always a big little horse, at present high in flesh, his proportions and development would do credit to a fine type of a draft horse. It has often been remarked by turfmen that he "ought to carry a house and lot." Those who in former years would have assigned him an impost of that character would upon seeing him now suggest "two houses and lots." He not only looks remarkably well but acts well, and wants to cut loose for a burst every time he goes out on the track. Given his head he shows all of his former speed. He will be handled carefully and is not likely to face the starter before reaching Chicago.

A well known English veterinarian of 45 year's practical writing abont roaring in horses, says that many of his brethren stare with actonishment when a seton is suggested as a preventive of roaring. He adds:

"As soon as a horse begins to cough badly, I look out for sore throat to follow, and at once insert a seton from six inches to eight inches in length according to the size of the animal. By sponging it daily, keeping it clean, and with an occasional removal, it may be kept open for several weeks; and, if taken in time, I have never known a single instance of a horse becoming a roarer."

The Mirror and Farmer says that no horse that performed last year gives promise at all to compare this season with Guy, 2:12. Second on the list of dangerous ones in 1889, is the great filly Sunol, two-year old record, 2:18. Other good ones that belong to the dangerous class are Beulah, 2:19½; Cleon, 2:22; Fred Folger, 2:20½; Gene Smith, 2:18¼; Yorktown Belle, 2:23½; Woodnut, 2:16½; T. T. S., 2:19½; Jack, 2:19½, and others. But my dear Mr. Clark, where are you going to place Sable Wilkes? he surely has some claims on your consideration; and if Antevolo is trotted this year, you will also find him in the dangerous class.

The programme book for the Nashville meeting contains several "special notices," two of which are as follows: "The electric bell from the scales-room will sound in the betting inclosure when the jockeys are officially weighed out. No bet must be contracted prior to such notification. After the bell sounds twenty minutes will be allowed in each case for betting." No person shall enter in a selling race, either in his own name or otherwise, more than one horse of which he is the owner in whole or in part. A violation of this rule will be deemed a fraud, and all persons implicated will be ruled off the course."

A few weeks ago Mr. John Lee matched his trotter Jessie L. against Mr. C. J. Haven's pacer Racquet, for $250 a side, with $50 posted as forfeit. In the articles drawn up not a word was said about how the horses should go, except that they should go a race according to the rules of the National Trotting Association. Now Mr. Lee thinks an advantage was taken and has forfeited his deposit, saying he will not start his horse against a pacer. Be careful gentlemen how you get up articles, one half the race is already won when a skillful match maker draws up the papers. The friends of Racquet claim that Mr. Lee knew all about the horse being a pacer as he had raced against him on the road on several occasions.

Which is the faster track, San Jose or the Bay District? The question came up at the track the other day. Orrin Hickok said that for a trotter, San Jose was a second and a half faster in a mile, and also stated that when in good condition Stockton was just as fast as San Jose. He gave as one good reason too, the fact that the first five hundred yards on the Bay Track is slightly uphill. Mike Kelly said that for a running horse the Bay was the better because the turns were easier and thought San Jose was a second slower. Brown said San Jose was a shade slower in his opinion as a long striding horse could not make the San Jose turns without shortening his stride and in many instances he was thus forced to change his gait.

I heard a peculiar discussion at the track, says a reporter writing from Lexington, which may be of interest. Mr. Knox, of California, propounded the problem, "Why should not the thoroughbred receive a great portion of his slow work hitched to a sulky?" Mr. Knox explained that he considered the horse would be easier to manage, that you could regulate his speed better, for in many cases where a boy could not control a colt a man sitting in a sulky could; and he further urged that pulling the weight instead of carring it developed the muscles better. Quite a few trainers were present, and many thought there was a good deal in Knox's argument. In fact there are cases on record where horses which would fret to death under the saddle would jog along peaceably to harness, and having received a great portion of their training in that way were successful racehorses. Of course it is a theory for the most part, but I think that in some cases at least, it might prove beneficial.

Harry Rose has the nucleus of a good racing stable in the Wild Idle, Duchess filly and Dan M. Murphy, says the Los Angeles Tribune. The Duchess filly, who will be hereafter known to fame as Rosemeade, was probably the best two-year-old which performed in Los Angeles during the past week. She was not ridden well except in the third race, and there are many competent judges who think that if properly ridden she could have won all three of the two-year-old races. It is not generally known that Dan Murphy is by the same sire as Wheeler T. of the Chicago stable. Wheeler T. is the three-year-old who packed 98 pounds at St. Louis last June, a mile and a sixteenth in 1:47½ which is the best time on record for that distance. At Louisville, May 24th, Wheeler T. went a mile in 1:41½ with 102 pounds up. Saturday morning Dan Murphy was worked a mile in 1:43, and Mr. Rose yesterday said that if the horse is as good a horse as he thinks he is, that he will start him for the American Derby.

Senator Hearst is in the city looking after his stable of racers at the Sheepshead Bay track, says the New York Times. He very much regrets the loss of his two-year-old Mistral, by Hockhocking—Maid of the Mist, a California-bred youngster who was very highly thought of and very largely engaged in all the principal stakes in this vicinity. Yesterday he saw his famous forty-thousand-dollar colt, King Thomas, take a spin about the track in company with some of his other high-priced youngsters. He thinks very well of him, though agreeing with his trainer that so big and rather ungainly a colt should not be forced in his work, but be handled slowly, so that he will probably not be seen in any of the early events of the racing season, which is now but five weeks away. The Senator is accredited with having made a big winning over Golden Reel's victory at Clifton on Wednesday, when he went over to New Jersey to see what winter racing is like.

To these might be added oils, embrocations, washes and all the mixtures which are pronounced the very best in the world for "man and beast." That very many of them are good is beyond dispute, that some are superior to others goes without saying. That the old recipes are usually too harsh there is also little doubt in our mind, and rarely indeed, are "potent remedies" the equal of those which are milder. Fisherman's Carbolized Alkaline lotion we have used for over a year, and have no hesitation in recommending it for the class of ailments it has proved beneficial. Diluted with three or more times its bulk of water it forms an excellent wash to remove soreness of muscles, a stronger application will reduce enlargements, and applied in its full strength is a "counter-irritant" which likely to be efficacious when that kind of treatment is desirable.

A Stake Book.

The Goodwin Bros., 241 Broadway, N. Y., are at present compiling matter for an official stake book, which will contain the entries for all stakes now closed, by the American Jockey Club, the Coney Island Jockey Club, Brooklyn Jockey Club, the St. Louis Jockey Club, and the two associations at Monmouth and Saratoga. Hitherto this work has been published under the auspices of the above mentioned clubs, and at a cost of $10 each, rendering it almost impossible for the ordinary turf patron to purchase one. Now, however, it is proposed to issue a comprehensive work at $2 if 250 subscribers can be obtained, and it will be to the interest of all horse owners, breeders, trainers, etc., to order a copy at once, and thus secure its publication. The Messrs. Goodwin have done much for turf interests, in the way of literature, all their works containing information of the utmost importance to those interested in turf matters. The offer of the publishers is certainly a most liberal one, and the required number of subscribers should be obtained immediately.

The Proper Spirit.

As we have already mentioned, the State Agricultural Society offers to give $5,000, if the citizens of Sacramento will contribute $5,000, and inaugurate annual spring meetings at the capital city. Messrs. Hall, Luhrs & Co., were the first to respond with a check for $500, and now we find another enterprising gentlemen of that city willing to give a like amount to further the object. These public spirited citizens know full well the benefits to be derived from such meetings, and are willing to assist the society that has acted so generously in the matter. The following letter has been received by Secretary Smith and speaks for itself:

SACRAMENTO, Cal., April 8, 1889.

Edwin F. Smith, Secretary State Agricultural Society—DEAR SIR: Recognizing the importance of the establishment of a spring racing meeting at Sacramento upon a basis that will for all time make it one of the principal meetings of California, I take pleasure in donating to the State Agricultural Society the sum of $500, to be by them used in such manner as in their opinion advisable in the maintenance of such meetings.

I believe, with proper encouragement from the business community at Sacramento, that the State Agricultural Society can manage and maintain such meetings upon a scale that will insure success to the end that this city will be the recognized racing and breeding center of the Pacific Coast.

The subscription is subject to your order on demand. Hoping that the responses to the movement, so wisely inaugurated by the Society, will be of such magnitude as to insure its fulfillment, I remain, very truly,

W. O. BOWERS,
Proprietor Golden Eagle Hotel.

Mistakes in Pedigrees.

Mr. H. C. Judson, the owner of Wildidle, called at this office on Monday last and called our attention to three entries made at the Los Angeles Spring meeting, which are evidently wrong as far as the pedigrees are concerned. The three alluded to were all entered in the Rodman Scramble, for two-year-olds, and are as follows: Bay filly by Wildidle, dam Phoebe Hall; br c Gambo by Wildidle, dam Dollie Dimple, and b c Reno by Wildidle, dam Mary Wade. Mr. Judson's claim is that not one of these mares have ever been bred to Wildidle, consequently he cannot be the sire of the colts mentioned above.

An examination of the American Stud Book reveals the fact that Mary Wade has been reported to Col. Bruce as having a bay colt by Wildidle in 1887. Phoebe Hall is also in the same volume as having a bay filly by Wildidle in 1887. Dolly Dimple is not in the Stud Book, so of her we have no record. It is altogether probable that the mistakes have occurred in a similarity of names, and that the colts alluded to are by Wildidler instead of Wildidle. If such is the case the errors should be corrected at once, so that in the future there may be no disputes as to the paternity of these horses. Mr. T. H. Rodman, Secretary of the Southern California Racing Club, will in all probability know the addresses of the parties who entered the youngsters, and it would take but little correspondence to straighten the matter out.

Washington Park Club.

THE KENWOOD STAKES.—Poison and Take Notice.

Yours truly,
J. E. BREWSTER, Secretary.

The Rancho del Paso Catalogue.

We have received from Mr. Easton of New York, a catalogue of the yearlings to be sold on July 1st, by order of J. B. Haggin, Esq. It was generally supposed last year that Rancho Del Paso could never make such a showing again, as the consignment then sent to New York for sale, but if an improvement were possible it is shown in the sale catalogue of 1889. Number 2 in the list is one of the best bred colts ever offered at public auction, and that he will bring a fabulous price goes without saying. No. 2, brown colt, foaled April 12, 1888, by imp. Darebin, out of imp. Agenoria by Adventurer, he by Newminister (son of Touchstone and Beeswing by Dr. Syntax), out of Palma by Emilius; 2d dam Milliner (dam of Pizarro) by Rataplan; 3rd dam Manganese (dam of The Miner, Mineral and Mandragora) by Irish Birdcatcher; 4th dam Moonbeam (dam of Loupgaron) by Tom Boy, and so on thrcugh the best racing blood that England ever produced. In addition to this grand colt, there is a full sister to the peerless Dew Drop; a colt by imp. St. Blaise (son of the mighty English sire Hermit), out of Maud Hampton (dam of Ban Fox, King Fox, and the $38,000 yearling, King Thomas). The catalogue fairly bristles with the best blood of America, England and Australia, and those who are fortunate enough to purchase any of the yearlings may rest assured that they will secure the very best that money can procure.

The Bard.

A reporter of the Philadelphia Times, who recently visited Mr. Cassatt's stable at Chesterbrook, speaks thus of Longfellow's most famous son: "In the next box to Eurus stands The Bard, and there can be no doubt that this grand horse has been since his last appearance in public, an anxious charge for his able and painstaking trainers to handle. The Bard looks big and lusty, and his full bright eyes clean nostril, and healthy tongue are all indicative of a perfect physical condition. His forelegs, swathed below the knees in light bandages, are appearently as clean as a smelt, but the off hind leg bears marks of blistering, and an ominous puffing below the hock has caused the leg to lose its symmetry. Without handling the limb it was obvious to the observer that The Bard, in racing parlance, has a leg. The leg looks gummy and set, but mere eye evidence without handling is by no means conclusive, and it may be that the weak member will under the judicious treatment and watchful eye of Mr. Huggins again do its share in bearing the gallant Bard to victory. In this case much depends on the exact seat and nature of the injury sustained. As to this there was at the time a variation in the opinion of the veterinary surgeon and the trainer. The expert thought that the horse was struck into or hit his leg. Mr. Huggins was and is still of the opinion that the lameness and attendant tenderness resulted from the straining of a tendon, From Mr. Huggins remarks it is evidant that he inclines to the belief that The Bard will stand a preparation in other words that the horse will regain the free and unrestricted use of the injured limb. Whether his judgment is correct or not the future alone can decide."

THE GUN.

The Gun Club meets this afternoon at Adam's Point.

To-morrow the regular meeting of the Lincoln Gun Club will be held at Alameda Point.

Doctor Davenport, of Stockton, had a lively time in a snipe patch near Stockton on the 14th, bagging nearly three dozen.

It is reported that Judge Rix will not be able to attend the side shoot at San Bruno on May 12th. If he cannot do so, Mr. Fred Putzman will act as Captain of the Judge's side.

This afternoon at the Lincoln Gun Club grounds on Alameda Point, there will be a team shoot at artificial targets, teams from the Lincoln, Encinal and other clubs will compete.

Frank J. Bassford and A. L. Donaldson have accompanied Ford Bassford to Alaska upon a seal hunting expedition. Their work will be shooting seals, for which they are to receive $1.50 for each skin. For otter they will receive $5.

Editor Claude King, of pleasant "Sports Afield," published at Denver, Col., is doing good work with his journal, to which a horse department has recently been added. He deserves success, and will undoubtedly attain to it.

One of the crack shots of Norwich, Conn., Mr. A. S. Childs, has taken up his residence in San Jose. Mr. Child's speciality is artificial target shooting, and some of his scores are very fine. He favored this office by calling on Monday last to learn when and where he could take part in trap shooting. He will be present at the reunion shoot at San Bruno on May 12th.

The veterans will turn out on May 12th at San Bruno, for their annual side shoot under those thoroughbred old Presidents of the lamented Cosmopolitan Club, Captain Mathias Ault and Judge Hale Rix. These reunions have come to be looked upon as the great events of the year in local circles. Although the name "Cosmopolitan" is always mentioned in connection with them, they are in fact free for all, and sides are chosen from among those who attend. Last year about fifty men shot, and the entry should not be less this year. The invitation to participate is general. Plenty of birds will be on hand and a fine old time day's sport is assured. The annual dinner will be given in the evening after returning to the city, at some place to be chosen.

The route over which Mr. H. McMurchy, agent for the L. C. Smith gun, will pass after leaving San Francisco, is to Sacramento, Stockton, Portland, Tacoma, Seattle, Ogden, Salt Lake and Denver. He will remain in each city such time as is necessary to meet his business friends, and push the sale of his excellent guns.

From a friend we learn that some of the sportsmen about Sacramento, have been having some good times among the snipe. There is considerable excellent snipe ground in that vicinity, and when not too closely pursued by the country youths, the birds have been reasonably plentiful. Some fair bags have lately been made by Messrs. Frank Freeman, C. E. Mack, N. E. White and others, and the birds were in excellent condition. There is an unconfirmed rumor afloat to the effect on a recent expedition into the snipe country the last named gentleman came to grief while endeavoring to get into a favorable snipe-patch ahead of a country youth, who saw the city shooter and a friend preparing their guns for a raid upon it and essayed to head them off. The story goes that in his endeavor to scale a barbed wire fence in haste the newspaper scribe came down rather heavily on the top wire when half way over. He swung one leg upward in the effort to clear the barb-arous thing and caught his gum boot on one of the sharp points. It was a sort of catch-as-catch-can tussle for a brief moment, and the fence got the best of it. When the sportsman picked himself up he found that the sole of his boot had been ripped asunder and that his pantaloons,—well, the least said of that the better. In the meantime, the country boy had got into the inclosure, and having a lead of fifty yards or more, drove the snipe out of the cover before the town chaps had a chance to get a shot at them. This is as it was told us, and may or may not be true, but such things do happen.

Knights of the Trigger.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—At the annual meeting of the Knights of the Trigger of Kern County held in the rooms of the Association Saturday evening, the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, Hon. D. M. Pyle; Vice-President, Isaac L. Miller; Secretary and Treasurer, S. N. Reed; Trustees, Hon. D. M. Pyle, Isaac L. Miller, A. Morgan, C. E. Sherman and D. A. Leonard.

The membership is now over 118 and new ones are being added weekly. The finances of the organization are in good condition, and the outlook is that the membership will nearly double during the year.

S. N. REED, Secretary.

BAKERSFIELD, April 9, 1889.

Blue Rock Club.

Eighteen gentlemen entered for the April shoot of the Blue Rock Club at Adam's Point on Saturday last, and a better day could not have been had.

Two of the entries were guests of the club, Mr. W. G. Hay, a Michigan sportsman, whose presence was highly appreciated, and Mr. Harvey McMurchy, representative of the L. C. Smith gun, a masterly shot.

The traps did not work perfectly and the shooting lagged on that account, but Mr. Will Golcher gave assurance that new arms would be supplied for further events.

The shooting averaged badly, perhaps because of the annoying balks in trapping, although the targets were materially assisted in their flight by a tailing wind.

The ground has been perfectly fitted for blue rock shooting, the most recent forms of pulling apparatus, trap indicator, etc., being in use. Messrs. A. F. Adams and Tubbs tied for first place with totals of 25 each. Mr. McMurchy was next with 23. No other did better than 20.

At 10 single Blue Rock targets and 10 pairs. Chamberlin rules.

A New Gun by Mr. L. C. Smith.

Mr. L. C. Smith's guns made at Syracuse, N. Y., have established themselves as the equals of any shot gun built in the world, and the demand for them has increased steadily year by year, until they are in the hands of a majority of the famous trap shots of the country.

Until recently, Mr. Smith has not cared to put out any but guns of high price and value, but this season, to meet the ability of a whole world of good sportsmen who would like to use the Smith, but who are comparatively poor, he has made a twist barreled hammerless that can be had at a price lower than that of any other first-class weapon of the sort.

The gun embodies all the distinctive features of the Smith system; is sound, well built, nicely balanced, works smoothly and is in every way desirable. It is not made to special order but will be finished through the trade, in so many weights and lengths of barrels and stocks as to enable every one to be suited. The gun has already "caught on" and the orders being taken for it by Mr. McMurchy, evidence both the fact that Mr. Smith has met a popular need, and that the confidence in him and the essential goodness of his arms is wide spread.

California Wing Shooting Club.

The best birds ever trapped at San Bruno were those used by the California Club on Sunday last Thirteen members and three guests, Messrs John K. Orr, W. G. Hay and Harvey McMurchy tried their skill, and it is not to the discredit of the club that double figures were rare. The birds were mostly dark in color, and they tailed away when the traps were pulled like shadows, very many of them being hard hit, but so strong as to get out of bounds before dropping dead. In fact it was a common remark that in no match that could be recalled had so many "dead out of bounds" birds been scored.

Two of the guests, Messrs. Orr and McMurchy, dropped eleven each, as did Mr. Fay, the work of the latter being especially brilliant, his second barrels being both quick and deadly. Mr. C. J. Haas scored ten, and lost two dead outside. Dr. Knowles shot with his usual deliberation, but the hard birds got the better of his 16 bore, and he lost three dead out of bounds. Mr. F. B. Norton was using a superb L. C. Smith hammerless just built for him, and did some splendid work with it. The Stockton cracks, A. B. Sperry and Dr. Cross, feathered almost every bird, but were shooting too light loads for such tough targets.

Mr. C. B. Smith was out-gunned. He has shot his present weapon for ten years, and it scatters too much. It was really funny to see Osborne, Meily, Will DeVaull, Lewis and White go to the score time after time and drop their birds out of bounds. Uncle Robert Liddle made some brilliant shots, but the birds were a little too quick and strong for him.

For the day Mr. Fay won first choice of the three elegant medals, made by Hammersmith and Field, Mr. Haas took second choice and Dr. Knowles third.

At 12 birds. Hurlingham.

Mr. W. G. Hay, an enthusiastic and well posted young sportsman of Saginaw, Michigan, is spending some time in San Francisco. On Saturday and Sunday last he shot with the Blue Rock and California Clubs, but being entirely out of practice did not score particularly well, although it could easily be seen that he was a master of the gun.

Wild Fowl Shooting.

WILD FOWL SHOOTING, containing scientific and practical descriptions of Wild Fowl; their resorts, habits, flights and the most successful method of hunting them. By William Bruce Leffingwell, Clinton, Iowa, 1888.

The work of the reviewer ordinarily is unpleasant work indeed. Either style, typography or matter must be criticised, and too often adversely; so that when a volume comes to be read and noticed, the reading of which is an unalloyed pleasure, and the noticing of which is felt to be a kindness to other might-be readers, special note may be excused. Mr. Leffingwell has gone from the horizon to the zenith meteor-like, except for the direction of his flight. Unknown, except as a real good fellow-sportsman and fine shot, until a few months ago, his name is now in many mouths, and all in praise, both of the man as revealed in his simple, eloquent story of wild fowl, and of the essential excellence of his book. Wild fowl shooting had never before been adequately treated, and there was therefore need for the book. The author is by instinct and life-long habitude a wild fowl shooter. He is, beside, a writer of delightful clearness, strength and directness. His book meets the need, and cannot but be in demand wherever sportsmen are. Its range is exhaustive, and when technical description is entered upon, scientifically exact.

Mr. Leffingwell wisely makes no attempt at fine writing, he just talks along through his pages as any unusually gifted, enthusiastic, observing, sound, manly sportsman might talk if relating his experiences to sympathizing friends, or advising novices in whom he detected the kindling of that love for the gun, which keeps men young in all but mere years. The habitat and habits of all the wild fowl species are given. The peculiar methods of approach to the game, the making of blinds and sneak boats, calls for the fowl; proper weapons with their appropriate loads; the suitable paraphernalia of the fowler, in a word everything that can make for the success of him who goes in for wild fowl shooting, can be found within the covers of the 373 page book under review, in most attractive form, and in adequate minuteness. The author is to be congratulated upon the success attending his imitial venture, and sportsmen should do themselves the kindness to procure the volume and familiarize themselves with its contents. The book is superbly illustrated, clearly printed in large tpye and handsomely bound. Prince $2.50 in cloth, $3.50 in half morocco. Messrs. Clabrough, Golcher & Co., 360 Montgomery St., San Francisco, local agents for Mr. Leffingwell, send the volume for review.

THE KENNEL.

Dog owners are requested to send for publication the earliest possible notices of whelps, sales, names claimed, presentations and deaths in their kennels, in all instances writing plainly names of sire and dam and of grandparents, colors, dates and breed.

Mr J. K. Newton, San Francisco, fox terrier Nelly, (Vixen—Trixy), whelped April 16, 1889, nine, three dogs, to owner's Teddy. Four bitches since dead.

Mr. Taft writes from Truckee: "I've got the best dog in the world, and you know it." The information is published to put an end to all bickerings in the doggy world, and to relieve those tortured, fearsome minds which have held fondly to a similar belief about their own dogs.

Mr. Newton's stud fox terrier Teddy is in demand among owners of fine brood animals. The bitches now due in whelp to him are owned by Mr. Jas. E. Watson, Mr. McNeill and Mr. Newton, one of them noted elsewhere having recently whelped a fine litter. The pedigree of the litter is misplaced, but Mr. Newton has written to Australia for duplicates.

Elsewhere will be found the advertisement of the Pacific Coast Field Trial Club. It is in the form of an entry blank for the coming Derby, entries for which close on May 1st. Owners of setters and pointers whelped since January 1, 1888, are urged to cut out the advertisement and use it as an entry blank, filling it out and mailing to the secretary by May 1st.

The demand in England for the services of the greyhound Greentick is so great that his owner has decided upon raising his fee on April 1st, to 25 guineas. This will be the largest stud fee ever commanded by a greyhound, although 20 guineas was at one time readily paid for Misterton, who has at the stud earned Mr. Miller over £5,000, and is still on active duty.

The Occidental Coursing Club has decided not to give a coursing meeting in May, the reason being that fair and satisfactory arrangements cannot be made with the proprietors of Newark Park. The fact is to be regretted, and some enterprising man may find in it a suggestion about another coursing ground which if well arranged and properly conducted would undoubtedly be remunerative.

Readers who own setters and pointers whelped since January 1, 1888, should remember that entries to the next Derby of the Pacific Coast Field Trials Club close on May 1st, with the Secretary, H. H. Briggs, 313 Bush Street, San Francisco, the forfeit being $5. Members of the club should interest themselves actively in securing entries, and it is hoped that those who desire to have dogs in the stake will send for entry blanks. The stake is to be run at Bakersfield, Kern County, beginning on Monday, January 20, 1890, and will be worth five hundred dollars at least. There are many first class breeding bitches and sires that should be represented in the stake.

Some fine Irish setters have recently been brought to Seattle, W. T., by Mr. J. C. Nattrass from Central Park, Ill. They are Nat Glencho (Glencho—Maid), Judith (Brush—Lucille), Red Fanny (Smutt—Mag), Leigh Doane IV. (Bruce—Leigh Doane II.), and Mamie Glencho (Nat Glencho—Judith. They are all well broken, and valuable additions to the setter stock of the coast. Nat Glencho was bred by that noted admirer of Irish setters, Mr. W. H. Pierce, of Peekskill, N. Y., whose stud dog Glencho is a full brother to Mr. Truman's Lady Elcho T. We hope Mr. Nattrass will condition and show his team of setters at the Pacific Kennel Club show in May.

Our almost invariably exact sporting editor of the Chronicle, is in error in stating that an essay on rabies was recently read before the Pacific Kennel Club by Dr. Buzard.

Mr. E. P. Fish, of this city, related an extraordinary manifestation of reasoning power on the part of his English retriever Fino the other day. Fino is in the habit of carrying a basket of luncheon every day to a distance from home and bringing the basket and dishes back. On a return trip recently, just as he reached the house he threw one of the dishes out and broke it. Mr. Fish's people heard the crash and opened the door, Fino showing chagrin and shame plainly. When the door was closed the dog was watched, and soon he went down the steps, picked up part of the broken dish and carried it to the waste heap behind the house, returned several times and got other pieces until he had cleaned away all the fragments, when his demeanor changed, and he was his natural frisky self again.

The English Stock-keeper and Fancier's Chronicle says of the gentleman who will judge the Pacific Kennel Club's show in May.

"Mr. W. Graham (Belfast) of Irish Terrier fame, has accepted to judge at San Francisco. It is in Irish terriers that the Irish Ambassador has made his name, but his knowledge of dogs is not confined to one breed, and in the opinion of those who are best acquainted with him, he is the nearest approach to an efficient judge of all breeds that we possess. More pretentious Britishers have visited the States in a doggy capacity and more prominent men in our kennel world, and though some have worthily represented the old country and some have not, yet among those who have gone, and those who are going, there is none whose opinion on English men and their dogs is better entitled to attention than Billie Graham's. He has not judged over here simply because he never touted for orders to judge, but had he been willing to enter the ranks of the all round job-seeking judges he would have had his calendar filled with show engagements.

Sales.

Dr. A. C. Davenport, Stockton, has sold the cocker spaniel bitch Dot H., to Mr. S. Y. Strait, Stockton.

Whelps.

Mr. M. P. McKoon, El Cajon, Cal., cocker spaniel bitch Vixen (No. 10429, A. K. C. S. B.). whelped five puppies, March 22, 1889, by his Col. Stubbs (No. 4676, A. K. S. B.)

Mr. M. P. McKoon, El Cajon, Cal , cocker spaniel bitch Fanny Stubbs (No. 4682, A. K S. B.), whelped five puppies, April 10, 1889, by his Black Bob, (No. 10388, A. K. C. S. B.)

Kirktroven Mastiff Kennels, Pasadena, mastiff Zella M. whelped March 12, 1889, eight, five dogs, by Imperial Arno, by Imperial Chancellor, 16030 E. K. C. S. B.

Dr. A. C. Davenport, Stockton, cocker spaniel Vic (Jet—Beauty) whelped March 22, 1889, three, two dogs, to Captain Stubbs (Col. Stubbs—Maud.)

Same owner's cocker spaniel Cherry (Captain Stubbs—Flossy C), whelped March 26, 1889, six, three dogs, to Jet (Wildair—Bird.)

The Associate Members of the A. K. C.

A meeting of the associate members of the American Kennel Club was held at Boston Wednesday, April 3d, and was called to order by Mr. August Belmont, Jr., who was in the chair. Mr. A. P. Vredenburgh acted as secretary. The following members were present:

E. H. Moore, F. R. Hitchcock, H. C. Glover, J. Grosvenor, H. T. Foote, D. W. A. Power, T. Sheldon, T. H. Terry, Fred Hoey, Mitchell Harrison, A. Belmont, Jr. A. P. Vredenburgh, J. H. Winslow, Jas. Mortimer and A. D Lewis.

The following were represented by proxies: W. S. Storer, J. C. Chorpenning, J. Van Shaick, E. Dexter, S. Swann, J. L. Campbell, C. T. Thompson, G. Sander, J. L Anthony, C. D. Purroy, S. L. Boggs, H. F. Schellhass, F. Bollett, R. H. Derby, R. Lyon, M. E. Randolph, C. D. Anderson, G. S. Page, R. P. Keasbey, J. Shelley Hudson, Dr. M. V. B. Saunders and C. G. Birnstill.

Mr. Hitchcock nominated Dr. J. Frank Perry for president. Messrs. Hitchcock and E. H. Moore were appointed tellers to verify the proxies. On motion, Mr. Vredenburgh was instructed to cast the vote in favor of Dr. Perry, which was done, and the chairman declared Dr. J. Frank Perry elected president.

Mr. Hoey nominated Mr. E. H. Moore for vice-president. The secretary, having been directed to do so, cast the ballot, and Mr. Moore was declared elected vice-president.

Mr. Vredenburgh nominated Mr. H. W. Huntington for secretary. On motion the secretary cast the ballot, and Mr. Huntington was declared elected.

Mr. Hitchcock nominated Messrs. Perry, Moore and Huntington delegates to the American Kennel Club, and they were elected.

Dr. Perry defined his position in some remarks to the members, after which the meeting adjourned.

Napa Spring Meeting.

Not to be behind hand in the matter of spring meetings, the Napa Turf Club announce this week that they will give a two day's trotting meeting on Friday and Saturday, May 17th and 18th. The purses are so liberal that it will pay owners of trotters to prepare their horses and get them in readiness for this meeting. The president of the association, Mr. F. W. Loeber, is a thorough horseman, and his name is a guarantee that everything will be conducted in the very best style. Napa has a a splendid track, which is now in tip top order and in the immediate surroundings there are many fast trotters and pacers that there should be no lack of entries on May 1st.

Beware of the Touts.

One of the incubii which rests upon racing is the army of touts which hang around the public racecourses. Private grounds are not exempt as it is nearly impossible to obtain grooms and jockeys which are not tainted with the disease.

But as a rule the chief annoyance to California race goers, or that portion of them who wager some money, is from the gang which claim to know about the horses, and, consequently, can furnish valuable information, the consideration being a share of the winnings. By dividing the intelligence so as to give A. one horse, B. another, C. a third and so on until all the horses which are thought to have a chance are giving to backers a certain sum will result the only capital required being lots of cheek.

Impudence and assurance as these gentry do not hesitate to approach any one they think there is a show to victimize, and will go further by asking for a bonus, no matter if not consulted before the investment, being ready to swear that their information was the cause of the money being won.

Hurrah For The Races!

We pity the man, woman or child whose heart does not beat in unison with the footfalls of the racers as they come in an animated struggle to the goal, as the absence of delight at that exciting moment would argue that their nature was too cold to appreciate many of the boons a kind Providence has bestowed. No matter how little a spectator is versed in horse lore, no difference if a good portion of the afternoon hangs heavily on their hands, and there are expressions of surprise at the interest exhibited by others before the start, when the flag gives the signal that the play has begun, apathy gives way to attention, attention to anxiety as the race progresses, intense and pleasurable excitement in the last few seconds when there are doubts as to which will win. Let there be thousands in position to see all there is of the race, and it is safe to assert that there is not a single person who has not made a choice of a winner. Apart from those who are swayed by pecuniary feelings, or those who are not biased by mercenary motives, but are influenced by favoritism for particular families, or for pride of locality urging that the "brown horse" should win, there is enough to cause a selection. It may be that beauty and grace of movement has captured one of aesthetic tastes, or it may be that a happy combination of colors presents a picture which the retina carries to the brain and gains approbation and good wishes for the bearer and wearer. Whatever the cause, it is nearly certain that every horse which starts will have some hoping for its success, and without a single sous at stake, the race will raise emotions of joy.

We are writing of those who restrain their speculations to amounts which can be lost without ruffling the temper sufficient to over-balance the pleasures which are felt in the contest. "Heavy bettors" are not apt to be guided by sentimental feeling, though there is a wide difference with them when the venture depends on the speed of horses, or is to be decided by the turn of a card or the pull of dice. There is greater joy in winning, not so great a load to bear when their judgment is at fault as there may be the counter satisfaction of witnessing a race worth a long journey to see.

From the present indications the coming meeting is likely to be one of the best ever held on the coast. The racing at San Jose, Los Angeles and Fresno prove that there is a better class of horses in training here this spring than have been shown in former years, and the dark division according to all reports are fitting company for the best.

The programme is so well arranged that there is a chance for all, whatever their forte may be, and in every race there is a good opportunity for the glorious charm of uncertainty.

The course will be in admirable order, and should the weather prove propitious, which also seems probable, nothing will be lacking to ensure grand sport.

Dolly McMahon and Lotta.

To be the dam of so noted a mare as Lilly Stanley is high renown, and as a natural sequence her owner has been very anxious to learn her pedigree. There was a report prevalent that she was by Rysdyk's Hambletonian, but this could not be verified. Although she was brought here by. A. S. Gage, when Katie Pease came, it seemed difficult to get any further intelligence, and that "unknown" would be appended in her case, as well as that of such a vast number beside.

But a few days ago when looking over papers preparatory to sending them to the binder, others to be destroyed, amoung the latter division our eye caught the headline "Sale of Roadsters," and this was enough to attract attention. The sale was of horses belonging to Gage and William Patrick, a son of Mr. P. being named as the owner. In that repert Dolly McMahon is stated to be by Mambrino Patchen, and her mate by Wild Irishman, both being sold to a gentleman in Napa. Knowing the interest Messrs. Coombs took in the matter, the slip was sent to him, with a request that it be returned, intending to reprint it this week. But as we have since learned that Hon. F. L. Coombs, to whom the letter was addressed, was attending the convention of Native Sons, he will not see it until his return home.

Notwithstanding verification will be necessary before registry, there can be little doubt of the correctness of the statement. At that time, February, 1877, Mambrino Patchen had not an exalted reputation, and it is not likely that the claim would have been made without good grounds.

A mare bought at the same sale was called Lotta, and in late years she was said to be by Lexington. This we always thought to be improbable, but when one of the band is catalogued as by Newry, dam by Bonnie Scotland, that is breeding which might readily convince us that the other is correct.

The clew obtained, however, is likely to lead to positive knowledge, and a satisfactory clearing up of the matter,

Guard the Record.

So much of the value of fast trotters depends on the records obtained, that too great care cannot be taken to insure fair trials and correct reports of the time made. The bearing is far wider than people who are not tolerably well informed in trotting affairs are aware of, family performances are of fully as much weight as indivdual merit, and in estimating the worth of procreative animals, intelligent breeders place more dependence on family characteristics than on a single display. Thus a fair performer belonging to a sept which embraced many others of excellence, would outrank one of still more brilliant powers which was not so well endowed in kindred of the right sort. Therefore there is an anxiety to possess sires and dams which are members of a popular family, and every addition to the list of proved speed is made welcome.

When the effort is made to increase the ranks by fair means it is a laudable endeavor, when fraud, chicanery and falsification, are called upon to assist in building reputations, it is downright cheatery, swindling of an exceedingly low type. Unfortunately, in horse affairs as in every other pursuit, there are men who are alone guided by self interest, who are prone to follow crooked paths, and even a better sort who give way to temptation with the plea that it is so small a baby that harm cannot come from standing sponsor. The first class will put up any job that there is a fair prospect of getting away with, the latter see no ill in subtracting such a small fraction of time as is represented by a second or two, and when it comes to breaking the unit and knocking off a small piece it is so trivial that objections are frivolous in the extreme.

We are not surprised that Mr. Wallace should feel that still more exacting conditions should be incorporated in the laws governing registery, when that was dependent upon records, than the code of the regular associations provided. From the position he has occupied, he was brought in direct contact with those who had no scruples of conscience, or regard for truth when pedigrees and records could be twisted to suit their book. But in his anxiety to counteract the tendency to falsify the breeding and performances of fast trotters, Mr. Wallace erred in ignoring claims which now amply justified, and in assuming that he and the Board of Censors were the only authority, a still graver mistake was made.

The National and American Trotting Associations are recognized to be at the head of trotting affairs. Their laws (nearly alike) are recognized authority over the whole country. Wherever trotting prevails these codes are familiar to nearly everyone who is in any manner connected with the sport. As is shown in another article the rules specify how a record shall be obtained, and hence there is a general knowledge of the steps which are necessary to get the record legally. When this is down in accordance with the rules the horse is entitled to the record made and if fifty boards were to deny the right it would still belong to the animal.

But admission into the standard class of the Trotting Register does depend upon the Board of Censors, when that is claimed on time made, and as the Year Book is under Mr. Wallace's entire charge, he can compel acquiscence in whatever rules he promulgates. Mr. Wallace cannot possibly claim that omission from the Year Book is positive evidence that the animal is not entitled to the place, but only that his rules have not been complied with.

A dictatorship, in so important a matter as the record of trotters, would not be tolerated for an instant by such a large majority of breeders and owners as to be practically the whole, while the governing power would be cheerfully given to the associations which are already acknowledged to have trotting affairs under their supervision. That is now awarded, and when a course accepts membership, an important part of the contract is compliance with all the by-laws, rules and regulations.

That any other requirements are necessary, than those embodied in the codes, to ensure an honest return of the time made, whether in races against horses or when a stipulated figure is reached, is not apparent, but if the Board of Censors or Mr. Wallace can show a better plan, there is little question of the amendment being accepted. With two sets of rules in force, it is not to be expected that those which are the least known will displace the popular mode. We do not object to guarding, with even financial exactness, the records on which so much depends, though we emphatically protest against the practice of throwing out in the face of incontrovertable evidence such performances as that made by Whips or that of Big Jim.

The claim that a performance must be made at a regular meeting cannot be allowed, and a law which would compel all races against time to be trotted during that period could never be passed.

Big Jim's Record.

Our associate was not quite correct in his remarks on the Big Jim race, which appeared in the paper of last week. The error arose from accepting the regulations for admission in the Year Book in place of being governed by the rules of the National Trotting Association of which the Bay District Track is a member.

"Rule 42—Public Race.

Any contest for purse, premium, stake or wager, or involving admission fees, on any course and in the presence of a judge or judges, shall constitute a public race.

Rule 43—Time Records and Bars.—When time becomes a bar.

"A record can be made only in a public race, the horse to trot or pace a full mile according to rule; and the time must be taken by at least two timers selected for the purpose, and the record of their names as well as time must be kept."

That the above conditions were observed in the Big Jim race is evident from the published account. The judges and timers were selected and their names published. The premium offered was a colt which Mr. Marvin offered conditional that Big Jim should make a mile in 2:30 or better, under conditions which would entitle him to a record, a record made in accordance with the rules of the Trotting Association in which the track held membership. It is very true that were there any doubts of the performance being made in accordance with the guards the rules impose, the Board of Appeals would have the power to consider the case, and if the evidence supported the charge the record would be thrown out. But when one man or a body of men, not recognized as having authority, attempt to bring other laws to bear, while their action may have an effect on publications under their control, such as admission into Stud or Year Books, their verdict is powerless in effecting the standing of an animal which has filled all the conditions of the N. T. A.

Again our associate erred in considering that these were necessary to constitute a race. In a match against time a horse is entitled to three trials, with proper intervals between the heats, but there is nothing to compel further attempts when stipulated time has been made. It is analogous to a race in which any number of horses take part. To win it is necessary to get three heats, or "distance" all competitors before three heats are won, and if that is accomplished in one heat, it is a race as much as though a dozen were trotted.

If Mr. Marvin gave the colt on the condition that the rules for admission in the Year Book were followed, the reward has not been earned. If the "premium" was offered consequent upon Big Jim obtaining a record of 2:30 or better, his owner is entitled to it.

This is so plain that further arguments are unnecessary; though there is another feature which is worthey of attention.

From the account published it appears that the race had been advertised to take place at the time Little Hope and Big Jim met. Two of the advertised horses did not start, and Little Hope was "worked out" two heats before his competitor "showed up." That after Big Jim won the heats and gained the desired record, the race was discontinued, whether from the judges consenting to the withdrawal of one or both, or the determination on the part of the drivers to forgo further contest is not shown. That the judges could have compelled the drivers to finish the race, or punished the parties refusing by suspension or expulsion is evident.

Then to all intents and purposes it was a race, notwithstanding the irregularities, and in that respect, answers the conditions required by the compiler of the Year Book, and presumably by the "Board of Censors." But a "regular meeting" is rather an ambiguous phrase and what it will be hereafter defined to mean is beyond conjecture.

The trotting department of the State Fair covers a period of nine days. Others have six, five, or four days, while the Bay District has been advertised to include thirty days, occupying two days in each week.

One day can scarcely be called a meeting, especially should that be taken up with one race. Time made in matches, or even a sweepstakes which was trotted outside of a regular meeting would not be accepted under the arbitrary rule for admission into the Year Book. While it is so palpable as not to require argument that continual vigilance is necessary to guard against fraudulent claims for admission into "the list," it is far from being proper to exclude performances which are beyond a shadow of doubt. The rules of the N. T. A. and A. T. A. are ample protection, and admission into the Stud Book could be awarded under them without running much risk of encouraging wrong doing. Section five of Rule 43 is as follows:

"If it should appear to the Board of Appeals upon investigation, that any record was fraudently obtained, it shall be declared not a record but a bar."

With the close watch which is now kept by those interested in breeding fast trotters, it is nearly impossible to "get away" with a "job," though instances have been known when surrounded with all the guards embodied in the rules quoted last week.

But our readers, or at least a majority of them, will agree with us that when the laws of the two great trotting associations are strictly observed, the animal complying is fully entitled to the record gained, and there is no possible way of depriving him of it.

Names Claimed.

E. Newland, Oakland.

I claim the name April's Lady for brown filly, star in forehead, one white hind foot, foaled April 5th, 1889; by Grand Moor Jr., dam Lady Sather by Whipple's Hambletonian; second dam by Davis' Black Hawk; third dam by Kentucky Whip. Grand Moor Jr. by Grand Moor, dam Lady Bud.

M. E. Warren, Linden.

I claim the name of Recompense for seal brown colt foaled March 13, 1889, both hind feet white to ankle joint, small black spot on outside coronet of left hind feet, round white spot in forehead, by Antevolo, dam by Lottie C., by Fred Arnold; second dam Roseline by Major Mono, he by Pacific, he by Washtenan Chief; third dam Kitten by Royal George.

Foals of 1889.

March 7th, br f, star in forehead, one foot white, by Milner, dam Maggie O. by Shannon.

At Salinas. Property of James B. Iverson.

April 5th, b f, star in forehead, stripe in face, three white feet, by Antevolo, dam by Vermont 322.

Stockton, Cal. The property of M. C. Sexton.

April 2d, br c, no white, 41 inches high, by Allo 9373 A. T. R., dam's breeding untraced. Bred back to Allo.

Stockton, Cal. The property of A. C. Davenport.

March 17th, dark bay colt, no white, 42 inches high, by Allo, 2:22½, dam by Mambrino Eclipse. Bred back to Allo.

The following are colts foaled at the Seth Cook Farm up to date:

April 14th, filly by Steinway, dam Inex by Sweepstakes.

At Wildidle Farm, Cal. The property of H. C. Judson:

April 1st, bay colt, star in forehead, both hind feet white, by Wildidle, dam Duchess by Antelope.

At Salinas, Cal. Property of P. McCartney.

April 14th, brown filly, one white foot and stripe on face, by Iverson's Mul-Voorhees (by Jim Mulvenna, dam by Dan Voorhees), dam Flora G., 2:29¼, by Altoona.

At Santa Rosa, Cal. Property Chas. Underhill.

April 9th, chestnut colt, narrow strip on face, by Three Cheers, dam Rosette by Wheatly; second dam Black Maria, by Georgetown.

From Sheepshead Bay.

Who will ride for Mr. Haggin this year? asks the sportsman. Isaac Murphy's continued refusal to sign with Mr. Baldwin, despite the Dwyers' repeated assurances that they do not want him, has given birth to the rumor that he may don the orange and blue. This is not true. It is also said that the stygian Hamilton may reappear in the orange and blue this year. He has signed with Senator Hearst, but has had a row with trainer Allen. The latter wanted him to ride the Senator's horses in their work, but Hamilton preferred to ride winners of Clifton. The Senator is very much angered at his conduct, and may refuse to employ him at all.

The Senator's horses are moving in magnificent shape. On Saturday last the gigantic King Thomas worked a half in 54. Despite his enormous size, the $40,000 horse will be ready to run almost as soon as any two-year-old in this neighborhood. Gorgo, who broke a half hundred men last summer, looks quite handsome enough to break a half hundred more. His time for the half was a full second better than King Thomas. It is 49 to 1 against Gorgo for the Brooklyn, and many a trainer down there has ruminated on Senator Hearst's horse as the possible winner of that event—only to dismiss the idea at the first thought of Hanover. They all swear by Hanover down there. Frank McCabe says that he has not taken a lame step since his leg was nerved almost a year ago. "It is 2 to 1 agin him now, and yer won't git even money the day of the race," said one enthusiast. Kingston has grown into a perfect mountain. This has been accepted as the reason of his being declared out of all the early spring handicaps. The real reason now seems to be that his people think they can win them all with Hanover.

Anti Post Betting.

As the weeks roll by, and the opening of the Brooklyn Jockey Club Spring Meeting draws near, the interest increases in the two large handicaps, about which books are usually opened months in advance. The sporting journals of the East keep regular standing tables of the odds laid by the various bookmakers and it may be noticed from week to week what horse is being backed, and how heavily, by the change in the quotations. During the first few days after the books were opened, there was a small flutter by a few of the very early backers to "get on" Terra Cotta, however, as the days rolled on supporters for the other candidates appeared, but not before the Chicago stable entry had been backed down to "fifteens." A comparison of the sheets issued by Cutler & Whitney, of this city, and a glance through their books show the fluctuations which occur and from what section of the country money comes from, to back particular favorites for the suburban.

Terra Cotta has been backed from Dallas, Texas, New York, St. Paul, Minn., Chicago and St. Louis, each city sending many orders. Hanover finds most of his support from the large Eastern cities, still some one in St. Paul favors the chances of the Dwyers grand old horse, and sends on a commission. New York also sends on large backing for Tennyson, Belvidere and Fitz James, while Marander has one friend in the metropolis. Clay Stockton has strong support from Louisville, New Orleans, Memphis and Nashville, while Eolo finds backing in Lexington, Chicago and St. Louis. Californian money is nearly all placed on horses owned by State representatives, Glen Echo, Gorgo, Tennyson and Fitz James being thought most of. Judge Murray does not seem to have any particular spot from which his support comes, but North, East, South and West contains his admirers.

For the Brooklyn Handicap, New York City takes Exile, Hanover, Elkwood and that rattle-headed mare Connemara. Wheeler T. has a good many warm friends in the South, his backing from the North being rather meagre, which is strange as he is owned by the Chicago stable and it would seem natural that the support should come from that quarter. Richmond and Prince Royal have considerable California money on them, while Glen Echo, The Bard and Hanover, have also been lightly backed. The firm have opened up a book on the Chicago Derby in which there are several of our local horses, so we give the price list entire, that comparisons may be made as to the odds offered against our horses and the Eastern ones.

Did you ever break down while out driving? Well the writer has, and is fully alive to the importance of having every bolt, brace and bar closely examined before going out for a drive. Still every day, in this age of progression, brings forward some new invention, to lessen the troubles, trials and tribulations of life. This week the Bull and Grant Farm Implement Co., sets forth their advertisement announcing that they have for sale a practically indestructible steel gear buggy; they claim the lightest, strongest and most durable gear ever offered on the Coast, with no wood bars to spring, sag or break. If this is not a boon, then surely we do not know what we need. The firm have also for sale at low prices, fine buggies, carts, spring wagons, etc., and they sell at prices that cannot be beat. Call and examine the stock, or send for a catalogue and price list.

The Knowlton mower now stands head and shoulders over any other instrument of the kind manufactured, and there is no farmer who has ever used one that will have any other. This is the first mower made to use the sickle edge guard plates, and the enormous quantity sold last year shows the appreciation with which it is held by the public. The plane Rustler is a simple device for obtaining a fast or slow motion for the knives on a mowing machine. It is a perfect floating bar and tilting lever which performs the important duties of tilting the guards, and also of raising and lowering the cutting apparatus, in fact it is a complete frame with only one piece of iron, and no bolts or joints to bother you. Messrs. P. P. Mast & Co., of 31 Market Street, are the sole agents for the Pacific Coast, and they will be pleased to show the workings to any person who may feel interested in mowing implements.

Mr. McKoon to Dr. Davenport, et. al.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—I notice in the March 23 issue of BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN that Dr. A. C. Davenport, of Stockton, Cal., has reported as purchased from the Handsome Brook Kennel, Franklin, N. R., cocker spaniels as follows: Vic, liver and white, whelped October 25, 1887, by Jet (Wildair—Bird), out of Beauty (Brag—Daisy C.), in whelp to Capt. Stubbs (Col. Stubbs—Maud), due March 21st. Also Cherry, liver and white, whelped October 27, 1887, by Capt. Stubbs (Col. Stubbs—Maud), out of Flossy C. (Dan—Nellie), in whelp to Jet (Wildair—Bird) on March 25th. Also notice that his cocker spaniel bitch Pet H. (Col. Stubbs—Flirt) has visited his Kate (Snip—Daisy C.), February 6, 1889. I also notice that the American Field, of March 23d, reports the above bitches, Vic and Cherry to be of different color and of other dates of birth.

Having been so many years a careful breeder of cocker spaniels of known reliability, and having constant access to my old kennel records, and all public records, I therefore quickly notice that there are a host of unexplainable errors in the above reports, and would kindly call Dr. Davenport's attention to a few of them, and seek information upon a few other points therein, both for Dr. Davenport's best interest as well as my own and that of the public at large, and it is only proper for me to say here that the errors do not appear to me to fall at Dr. Davenport's door, but I judge him to be in a position to ferret out the same. Now in regard to the main errors, I can say that if Vic is out of Handsome Brook Kennel's Beauty, by my old Jet, and was whelped in 1887, she was, according to my books, whelped December 27, 1887, and was liver with white on bosom, if I recollect correctly, and not liver and white as classed, and if she was due to whelp puppies March 21st last, she evidently must have been injudiciously bred at her first or immature heat, and thus cause her puppies to be weakly, and not fitted for breeding or field use when they reach maturity. Yet, if such breeding was ordered by Dr. Davenport, he can have no grounds for complaint upon that score.

The bitch Cherry, I notice, is bred to my old Jet in the same manner as the above bitch Vic, and whether or not such was by request, Dr. Davenport should know without uncertainty. In regard to his cocker bitch Pet H. being bred to his Kutes, I would like much if he would let us know what Pet H. this is, as I see by my books that Col. Stubbs has never been bred to a bitch by the name of Flirt; also would desire to know what Snip this is that is claimed to be the sire of his Kute. I am sure that Dr. Davenport will take due pains to ferret out the above errors so vital to himself and the public, and give us them in their authenticated form, as well as clear up the Col. Stubbs—Flirt union. I will add that Capt. Stubbs is a legitimate son of my Col. Stubbs, out of Maud, and that my old stud dog Jet is in use, and has been for three years past in use in the Handsome Brook Kennel.

ROD.

A thirteen pound carp is said to have been netted in Carquinez straits, near Martinez. The fish was sold for one dollar. The size is remarkable, although larger fish of the species have been taken.

A very impressive advertisement is that of Messrs. Clabrough, Golcher & Co., which appears elsewhere, offering fine st fishing tackle, and the generally known probity of the firm is sufficient guarantee of the truth of all statements made in the advertisement. An inspection of their stock is a liberal education in the refinements of the art of angling.

Mr. M. Lawrence, of the Tallac House, Lake Tahoe, called on Wednesday to say that prospects for a season of uncommonly good trout fishing were excellent at that rarest of summer resorts. Some creeks near by have been stocked, so that visitors may have either lake or brook fishing. Tahoe has given the largest trout caught in the State, one taken when General Grant visited the place weighing 29¾ pounds, and one caught last June by Mr. Crane pulling down 24 lbs. after being cleaned and the gills removed.

The Tallac House will open on May 15th.

Mr. E. M. Tod sends from far away Brighton in England, an article for this week's Rod department that will probably draw down upon him the anathemas of a large sect of anglers, those whose affect salmon fishing. We shall be pleased to receive from Major Traherne what we know will be his eloquent rebuttal of Mr. Tod's aspersions, and from any other incensed angler for salmon any plea that seems suitable to the gravity of the charges. The article opens a whole world of space for argument and reminiscence. Mr. Tod is always felicitous, and his writings are fairly classics in angling literature.

Mr. Edward Fay, in company with a friend, visited famous old Colonel Dick Doherty at Purissima Creek last week, and fished parts of two days in that popular stream. The trip was impromptu, Mr. Fay undertaking to provision the party in the way of "smokes" and other incidents, and a better provided expedition never enjoyed the charming drive from San Mateo through the picturesque canyons by Crystal Springs and Pilarcitos, and from Spanishtown along within sight and hearing of the Pacific.

The "ardor piscatorius" led the anglers to make necessary changes immediately upon reaching Col. Dohertys, and within a half hour they were casting along in the creek a mile or so above the oil wells. Three hours fishing produced about seven pounds of smallish trout, hard as nails and pretty as pictures.

An unequalled supper of fresh fried fish, with peaches and cream, and such rolls as only an angler should ever share, was a fit ending for the day. The succeeding day, or most of it, was spent in fishing the stream from a point two miles above the oil wells to the county road bridge, a distance of about four miles. Free casting was prevented by overhanging trees, but during the hours in which the sun was on the water the trout took the red spinner and hen pheasant hackle with orange body freely, and the baskets filled with gratifying rapidity. The stream was too high and not clear, and as an experiment Mr. Fay hunted up a worm, put it on a fly hook, and dropped into a boiling pool, instantly taking a quarter pound fish. Other worms followed, and like fish, so that the score for the day was creditable to his skill. Some fingerlings in his basket, but very few. His friends, religiously opposed to bait, got only the surface feeders, and in consequence made a poorer showing in size, although having the greater number. The weather was perfect, the country fragrant as a rose garden and beautiful as a trout, the anglers were happy as larks, and everything was lovely. Colonel Dohertys is a good place to go for clean beds, good table and painstaking accommodations.

Abuses at Olema.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—Our trout streams are being rapidly depleted by the "gas you please" sportsman. "The Lord for usual, but the devil take the hindmost class." Three young gentlemen from Petaluma, came over here last week, and caught 600 in Bear Valley creek in one day. Piled away next day to other streams and caught enough to make about a thousand. We rusticusses who catch what we want to eat and no more, get the skim milk, the cream of the fishing, the big fish have all been caught.

True sportsmanship should, it seems to me, consist in good fellowship, skill in shooting and fishing. Not in getting to a stream first and taking everything that can be induced to bite, but in making good casts, catching large fish and breathing into the trout, soul and body, inspiration and breath.

The German, is a type of many sportsmen. "How did you shoot those snipe?" said a hunter to the possessor of a bunch of snipe "on the wing."

"Shoot um any way, makes no difference, in the legs, in de wing, in de head, anywhere."

Liberty I have heard defined to be, the right to do just as you please, as long as you do not conflict with the rights of any one else. Alas! now especially in your cities vox populi, vox dei. Yes, how a vote deifies a man in the rays of the law makers. How liberty becomes license, when the balance of power hangs in doubtful poise. I like the position the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN has taken for the protection of game, and subscribe myself, Your admirer and friend,

P. J. SHAFTER.

Salmon vs Trout Fishing.

THEIR RESPECTIVE CLAIMS FOR PRECEDENCE.

FOR THE BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN BY E. M. TOD.

Fly fishing nowadays, far from remaining (if it ever was) "the contemplative man's recreation," has developed into a kind of piscatorial arena wherein each man throws down his gage and defiantly challenges piscatorial foes much after the style of Paddy at Donnybrook Fair, who, taking off his long-tailed blue, and trailing it along the ground, sarcastically invites to mortal combat, thus: "Will any man be plazed to trid on the tails of me coat," and in writing this paper I feel very much like old Pat.

I remember meeting under the roof-tree of an old schoolfellow (B.), who rented a salmon fishery on the Tweed, a middle-aged Glasgow merchant. B. himself was an excellent sportsman, but his friend had begun too late in life ever "to set the Thames on fire" as a trout fisherman amongst the wary, "well educated" Tweed trout. He had, I remember, an exceptionally fine rod by Chevalier which he flogged away with to the terror of the trout. I met him at the river next season and asked how he was acquiring the art of trout fishing, whereon he drew himself leisurely up, starchily, and in a solemn voice, such as one might have expected from a Methodist parson, he thus addressed me in basso profundo: "I'm past that! I am now a salmon fisher!" and then spread his chest out. How my friend (B.) roared when I related this to him. "Why, confound him (good fellow as he unquestionably is), he can't fish one little bit either for trout or salmon; and as to his salmon fishing I'll tell you all about that. One idle afternoon I myself rowed him into one of my best casts, and it was a caution to see him thrash the water. At last, standing up in the boat, he declared that he was sick of it, and as I certainly was, I began leisurely to row him to shore, he lazily allowing his line to trail behind him, whilst his rod rested on his shoulder, when to his surprise (I had almost said dismay) there came a tremendous tug, followed by a running out of his line, and I shouted to him to wheel about, and that he had hooked a salmon. After endless muddling the fish was landed with my assistance, and from that day to this he airs himself as a salmon fisherman, and has a cut about trout fishermen of all kinds."

Now, ridiculous as this may seem, this is a true story, and strange though it may appear, I have had it repeated, in all its essentials, time and again, up to the present day. Now I should like this subject well thrashed out.

Wherein are salmon fishermen justified in holding their art up so highly in comparison with the art of trout fishing? That there are salmon fishermen worthy of our admiration and envy, such as Major Traherne and others, no man for one moment with a grain of sense wishes to deny.

That, however, the salmon fisherman who has to fish a river where trees and bushes line the bank, and where no boat is ever used, requires very special skill, is unquestioned.

Nay, more, when rivers run low and clear, and fish are shy, and "fine and far off" is the only hope of success, even in a river where a clear cast can always be reckoned upon, it is doubtless a great treat to watch a consummate master fishing certain salmon casts.

There are of course many occasions when salmon fishing calls forth the display of very superior skill, particularly in difficult circumstances, where no boat is employed, and where "the lie" is at the far and deep side of the river, and the wind somewhat contrary. But I ask if I am not right in assuming that many a large bag is secured by men who do not even know how to throw a good line, but who are fortunate in the possession of a good salmon river—a good gillie, or keeper—who, in certain difficult casts, takes the rod and hands the handsomely hooked fish over to his master to run, and who, in any and every case, directs his movements, selects his flies and gaffs his fish "clane and cliver."

Now, why is this? How is it that the noble salmon can fall a prey to one who has no pretension to being a skillful fisherman and who, like my old Glasgow acquaintance, probably looks down from his lofty height upon all trout fishing as an art beneath his notice?

Let us go into the matter in detail. First, there is your Loch salmon fisherman who goes annually to some salmon lake, such as the famous Loch Tay, or its less-famed Notstill Ford, Loch Navar, or any such Loch. Given really first-rate tackle, a sound rod and a good reel, will any man tell me what skill is required here that the boatman does not possess to a far more important degree than the so-called fisherman himself?

There he sits, like an automaton, his two rods out, the boatman having first seen that the lines are all sound and the lure, be it phantom, minnow or fly, such as he approves of, for who dare say a good boatman nay, here? Even if these essentials are satisfactorily arranged, the so-called fisherman is a little helpless, for the salmon lie in certain well known beats, and here the boatman's local knowledge is everything. He must row exactly to the right bays, he may go right across the loch at certain places, knowing as he does from long experience just where to go. Moreover, he must row at a proper place, no easy matter, and help when the fish is hooked by winding up the spare rod, finishing by gaffing the fish, save when two boatmen are employed, when one undertakes the care of the boat and the other helps the so-called fisherman from start to finish—with his fish. Under such circumstances, the running (?) of your fish, with an open sea before you, and strong twisted gut, ought to be reckoned as anything but an angling feat, provided always that no untoward accident occurs, which demands unusual self-possession, nerve and readiness of resource on Piscator's part.

Again, we shall consider the fishing in certain very broad rivers, where the casts are thus fished, the trolling rods are out, and the boat is pulled across the river slowly and methodically, and then makes its return journey, and so on until a mighty tug announces that "his honor is into him."

The fisherman may be meanwhile chatting gayly with his boatman, smoking a cigar, or reading the last new novel. He has still time to seize his rod, and depends on the presence of mind of his boatman, largely, for the first few anxious minutes, and of course for the final coup de fer, the gaffing of the fish.

And, yet again he is now fishing a river with fly casting from a boat. Does not a skilful boatman anticipate his every throw? Does he not by a pull of his oar, straighten a line sent out very feebly in a bag? And does he not know how "to hang" the boat over the very best parts of the cast?

Nay, more even where a river can be commanded from the bank by occasional wading, how often does the salmon fisherman throw anything but a good straight, "clean" line. Yet with the help of the current, and the taking of the fly, it straightens before it is half way across, and thus many a fish is secured even to the unskilful salmon angler.

This may appear to be an exaggerated and onesided picture—and of course, my object is to dwell upon the successful men who are not finished sportsmen, and yet who, (somehow) make good bags when "salmo salar" is plentiful fresh run, and keen and rivers are in good ply.

Moreover, there are men who consider it in no way "degrading" to hand their rods (their salmon rods) to the gillies when fatigued or whenever they come to a more than usually awkward, or long "throw," and who calmly tell you that they always reckon the fish thus caught a part of their own day's performance.

As I have had to argue that this is a very unsportsmanlike performance, and most misleading, as a matter of fact—and this with friends whom I respect in other matters I shall be grateful if Major Traherne or any such unquestionable authority would express his views unflinchingly in this matter. It would then become "a code" of honor, or dishonor, for the future guidance of salmon fishermen.

My feelings found vent when on one occasion, I handed a rod to a gillie, being in considerable pain from lumbago, that day—

"Oh!" he said, "If I hook a fish, you can land him, sir. That will count for you all the same."

I looked at the man steadily, and said, "Do you think that I would land, far less count as mine, any fish which you hooked? I would see you hanged first, my good fellow."

For to me the casting of the line, the delight of the rise, and the first pull are the very essence of salmon fishing. Not that I despise "the run," if I hook my own fish fairly—for I love it all.

I make no apology to those who are real past masters in the art of salmon fishing, for my paper is wholly inapplicable to such.

I merely wish to take up the ground that I have chosen to bring this matter to a crisis, namely, that your middle-aged Mr. Briggs, may, provided he can only rent firstrate salmon fishing, come home and boast, certainly after his second season, if not before, of bags of salmon, which will seem to imply the possession of a superior skill, than which nothing may be further from the truth. Whereas if he took up the fly fishing for trout in any famous stream (fly fishing in a Sutherlandshire loch is hardly worthy the name, it is so unscientific and easy), I would strongly question if he would be even heard of. It surely must be conceded that the trout in rivers which are much fished become shy and knowing to a very remarkable degree. Whereas your Lordly Salmon spends much of his time in the sea, and when he returns to his native river he goes at some fly which jumps about, and which he never saw the like of since he was last in fresh water (and then only when attached to a line) and becomes hooked.

Local knowledge, the knowledge of the boatman or gillie, is a factor towards success in all rivers of the greatest importance.

Moreover, the rod and line used are wonderfully strong, capable of holding any fish, if you give him fair play, and hence, I consider that there may be much bungling with the running of the fish, and for all that possibly a successful issue.

Now, in the case of river trout fishing, comparing a famous salmon river with a famous trout stream, what a difference exists!

First of all the trout gut must be of gossamer fineness, and the flies made with great delicacy. Everything suggesting delicacy of manipulation.

Moreover, the trout (only too well educated nowadays) can detect the smallest error in casting, and are "put down" in a moment.

It takes a man to know his work, to cast a good clean line at every throw with dead fine drawn gut. Should a good fish rise, a flurried strike, such as your green hand gives to a salmon (and yet lives to land the ill-used fish) I say a strike such as this and goodbye to your trout and half of your cast-line.

Dry fly men will kindly say, who have killed trout in the Test, Itchen, etc., and also salmon in Scotland, Ireland and Norway, which requires the greater amount of skill.

Nay more, we Northern men, who use the finest gut we can buy for our wet fly fishing, are of opinion that it requires many years to make an out-and-out good fly fisherman for trout, whereas, if I had not been drawing upon my imagination, it would appear that, given money and a first-rate salmon river, any ordinary middle-aged man seems to be able to make a good—a fairly good—record as a slayer of salmon occasionally.

I am not rich and do not own a salmon river, and consequently I may be twitted with the fable of the fox and the grapes.

I am however, indifferent to such chaff, for I have long held it as a matter of faith, based on observation, that to be a fairly successful salmon fisherman does not always imply equivalent skill, whereas no man can "win his laurels" on any hard thrashed river, famous all the same for its trout fishing, who is not a master of his art to a greater or less degree; and the reasons are not far to seek, he is trying to outwit a foe who remains in the river all the year round, seeing countless artificial flies in the course of each season, and who, being in the daily habit of feeding on the delicate ephemera, of which the artificial trout fly is as close a resemblance as the art of the fly-dresser can make it, can thus make notes and comparisons in a way that the salmon cannot do seeing that the so-called salmon fly is a fly only by courtesy, and represents no natural fly whatever, and being "a likeness" of nothing "in Heaven above, the earth beneath, or the water under the earth." You, oh! salmon fisherman, may make an idol of your favorite without being guilty of idolatry. Witness the endless and ever growing pattern-flies with which the market is deluged, and which emanate from the brain of any fellow who likes to bring out and christen, and kill a fish with a new fly, for surely there can be no rule, no true scientific reason assigned for the multitudinous patterns which the salmon are supposed to affect, and which no man can prove resemble even the shrimp in color or shape; though it may do so in motion, when the fly is being played.

The gillie it is who indicates the "lies" of the fish thus: "Now, sir, get well over and look out; you are coming to the best of the cast!" And again, "Now, sir you are past it, you will only waste time fishing lower down, but try another fly over it again," and so forth. How much does Midas owe to his gillie when he goeth a salmon fishing, and to the "tip" that Master Gillie is angling for all the time? Verb, sat. sap.

Now a really good trout fisherman should be able to walk out alone and unaided, and will generally render a good account of himself, even if no guide go with him.

And though the dry fly man may not allow that the wet fly proficient can fish alongside of him (and I for one am of this opinion) yet will the wet man soon make a good expert, even at the first attempt, and if he be truly skilled, his line will be thrown with accuracy, and his touch when the rise comes will prove him no bungler, and so with the converse. But see our middle aged beginner with gossamer tackle, well used to "jerk it into him" when salmon fishing. "See him at work and you will find that his gossamer gut is all over the shop." Not one good cast in a dozen, and when he strikes, depend on it he swears afterwards that his fishing tackle maker has supplied him with gut which was rotten. Ahem!

This paper has hitherto dealt exclusively with fly fishing by means of the artificial fly. Salmon fishing with the minnow and worm and spawn are all of them at best but sorry substitutes for fly fishing. I, would take up too much space to go into these matters in detail here, but minnow fishing for salmon is surely not a refined art, no more is salmon fishing with the worm so well described by Dun Scotus in his prize essay, and who with sporting proclivities cares to think of prawn fishing for salmon? A kind of butchery of a noble fish fit only for Mr. Greedy-Grab, but despised by the true fisherman, as sport. It is far other with trout fishing, and those who have read works like Stewart's Practical Angler, will be ready to acknowledge that the art of killing trout in clear water with fly, worm, minnow, creeper and May fly is at once a comprehensive and a subtle art, full of study and knowledge only possessed by the few, taking years of close observation and patient industry to acquire, and demands an intimate knowledge of the habits, yes and the habitat of the trout, wherever, as in most of our Northern rivers, sport is not restricted to the use of the artificial fly.

Think you, that our father Midas—Briggs, who can boast of his salmon successes could throw a worm, a creeper, or a May-fly up stream for trout, and manage his line with all the delicacy required? not to mention minnow fishing, which requires less refinement of skill in my opinion.

And yet, we must be patient if we hear men speak of trout fishing in patronizing terms, and who to save their very lives could neither throw over a rising fish without "putting him down"—nor strike without smashing the casting line—and who possesses about as much knowledge of the habits of the fish, as the boot black who charges you 2-pence for a scientific "shine"—and won't refuse a "shiner" itself, if you offer it to him.

I have now trailed my coat along the ground, and wait to see if any gentleman will tread on its tails.

I think that my meaning may be thus summed up.

Salmon fishing, where fish are very plentiful is much more quickly acquired than trout fishing, even where the trout are plentiful, unless perhaps where they are never fished for, and are not very shy.

Salmon are of course not affected by this cause from one year to another.

When fish lie long in a pool, I grant you they get "down," but whether that is because they are drowsy, or sulky, or angry, deponent sayeth not.

I can see the trout feeding naturally at the fly, and go for him. There you are!

With salmon you have no such law of nature to guide and direct you, and practically go on casting in faith—trusting Micawber-like, "for someting to turn up." The old Scotch proverb seems to come in very handy as a finale.

"Money makes the meer (mare) to go whether she has legs or no."

This seems specially so in salmon fishing, if my observations have not led me to false conclusions.

THREE CHEERS is bred in the speediest and stoutest lines. His dam, Young Fashion was the dam of Surprise, Scotland (the only horse that ever beat Asteroid a heat), Liverpool, Columbia and Bonnie Kate, the dam of Little Buttercup and the flying Bonnie Lizzie. His grandam, Fashion, was the greatest race mare of her era, defeating Boston in that historical match at four-mile heats, that is recorded as one of the greatest events in the annals of the turf. He is thoroughly sound in wind and limb, his family on both sides being noted for their exemption from curbs, spavins, roaring, or any other hereditary unsoundness. Horsemen, who can appreciate the highest type of the thoroughbred, are specially invited to inspect Three Cheers.

THREE CHEERS is the sire of Almont, Applause and Why Not, the only three of his get ever trained, and all are stake winners.

TERMS: $75 for the season. Mares not proving with foal can be returned the next season free of charge. Good pasturage at $5 per month. Mares cared for in any manner owners may desire, and fed on hay and grain, either or both, at reasonable rates. None but competent grooms employed, but no responsibility assumed for accidents or escapes.

Sired by STRATHMORE 408, Sire of Santa Claus 2:17, Tucker, 2:19½, Skylight Pilot, 2:19, and 25 others with records better than 2:30, and the dams of 5 with records from 2:18 to 2:28.

First dam Abbess (dam of Solo, 2:28) by Albion (sire of Vanity Fair 2:24, and the dam of Favorite 2:25), he by Halcorn, a son of Virginian

Second dam by Marshall Ney, he by imp. Emancipation.

Third dam by Bertrand, a son of Sir Archy.

STEINWAY full brother to Solo, 2:28 and Soprano (the dam of C. F. Clay, 5-year-old stallion record 2:18), also Emminence, 4-year-old record 2:21 and Stockbridge 2:23.

Terms $100 for the season.

Charles Derby, 4907.

Two-Year-Old Trial 2:36.

Sired by STEINWAY 1808, record 2:25. The sire of Strathway, 3-year-old record, 6th heat, 2:26.

First dam Katie G. (the dam of H. R. Covey, 3-year-old trial 2:27), by Electioneer, the sire of Manzanita, 2:16, and of Sunol, 2-year-old record 2:18, and of eight others with records of 2:20 or better.

Second dam Fanny Malone (record 2:36, trial 2:23) by Niagara, sire of Cobb, 2:31, double team record 2:26, and of Lady Hoag, trial 2:18), said to be by Mambrino Chief, the sire of Lady Thorn and of the dam of Director, 2:17

Third dam Fanny Wickham, record 2:43, by imp. Herald, (thoroughbred).

Fourth dam by imp. Trustee, (thoroughbred.)

CHARLES DERBY will be limited to 10 approved mares. Terms $100 for the season.

The above standard bred stallions will serve mares the present season, commencing February 1, and ending September 1, 1889, at Cook Stock Farm, Danville, Contra Costa County. All bills payable before the animal is removed. Mares not proving with foal will have the usual return privileges. Pasturage $1 per month. Hay and grain $10 per month. Best care taken, but no liability assumed for accidents or escapes. Mares sent to Fasbion Stable, Oakland, Bennett's Stable, Martinez, or to Geary and Grindle's Stable, Haywards, will be forwarded to the farm free of charge. Address,

COOK STOCK FARM,
Danville.

THE WILKES STALLION

Mambrino Wilkes, 6083

(Half Brother to Harry Wilkes, 2:13 1-2.)

Sire of Gus Wilkes, 2:22; Alpheus, 2:27; Balkan 2:29¾, three-year-old; John O'Brien, lapped out the winner in 2:36 as a three-year-old; H. A. W.'s Black Colt, trial 2:29 with very little work as a four-year-old.

Will remain in the future at San Miguel Stock Farm, Walnut Creek, Contra Costa County.

DESCRIPTION.

MAMBRINO WILKES is a black horse, 16 hands high, and considerably longer than his height; has immense muscular development and weighs 1,260 pounds. He has the utmost symmetry of proportion and elegance of finish. No competent judge who has seen this horse has failed to pronounce him a perfect individual, and his breeding is certainly fashionable enough to satisfy the most fastidous. His colts are large, stylish and handsome, and Balkan has been pronounced by many the most stylish trotter on the turf.

PEDIGREE.

Sired by George Wilkes, dam Lady Chrisman by Todhunter's Mambrino; second dam by Pilot Jr.

Todhunter's Mambrino by Mambrino Chief, dam Ripton's dam by Hunt's Commodore, son of Mambrino, by imp. Messenger; second dam by Potomac, son of imp. Messenger.

George Wilkes sired 65 colts that have beaten 2:30. Of these 39 have average records of 2:24, 14 of 2:19 and 12 of 2:18.

TERMS.

Mares from a distance will be received at the Dexter Stables, Oakland, or Livery Stable, Martinez, the owner notifying Smith Hill, Superintendent at the farm. Good pasture and plenty of water. For the purpose of placing the service of a Wilkes within reach of breeders, the same rate will be maintained as last year, to wit, $75 for the season. Although it is not admitted thereby that this horse is inferior as a producer to the horses whose fees are placed at from $150 to $500.

BALKAN,

Three-year-old Record 2:29 1-2; trotting many heats faster, when he did not obtain a record.

PEDIGREE.

Sired by Mambrino Wilkes, dam Fanny Fern by Jack Hawkins, son of Boston; second dam S. F. B. by Jim Crow.

It will be readily seen that this colt is from strong producing lines on both sides Fanny Fern having produced Mollie Drew, May Queen, Onyx and Fred Arnold, all noted trotters and all by different sires.

This colt will be kept at the Oakland Trotting Park, and will be stinted to ten approved mares at $100 for the season.

MEMO.

The Fast Trotting Stallion, the Best Son of Sidney.

Will make the Season of 1889 at the Oakland Trotting Park.

He was bred by G. Valensin at the Arno Stock Farm, Sacramento County, California; foaled spring of 1885.

PEDIGREE.

By Sidney.
First dam Flirt by Buccaneer.
Second dam Mohaska Belle by Flaxtail.
Third dam by John the Baptist.

Sidney by Santa Claus, 2:17½, his dam Sweetness, 2:21¼. Strathmore, the son of Santa Claus, has 22 of his get which have trotted in 2:30 or better, up to close of 1887, several having entered since, and Volunteer, the sire of Sweetness, has 26 in the same list. Buccaneer is the sire of Shamrock, two-year-old record 2:25, and of Flight, 2:29, and in him are combined the strains of Long Island Blackhawk, Vermont Blackhawk, and the dam of Rysdyk's Hambletonian. Flaxtail figures prominently in both pacing and trotting descendants, and is the sire of the dam of Apex, 2:26, Flight, 2:29, J. H. McCormack, 2:29, and Shamrock, 2:25.

PERFORMANCES.

Memo only trotted in public in his two-year-old form, obtaining a record of 2:49, though he was close to Grandee in a race on the Bay District Track, the second heat of which was made in 2:31½, the first in 2:32. He exhibited phenomenal speed when three years old, and had it not been for a slight strain of his fore fetlock there is little question that he would have shown in public very close to the best record. On the Oakland track he was timed a mile in 2:20¾, and frequently trotted quarters in from 32½ to 34 seconds.

DESCRIPTION.

He is nearly if not quite sixteen hands high, and of powerful build throughout. His color is a glossy black, with both fore-feet white and a touch of white on his off hind quarters. His disposition is all that could be desired, and his action superb.

TERMS: One hundred dollars the season, which will commence on the 5th of February and close on the 1st of July. Due care will be taken of mares, but no responsibility for accidents or escapes.

Mares taken and kept as desired by the owners, and at reasonable rates.

Pasturage at $5 per month within the track enclosure; feed first rate, and a living stream of water in the field. There is a double protection against escape, as in addition to a strong fence on the inside of the track, the gates of the outer fence are enclosed at night, which gives almost positive assurance of safety. Address

JOHN ROWEN.
Oakland Trotting Park.

ELECTIONEER STALLION

EROS,

Standard No. 5326.

Electioneer, his sire, has more 2:20 trotters than any living horse, and more 2:30 trotters than any stallion LIVING OR DEAD.

Eros has a record of 2:29¼, made in the fifth and deciding heat against a field of eight horses in his maiden race, and with only four weeks preparation after coming out of the stud.

Progeny.

Eros had last fall but three colts trained; the oldest a three-year-old trotter, an exhibition mile during the San Jose Fair in 2:34, last quarter in 36½ seconds. A two-year-old (timed by the judges) made a mile in 2:46½, and the other two-year-old in 2:47. All of these trials being made without a single skip, and none of these colts had then been handled three months from the bitting harness.

TERMS: $50 for the season, from February 1st to July 1, 1889. Due at time of service.

Pasturage, but no responsibility for accidents or escapes. Apply to

Director Stallion

DESIGNER.

Sire DIRECTOR, 2:17; dam by ABBOTTSFORD, 2:19½; second dam full sister in blood to Overman, 2:19¼.

Will make the season of 1889, ending July 15th, at Jefferson Stock Farm, Santa Clara, at FORTY DOLLARS the Season, with return privilege. Pasturage $3 per month.

H. SCOTT.
Box 376, Santa Clara, Cal.

WILKES PASHA.

STANDARD 2618.

Dark bay with white hind feet, 16½ hands high, bred by R. P. Pepper, of South Elk Horn Farm, Frankfort, Kentucky. Sired by Onward, 1411, record 2:25¼, trial 2:17. He by George Wilkes, 2:22, sire of sixty-five horses in the 2:30 list, ten of them with records below 2:20. First dam Fisher (dam of Clara Wilkes, 2:29¾, trial 2:25) by American Clay, 34, sire of Granville, 2:26; Maggie Briggs, 2:27; Ella Clay, 2:27½; and the dams of Executor, 2.24½, Ranchero, 2:23½; Judge Hawser, 2:21¾; Ambassador, 2:25, and nine others in 2:30; second dam by Wilson's Snow Storm, sire of Jim Irving, 2:24; third dam by Paddie Burns, thoroughbred.

Onward, 1411, is one of the noted sires of to-day. In 1887 he placed seven performers in the 2:30 list, including Houri, three-year-old record 2:19¾; while in 1888 he still further sustains his reputation by adding nine of his sons and daughters to the list. Onward combines the blood of the two great trotting families, Hambletonian 10 and Mambrino Chief 11, and derives his speed inheritance direct through the greatest son of the one family, and the greatest daughter of the other.

Onward's dam was Dolly (the dam of Director, 2:17, and Thorndale, 2:22¾), by Mambrino Chief. Dolly was one of the greatest speed-producing brood mares that ever lived. George Wilkes stands at the head of the list of sires of fast trotters with 65 performers with records of 2:30 or better, and the combination of these two great producers will breed on with absolute certainty.

WILKES PASHA will make the season of 1889 at the stables of the undersigned, at the Trancas Bridge, two miles north of Napa, on the Soda Spring Road.

TERMS,

For the season ending July 1, 1889, $85 in U. S. gold coin.

Alfalfa pasturage $4 per month; natural grass $2.50 per month.

Every attention and care will be given to mares, but no liabilities assumed for accidents or escapes.

The Electioneer Stallion

LANCELOT,

SEAL BROWN STALLION, 15½ HANDS, FOALED APRIL 15, 1881.

Bred by C. C. BEMIS, San Francisco, Cal.

Sire Gov. Stanford's ELECTIONEER; first dam Lizzie Harris by Comus; second dam by Arnold Harris. Comus by Gree...'s Bashaw, dam Topsey by Prophet, son of Hill's Black Hawk. Young Bashaw by Grand Bashaw (Arabian) (182), dam Pearl by First Consul (913); g d Fancy by imp. Rockingham. Arnold Harris by Whalebone, dam Sportsmistress by American Eclipse.

All the sons of Electioneer in the Eastern States have their books filled for the season. This is a rare opportunity to breed to Lancelot at a very low price. Lancelot has shown quarters better than a 2:30 gait, and had it not been for an accident would have had a record as low as the fastest of the sons of Electioneer.

The Nutwood Stallion

SALADIN.

Bred by C. C. BEMIS, San Francisco.

SALADIN, chestnut stallion, 16 hands 1 inch high; foaled April 9, 1880. By Nutwood; first dam Lady Utley Jr. by Speculation, son of Rysdyk's Hambletonian; second dam Lady Utley. Grandam of Western Girl. Record 2:27¾.

NUTWOOD (record 2:18¾), half brother to Maud S., 2:08¾, by Belmont, son of Alexander's Abdallah; first dam Miss Russell by Pilot Jr.; second dam Sally Russell by Boston; third dam Maria Russell by Thornton's Rattler; fourth dam Miss Shepard by Stockholder; fifth dam Miranda by Topgallant; sixth dam by imported Diomed; seventh dam by imported Medley; eighth dam by imported Juniper. Nutwood is the sire of Felix, 2:18¾; Dawn 2:19½; Manon 2:21; Menlo 2:21¾; Nutbreaker, two years old, 2:29½; Nutwood Jr. 2:26; Mount Vernon 2:21; Woodnut 2:16¾, and several others that have trotted under 2:30.

The Thoroughbred Stallion

Judge McKinstry,

Will make the Season of 1889, from March 1 to July 1, at San Felipe Rancho, near Gilroy.

PEDIGREE.

Foaled 1879, by Grinstead or Thad Stevens, dam Katy Pease; second dam Minnie Mansfield by imp. Glencoe; third dam Allegrante by imp. Young Truffle.

DESCRIPTION.

JUDGE McKINSTRY is a bright bay with black points, 15¾ hands in height, of a conformation combining power and speed. His breeding is one that cannot be excelled. The families on both sides being noted for their gameness and fleetness. Speakin of JUDGE McKINSTRY, Matt Storn, the well-known trainer, says: "He is the fastest race-horse I ever saw on the Sacramento track. He has shown me trials that were marvelous, one especially of a mile and a quarter that was ahead of the present record." He was started in several races when not in condition to run, and even then developed an amount of speed that is characteristic of the noted families from which he descends. His performances are too well known to need repetition here. Good judges of horses attest positively that there can be no doubt of his sire, as he is a perfect picture of Grinstead, but rule compels us to name both sires.

TERMS: $75 payable when the mare is moved from ranch, or, $100, with the usual privilege. Good pasturage, $3 per month. Mares at owners risk. All communications must be addressed to Prince Imperial.

DESCRIPTION.—PRINCE IMPERIAL is a black horse, 15-3 hands high; weighs 1,150 pounds, and is a model of beauty, action and power.

PEDIGREE.—Sired by Black Prince, he by Dictator, own brother to Dexter, dam Daisy by Witherell Messenger, he by Winthrop Messenger, son of imp. Messenger.

Mr. Peter Brandow's statement in regard to Prince Imperial: "I met A. Weske in the Park in 1887 driving the above horse, both strangers to me. I was driving a good horse, but the above horse, hitched to a phaeton, beat me easily. I followed him to find out what horse it was, and he finally allowed me to hitch him to a sulky, which I did, and drove him easily in 2: 2½. I think him one amongst the best horses in California, and firmly believe that in six months I can drive him in 220."
PETER BRANDOW.
Trainer of trotters for 25 years.

In 1881, while visiting Salt Lake City, I saw the colt Prince Imperial, and bought him for my own use, and have used him for family purposes ever since. In offering him for public service last year, not knowing anything about horses' pedigrees I made a mistake in his. I wrote to the owner of the mare in Salt Lake, Dr. S. B. Young, and he says she was by Henry Clay, brought from Kentucky by him.

Will make the season of 1889 at the farm of A. Weske, 2½ miles from Santa Rosa on the Healdsburg road. Season commencing March 1st.

SIRE OF YOLO MAID, 2:14.

Alexander Button.

Alexander's Record, 2:31 1-4.

DESCRIPTION.

Alexander Button is a dark bay with fine flowing mane and tail; stands 15.3½ hands high; weighs 1,200 pounds, and is of excellent disposition. When three years old he made a record of 2:28½, and when four years old, in his first race, he obtained a record of 2:26¾. Has been driven a mile in 2:16 in his four-year-old form, and has been driven a last half in 1:0 . Alexander Button is a natural trotter, inherited through the speed-lines of his ancestors, and imparts his speed to his offspring with uniform certainty. Yolo Maid, as a three-year-old, paced 18 heats, never leaving her feet—carrying the world's record of 2:14. Rosie Mc, as a five-year-old, rarely ever breaks; has a record of 2:20¾. R. H. Newton's colt, with very little handling, paced a 2:16 gait, and there are several other colts that show gaits from 2:16 to 2:20. Considering that Alexander Button has never been mated with a standard-bred mare—his colts show him to be a wonderful producer—and with his breeding, and terms of service, he is the cheapest and most wonderful horse in the State.

PEDIGREE.

Alex. Button was sired by Alexander, he by Geo. M. Patchen, Jr., his dam Lady Button by Napa Rattler by Biggett's Rattler, he by Sir Henry, and he by imported Henry, dam of Biggett's Rattler by Rysdyk's Hambletonian, dam of Napa Rattler, thoroughbred.

TERMS: $75, payable at end of season. Mares not proving with foal may be returned next season free of charge. Good pasturage will be furnished at $2 per month, and due care taken to prevent accidents or escapes, but no liability whatever assumed.

Will stand at City Stable, Woodland, on Thursday, Friday and Saturday of each week. The remainder of the time he will stand at my ranch, which is situated about 1½ miles west of Yolo station.

All mares sent to Fashion Stable, Woodland, Yolo County, will be forwarded free of charge.

LONGWORTH.

High Bred Trotting Stallion.

WILL BE FOUR YEARS OLD IN MARCH.

Dark Bay, Black Points, by Sidney,

OWNED BY A. C. DIETZ, OAKLAND.

Also the owner of Bay Stallion Ringwood, four years old, by Sidney, half brother to Longworth, which has showed trials over the Oakland Track, 2:30; quarters, in 34 seconds—2:16 gait —as a three-year old.

LONGWORTH, for finish, style and form cannot be excelled by any four-year-old horse in the State. His gait is perfect; going low to the ground, with smooth, easy motion, and has shown wonderful speed with but two month's work. As a two year-old, he showed a 2:40 gait; as a three year-old showed—trial: full mile over the Oakland track, 2:26; half mile, 1:10; quarters, 34 seconds; eighths, 16 seconds—a 2:08 gait.

Longworth is the result of a long line of distinguished ancestors, endowed with speed on the sire and dams' side that follows back for generations—consequently he cannot help but produce great speed.

He is half brother to the great three-year-old Adonis, record 2:14¾.

Gold Leaf, three-year-old record, 2:15.
Memo, three-year-old trial, 2:20¾.
Sister V., two-year-old trial, 2:32.
St. Nicholas, three-year-old trial, 2:27¾.
Ringwood, three-year-old trial, 2:30.
Miss Sidney, one-year-old trial, half mile, 1:38.
Brown colt, three-year old trial, 2:40.
Black colt, three-year-old trial, 2:39.
Linda, one-year-old trial, one quarter, 40 seconds.
Sorrel colt, two-year-old trial, quarter, 30 seconds, and a number more that have shown remarkable speed. One yearling that has shown one-eighth of a mile in 16 1-5 seconds—a 2:10 gait.

Sidney, the sire of Longworth, has a record of 2:19¾; Santa Claus, the grand sire, has a record of 2:17½; Sweetness, the grandam, record 2:21½; Strathmore, the sire of Santa Claus, has twenty-two that have trotted below 2:30; Volunteer, the sire of Sweetness, has twenty-six that have trotted below 2:30. Volunteer is the sire of St. Julian, record 2:11¾.

Longworth's first dam Grey Dale, the dam of Daisy C., Silver Threads, and grandam of Phaeola; Grey Dale by American Boy, Jr.; he by American Boy, the sire of Belmont. Second dam Grey Poll by Winfield Scott, by Edward Everett, third dam Sorrel Poll by Sir Henry; fourth dam Daughter of Printer.

All letters pertaining to the service of this horse should be addressed to J. J. FAIRBANKS, Oakland, Alameda County, Cal.

TERMS: Fifty dollars, payable at the end of the season or sooner if the mares are taken away. Season will close June 15th, 1889. The number of mares limited to twenty-five. The best of care will be taken to insure mares with foal. Pasture $5 per month, which can be procured at the Oakland Race Track. Mares at the owners' risk, as to escapes or accidents.

The stallion will be kept at the stables of the undersigned, at the junction of San Pablo Avenue and Park Street.

THIS CELEBRATED TROTTING-BRED STALlion will be limited to 40 mares the ensuing season at Oakland Trotting Park, Oakland, Cal., commencing February 1st and ending July 1st, at $100 the season, with the usual privilege of returning the mare next season if not proving in foal. The names of his patrons will be entered on his book in order of their application. He will be limited strictly to forty mares. Pasturage at five dollars per month, hay and grain extra.

NOONDAY, sired by Wedgewood (602), record, the fourth heat, 2:19, (sire of Favonia, record, fourth heat, 2:15, and Nugget, record 2:26, he the sire of Nettie Leaf, four-year-old record 2:23¾), and five others better than 2:26.

First dam Noontide, record 2:20½, by Harold (113), sire of Maud S., record 2:08¾, Mattie Graham, 2:21¾, and 17 others in 2:30.

Second dam Midnight (the dam of Jay-Eye-See, record 2:10), by Pilot Jr., sire of the dam of Maud S., 2:08¾, Nutwood, 2:18¾.

Wedgewood, by Belmont (64), sire of Nutwood, 2:18¾.

First dam (the dam of Woodford Mambrino, 2:21), by Woodford (thoroughbred son of Kosciusko), he by Sir Archy.

NOONDAY is well formed, evenly balanced and handsome; his color is dark seal brown, small star, right hindfoot white, 15 1¾ inches high, weight 975 lbs., strong back and good gaited, short and rapid, and will make a fast and game campaigner.

Breeders will please remember that this horse is not owned by me. I have only leased him for two years for the benefit of the State and breeders on account of the speedy lines and blood that this State is in need of, and no stallion now in public service can show a pedigree with such fast records as enrich the blood of NOONDAY.

I will also handle and train a few horses for gentlemen at fair terms. Address

VINELAND BREEDING FARM.

Whippleton, 1883,

STANDARD UNDER RULE 4 & 6.

The most successful stock horse in California for his opportunities. WHIPPLETON has no equal as a producer of carriage and general purpose horses. Sire of Lily Stanley, record 2:17½, dam's breeding unknown; Homestakes, pacer, 2:16½, dam's breeding unknown; Flora B., 2:30, dam's breeding unknown; Cora C., three-year-old pacer, 2:33¼, dam by Naubuc, Rachel, 2:38, dam's breeding unknown.

DESCRITPION.

WHIPPLETON is a beautiful black, tan muzzle and flanks, and exceptionally strongly made all over. He stands 17 hands high and weighs 1400 pounds. He is beyond doubt the most uniform breeder on the Coast for size, color and finish. Most of his colts are 16 hands or over, and all bay, brown or black in color. He has never sired a sorrel or white faced colt; if he does I agree to refund service money.

PEDIGREE.

WHIPPLETON, sired by Hambletonian Jr. (sire of Hancock 2:29), by Whipple's Hambletonian; dam Lady Livingston; (dam of Lady Blanchard 2:26¼, Bloomfield Maid, trial 2:22); by General Taylor (sire of dam of Wells Fargo 2:18¾, Nearea 2:23½, Bickford 2:29¼, Lady Blanchard 2:26¼) and Stella 2:30, son of the Morse horse.

TERMS.

Fifty dollars, with usual return privilege.

ALCONA, 730.

By the great Almont (sire of Westmont, 2:15¼, Puritan, 2:16, Fannie Witherspoon, 2:16¼, Piedmont, 2:17¼, and 31 others with records better than 2:30, and grandsire of Bell Hamlin, 2:13¾) by Alexander's Abdallah (sire of Goldsmith Maid, 2:14), he by Rysdyk's Hambletonian. Alcona's dam, Queen Mary by Mambrino Chief, sire of Lady Thorn, 2:18¼, Woodford Mambrino, 2:21½ and 4 others in 2:30 list, and sire of the dams of Piedmont, 2:17¼. Director, 2:17, Onward, 2:25¾, and many others; 23 of his sons have produced 2:30 trotters.

Almont has 38 sons that have produced 2:30 trotters, which number is only equaled by his grandsire, Rysdyk's Hambletonian.

DESCRIPTION.

Alcona is a beautiful chestnut, 16¾ hands high, and weighs 1,300 pounds. His colts possess speed, style, finish and beauty, and if they don't trot fast they command the highest price for carriage and general purpose horses. Eleven of Alcona's colts that have been sold UNTRAINED brought $7,810, an average of $710 per head.

TERMS: $35. Usual return privilege.

Grandissimo,

Full Brother to GRANDEE. 3-year-old record 2:23 1-2.

Sired by La Grande (son of Almont, and out of Jessie Pepper, by Mambrino Chief; Jessie Pepper is the dam of Iona 2:22, Alpha 2:23½, Sterling Wilkes 2:33¾, and others) dam Norma, by Arthurton (sire of Arab 2:15, Joe Arthurton 2:20½, etc).

Grandam Nourmahal, (full sister to A. W. Richmond, sire of Arrow 2:13¾, Romero 2:19, and sire of Columbine, dam of Anteeo 2:16¼, and Antevolo 2:19½ at 4 years old),

DESCRIPTION.

Grandissimo is 3 years old, will make a sixteen hand horse; he is a rich mahogany bay in color and perfect in style and action. Limited to ten mares, at $50 for the season. Usual return privileges.

In case any of my horses are sold before the next season, parties breeding mares have the privilege to return them to any other stallion I have making the season at the same price. Mares kept in any manner desired. Best of pasture the year round, at $4 per month. Some choice young stallions, colts and fillies by Whippleton for sale reasonable. Correspondence solicited.

ELECTION,

BY ELECTIONEER.

DESCRIPTION.

ELECTION is a beautiful bay, with small star in forehead. Near forefoot and pastern white; both hind feet white above ankles. He was foaled April 10, 1884, at Palo Alto. Stands 15¾ hands high and weighs 1075 pounds. Election was sold in his yearling form to B. R. Crocker of Sacramento, who kept him for two years and then sold him to Mr. H. J. Palmer, who placed him in charge of Wilbur F. Smith to develop. From an ordinary road gait he was made, after three months training, to trot a mile in 2:30.

PEDIGREE.

ELECTION by Electioneer, dam Lizzie H. by Whipple's Hambletonian; 2d dam Lizzie Harris, by Comus, son of Green's Bashaw, sire of Josephus 2:19¾, Fred Douglas 2:20¼, and fourteen more in 2:30 or better; 3d dam by Arnold Harris.

Comus by Green's Bashaw, sire of dams of Joe Young 2:20¾, Trampoline 2:23¼, dam Topsy (dam of Iowa Chief 2:31¾), sire of Corisande 2:24¾, by Prophet, son of Hill's Black Hawk, sire of Ethan Allen 2:25¾, Green's Bashaw by Vernol's Black Hawk, son of Long Island Black Hawk, 1st dam Belle by Webber's Tom Thumb; 2d dam Chas. Kent mare, dam of Rysdyk's Hambletonian by imp. Bellfounder, Arnold Harris by Whalebone, dam Sportmistress by American Eclipse, etc.

This fine Electioneer horse will make the season of 1889 at Woodland. Service limited to a few mares of approved breeding. Season commencing March 1st and ending July 1st.

TERMS.

Fifty dollars for the season, due at time of service. Mares not proving with foal may be returned next season by paying difference in price, provided no change in ownership of horse. For further particulars address

ANNUAL FALL MEETING.

In addition to the regular racing programme to be given at this meeting, the following Guarantee Stakes are announced:

RAISIN HANDICAP. For all ages. 1¼ mile dash. Guarantee Purse $1,000. $100 entrance. $10 May 1st, $15 June 1st, $25 July 1st. Weights will be declared August 15th and acceptance September 1st, when the other $50 is to be paid. To be run at Fall Fair, 1889, Fresno, Cal. If entrance money amounts to more than $1,000 it shall be added to the purse, and the association will add 20 per cent. of amount of purse; 3 moneys, 70, 20, 10 per cent. of purse. Horses winning any purse or stake of one mile or more at Sacramento or Stockton when purse or stake amounts to $800 or over, shall carry 10 pounds extra. Horses winning a purse or stake of one mile or over at Sacramento or Stockton when purse or stake amounts to $500 or over, to carry 5 pounds extra.

Weights to be declared through BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN, August 15, 1889. Entries close May 1st with the Secretary.

American Association Rules to govern.

REMARKS.

As to the Handicap Running, 1¼ mile dash, the Handicapping Committee will use due diligence in learning the performance of every horse entered, and weighting them fairly to their merits. Each entry must be accompanied by entrance money or be considered no entry. All payments not made when due the nominator forfeits all money paid in. We propose at the finish of the race the horse winning the purse, or any part of it, gets his money and not forfeit papers.

GUARANTEE PURSE.

For horses that never beat 2:30. Trotting Purse $1,000, $100 entrance, $25 May 1st, $.5 July 1st, $50 August 15th, when horses are to be named. To be trotted at Fall Fair, 1889, Fresno, Cal. If entries amount to more than $ 000 it shall be added to the purse, and the Association will add 20 per cent. of amount of stakes. Four moneys, 40, 25, 15, 10 per cent of purse.

Horses eligible at closing of entries, May 1st.

American Association rules to govern.

REMARKS.

This 2:30 class Guarantee Purse gives the party making the entry the privilege of naming any horse he sees fit the 15th day of August, having no better record than 2:30 the first day of May, irrespective of the record he gets after that date. You will see by this the nominator has almost a sure thing of getting his money back. Any nominator failing to make payments when due, forfeits all money paid in, and money must accompany entry or it will be considered no entry.

Our grounds are the finest appointed in the State being about 2½ miles from the city; horse car line running direct to the grounds.

We also have the best of box stalls for 100 horses. Hay and straw furnished to all horses entered in races free of charge. Grain can be procured on the grounds at reasonable rates.

AMBERINE.

$25. $25.

PEDIGREE.

Sired by PROMPTER No. 2305, with six weeks training at the close of a stud season, he won a stallion race of five heats, winning the last three heats and getting a record of 2:33¼; he has never been trained since.

His sire, Wilson's BLUE BULL, No. 75, has more of his progeny in the 2:30 list than any horse that ever lived, except it may be George Wilkes, and it is a disputed point between the two which has most.

PROMPTERS' dam, PRAIRIE BIRD, 2:28¼, is in the GREAT BROOD MARE TABLE, a proved producer, and of a family of wonderful producers, as an examination of the produce of Flaxtail mares will prove.

AMBERINE'S dam, "BONNIE," owned by G. W. Hancock, of Sacramento, is one of the best road-mares in the State; she has many times covered 50 miles on the road in five hours, and 125 miles in 17 hours. She is the dam of Daisy, yearling record, 2:38¼; her sire is John Nelson, sire of the dams of Albert W., 2.20, and Valensin, 2:24.

AMBERINE is a beautiful bay, three years old, very powerfully built, 16 hands, and trotted a mile in his yearling form in 3:20, and has never been trained.

Will serve 15 outside mares at the low price of $25 the season. Should the mare not prove in foal, the money refunded or mare bred following season. Service fee payable, when I pasture the mare, at the time of her removal; but if served outside, payable at time of service.

He is full brother to DAISY; yearling record, 2:38¼. THE BEST IN THE WORLD FOR PACING. Two-year-old trial, two miles, 5:07; last mile in 2:28.

Good pasturage for a limited number of mares only, at $5 per month. Ranch 18 miles from the City, San Pedro Valley. Horses taken down at owner's risk.

This horse will stand in San Francisco, San Mateo, or Alameda Counties. Owned by

THE

1891.

A sweepstakes for trotting colts and fillies, foals of 1888, $175 each, $25 payable on the 2d of April, 1889, which must accompany the nomination, and none will be recorded in which there is a failure to comply with this requirement, at which time the stakes will close; $25 on the 1st of January 1890; $25 on the 1st of January 1891, and $100 thirty days before the day fixed for trotting, whatever amount up to be considered forfeit, and the neglect to pay at the stipulated time incurring forfeiture of the previous payments. The race to be heats of a mile, best 3 in 5 to harness. First to receive six-ninths of the whole sum, the second two-ninths, the third one-ninth. In addition to the stakes and forfeits the proportion of the gate money, profit on pool sales, and all other sources of emolument will constitute the gross amount, to be divided in the foregoing proportions. Five or more subscribers to fill. The race to be trotted in 1891, not sooner than the 1st of August. The exact date to be fixed and announced on the 1st of April, 1891, or sooner.

Race to be governed by the Rules of the National Trotting Association. Nominations to be made to N. T. SMITH, Treasurer, S. P. Railroad Office, Fourth and Townsend Streets, on or before the 2d day of April, 1889. The colt must be named, the name and pedigree, so far as known, given.

Should a Pacific Coast Trotting-Horse Breeder's Association be gotten up, the above stake may be transferred to that, the Treasurer, N. T. Smith, having the power to make the transfer, and also to arrange anything else, in connection with this stake which is not expressed in the above conditions. Should it occur that Captain Smith cannot act at any time, then a majority of the subscribers still eligible to start will have the power to fill the vacancy.

Under the new trotting rules letters legibly postmarked April 1st will be eligible.

N. T. SMITH, Treasurer.

STALLIONS.

DIRECTOR 2:17.

DIRECTOR will stand at Pleasanton from March 1st to August 1st, 1889, for fifteen good mares more than are now booked, at $2 0 for the season. Mares not proving with foal may be returned next season free of charge of service to same stallion or money will be refunded, at option of the Stock Farm Co.

Pasturage $1 per month, hay and grain extra. Accidents and escapes at owner's risk. Service fees due at time of service and must be paid, together with pasturage, etc., before mares are taken away, or a good approved note given, payable August 1st, 1889, at which date all bills must be settled

THISTLE,

Full brother to Gold Leaf, pacing record 2:15 at three years old. By Sidney, dam Fernleaf, she the dam of stallion Shamrock, trotting record at two years old, 2:25. Thistle is a large, speedy pacing colt, showing more speed than Gold Leaf at the same age, and double the speed of his sire; so if anyone wants to breed pacers, here is a chance.

Thistle will stand for seven approved mares at $100 for the season, with same conditions and return privileges as Dictator.

Frank Morgan.

DESCRIPTION.

FRANK MORGAN was brought to California by Mr. S. E. Larabie of Montana. He is undoubtedly one of the handsomest stallions in the country, is a dark chestnut, about 16 hands in height, of free, easy carriage, well gaited, perfectly developed and superb in general appearance. In disposition he is all that could be desired. He has been named Frank Morgan in honor of the family from which he descends.

PEDIGREE.

FRANK MORGAN was sired by an unnamed son of Morgan General, Jr., by Morgan General, by Billy Root, by Sherman, by Justin Morgan. Dam by Romeo, by Green Mountain Morgan 2nd, by Gifford's Morgan, by Woodbury Morgan, by Justin.

FRANK MORGAN will make the season of 1889 at the Oakland Race Track, serving a limited number of mares. He is a sure and reliable foal getter, and the uniform beauty and style of his colts have shown him to be a producer of the finest class of road and carriage horses that have ever been seen in this country.

TERMS.—$40 FOR THE SEASON.

Good pasturage furnished at five dollars per month. The best care will be taken of all mares, but no risks for accidents or escapes. For further particulars, address

Thoroughbred Stallion

Prince of Norfolk,

Will Make the Season of 1889, from Feb. 15th to July 1st, at Sacramento.

PEDIGREE.

PRINCE OF NORFOLK, ch c, foaled 1881, by Norfolk; 1st dam Marion by Malcolm; 2nd dam Maggie Mitchell by imp. Yorkshire; third dam Charmer by imp. Glencoe; 4th dam Betsy Malone by Stockholder; 5th dam by Potomac; 6th dam by imp. Diomed; 7th dam by Pegasus, etc. Norfolk, the unbeaten son of Lexington, is the sire of Winters, Twilight, Connor Ballot Box, Trade Dollar, Flood, Duchess of Norfolk, Lou Spencer, the Great Emperor of Norfolk, an many others. Marion's sire, Malcolm, was one of the first horses to bring Bonnie Scotland into notice. Through the Maggie Mitchell cross comes the blood of two of the most celebrated race mares of their day, Charmer and Betsy Malone. The combined speed of these great families seem to be concentrated in the get of Norfolk and Marion, as is instanced in the case of the Emperor of Norfolk, who is a full brother to the Prince of Norfolk.

The blood lines here displayed cannot be surpassed in the world, there not being a single cross that has not been celebrated for speed and endurance, and it is fair to assume that the get of this stallion will show equally well with those of past generations.

TERMS, $50 for the season. We offer first class pasturage on our own ranch, at $4 per month, and the best of care will be taken of mares sent to us, but no responsibility can be incurred. For further particulars address

W. P. TODHUNTER, Sacramento.

GROVER CLAY,

Bay Stallion, bred by Hon. W. W. Traylor, San Francisco. Foaled 1883. By ELECTIONEER.

First dam MAGGIE NORFOLK by NORFOLK, son of Lexington.

Second dam by BILLY CHEATHAM.

Third dam by DORSEY'S GOLDDUST.

GROVER C is a very handsome shade of bay, 15¾ hands high, and showing as much quality as a majority of thoroughbreds. He is as square-gaited a trotter as can be, and has shown a great deal of speed for the amount of handling. Has been worked very little, though he can show a thirty gait or better whenever called upon.

TERMS.

Fifty dollars the season, payable at time of service. Proper care will be taken, but no responsibility incurred for accidents or escapes. Mares will be pastured inside of the Oakland Trotting Park, which is especially safe, having two fences which give ample security against escape. There is a never-failing stream of water which runs through the field, and the food is good.

Season commencing first of January and ending the first of July.

This is the only son of Electioneer standing in Alameda County, and the high breeding on the side of his dam is a guarantee that his colts will inherit qualities already made famous through the mixture of Electioneer and Lexington blood. Ansel, 2:20, is from a Lexington mare, and Sunol's granddam, two-year-old record 2:18, was by Lexington, both Sunol and Ansel by Electioneer, Lexington the sire of Norfolk.

OSSIDINE

KALAMAZOO, Mich., Sept. 15, 1888.

GENTLEMEN:—We have used Ossidine for the past two years and consider it invaluable for Sprung Tendons, Curbs, Ringbone and Spavins; there is nothing equals it; and for us it effected a permanent cure where firing failed, although performed by one of the most successful veterinarians on the continent. We have recommended it to others with like success, and believe it has more merit than any blister ever used.

Very respectfully yours, S. A. BROWNE & Co., Prop's.

This scientific preparation is an absolute cure for all bony or callous lumps on horses, and is a more powerful absorbent than "firing," without creating the slightest blemish. After a few applications the excrescence is so palpably reduced that even the skeptical frankly acknowledge that it is by far the most valuable outward remedy for horses ever invented.

The ONLY preparation in the world that will remove a Bone Spavin after it has become ossified.

Price $3.00 per Large Bottle,

Owner of Eole, St Saviour, Eolist, etc, says: I have long used it in my stables, and find it to be all that is claimed for it in removing callous and unnatural bony growths, without leaving the slightest blemish. From my experience, I most strongly recommend the use of Ossidine, and feel that it is a necessary adjunct to every stable. Yours respectfully,

Racing in England as it is.

BY BORDERER.

Wonderful have been the changes wrought in our national sport of racing within the last twenty years, so much so that our older turf habitues are fairly carried off their legs and unable fully to realize the new state of things as compared with the old. In fact, hardly a trace remains of the old regime to show where the new order of things became linked to it. The Jockey Club, indeed, still remains a self-constituted body of the highest aristocracy, and to outward appearance continues to hold its own.

In solid truth our turf legislators have been considerably shaken in their shoes, and have had to choose between moving with the times or abdicating their functions. With true British instinct they have chosen the onward course, and being led by the power of money invested in racing and racecourses near all our great centers of population have had to use their own pet heath at Newmarket for gate-money meetings like Manchester, Kempton, Sandown, Derby and Leicester, minus their unsightly boardings and shilling turnstiles. The Jockey Club has acted wisely and well. It has not turned its back on the new regime, consequently its large outlay in the purchase of land and the gifts of large stakes to be run at Newmarket, without a corresponding increase of popular support, have rendered Newmarket and its patrons poor by comparison with the other great racing arenas I have named. Were it not, indeed, for the steady revenue of the heath tax, which has been put as high as possible, and which, wonderful to say, has driven very few horses or trainers away, although it has made it the most expensive place as a training ground, the Jockey Club could not carry on financially.

New blood has been freely let into the club, and there never was a time, I believe, in the history of the turf when wrong doing was so hotly pursued and punished, or when a wholesome dread of detection had such a purifying effect on owner, trainer and jockey alike. From the traditional £50 plate or the sweepstakes of £10 each, when everybody ran for his own money, we have advanced so rapidly that in 1890 we are to have a race across the flat (one mile and a quarter) for £10,000. There can be no doubt that the half-million or so of money now annually run for in Great Britain will in 1890 have considerably increased, and as a necessary consequence the price of our best race-horses must increase. That racing will become more international as one year succeeds another I have no doubt. Already America has won our biggest races, and Australia is preparing to fling down the gauntlet in 1890. She labors, however, under the difficulty of being in the antipodes, and her foals are born at a time of year unsuitable to the English time of taking their ages. This, however, is to be remedied, and does not apply to America. Curiously enough we have now no American-bred horses running in England, but this unaccountable lull in American enterprise is not likely to last long.

Cannot some enterprising ship-owner or designer invent a means for lessening the risk and improving the comforts of horses crossing the ocean? What a valuable patent that would be. Thousands of men and women think no more of crossing the Atlantic nowadays than of going to Berlin or Rome, and if they could take with them for the outing such horses as are capable of filling their pockets with dollars or sovereigns, as the case may be, how the pleasure of their trips would be enhanced.

Racing is at its zenith in England, and, without doubt, the craze for high stakes and expensive horses will spread throughout the civilized world. Three of our richest noblemen engaged in racing won by far the largest amount of money last year. The Duke of Portland is head of the poll, although Lord Calthorpe is within a couple of hundred pounds of him, both having won upward of £26,000 during the season. The Duke of Westminster comes third, and the commoners are nowhere. The Scotch millionaire who won under the name of Mr. Abington, and who has an immense stud spread throughout several different training stables, has had a disastrous season, winning only about £5,000 when his forfeits alone are reported to reach £40,000. Add to this his trainers' bills, and it will at once be seen that even £100,000 a year will not long stand such a strain, especially if his losses in backing horses are reckoned on the debit side of the account. The most remarkable thing, however, about this young gentleman, who rejoices in being designated as the "'Squire of Newmarket," is that he would rather travel two hundred miles to ride in a forty-pound hunters' race than to see one of his best horses run in a big event. Every spare hour of the day he delights in riding gallops and trials, and his friendships are almost entirely with jockeys, trainers and hangers-on. How our opportunities are sometimes thrown away Mr. Abington might have aspired to become a member of the Jockey Club; as it is he is content with being a jockey and nothing more. Talking of jockeys, what a marvelous change the death of Fred Archer has made in the present status of our jockeys! His marked superiority acted like a dead weight on the majority of the younger jockeys, and they seemed incapable of an effort. Now, on the contrary, they are all heads and tails; there is little to choose between them. John Osborne and Fred Webb, of the elder jockeys, alone remain in the front rank, and neither aspires to the premiership of Archer, fine horsemen that they both are. Consequently the younger jockeys are pressing forward. The two Barrett brothers never throw a chance away.

When we turn to our race-horses of the present day, can we say that they have improved in the same ratio as the stakes that they run for? I trow not. Considering the enormous number of race-horses that are bred, and the immense care and untold expense that are lavished on their bringing up and training, the weeding out that takes place ere the starting post is reached its tremendous. Weak limbs and roaring are the lot of too many. Faint hearts, bad tempers and roguish ways eliminate not a few, while of the rest want of pace weeds out a lot, and failure of staying powers still further reduces the ranks of our good ones. Even then, are our chosen few better than in days gone by? This is a moot point on which doctors differ.

Giving an humble opinion individually, I think not. We have too many short races, and therefore speed is the first great requisite. Our two-year-olds are over-worked and over-tried at home. I long to see a return to the half-mile races for two-year-olds up to the middle of June. It was a grave mistake ever doing away with them. They told us where to look for speed and staying powers, and kept back our big, growing two-year-olds till the season for showing their best powers at maturity had arrived.

Four-year-olds and upward should never be allowed to start for races under a mile, except in selling races or handicaps, and thus we should gradually have some sound and seasoned horses to try conclusions over our cup courses, and their popularity might be revived.

When we review our present great and fashionable strains of blood it becomes apparent that the Stockwell blood is on the wane; that Newminster is at its zenith, and that Voltigeur has a coming appearance; Weatherbit is stationary, and Birdcatcher is still very strong.

Bend Or fitly sustains the Stockwell line, and he does it nobly, for he is undoubtedly the most perfectly shaped horse in England. He has filled out into the model of a horse, in my opinion, and I go periodically to gaze on him in his box and in the paddock, just as a connoisseur would go to the academy to look at a favorite picture, and I never come away disappointed. His picture, by a celebrated German artist, Herr Adam, adorns this month's magazine. But Bend Or has no living compeers unless Robert the Devil can be called one, for he has shown us a few good sons and daughters. Blair Athol's sons and grandsons are not a patch on his great self. Nor are Rataplan's descendants doing much for posterity, if we except Ben Battle. I always look upon Glencoe as the strength of the Stockwell and Rataplan pedigree, and lucky indeed was America to import him in the early days of its horse-loving history. He only was used in England one season, and what an inheritance he left us in Pocahontas! What has he not done for the country of his adoption in being the sire of Lexington and the grandsire of ever so many good horses, not the least of which was Umpire, a granddaughter of whom, and on the sire's side a granddaughter of dear old Thormanby, I am proud of as an owner, and expect great things from her judicious mating.

Newminster, as I have said, is, as regards the reputation of his progeny, at his zenith.

Hermit has been his great trumpeter, and still lives in hearty enjoyment of old age, a fortune to his owner, Mr. Chaplin, and a credit to his country. His sons and daughters have won something approaching £150,000, and are beginning to make a name for themselves at the stud second only to that of their sire. No one who saw Hermit on his memorable Derby day, as he walked round the bush in the middle of the Epsom paddock alone and almost unnoticed, with every hair on his coat standing the wrong way, tucked up so much that you could almost have pinched him through, and his apparently weak loins would have foretold a career in the future for him scarcely beyond that of a cab horse. How well I recollect that bitterly cold day, offering 50 to 1 against him to a friend after we had looked him over, and his declining to do business with me at the price. And yet that horse has proved himself the most valuable acquisition to English racing, next to Stockwell, in the present century, and in his old age seems as vigorous and happy as ever.

Hampton, a grandson of Newminster, has also reached the top of the tree. His stock being hardy, good-constitutioned animals, wear well on the turf, but in my opinion he will never reach the fame of the Hermit.

I have ventured to say that the blood of Voltigeur is coming. In this I allude especially to Galopin and St. Simon. The former, indeed, has already come, for he was at the top of the tree last season, and one of his two-year-olds, Donovan, has landed £20,000, the largest sum ever won by a two-year-old. Galopin himself was an undeniably good horse on the turf, although hot-headed and nervous. He did not strike critics as the makings of a great sire, but he is sound and comes of the good old staying blood of Blacklock, that tells a tale in these degenerate days. Galopin has a wonderful future before him. St. Simon, too, is a young sire of the same blood, and I am bold, perhaps, to prophesy in his case, but I do so with confidence, because he combines speed with endurance, and he is having such a wonderful chance given him by his noble owner, the Duke of Portland, that the blue blood of England's mares are his lot, and his yearlings that I have seen are splendidly racing-like. The Beadsman blood through Rosicrucian, Blue Gown and their sons, cannot be said to be in the ascendant. The former has had grand chances, and I am compelled to say has lamentably failed, especially in his sons and in staying powers. The Blue Gowns and Cœruleuses are pudgy, slow horses that never rise into the first class. Birdcatcher still brilliantly illuminates our turf horizon now and again with his Sterlings, but they are not everyday horses, and, with the exception of Isonomy, have blossomed only to deceive. Isonomy, however, was a first-class horse himself all round, and his stock bids fair to keep the great name of Birdcatcher alive for another ten years at least.

Springfield and Camballo represent the Orlando tribe, akin to Newminster, as direct scions of Touchstone, but I have never loved the handsome brown son of St. Albans, as nearly all his stock have a soft spot in their constitutions, and I much prefer the hardy little Camballo, which has fairly held his own in public estimation by the good deeds of his stock. Melbourne is becoming well nigh forgotten, except among his granddaughters, a fact I greatly deplore, because I believe the value of the Melbourne blood for size, constitution and staying powers cannot be over-estimated. Treasure it, my friends, whenever you can get hold of it, for it fits so exactly to cross with Hermit or Galopin.

Racing nowadays naturally seems to gravitate toward the rich, and almost all of our noblemen keep breeding studs and rear their own yearlings, entering them freely in all the rich stakes, most of which have to be closed while they are foals or yearlings. It is therefore wonderful that such an immense trade should be done outside the select coterie of the Jockey Club in breeding establishments whose one aim and object is to breed for sale, follow the fashion and make money. Something like one thousand yearlings change hands annually in this way, the majority under the hammer, and the aspirant to racing honors has no difficulty in putting together a stud of yearlings at very short notice. The judgment, however, to be displayed in the operation must be something out of the common, if he succeeds at the first attempt. I could enumerate failures without end, but there are, I am glad to say, a few trainers whose judgment in this line stands very high, and whose proteges have profited accordingly. The idosyncracies of breeding are proverbial, and akin to horse-racing there is nothing so uncertain or puzzling. "Borderer" has dipped into it with varying success. His first venture was probably the most curious. He bought a fine Thunderbolt mare, and in due time she produced him a diminutive brown foal, so small and mean looking that the owner of the sire advised him not to try the same cross again, and he took that advice. So weak was this foal that it used to walk round its dam with its ankle bones touching the ground; in fact, it looked quite deformed. One day he had the gun loaded and had ordered his stud-groom to shoot it, but the little beggar seemed to plead for its life when it came up and licked his hand, and it was spared, and in July was weaned in the hopes of improving it. Matters now became worse. It declined all the best things offered to it. It lapped milk like a dog, and could not be pursuaded to drink like any other horse. The only thing that grew was its coat, and it became the veriest little rough mountain pony. In due time, much to his delight, "Borderer" chanced on a customer, an Australian, at £50—the best sale he ever effected. In the autumn of the same year, the colt being then a yearling, he heard that it had been sold for £100, and that Tom Jennings, then in his zenith as the trainer of the great French stable, had bought it.

In due time it had a name and was noticed in training reports, but did not see a race-course as a two-year-old, nor until late in its three-year-old career, but every day it led the Derby horse of his year, as well as the St. Leger winner, long gallops. At length it ran and won; kept on winning, until it

"Borderer" was so struck with the prowess of this despised colt of his that he went purposely to see Jennings about it. The veteran trainer was perfectly frank. "I cannot think," said he, "what made me buy the colt. I didn't want him, and didn't like him. He looked like a foal, and as a two-year-old was only a yearling. He kept coming on, however, and the more I worked him the better he got. I did not value him and did not spare him, but every time I tried him the better he went, and now I have nothing that can beat him. He is a grand cup horse." So Jennings sold him to some French count for 4,000 francs, and his name was Paul's Cray. The dam was sold for a large sum and never produced another worth anything. Moral: Never despair.

You may breed your best horse when you least expect it. Such stories could be no doubt repeated ad infinitum, but the above I will vouch for to the uttermost. I have yet to learn the secrets and the leading attributes of the American and colonial turf, but I was interested in reading Lord Hastings' opinion on colonial racing in Australia, and how much he was impressed with the strides that had been accomplished in it, especially in the comfort afforded to the general public as distinguished from the select few aristocratic patrons who are pandered to in British grand-stands, while the roar and bustle of the ring are placed almost in their midst. I often wonder whether we shall ever take this matter to heart in this country. The betting rings are so placed as to make the whole sport a seeming bear garden. For the moment the numbers go up the odds are roared to the exclusion of all else. The nice parade that is gone through in Australia hardly ever takes place in England, except on very great occasions, and the swells are compelled to rush about with their books and pencils to make their bets almost as industriously as the professionals roar the odds and enter their bets. While all this is going on the ready-money men are plying their trade vigorously, for not all the threats and maledictions against ready-money betting have shaken its position. That and starting-price betting now hold sway, and thousands who never see a race-course or subscribe a shilling toward the sport bet "on the tape," as it is called. That is, they invest their money on a certain horse or horses at starting price and await the result of the telegraph giving the winner, sitting quietly at home or in a bar parlor.

I may be utopian in my ideas on the subject of betting, which are these: Parliament will not legalize it, that is out of the question, but it might be licensed by giving a charter to the Jockey Club and allowing that body to license betting under stringent rules in certain places on race-courses. Here ready-money betting by the list might be carried on with advantage to all concerned by the establishment of bureaux, where the amount of the stake might be limited, or not, at the pleasure of the authorities, and a large revenue to racing might be obtained by these means. This would soon put an end to private betting houses, which have sprung up in all our towns, and make betting entirely confined to race-courses, where those only who can afford it would be found, and by their ready-money investments less ruin would be entailed than by the present system on thoughtless youths, who fling their all away in a few months at the beck of our leading bookmakers.

Race-courses, were my system carried out, would be free from most of the annoyances that now beset them, and more time could be given to the enjoyment of seeing the horses and their jockeys. We should then become more international.

At present I cannot speak from personal experience of foreign racing, but the pleasure of an introduction to it shall not be long delayed.—Outing.

Developing Speed.

In a recent interview with L. C. Ryerson, of Auburn, Mass., we asked him, says the Auburn Gazette, to give us his views in regard to handling young horses so as best to develop their full speed capacity, with the least risk of injuring them in any way, either physically or mentally.

The major has had a large experience with horses, and has brought out several first class performers, that to commence with, were not animals of great natural speed, such as Chub, 2:27, Old Maid, 2:36, trial 2:20, etc. He is, moreover, a man who reads and thinks, and can render a reason for every statement that he makes. He believes with us that the ultimate speed of a colt depends as much on having him handled right as on having him bred right.

He says, when you wish to develop speed in a horse, don't work them too often, as he is convinced that the prevalent idea that a horse in training should be jogged every day is wrong, both in theory and practice. Let them be worked every other day, and they will show a more elastic gait and improve in speed much more rapidly, than if their muscles are strained and their ardor cooled by daily work; but when they are worked he would not attempt to show speed with them until driven quite a distance and opened out once or twice for short spurts so as to get the wire wedge off.

The major don't believe in putting weights on to horses' feet to any great extent; when it is necessary to use them at all he would begin with light ones and increase as needed, instead of trying to start with big action and then be obliged to have it grow less.

If a horse is being fitted for races he would not previous to the race wherein the animal was expected to start keep up a continuous struggle against the watch in fast miles and repeat at the top of their speed, and pluck at the supreme moment of the race. The wisdom of this course was manifest in the race he had with Old Maid at the state fair at Lewiston, when she got her record of 2:36. In the heat when she obtained that record, the major was sent off away behind the rest of a large field of horses, but when he got the Old Maid settled to the work he cut the field down one by one trotting the last quarter at a 2:20 gait. Had the reserve of speed been used up beforehand in the useless trails he would not have got there.

An article in Wallace's Montly on California's rank in breeding, attributes her success in producing phenomenal colts more to their method of training than to its climatic advantages. The great colt trainer, Charles Marvin, says: "If I had a stable of youngsters with which I wished to accomplish the highest results, I would rather take my chances in the East—say in Kentucky or Tennessee—than California. Colt trotters can be produced in New England as well as in California from equally as good material and with as good methods of development. Climate didn't carry Sunol a mile in 2:18."

But we will be asked to account for the fact that the fastest yearling, two-year-old, three-year-old and four-year-old records stand to the credit of California. Is it not worth considering that the record yearling, two-year-old and four-year-old were kindred in blood, and were developed by one special and particular method? They were educated and driven by one man, who, a trainer of young performers, stands by the records as far above all others as Electioneer does above other horses in power to produce phenomenal colt-trotters. A few facts will help to determine the part climate plays in the matter. Fred Crocker was the first trotter to beat 2:26 at two years old. He was not worked for speed until June 5, 1881, and trotted in 2:25½ in November. Hinda Rose was the first to set a high yearling mark. She got her first lesson in speed on July 5, 1881, and on November 5th trotted a mile in 2:44½, which she lowered on the 14th to 2:36½. This stood until the autumn of 1887, when Sudie D. broke it. That came as a surprise to Palo Alto but though it was already October, Marvin went to work on Norlaine, and in November he drove her in 2:31½, thus making a new record. Sunol was, of course, broken as a yearling, got a little work through the winter, but never was driven a mile until July, 1888, and she made her record of 2:18 on October 27th. A few of many such examples will suffice. Is there anything in our climate to prevent working colts precisely as Fred Crocker, Hinda Rose and Norlaine were worked?

Progress of the Trotter and High Prices.

[From the Kentucky Stock Farm.]

New York, March 30.—The recent sale of California-bred trotters in this city has been so widely commented upon that I feel impelled to call your attention to a few thoughts of my own in connection with this interesting event. To a close student of breeding it will be observed that the prices which have attracted most attention, such as $26,000 for Mascot, were obtained at public outcry for horses that were Clays in the male line, thus showing a marked change in public sentiment regarding this deserving but neglected family. While the Hambletonians, and indeed any other family line—even the outsider Smuggler at $40,000—were bringing extreme prices through a period of twenty years, no outcry against "overdoing," "booms," "unhealthy prices," etc., was raised till a Stamboul sold for $50,000 and a Mascot for $26,000. Hitherto a few breeders and buyers would barely tolerate Clay blood in a dam, but nothing more; now this family, in the direct male line, is in demand and bids fair to reach the prominence that its merits deserve, while foolish prejudice and thoughtless neglect stand confounded and abashed in the presence of public approval. Verily, the world moves! This, however, is merely incidental to what I started to write.

Over a quarter of a century ago, when our country had but few wealthy men—that is, wealthy as we now understand the term, many-time millionaires—the fast trotter was a chance production of the average farmer. At that time speed in the roadster of turf performer was quite generally looked upon as all chance. Gradually statistics bearing upon records and breeding were collected, and to a few intelligent enthusiasts it began to look as though in time trotters could be bred with a fair degree of certainty, by heeding the primary lessons of the records. Coincident with this, our country spread out in healthy growth in a most astonishing manner. The once rare millionaire, confined to a few Eastern cities, became as plentiful through out the entire land as the proverbial huckleberry, and "the west," the plains, the mountains themselves seemed to fairly teem with men of enormous fortunes made from the various enterprises incidental to our national development, such as railroads, manufacturing and mining, and extending from the Atlantic to the Pacific. Men of large wealth, particularly those who build up their own fortunes are filled with restless activity even in their pleasures. They may turn from their regular pursuits to some sort of a toy that requires some thought to manage, not a ready-made mechanism that is mastered at a glance. Men closely occupied with large affairs need fresh air, sunshine, exercise, excitement, change of thought, pleasure, all closely allied and pressed together in their brief hours of relaxation. In years gone by Robert Bonner and Commodore Vanderbilt set the fashion for this class, and now that this country has well filled up with thousands of men similarly situated, is it any wonder that such shining examples should be closely copied? Such men represent a class that is rapidly becoming immense in numbers, and they find their inclinations tending toward the highest type of animal life for amusement. They cannot ride thoroughbreds with pleasure and they do not wish to turn to racing them. They can drive trotters; they are practical enough to realize the dual uses of horses like Maud S., Jay-Eye-See and St. Julien. They first get a mild case of breeding fever through a hope to breed a few fast ones, for personal use, from a favorite road mare or two; then they study up a few breeding points, find that the subject broadens and deepens with investigation, and finally they give up fully to the fascinations of their new-found toy and venture money into it largely. They must spend part of their large means for pleasure—all cannot be utilized in mere necessities of life—and they find no such pleasures in accumulating books, jewels, paintings, etc., as in breeding fine stock. They want to prove to the world that there can be a science in breeding trotters rather than a mere chance, and their business experience prompts them to use only the best material. They know that only the highest price gets the best, so they compete with each other for the best. They are not breeding entirely for profit; they hope to make their pleasure self-supporting. They soon begin to long for glory, to breed a world beater, and the success of other wealthy breeders like Alexander and Senator Stanford encourages them to continue. They have no fear of financial failure, because they are using mere surplus money, and glory to come will be a fair offset to monied losses.

Meantime, Europe and other portions of the world come to us for trotting horses, showing that the market is broadening. When will the demand for the best cease? Mascot sells at $26,000 under the hammer, and the alarmists cry, stop! While the sound is still ringing in our ears South America, a newcomer, steps in and buys one of our sensational trotters, Prince Wilkes, for about $30,000, merely for trotting purposes, where trotting is in its infancy, and just as an order comes from Europe to also buy our best turf performers regardless of price. What! stop buying and breeding the best when the world at large has just commenced offering us large prices for merely geldings? How long will it be before foreigners will also want our best stallions and brood mares at the rate they are now buying?

Next, are the prices now current for our best stock any too high? Why, for twenty-five years past $25,000 to $40,000 have steadily ruled for exceptionally good ones in a small, contracted market, and before the breeding was so good or the speed as great as at present. Maud S. cost Mr. Bonner $40,000, yet Pocahontas cost him considerably more, many years ago. And what does the reader suppose was shown for the price? Merely one-quarter of a mile in 34 seconds in a race! Why did not some one then raise the cry of "boom," "stop," "ruination?" She was not a Clay. Less than three years ago I had a bona fide purchaser for Maud S. at $125,000—a fact not heretofore made known publicly—but nothing came of it, as Mr. Bonner had declared that even a quarter of a million dollars would not induce him to sell her. I know that I could, in a few hours, place my hand on a purchaser for Electioneer at $100,000 cash, if he was for sale, and he is verging on old age at that. About twenty years ago Hambletonian's service fee was $500, and that was considered an unapproachable figure for generations to come; yet, to-day there are several stallions with books full at that price. Recently I was bid $1,000 cash for the privilege of using the service of Electioneer which Senator Stanford had presented to me (and which I purpose using for myself this year), a price never before equalled for the service of a trotting stallion, and double that commanded by his own sire. Who doubts that Electioneer would readily command $1,500 to $2,000 a mare, if he was in Kentucky? These figures will illustrate the probabilities that are yet in store for trotting stock. Stamboul sold for $50,000 and $75,000 has since been bid for him, and it will not be long before $100,000 will be the ruling price for our best stock, and $1,000 to $1,500 the stud fee for our great stallions. I expect to see the best trotting-bred brood mares command from $25,000 to $30,000 within five years. At the risk of inviting ridicule, I will state that the majority of breeders seem to miss a material point that clearly indicates the road to be taken for future success. They blindly pin their faith to the 2:30 list instead of the 2:20 list.

From the time that Messenger first reached our shores till the present day, the Messengers in the male line have been the public favorites almost to the exclusion of all else. For a long time, till he made a name distinctly his own, Hambletonian (and his get as well) was lauded as a Messenger. Mambrino Chief was taken to Kentucky, because he was also a Messenger. As the Messenger line was eventually subdivided into sub-families, finally called Hambletonians; Mambrinos, Champions, etc., so will the greatest of all these, the Hambletonians, finally crystalize into two or possibly three great sub-lines. We have already outlived the 2:30 list as a mark of merit, and in a few more years the 2:20 list will have taken its place, as 2:30 trotters formerly overshadowed 2:40 horses.

In breeding horses we have to wait so long for results that we must, to a large degree, anticipate the future; so in selecting the strains to invest in or patronize, we must largely judge the future by the past. With a 2:20 standard staring us in the face as the coming standard of excellence, wisdom prompts that we should use those strains that show up best when judged by the severest standard. So weighed, George Wilkes and Electioneer have "doubled distanced" all other sires, and it is no more than a reasonable inference to suppose that Hambletonian will live on through these two channels as Messenger lives on through Hambletonian and Mambrino Chief.

I have seen Electioneer and some of his produce, all of which would foreshadow his greatness in the absence of technical records, owing to their great uniformity in form, color, temper, gait and natural speed. I am told by judges of tested excellence that Anteeo is all that could be desired, and I hear favorably of other sons of Electioneer—certainly enough to prove that this line will breed on equal to expectations. That George Wilkes will breed on is now a demonstrated fact, as attested by his numerous producing sons and daughters. But speed alone will not be the only quality looked for in the next era of breeding, when $100,000 for a horse and $1,000 to $2,000 service fee shall rule as standard prices. Great intelligence, high finish amounting to positive beauty, and absolute purity of gait and freedom from necessity of artificial appliances will be demanded—nothing short of perfection, in fact, as now judged. These additional requirements will tend to weed out the chaff from the grain in both families, and it becomes of monied interest to breeders to now apply these rules of the future to their selections.

I have of late taken every opportunity that offered to examine specimens of the George Wilkes family, with varying results. I was agreeably surprised in one, Red Wilkes, having heard that he was large and coarse. I found him large, 'tis true, but instead of being coarse he proved to be grandly proportioned and in every sense as noble-looking a sire as he is successful, and the records place him ahead of all other sons of "the poney sire." I had heard much of Wilton, and was prepared to find him as much overrated as I had found Red Wilkes to be underrated. To my surprise I found Wilton to be the most truly formed, highest finished, most beautiful and perfect horse that it was ever my fortune to behold. If he was two inches taller, I should unhesitateingly pronounce him absolute perfection, and when I came to examine his produce I at once reached the conclusion that here was the horse of the future in the Wilkes line. Every foal looked more like the highest type of thoroughbred rather than trotter, and they all looked alike and just like their sire, and I could not but say to myself that, had I the wealth of some of our breeders who aim to have only the best, regardless of price, not even $100.000 would stop me in purchasing this horse if he was for sale. I have no doubt but Red Wilkes will first reach the $1,000 fee limit, but I have no hesitation in predicting that, eventually, Wilton will wear his great sire's imperial mantle.

Working at Night.

It has just leaked out that Proctor Knott is not taking all his work by daylight, says the Republic. A well-known trainer here whose veracity has never been questioned spent the greater part of one of the nights and a portion of the early morning in the city, and as a consequence did not arrive at the track until about 2:30 A. M. As he drove toward his stable he says he was astonished to hear several horses—he could not see them—thundering down the stretch at a killing pace. He is not a man who is in the habit of letting anything good get away from him, so he naturally reined up and began to take observations. But the flyers were pulled up at the next furlong, the blanket put on them and taken immediately to Bryant's stable. One of them had Proctor Knott's white nose and legs, and the other—there were but two of them—was the Futurity winner's inseparable companion, Come to Taw. What the time was, or the distance covered, nobody knows except Bryant, and he failed to mention it to the silent witness. This secret plan of work is quite characteristic of Bryant. He hates a tout worse than he does a rattlesnake, and is constantly on the alert to outwit him. From the above it would seem that he is working Knott in earnest only in the small hours of the morning, and that the latter's day work—his mile in 1:49, for instance—is nothing but an "exercise gallop" to throw the touts off the scent. Since the above discovery, however, there have been nightly vigils kept at Churchill Downs, beginning at midnight and ending with daylight, and the next time Bryant and Proctor Knott do any of their will-o'-the wisp business there will be more than one watch in the recording business.

All Were Fond of Horses.

"Ike" Stephenson, the congressman from the Marinette, Wis., district, is a great lover of fine horses, although there is nothing in his looks to indicate it. He is a lumberman, and when not in Washington, spends a large portion of his time in personally attending to his big saw mills on the Menominee river. He finds time, however, to cultivate his taste for blooded horses, and in addition to breeding them he sends several out on the trotting circuit each year. He never brings a horse to Washington, but goes from the capital to his hotel on a bobtail car. He looks as if he did not have sufficient money to buy a good horse, but the fact is that his wealth reaches the neighborhood of a million.

A day or two ago, says the New York Tribune, Mr. Stephenson strolled over to the senate and got to talking horse with Senator Stockbridge, of Michigan, who has a fine stock farm. The senator told the representative about some fine young colts he had, and Stephenson, getting interested, at once purchased two of them. One was a four-year-old, for which he paid $3,500, and the other, a three-year-old, was given to him for $1,600. He told Mr. Stockbridge he would pay him $1,000 down and send to Wisconsin for the balance. The same day he sent his check for $1,000 over to the senate, and as Senator Stanford, who sits next to him, came along.

"Well, Stanford," said the Michigan stock-raiser, "I have made a better horse bargain to-day than you have. I have just sold two young colts for $5,100. I got $3,500 for one that is only four years old," and he rolled the $1,000 check about in his fingers triumphantly.

"Oh, I can beat you, said the California stock-raiser. "I have just sold a three-year-old for more than that, and he shook a check for $12,000 under the nose of the Michigan man. Mr. Stockbridge admitted that he was beaten, but says he will never let Mr. Stanford forget that he purchased Bell Boy from him for $10,000, kept him in Michigan a few months and sold him for $35,000.

News From Sheepshead Bay.

It has been a very busy week at the different Island tracks, both for trainers and owners. It is but a month before racing in this vicinity commences in earnest, and nearly every trainer has at least a couple of horses that he is going to try for the earlier events with. Most of the horses have progressed greatly, and from now on they will have the question asked them that is of such vital importance to owners and trainers alike. At the Gravesend track this morning there were as many as sixty horses out at one time, some walking, some cantering, some galloping and occasionally some extending themselves for a half or three-quarters.

The Sporting World says: As is very natural, the Dwyer horses are attracting more attention than all the others put together. There are so many of them, they cost so much, their breeding is so good, and they are related to such good performers that much is expected of them, both by their owners and the general public. At the head of the Dwyers' string is Hanover. There is a strong track rumor out that he will not be started for the Brooklyn Handicap, but will be saved for the Suburban. Whether there is any truth in it or not it is hard to say, but from the looks of him it would appear as though the son of Hindoo would be sent for the Brooklyn. He is quite far advanced, and already has done some fairly fast work, having gone three-quarters this morning in 1:23¾. Of course it was merely a pipe opener for him, but he was fighting for his head all the way, and was as full of run as he could be. He has had most of his superfluous flesh worked off, and there will be no trouble whatever about bringing him to the post; that is, provided his legs stand. It is hardly probable that, unless he were intended for the Brooklyn, he would have been given as fast work as he has this early in the season. In trotting or walking he steps rather queerly, something like a horse not quite sure of his footing; but once he is warmed up he steps out freely and fearlessly, something like the Hanover of old.

Sir Dixon is looking great, though not nearly so far advanced as Hanover; but then he will not be wanted so early in the season. Belle B., Kingston, and all the other older horses, were out, and with the exception of Kingston, they did good, strong work. If what we hear on the track is true, then the Dwyers are in hard luck indeed. Of course nothing definitely has been known about their two-year-olds all the winter, not even by themselves, and everything has been by breeding and looks. But lately they have been given spins of a quarter and a half and the only one that has shown any indications of being first class is Houston, the bay colt by Hindoo, out of Bourbon Belle, and he has shown up well indeed. Of course this is only a track rumor, and too much credence should not be placed in it. It hardly seems possible that it can be true, for some of the youngsters have written race horse all over them, and perhaps in another couple of weeks something definite can be told of them, as by that time they will have been tried more than once.

Jimmy Brown is not hurrying the McMahon horses at all, but at the same time he is keeping them moving right along. He had out a couple of two-year-olds this morning, a sister to Cyclops and a brother to Tecumseh, and after warming them up a bit he sent them a half in about 0.53. The Tecumseh colt was in the lead all the way and moved very strong. He is rather a large brown, quite good looking, but just a little too narrow. He will fill out, though, and will then be a grand looooking colt. The sister to Cyclops is a chestnut, well built, and she looks as though she had speed. Eolian and Cyclops are both looking first class, but it is said that neither of them has as yet done anything besides strong galloping.

Jimmy Dumas with the Castle Stable's horses is always on hand, and if they do not do something when the season opens it will not be Dumas' fault. At present they are looking first class and some of them have done good work. Diablo is doing nicely, and it is said that the other day he worked a half in 51¼. The two-year-olds are all doing nicely and nearly all of them have worked quarters in 25, and three furlongs in 40. The Iroquois-Explosion filly, half sister to Dewdrop, is said to be the best one that Dumas has, and from all accounts she is a good one. Hemet, that was bought out of the last trotting sale, has shown up well in his work, and it begins to look as though he would turn out a good investment.

Ed Wall has the McDonald lot, and they are looking well. Long Knight has reeled off quarters in 0:24½ and halves in 0:53, and is looking as well as he ever did in his life, and if nothing goes wrong with him he will be quite a dangerous horse in the early spring events. John Norris, Bob Furey, Corinth and The Belle are all doing well, and have been given good strong galloping.

Andrew Thompson has Locust in good shape just now, and will probably take him to Washington.

Alaric, Gipsy Queen and Cambyses, of the Excelsior lot, are looking good and are doing good, strong work. Billy Hueston has them out every morning, and he has sent them for a quarter or a half, but only in ordinary time.

Superintendent Brush has quite a force at work now straightening up the grounds, and they are beginning to look in shape once more. The track is very fast, but it is quite hard, although in a day or two Mr. Brush will have it softened up again.

Over at Sheepshead Bay track things are just as lively as they can be. Superintendent Clark has a number of men sodding the lawn in front of the grand stand and cleaning up generally. Part of the boarding in front of the grand stand has been removed, all the chairs have been treated to a new coat of paint, and the whole place will receive a general brightening up. Superintendent Clark has the track in first-class shape, as is evidenced by the time that is being made every day.

Matt Allen was standing outside his stable this morning when I called. He says that all his horses are doing well, "and," he said, "if you want to see halves in 51¼ and 51 seconds, come over any morning and we will show them to you." Allen's horses, he says, are all doing well. "Every one is talking about The Bard, Hanover, Firenzi and the rest of the cracks," he said; "is it not just possible that there may not be one or two fresh aspirants for honors this year that will make them all lower their colors?" Allen did not say that he had any such in his string, but at the same time it will pay a person to regard the Hearst entries with respect, as he is known to have some good older horses, and his youngsters are the best looking lot in this vicinity.

Numerous reports have been circulated that Hamilton, the jockey for the stable, and Allen had had some words and that the former would not ride for Senator Hearst this year. This Allen denies. In speaking about it he said: "There have been no words or anything else between Hamilton and myself. He preferred riding in races at Clifton to exercising horses here, and he is doing it. As for saying that Senator Hearst is disgusted with Hamilton, that is nonsense, as he has not seen him since last fall."

Jimmy Shield has his lot looking first-class, and in another week or ten days some or them will probably be seen at Clifton. Those that will race there are probably Gipsy, Long Branch and Drake, but all of them will need a little more preparation, and then it will most probably take a race or two to wind them up.

Tom Callahan was not at the track yesterday, but his horses were out at work just the same. Monsoon is very much improved, and is sufficiently far advanced to have shown three-quarters in 1:23. Khaften has also worked along very well, as have also the two-year-olds.

John Croker pays the track here a visit often. He always brings his Prince Charlie colts with him, and the other morning they worked a half in 0:52, pulling up very strong.

Frank Taylor leaves Thursday for Washington. He will take his whole string with him.

Chat With Mr. David Bonner.

The New York Herald has had another interview with Mr. David Bonner, as follows:

"It is not now, nor has it ever been my purpose to 'bear' the trotting horse market," said Mr. David Bonner a day or two ago.

"When I spoke to you about the sale of a two-year-old colt for $26 000 as being a sum, in my opinion, beyond that of profitable investment, it was my idea to be of service to the breeders and owners of such animals, while I believe that many of these gentlemen have upheld me in the very interesting views which they have given the Herald over their signatures regarding the trotter and the trotting market, a few, apparently, have construed my passing criticism as being a direct assault.

"I am not a 'bear' in the trotting horse market, I repeat, and those interested in the production of the trotter have always found me friendly toward them. Let me see. For many years I have owned at a time from fifteen to thirty horses. The love of the horse was born in me. I am glad of it.

"The trotter is an American production. That fact cannot escape me. I was the first man to suggest to Mr. William M. Rysdyk that he ought to increase the amount of Hambletonian's fee to $100. I believed the horse was worth it, and tried to make Mr. Rysdyk think as I did regarding the value of the horse as a trotting sire. It was difficult work, but I succeeded at last, and finally wrote the advertisement fixing the increased fee as named. In this self-imposed task I had some assistance from the brother-in-law of the old gentlemen, who was a hard headed business man, but didn't know much about horses. After it was all settled Mr. Rysdyk was still afraid that the amount was too much, and really awaited the result with fear and trembling. It proved a great success. It is part of the trotting history of the country. And Mr. Rysdyk was so pleased he came to me in good time and said that so long as the stallion lived I should have his services for two mares a year for nothing. That was intended as a great compliment and I accepted it as such. Remember I was young in those days, and Mr. Rysdyk about fifty-five years old.

HATED DECEPTION "LIKE PIZEN."

"Mr. Rysdyk was a plain countryman. Some horsemen in those old days used to say he was not hospitable and was close and sordid. They would complain that after dealing with him, having traveled many miles, he wouldn't even ask them into the house to take a cup of tea. That wasn't exactly so. He didn't like all the horsemen that called at his place, but all found that, notwithstanding the absence of 'society polish' about him, he was straight as a string, honest as the sun, and hated deception 'like pizen.' His grandfather was a Presbyterian minister from Holland, and lived as he preached, while his father was a farmer, plain, hard working, a good friend and an upright citizen. This was the kind of stock that Hambletonian's owner sprang from, and no wonder he didn't like some of the people he met.

HOW MR. BONNER KNEW OF HAMBLETONIAN.

"Now let me tell you how I first heard of Hambletonian. George Hopkins, who stills lives and looks vigorous, kept a stable in Greenpoint, L. I. I went there to drive Lady Woodruff out to the Fashion course. There was a trot that day. While the Lady was being harnessed I picked up a sporting weekly and my eye caught an advertisement that was headed this way: —'To the Lovers of Fine Trotting Stock.' I read further, and it went to say that Hambletonian by Abdallah, dam a Charles Kent mare, by imported Bellfounder, would serve a limited number of mares during the season at $25 each and $35 to insure. I had a young mare then I wanted to breed from, and this Abdallah blood interested me. So something like this occurred:

" 'Mr. Hopkins, how would it do to breed my young mare to Hambletonian, advertised here?'

" 'Very well, I think.'

" 'Do you know anything of the stallion?'

" 'Oh, yes. I have known him since he was three years old. I remember when he was shown at that age at the old Hamilton Park (round about that part of Third avenue where the American Institute Building is to-day) and I liked him.'

"So the Abdallah strain of blood decided me, and why? I lived on Amity street, this city, when a youth, and all the trotters of those days were stabled in Mercer street, near by. I was frequently in the stables and liked to listen to the owners and drivers as they talked of pedigrees and performances—what old ones had done and their expectations regarding youngsters. There I had heard Horace Jones, an old time driver, and others speak of the Abdallah blood, the great speed and endurance with which was credited and of horses of the Abdallah stamp they knew on Long Island. I never forgot it, and that's why I decided to breed my young mare to Hambletonian.

GOING TO THE FARM IN CHESTER.

"The Saturday morning following my conversation with Mr. Hopkins, a young friend and myself boarded a Newburg barge with the mare, on our way to Chester, N. Y., the home of Hambletonian. We reached Newburg that evening and remained a night at the Orange Hotel. The next morning we obtained a team and started on our journey at about twenty miles. I drove all the way and my friend led the mare behind the wagon. We reached the farm safely, though very tired. That was my first introduction to Mr. Rysdyk, the owner of Hambletonian. We were friends from that day, and our friendship grew stronger. That's why I told you when his name was first mentioned that I knew him well. I was at his home when Robert Fillingham (afterward George Wilkes) was to trot Ethan Allen, the considered great stallion of that time, at the Fashion track, and intended to see the race with the old gentleman, but I ate something the day before that made me sick and I couldn't leave the house. But the old man came down alone and saw a son of his horse beat the great Ethan Allen, and he was happy.

THE MATTER OF INVESTMENT.

'There, now, that is a little of my 'trotting' history. I have loved horses from my boyhood and owned them; have known a majority of the prominent breeders of the country since a youth, and they have known me, and in all these years, I have tried in my humble way to increase the value and popularity of the trotting horse of America.

"So, under the circumstances, I must be a friend of the horse and not at all inclined to be 'bearish,' or to break down the trotting market. But I must still insist that $26,000 for an undeveloped two-year-old colt, by whatever sire or from whatever dam, is too much money—as an investment."

The Sulky for Thoroughbreds.

Some trainers of thoroughbreds got together at the Lexington track the other day, and while they were discussing various matters a trotting-horse trainer came along and asked why it would not be better in a majority of instances for thoroughbreds to take the most of their work in harness hitched to a sulky. The argument in favor of the idea advanced by him, says the Breeder's Gazette, was that under the harness system the weight would be taken from the animal's back and placed where he could draw instead of carrying it, which is certainly a point worth considering Another thing in favor of the new idea was that the man in the sulky could more easily manage a horse than could a light boy on its back. The idea is not at all a new one, for as much as ten years ago an eccentric old man named Burnham, who has made a good deal of money running a cheese factory down in the central part of New York State, became impressed with the idea that he would like to own a stable of race-horses, and accordingly he appeared without heralding and entirely unknown to the rest of the people present at one of the Bell Meade sales of yearlings and bid so determinedly on the stock offered for sale, his fancy being for the get of Bonnie Scotland, that when the day was over he had invested something like $25,000 in the game. The string thus secured was added to by other purchases, and for three or four seasons the Burnham stable was one of the most formidable in the East. One of Burnham's ideas, and a very sensible one at that, was that thoroughbreds should be broken to harness just as were horses intended only for driving purposes, and be proceeded to carry out the plan, one result being that after his nags had gone through a hard campaign they were used on the road in the winter, it being no uncommon sight to see old man Burnham jogging through the little village where he lived behind some famous racer of the previous summer. Poor old Burnham! Like many another man who went into racing for glory, he came out at the small end of the horn financially, and after figuring conspicuously on all the prominent Eastern tracks he finally lost his money and prestige, descended to racing at Brighton Beach and the small New Jersey tracks, and for the last year or so has been out of sight completely so far as racing is concerned. "Lucky" Baldwin, of California, is another man who believes that thoroughbreds should be broken to harness, and all the famous animals in the Santa Anita string can be driven on the road, Volante being especially good in that capacity. A year ago last summer, when a Chicago sport bought from Baldwin the race mare Bobita, she being considered of no account, the California millionaire sarcastically remarked that the purchaser had secured a good buggy horse anyhow, but was considerably chagrined a few days later when the cast-off won a rich stake, defeating some of the Baldwin cracks. An ex-trotting horse trainer named Driscoll brought lots of chaffing on himself a few years ago when he trained the running mare Woodflower to a sulky on the Brooklyn Boulevard, but after she had been thoroughly prepared in this manner he sliped down to Brighton Beach one fine day and beat a lot of horses that were supposed to be able to distance Woodflower. The trouble with the majority of men who train runners is that they are not able to break away from traditional methods in the management of horses, and pursue the same system now that was in vogue fifty years ago; and this is why men who have graduated from the trotting to the running turf are so uniformly successful, their methods being common sense ones. That taking the weight from the back of a two or three-year-old and putting it behind the animal is a good plan to follow when the object of the training is simply to get rid of the supurfluous flesh and replace it with muscle there can be no doubt, and it may be that in the near future this system will be generally followed. The running-horse men are learning new things every season. It is not so long ago that they would almost raise a riot if the track on which they were to train and run their horses was not harrowed up so that the footing was absolutely heavy, their contention being that a hard track would break a horse down, but after a while they learned that it was the heavy going that did the mischief, and that the hard tracks were by far the safest.

Profit of High Breeding.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—Week before last I sent you a letter on the subject of breeding farms, the benefit and profit derived therefrom, and the surpassing advantages possessed in this State for the purpose. I am now enabled, through the courtesy of Mr. L. W. Burriss, Secretary of the Sonoma Breeding Association, to present an example in the case of Anteeo. This noted stallion was bought of his owner and breeder, Joseph Cairn Simpson, by the Association in the early part of 1884, and brought to the grounds of the association in Santa Rosa, where he was kept until his sale, some weeks ago, to parties in Kentucky. Mr. Simpson sold Anteeo for $10,000—at that time four years old—and before he had made his record of 2:16½, the association sold him for $25,000. Here is the reward of his keeping and earnings while in their possession—in the stud: For the year 1884, $4,100; 1885, $4,050; 1886, $4,750; 1887, $3,900; 1888, $8,800—a total of $25,600. Besides this, his track performances—although he was entered in races only a very few times—netted, clean earnings, every expense deducted, $532.50, making the full total of earnings $26,132.50. The cost of his keeping and handling for the whole time, from 1884 to 1889, was $12,222 83; giving a clean net profit of $13,909.67. The difference between the price paid for him, $10,000, and that at which the association sold him, $25,000, is readily computed, and is added to his earnings in the stud and upon the track.

This makes a very handsome showing for the five years in which the association were the owners of the horse. But the benefits of Anteeo's keeping during these five years are also to be considered. His racing record is further proof of the excellence and value of his great sire, Electioneer, and of his high bred dam. His colts are the demonstration of his own worth, the testimony of the high opinion held of him by turfmen and breeders, and they are to be found in many parts of the State, which evidences the cultivation of the better sentiment among all that in horses, the same as in every valuable species, the improvement in blood and quality is the prime and commanding consideration. This improvement naturally and visibly carries with it in every community its legitimate consequence and gratifying result. It impresses upon the farmer equally as it does the ordinary turfman the advantage and profit there is in raising stock of superior quality. As Senator Stanford has pithily expressed it, it costs no more to rear a good colt than it does to rear a poor colt; the difference is in the breeding. The poor bred colt can never become of great value. As a yearling he may stand his owner $50, at his ripe age he cannot sell for above a few hundreds at the very least. The high-bred colt has cost his owner, say $100 to breed him. As a yearling he is valued at $1,000, and on his record before maturing he may bring from $5,000 to $50,000, or even beyond that. The simple proposition before the farmer is, whether he shall breed a colt which he must be aware can never bring him more than a few hundreds, or the colt that will perhaps make him rich within a very few years? It is simply in the cost of breeding that the whole question rests. It is the same as buying a marsh which can never be reclaimed or become valuable, because it can be bought for a trifle per acre, or selecting for investment the land which is destined to become very valuable, and is likely to enrich its owner, even though the price first paid shall be three or four times that paid for the marsh.

But the improvement in breeding horses does still more. The bringing of Anteeo into Sonoma county stirred many others to the spirit of competition and betterment of their horses. Example comes from the top—in dress, in style, in everything the spirit of emulation is roused. The thrifty farmer is determined that his neighbor shall not excel him in his horses, as the prideful dame is resolved that the ladies of her set shall not outdress her; and he takes good care to procure good mares, and breeds them to the best blood he can command. The example becomes contagious, and all follow in it to the extent of their means. Blood will tell. Since the marvel of Robert Bonner's $20,000 for Dexter—then the highest price ever paid for a horse in America—there have been sales to eclipse that, and a score of instances can be cited away up into the forties and fifties of thousands. Within the year an offer of $15,500 has been refused for a great California favorite.

To better encourage this higher breeding, the demand is every year increasing. The possessors of millions and large wealth are constantly and rapidly increasing in every part of the country. They all want the finest and fleetest horses that money can buy. California millionaires—Stanford, Haggin, Baldwin, Ross, Hearst, Corbitt, Hayward and others—own the grandest breeding farms in the whole country. The wealthy patrons and devotees of the turf do not stand upon thousands as to price if they want the horse. The sales of California horses in the East during the last two or three years are proofs that California bred horses are in demand. The colt is perhaps already foaled in this state which at two years will be king of the class, the monarch of the Derby at three, or the world-beater in aged contests. The intelligent farmer who has the sagacity to invest for such breeding may in these few years receive for his champion colt a sum that will lift him at once into a fortune. And it is a grand thing to be known as the breeder of the breaker of the records of Maud S.—which a California bred horse will yet accomplish.

Since the coming of Anteeo several other noted sires have been brought into Sonoma, and a round number of high-bred mares. Anteeo is particularly mentioned on account of his prominence and the high reputation of his colts. They are appreciating in value, now that the sire is gone. An Anteeo colt or filly is a poossession much envied, and held at advanced figures. Capt. Eug. E. Grosse declined an offer of several thousands for his Sunset, four-year-old. De Turk the noted wine maker, has two fine Anteeos. James McLaughlin, and his brother John, old Tennessee stock breeders and prosperous farmers of Mark West, are happy owners of Anteeo's sons. Robert Crane, ex-Supervisor, a solid farmer, the breeder of the pacer Washington, has an Anteeo colt, foaled early in February, which shows great promise for the turf with extraordinary power and good points to found the prophecy. Ludwig the irrepressible builder and tireless promoter, Mat. Roney, Underhill, and others of local prominence, are in the list. Anteeo stock is on deck; also is Daley. The colts show excellence of blood. Sonoma county is pressing to the fore. J. O'M.

SANTA ROSA, April 21st.

The Winters' Stable.

Mr. Winters will send his stable of seven horses to St. Louis next week, on the Southern Pacific, in charge of W. McCormick. The following horses will comprise the string: The Czar, Don Jose, Joe Courtney and Barkham, each three years old and El Rio Rey, Rascal and Barrett, two-year-olds. They are most of them heavily entered at the St. Louis Spring Meeting.

The Czar is entered in the Derby one mile and a half; the Chas. Green Stakes, one mile and a quarter; and the Chicago Horseman's Challenge Foal Stakes, one and a quarter miles.

Barham in the Bankers and Brokers Stake, nine furlongs.

El Rio Rey and Rascal are included in the Turf Exchange Stake, six furlongs, and the St. Louis Brewers Stake, six furlongs.

Barrett is in the Real Estate Stakes. six furlongs, and The Turf Exchange Stakes.

El Rio Rey, the pride of the stables is full brother to the Emperor of Norfolk, The Czar, etc.

Rascal by Joe Hooker, dam Mattie Glen is a good looking chestnut colt and judging from his shape and action should race first rate.

Barrett, by Joe Hooker, dam Countess Zeika, is a good looking bay colt, brother to Don Jose, with a back like a wagon horse and low stealing action that is as near perfection as possible, and with a little more work, will make his stable companions put their best leg first to keep up with him.

Barham, three-year-old, is a fine looking bay by Norfolk, out of sister to Lottery and like the rest is a bit big, but taken all round the stable has the best looking lot of young race horses that have ever left the State.

The Fresno Meeting.

The opening day of the Fresno Racing Association was all that could be desired. The directors had done everything possible to ensure a successful meeting, but the character of the sport presented warranted a much larger attendance than was present on the opening day. The ball was started rolling with a contest for the 2:32 class, there being five starters. Belle B., after the showing she made at Los Angeles, was installed a hot favorite, with Charlie D. for second choice, Maud Medium, Addie E. and Bedford in the field. The first heat was won easily by Charlie D., Bedford second, and Belle B. third. Maud Medium was not at herself, and was distanced. Time, 2:34.

The second heat ended somewhat differently, Belle B. winning nicely in 2:28, with Charlie D. in second place, Bedford being third. There were many very nasty tales floating around about a job that had been put up, and the judges were notified what the general impression was. In the third heat the drivers were closely watched, and Burke, the man in the sulky behind Belle B. was seen to throw the mare off her feet. Charlie D. won the heat in 2:34, Belle B. second, Bedford third. At the conclusion of the heat there was considerable hubbub, which after a few minutes was quieted down in consideration of the action taken by the judges. The following account of what happened is taken from the Fresno Republican:

The judges ordered Johnny White, marshal of the track, to take charge of Belle B., and the officer started for the stables to prevent the mare being "doped." Instead of going by the usual road to the stables the mare was taken around the club house, and when Officer White rode up to the men having her in charge and demanded that they surrender her, one of the men struck at him with a bucket he was carrying, and the other prepared to show fight. White pulled his delicate 44-caliber Colt and requested, in accents mild, that the horse be given in his charge. The men surrendered her without a murmur, one glance into the muzzle of the persuader being enough. Doc Burke, the driver of Belle B., was taken out of the sulky and the judges put up H. H. Helman of Visalia, who drove her the balance of the race.

The fourth heat was taken by Belle B. in 2:28, with Bedford, Addie E. and Charlie D. in the order named, and the fifth and last heat and race was won by Belle B. in 2:23, with Charlie D., Bedford and Addie E. as named.

The second and last race of the day was for runners, half mile and repeat, there being entered Gladstone, Bogus, Tom Daly, Spring Water, Butcher Boy, Lady Anna and Thad Stevens. As a natural consequence Gladstone was a strong favorite, he selling against the field. The starting was not of a high order, the starter not being able to get the fractious beasts in line. When the flag did finally fall, Bogus had a lot the best of it and he was never headed from start to finish, showing up in something like his old form, and making the distance in 48¾ seconds. After this heat betting was very lively, with Gladstone still first choice. That his backers were sound in their judgment is evinced in the fact that he won the next two heats handily in 49 and 50.

The second day was a decided improvement as far as the attendance was concerned, but still not what it should have been. The opening event was a running race of a mile and a quarter, there being the following entries: Edwin F., Elwood, Rosa Lewis, Sir Charles, Manzanita, Dave Douglas and Jack Brady. That old stand by of Dan Dennison's, Dave Douglas, was the pronounced first choice among the betting community, while Jack Brady had a number of supporters. The reputation of the handler of Brady had preceded him here and consequently he was watched very carefully. As in the day preceding, the horses got a frightfully bad start, Douglas being left at the post. Brady won the race with ridiculous ease being the only thing in it. When the riders returned to dismount, the judges ordered the marshal to take charge of Jack Brady and also his rider Joe Navais. When the lad went to weigh in it was found that he only scaled 107 pounds, although on weighing out he turned the beam at 121, which the horse was supposed to carry: A lead pad which made up the difference was missing, and it was seen that it had never been put on the horse, so he had run at short weight. The judges promptly declared Manzanita the winner, and declared Jack Brady disqualified. Before the judges left the stand for the day, they ruled off Stover and the horse. The keenness of the authorities in discovering the fraud was duly appreciated by those present and the sentiment freely expressed, that such contemptible scoundrels should never be allowed on a race track. The second race was a dash of a mile and an eighth for a $250 purse, the entries being Louis, Hot Spur and G. W. Notwithstanding the splendid work done in Los Angeles by G. W., Louis P. was the strong tip, and he was made favorite over the two owned by Dan Dennison. As in the lower country G. W. won hands down, his stable companion being second, time 1:58. A trot for the 2:40 class was next in order, with Charles F., Bracelet and White Ash as entries. Bracelet was the favorite in the pool box, but he was a sad disappointment to his friends, as he cannot trot a little bit, being a natural pacer. Charles F. won the initial heat in an easy manner in 2:33, White Ash second.

White Ash was fortunate enough to capture the second heat in 2:35, while Charles F. proved fast enough to take the third. At this juncture a new driver was put up behind Bracelet, but with no better effect, as the horse was distanced in this heat, White Ash winning in 2:40. White Ash took the fifth heat and race in 2 38. After the day's sport was over the directors reinstated the horse Jack Brady, it having been shown to their satisfaction that Stover had no claim to the horse, but that he was owned by Messrs. Davis and Hazlitt, of San Francisco.

Although the third day opened up nice and pleasant, when it came time to go to the track the roads were very dusty, and as the wind blew quite strongly the going was anything but pleasant. The three-quarter mile heat race was considered a cinch by the talent, who flocked to get in their money on Jack Brady, Oro (the ladies' favorite) a good second choice. In addition to these there were Cy Mulkey's Tom Daly, Dan McCarty's Tom Daly, Edwin F. and Whist. Mulkey's entry had little or no trouble in winning in 1:15 and 1.16.

A pacing race came next for the 2:30 sidewheelers, the entries being Little Doc, Lela S., Johnny Skelton and T. B. Little Doc was the most fancied by the pool buyers, still Johnny Skelton had many warm admirers. In the first heat Skelton and T. B. were distanced. Lela S. only saving herself by a neck, time 2.25. In the second heat Lela S. was not pacer enough to save her distance, and was shut out in 2:30, Little Doc taking heat and race. As an extra attraction, Mr. Helman drove his mare Maud Medium to beat her previous record of 2:47, and succeeded in reducing it to 2:35. A match race was next run off between Edwin F. and Butcher Boy for the sum of $200 a side. The latter had no trouble in winning the five-eighths dash in 1:04.

A good fair attendance graced the track for the first race on the fourth day, the event being mile heats, with six starters. It was the intention to start Oro but her rider was so drunk that the mare ran away with him and circled the track twice before being caught. Those who faced the flag were Dave Douglas, Sir Charles, Jack Brady, Cognac, Duffy Winters and Elwood. When the start was effected, Dave Douglas got to the front very quickly and was never headed, winning in 1:45. The second heat was a trial of speed between Jack Brady and Douglas, and they came in so close that the judges decided it a dead heat. Time, 1.44. Jack Brady was too fleet of foot for old Dave and won the third heat in 1:44 and also the fourth, in 1:47. The second race gave the 2:25 trotters a chance to show themselves, the entries were St. David, Belle B, Ed and Charlie D. As Belle B. had been handled so peculiarly on the first day, the judges had out patrol men to see that no "funny work" was done. A long and tedious delay occured in the scoring, but they finally were sent off all together. Belle B. was the first to show in front and she won with consummate ease in 2:29. Ed proved a tough nut to crack, however, for he won the next three heats, the last one being negotiated in 2:26¼. The quarter mile heat race had to be postponed until next day on account of darkness.

The fifth and last day, was a special one and had a very attractive programme. The weather was fine and the attendance good. The postponed race of Friday was first on the card but is hardly worthy of comment, Cyclone beating Bogus, Butcher Boy, Grey Eagle and Billy Button in 23¾ and 23. Next followed a three-quarter mile dash between McCarthy's Tom Daly, Manzanita, Elwood, Edwin F. and Cognac, Manzanita proving an easy winner in 1:16. A mixed trotting and pacing race had for starters Johnny Skelton, Charles F., White and T. B. This was rather interesiing the following being the

This closed a successful meeting, as far as the racing was concerned, but it was a great pity that the Fresnoites did not give the association better support.

The Races.

OPENING DAY.

For a number of years the Pacific Coast Blood Horse Association has given Spring and Fall meetings, which the public have always generously supported, feeling assured that the attractions would be of the highest order and entirely free, as far as possible, of anything pertaining to jobbery. That the same feeling is still manifested was proven by the large attendance on the opening day, Saturday, April 20th. There were many who prediced that the stringent resolutions passed by the board of directors, relative to free tickets, would be a stumbling block in their way, as in the past it seems that directors and members have had passes given them in large quantities for distribution. The new arrangement works better than expected, however, as the receipts at the gate were larger than ever before on the first day of a meeting. The front of the house, as a theatrical man would say, was under the control of the Harry Morse Detective Agency, who will have entire charge during the five days racing, the directors having decided to give an extra day on Tuesday, April 30th.

The day was all that could be desired, and at an early hour in the morning the visitors from far-distant points began to flock to the track, each eager to get a glimpse of their particular favorites, and also to pick up any information which might be useful in betting. The jockeys and stable boys were all busy during the morning discussing "craps," the shooting of which was the cause of much cursing as the luck varied and money changed hands. A large delegation was present from the Capital City, each with a sack to back the chances of Whisban for the California stakes, and Sorrento for the Tidal stakes. Palo Alto always has its followers, and they were out in full force Saturday; but, notwithstanding their liking for the blue and orange sash, hardly any of them ventured to take the odds offered against Brutus in the first race, but were on Racine for the second; but, much to their sorrow, plunged on Geoffrey for the last event and lost the former winnings. Sonoma county had a large representation, all prepared to invest on Al Farrow and Guido, as Mr. Tupper is a Santa Rosian and has many friends who have great faith in his stable. A small contingent were present from San Jose, while Stockton had a large number of residents down to see the fun and back the Shippee stable. Among the San Francisco folks, those who revel in club life were to a man on the entries of the Maltese Villa stable. The weather was all that could be desired, and the verandahs were well filled with ladies, the beautiful varigated colors of the dresses adding a charm to the scene. The portion of the stand which is devoted to the members of the association showed rather slim, as the club house balcony was taken as a point of vantage in preference to the portion allotted to them. The betting ring was constantly filled with those who desired to tempt dame fortune, and the eight pencillers were kept constantly busy attending to the wants of their customers. The directors had petitioned off a part of the inner exercising track as a saddling paddock, and a policeman stationed at the entrance there to keep out the usual crowd that congregates when the horses are being saddled and annoys owners and grooms by their presence. In all, about 2,000 persons were present to enjoy the sport, there being taken at the gate 1,544 paid tickets and three complimentaries, hundreds of others simply showing their member's badges, and as there were no coupons to detach it cannot accurately be stated exactly how many did pass in. The reporters are under many obligations to the management for the presence of one of the officers, who stood at the foot of the stairs and refused to allow any persons to occupy the reporters' box who was not a working member of the press. So many improvements were noticable in the surroundings that favorable words of comment were heard on all sides. The whitewash which has been liberaly applied tended, in a measure, to enliven the scene, and when coupled with the various colors of silk in use by the jockeys, was pleasing to the eye. The usual wheel of fortune was in full operation. the peanut man cried his wares, and, to complete the spectacle, the cheery voice of Sam Whitehead could be heard: "What am I offered for first choice?" The refreshment department was under the supervision of "Hod" Hinchman, ably assisted by J. C. Hansen, an old New York chef from Delmonico's, who had a magnificent luncheon spread for those who desired anything in the eatable line.

Another innovation, and one that pleased the multitude immensely, was the numbers placed on the jockeys' arms, so that there was no trouble in instantly telling the names of the horses, as the programmes contained the names, with the numbers distinctly marked in front of such. In speaking of the programmes, it might be well to say that the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN management has been highly complimented by hundreds for its generosity in furnishing free programmes for those in attendance, but the public will find hereafter that this paper will be up with times, and anything that will tend to the benefit of our patrons will be provided for them. It is true the expense has been considerable, but the thought of that has been a secondary consideration; we have been so generously supported since the paper was first issued that it is only fair we should do something in return of a gratuitous nature. Almost every person present carried home the programme as a souvenir of the day, and also to have conveniently at hand a record of all fast times made by running horses at all distances.

At twenty minutes past two the bell sounded the call to the post and sixteen horses answered the summons. It was a pity that this large number of entries had not been divided and two races announced as the very large field, caused Mr. Meagher a great deal of trouble, and it was over an hour before the flag fell to a straggling start, the fractiousness of Lurline causing in a degree the great delay. To add to the annoyance, the jockeys became unruly and the starter was forced to fine the following: Carillo, $50; Morton, $20; Atkinson, $10; Hazlett, $10; Cook, $10; Hart, $10. When the flag fell, Mr. Pray's entry, Duke Spencer, was the first to show in front, closely followed by Dutch and Laura Gardner, coming past the wire Brutus and Al Farrow were at such speed that when the quarter was reached Farrow was leading with Brutus second, Wanderer 2nd third, the balance of the field well up and all running hard. At the half the positions remained unchanged, but it was at this juncture that Hill was seen to move up slowly on Moses B, and at the three-quarters was close to the leaders, a gallant race here ensued, the turn being made in very fast time but as they turned into the stretch Al Farrow was still in the lead, hard pressed by Brutus and Moses B. and Laura Gardner, who each in turn passed the favorite Al Farrow showing plainly that he had had enough of it. Jockey Hill on Moses B. tried very hard to overtake the Palo Alto entry, but poor lame Brutus captured the first money by half a length, Moses B. beating Laura Gardner for second place by the same distance.

As soon as possible after the conclusion of the first race the judges called up the horses for the second event, in the meantime backers being busy at work showering in money on their favorites. This two-year-old contest, known as the California Stakes, has always been a great betting race, and a deep interest, at all meetings, is manifested in the youngsters who are going to participate in this now classic event. By an over-sight Mr. Winters failed to nominate El Rio Rey, the full brother to the Emperor of Norfolk, which has caused great disappointment, as there are many who fancied that the colt would have to be extended if he should be fortunate enough to win. However there were six good ones to face the starter, and Palo Alto's friends had a chance to put up as much as they pleased, for the Stockton people and the Sacramento contingent could see nothing in the race but Whisban, while Guido was also well thought of by many. When Mr. Meager got the lot off, which he did on the second attempt, Racine went at once to the fore, Reata and Guido being his close companions, Pliny, Whisban and King Hooker never showing any speed at all. The positions remained unchanged until they were well down the home-stretch, when Guido passed Reata and made play for the leader, but he did not have the speed to catch Racine, who won by three lengths.

The weights in 1870, were 86 lbs. for colts and 83 lbs. for fillies; in 1880 they were raised to 100 lbs. for colts and 97 lbs. for fillirs; in 1883 they were raised to 110 lbs. for colts and 107 lbs. for fillies. Anita is said to be by Rutherford or Grinstead.

The winner is a bright bay colt, by Bishop, (he a son of Shannon), dam imp. Fairy Rose, she by Kisber Hippolyta by King Tom. This is his third time of starting, winning once at San Jose, and losing once, and now wins the California.

The third race was of the short order, but was in heats, giving some of the old timers a chance to show their speed.

Among those who were supposed to know a good thing, Geraldine was conceded to be a sure winner, the sale of pools showing the way in which Mr. Ashe's mare was fancied, she selling for $50 against $15 for the field. The race hardly requires mention, for although pushed out in both heats by White Cloud, she did the trick so easy that there was no chance to beat her.

The great event of the day, and in which more than especial interest was displayed on account of there being so many of the prominent American Derby starters, was the Tidal stakes which has always been a bone of contention for the three-year-olds, and a good fat plum for the winner. The entries were liberal, fifty nominations having been made, the following of which had been

Declared out August 1st, 1888, at $20 each: Trade Mark, So So, Philander, Jim Blaine, Scat, Harvester, Lakme. Total, $140.

Declared out January 1st, 1889, at $30 each: Lucknow, Daphinita, Sinfire, Robin Hood, N. Y. M., Libberty Flibbet, Sonoma, Jo Viva. Total, $240.

Again the backers of Palo Alto assembled in force, and once more was the Stanford entry made favorite, the running of Geoffrey at San Jose being considered fast enough to beat anything entered in the Tidal against him. When the colt appeared on the track he was stiff and sore, his bad fetlock showing up with a good deal of prominence; still, those in and around the stable contend that it does not trouble him in preparation. The two entries of Theodore Winters looked the pink of perfection, opinion being divided as to which was the best, The Czar or Don Jose. A rumor early gained currency that it was intended The Czar should win, Don Jose to do the running up. As a consequence The Czar was quoted in the books at only two and three to one, while Don Jose was at "sixes." Sorrento was a hot favorite among the Sacramento gentlemen, but he did not show in as good form as on many occasions last year. The reason of his great popularity for the Tidal Stakes, was a trial which he showed at Agricultural Park, Sacramento, finishing a mile and a quarter easy in 2:11. This performance was considered good enough to warrant a strong backing, but Sorrento was a sad disappoinment to his friends, never standing a ghost of a show. The starter had a great deal of trouble in getting the party off, and when the flag did fall Sorrento was in the lead, Joe Hoge and Flood Tide being second and third, the balance bunched with the exception of Don Jose, who was away behind. The position did not suit Atkinson, who at once shot through the field, and before the wire was reached, was in the van, now under a strong pull, Joe Hoge second, Flood Tide third, The Czar coming strongly in fourth place, the balance strung out in a procession. At the quarter The Czar had moved up to second place, the two stable companions running easy and well in hand, Hoge, sticking to the Winters' colors, being third. At the half the three leaders was approached by Louis P., but he was never a dangerous quantity, as his little spurt was not kept up for long. His run up, however, had the effect of spurring up the balance of the field, for they all set sail toward the leading four, and in a very few seconds the entire field were almost bunched, the yellow and green sashes just showing in front, and that was all. As they turned into the homestretch, Morton came up with Geoffrey, and speedily passed Hoge, but could not quite manage to head the leading two. The Czar, however, moved up a peg and got his head in front of Don Jose, and in that order they passed under the wire; Geoffrey third, Hoge fourth, Sorrento fifth. Thus was won the second Tidal Stakes, worth to the winner about $2,500.

SECOND DAY—APRIL 23D.

Officers of the day, Messrs. Thornton, Tarpey, Winters and Finigan. Timers, Messrs. Hickok, Rose and Green. Clerk of course, Harry Lowden.

Well, we have had another Derby run for, and wiped out the fastest recorded record time. Mr. Winters has been congratulated on all hands on the magnificent time made by The Czar, and well he might be, for it is very rarely that two three-year-olds are seen in the same stable that can come up to Don Jose and the brother to the Emperor. Just imagine two Proctor Knotts or two Salvators under one control, yet that is the position Mr. Winters is in. He has two first-class colts, and if both are started in the American Derby at Chicago, provided there be good day and track, the people of San Francisco will not have long to boast that we have the best Derby record on this coast. Although over a thousand persons paid for admission to the track, the crowd seemed a very small one compared with that of Saturday, which is very strange when the strength of the programme, the beautiful weather and the fast horses engaged are taken into consideration.

The first event on the card was for three-year-olds and upwards, with beaten maiden allowance, three-quarters of a mile. There came to the post seven starters, of which Geraldine was considered the real good thing. The bookmakers evidently had the same idea as the public, for when the first business was done, 5 to 1 on was the ruling rate. Nancy had a few supporters, and White Cloud was gently nibbled at for a place. Suddenly the quotations change, Geraldine 1 to 4, then 1 to 3, and again 1 to 2. By watching the figures opposite the name of Emotion, the cause is discernible. Casey

Winchell is to ride the Garland mare, and she is known to be as fleet as the wind, so the dollars flow in, in a steady stream, and the bookmakers every minute cut down the price on Emotion and give correspondingly larger odds on Geraldine. At last, however, even the money gives out, just as the horses get to the post and all eyes are turned toward starter Meagher to see if he can get the field off in good shape. Just as the flag fell three of the horses collided, enabling White Cloud and Nancy to get a commanding lead, Little Phil next in order, he being followed by Glen Ellen, Geraldine and Long Shot, while Emotion was fully twenty lengths behind the leader at the half-mile pole. When Emotion finally caught her stride she fairly flew over the ground, catching up and passing the field one by one. Down the homestretch she came at a thundering pace, only having to pass White Cloud to win, but although the wonderful burst of speed was maintained, the Pinto won by two lengths, Emotion second, with Nancy in third place, closely followed by Geraldine. The time made shows what a marvelous exhibition of speed Emotion displayed, when it is considered how far she was behind at the half.

The Select Stakes gives an opportunity for the large breeding farms of the State to show off the very best or their two-year-olds, the conditions being that the stable shall make a nomination, and then be allowed to start as many or as few as they please. The nominations for 1889 were Palo Alto stable, Santa Anita stable, L. U. Shippee and Theo. Winters, but at the last moment Mr. Winters declared out, leaving only the three others to contend for the stake. Palo Alto was represented by Racine and Pliny; Santa Anita by Atalanta, while Farsalara carried the colors of Mr. Shippee. The race was very tame, as Racine is a far superior colt to anything seen yet on the coast, and although Pliny took the lead at the start, his stable companion soon passed him, and was never headed, Farsalara finishing second, at least five lengths behind the winner, Atalanta third.

The next race attracted the "selling platers" for a purse of $350. Ten as likely looking horses as ever faced a flag in a race of the kind, answered to the bell. Mozart was a strong tip, and was the favorite in the betting at 8 to 5. Kildare got the best of the send off, and was soon two lengths to the good, Welcome and Jack Brady occupying second and third place, the balance of the field strung out. As the three leaders swung into the homestretch the jockeys began plying the lash, and a grand finish ensued which would beyond doubt have ended in the success of Kildare, but his stirrup strap broke at the draw gate and caused Pierce to almost lose his balance, Welcome winning by the shortest of noses from Kildare, who was only a head in front of Jack Brady.

The event of the day, the Pacific Derby was next on the card, and the most intense excitement was manifested as the different horses were brought out on the track preparatory to saddling. There were six entries down on the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN programme, but at the last moment Mr. W. L. Pritchard had his colt Louis P. declared out, leaving five choice three-year-olds to contend for the Grand Prix. The Winters' stable elected, on the previous evening, to start Joe Courtney instead of Don Jose as a runner up for The Czar, but the distance was not found to suit the son of Joe Hooker, although for a mile and a quarter he performed his part of the work well. The Norfolk-Marion colt was the favorite at 1 to 2, with Geoffrey second choice at 2 to 1. Sorrento was heavily backed for a place, and delighted his supporters by coming in second. Mr. McCarty had made arrangements for Fred Carillo to ride Sorrento, but the action of the directors on Monday night, forbidding him to ride until the Al Farrow case was settled, compelled Dan to take Sible, who was known twenty years or more ago as "Spanish Charley." He rode well, and seemingly has not forgot his cunning.

With but very little trouble Mr. Meagher got the lot off, The Czar and Courtney taking the premier positions immediately, Wild Oats, Sorrento and Geoffrey following in the order named. At the head of the stretch Courtney took the lead, and still retained the position as they came under the wire the first time, The Czar being under a strong pull. Geoffrey was now third, Wild Oats fourth, and Sorrento a very bad fifth. The same positions were maintained until well down the back stretch, when Sible began to whip Sorrento, who rapidly moved up under the castigation. At the three-quarters The Czar took the lead, and rapidly left Courtney behind, although he was not whipped at all. Sorrento was coming like a whirlwind, taking both whip and spur in a manner which is peculiarly his own. He seems to enjoy punishment, in fact, is a perfect glutton for it, but he had not been started soon enough, for The Czar came under the wire, but only by a nose the winner, and it is generally conceeded that if there had been two more jumps McCarty would have landed the stakes. The Czar did not have to exert himself to win, but it was a grand finish, and highly appreciated by all who witnessed it. Wild Oats was third, ten lengths behind the winner, Courtney and Geoffrey nowhere.

THIRD DAY—THURSDAY, APRIL 25TH.

Officers of the day, M. F. Tarpey, C. Coleman, D. W. Earle. Timers, O. A. Hickok, L. H. Titus, Christopher Green. Clerk of course, Harry Lowden.

Another magnificent day caused a large attendance to be present on the third day of the Pacific Coast Blood Horse Association meeting, and evidently the sporting money was not all gone, as the bookmakers enjoyed a large run of patronage. The wheel of fortune which has enjoyed a long run of uninterrupted prosperity until Tuesday, was again at work, but the business done was slim, as those who were at the track would rather take the chances against the bookmakers or the pool-box than against the turn of a man's wrist. Again the members were out in full force, and the ladies were conspicuous by their toilets, the balcony presenting an animated spectacle, with the sun beaming down on the silks and satins. The club-house stand was well filled with the best known men about town, the betting ring was again filled with those who wanted to tempt the fickle jade, while many of the old timers stuck to the old fashion and bought pools, thinking it a better manner to invest than through the pencillers.

The first race showed a change, inasmuch that Mr. Henry Welch, of Palo Alto, had the starting flag instead of Mr. Meagher, the latter thinking that a new man might not be so unfortunate as himself in getting Mr. Garland's horse off with the balance. The change was not beneficial, however, as the sequel will show.

The usual trouble was experienced in getting the horses off, the large field preventing a satisfactory start. During the delay Mr. Welch fined all the jockeys except Hazlitt, Cook and Hitchcock, the other ten having to stand a penalty for disobedince at the post. When the flag at last went down Duke Spencer had a shade the best of it, starting away as though he was the only horse in the race, Nancy trying to keep up, but making a bad job of it. The rest were in the proverbial procession, waiting for Duke Spencer to quit. At the half mile pole Bessie Shannon moved up and made a fight for first place which she finally secured just as they turned into the homestretch. At this moment two other candidates for public honors appeared in Welcome and Kildare, the two passing the mare in short order Wanderer second, also came with a rush but had not speed enough to catch the leaders and had to content himself with third place, Welcome winning by half a length from Kildare.

The second event produced as starters the Palo Alto entries Racine and Pliny, Col. H. I. Thornton's Reata, and C. V. Tupper's Guido. As may be naturally supposed, the now mighty Racine was the favorite, the ring not being willing to do better than 1 to 10 about the big bay, while for the others the very liberal odds of 12 to 1 Pliny, and 15 to 1 each Guido and Reata, could be had. Starter Meagher was again at the post to send the youngsters off, and he had little or no trouble in sending them away, with Guido slightly favored. The Palo Alto marvel cannot stand to have anything in front of him, and very soon dispossessed the Double Cross colt, who in the middle of the back stretch took it into his head to bolt, and carried his rider over to the outside of the track, the boy for a moment losing his head, it was momentary only, as he soon had the colt under subjection, but was now three lengths to the bad, which he immediately proceded to make up. Pliny and Reata was so far ahead that the work set for the colt was very hard. However he gallantly did his duty, and after turning into the home stretch soon passed Pliny and Reata, but could not reach the favorite who went under the wire the winner of the So So Stakes, with the additional honor that hereafter the stake will be called the Racine stake, he having beaten So So's time of 1:14¾. Pliny was third, with Reata last.

SUMMARY.

The So-So stakes, $50 each, with $500 added; three-quarters of a mile:

A mile heat race was the next attraction, and proved a great betting race; Brady, Mozart, Wild Oats and Nerva being equally supported. When Mr. Meagher gave the party a send off, it was with Mozart fully four lengths to the good, with Nerva second, Fusilade's Last third. Around the course to the head of the homestretch Mozart kept his place, but here ensued a hammer and tongs race between the leader, Nerva and Wild Oats, the latter passing the wire first, amid considerable applause from those who had backed the Appleby entry. As Dutchpassed under the wire, his rider lost all control of him, and the big chestnut colt went about a mile and a quarter before the lad could pull him up.

The second was almost a repetition of the last, with the exception that Jack Brady led nearly all the way, with Fusilade's Last sticking to his flanks like a plaster. In the turn Fusilade's Last threw her rider, and the mare came home alone. Brady led into the turn, and here the same tight took place, Narvice bringing up Wild Oats with a rush, capturing the second heat and race.

The fourth and last race of the day was the Sequel Stakes, for all ages, one mile and three-eighths. The six horses named on the programme stated, the great favorite being Emotion, from his run in the three-quarter dash on Tuesday. A rather singular thing about the race is, that the three choices Emotion, Laura Gardner and Moses B, did not get a place while the three horses sold in the field, came one, two, three. Flood Tide was away first, with Gardner second and the favorite a good third. These positions were not changed until the homestretch was reached, when the trailers moved up and a great whipping finish was made, Flood Tide, however, never being headed.

Kentucky Horse Gossip.

LOUISVILLE, Ky, April 20th.—But little over a fortnight remains before the Kentucky Derby shall be run, and discussion upon the classic event is not only becoming more active but is taking more definite shape. There were not a few who expected to see some one of the horses in the California contingent duplicate the performance of Haggin's Ben Ali in the Derby of 1886, but there has been considerable reversal of opinion in this respect. Almont, who heads the Californians in point of performances and ability, is a pretty sick horse at present, and if he is anything like as badly off as he is represented to be by his trainer it will take something little short of a miracle to get him ready by May 9th. The trip across the continent was a long, tedious and tiresome one, and Senator Hearst's horses were pretty badly banged about. Several of them were taken sick, and Almont's condition was so serious that he was left at Fort Worth, Tex., to recuperate a trifle before completing his journey. He has not been taken out of the stable since his arrival here except for the purpose of walking him; under blanket, around the stable path.

Other horses that are likely to cut some figure in the Derby, or, at least those most likely to start, include Bryant's pair, Proctor Knott and Come-to-Taw, Heron, Spokane, Hindoocraft, Long Dance, Once Again, Castaway II., the Lioness, Castella, Moxie, Caliente, Lee Christy and Kasson. There is a rumor here that Carter does not intend bringing the last-named horse here, but it lacks confirmation. Kasson is in fine condition, and if he can go the route, his owner will hardly forego the tempting possibilities offered in a great race like the Derby. Proctor Knott, it is believed, will start despite Bryant's assertions to the contrary. But the big gelding is far from being in Derby condition at present, whatever he may be two weeks hence. Shrewd horsemen who have seen him essay the Derby route in his trials say he does not perform his work as if he relished it. In fact there are those who contend that he cannot go the distance at all, and that a mile and a quarter is his limit. Bryant himself says that Knott is not yet sufficiently advanced to go a mile and a half, but of course this counts for little, as he would naturally be the last one to bull his horse on the market and thus spoil the betting. But whatever Proctor Knott may be, there is no doubt about his stable companion, Come-to-Taw. He at least can go the route, and has fully demonstrated that fact a dozen occasions. If Bryant starts both, this is the one he is apt to rely upon.

Kenilworth 2:18¼, about which so many reports have been circulated regarding his death while en route to South America, has finally arrived at Buenos Ayres safe and sound.

It seems to be generally conceded by Eastern horsemen that Glen Echo will be the starter for the Suburban from the Hearst stable. If such is the case Joe Marvice will ride him.

Dr. C. C. Mason, of Chico, who for many years has been associated with the turf interests of Butte County, has been elected Grand Commander of the Grand Commandery, Knights Templar.

Mr. S. N. Straude, of Fresno, lately sold a colt by Clovis, dam Mattie, by Whipple's Hambletonian, which was only seven days old for $1,000. Good breeding is productive of large prices.

Ab Stemler will probably go East shortly to attend the spring sales for Mr. Shippee, but as they only have youngsters in the stable at present, they will not be sent East this year to race.

Now that the Western trainers have become so unusually clever that they work their horses under cover of darkness, it is probable that the price of lanterns will move up a peg or two in that locality.

Mike Kelly overrated the speed of Geraldine, in the first race on Tuesday last. It is just as well to get the lead when you can, as to lay behind thinking you can catch up at any moment.

There will be some interesting races at Ione Valley on May 1st. The principal event will be a 600-yard dash between J. C. Morris' Nathan Coombs, J. Dillian's Emma Coombs, and C. F. Bunch's Wait a-bit Coombs.

I happened to tell a friend that the Czar should win the Tidal Stake with Don Jose second. The horses came in that way and every day since, I have been pestered with persons wanting tips on the various events. Such is luck.

All the Sacramento boys looked sick after the California Stakes; American Girl, as they call Whisban, being deemed a good thing. Albert Cooper who has just returned from Los Angeles said he only saved enough to pay forfeits.

Sam Bryant thinks he has the jockey of the future. His name is Robert Lee Richie, and only eleven years of age, and weighs about sixty pounds. He is as black as the ace of spades and has been riding since he was able to walk.

Some Eastern turf gossip is to the effect that George Hankin fancies he has the Suburban won with Terra Cotta. The horse is rapidly getting into condition and his trainer is confident that when fit he will have all his old-time speed.

Under the direction of Mr. Ariel Lathrop, sixty-two head of young colts and fillies were sent East from Palo Alto on Saturday last. A great many of the youngsters are the get of Electioneer. They will be sold in New York, on May 8th.

Immediately after the meeting of the Blood Horse Association Joe Marvin will return to Sheepshead Bay to join the Hearst stable. He has been telegraphed for by Matt Allen, who seems to have had trouble in securing a light weight jockey to take the place of Joe.

Mr. Corbitt informs me that the services of Guy Wilkes and Sable Wilkes have been in such demand that their books have been full for the past two months. The gentleman also states that a proposition was made to him to send Guy Wilkes back to Kentucky, and parties there would guarantee him a full complement of mares, at a service fee of $750 each.

The Lake County Examiner, of Lakeview, Oregon, comes to us this week fairly bristling with items about Al Farrow and his San Jose performance. In fact, it apologizes in the following manner: "This week's paper comes very near being an Al Farrow edition, but we think the most of our readers will like it."

Anent the Carillo and Brown case, the following from the New York Sporting World will not be out of place:

"That's a great horse of yours, Muddyear; he ought to win and make you lots of money."

Knap McCarthy has left Los Angeles for Indiana, with Geneva S., 2:19¼; Lena Wilkes, 2:29½; Rajah, 2:29¼; Sir Archie, (pacer); Lucy R. by Sultan; Cora Van Tassel; Cousin Joe, (pacer), and Waldo Johnson and Pearl Jennings, thoroughbreds. Mr. McCarthy is taking back Pearl Jennings for Ed Corrigan, of Chicago.

It is generally believed that Emotion will after the meeting be sent East to join the Haggin stable at Monmouth Park, and unless she goes wrong will surprise some of the crack sprinters before the racing season is over.

R. P. Ashe will in all probability be represented again on the Eastern tracks by six or seven horses. Geraldine and Flood Tide will of course be included in the starters, and possibly Mr. Ashe will pick up another or two outside his own stable at a reasonable figure.

Cy Mulkey turned up at the Bay District track last Monday, but finding no room he went across the Bay to Oakland. He will probably have a shy at the extra races next week with some of his string, who are doing nice work and are said to be very fit.

Two racing baronets in England, have started a £10,000 yearling book, on the derby of 1891. This kind of book used to be fashionable in the old days and generally resulted in the collapse of the layer: but it is so long since they were in vogue, that perhaps they may be more fortunate.

One of the reporters on a daily paper says, that from the appearance and time made by the Australian horse, it will not add to the boom on horses from the Antipodes. Yet the Australian horse was the raciest looking one of the lot, and on Wednesday morning had no trouble in going a full mile in 1:42.

Matt Storn came very near pulling off a nice coup with Kildare on Tuesday; everyone would have been delighted to see Matt make a winning, as he has had a hard enough time lately with his accident and Grover Cleveland, and Kildare's breeder, J. B. Chase, is one of the pleasant men in California to spend half an hour or so with.

There is a rumor quietly spreading among the well informed men about town that Capt. H. B. Blagrave (late of the Fairfax stable) has the refusal of the entire Winters string (seven horses) at $55,000. Whom the Captain is acting for, is not mentioned, though it is probably for one of the California Magnates, as Eastern racing men would not buy unseen, a large string at that figure.

A very interesting programme is issued by the Blood Horse Association for an extra day on Tuesday next, five races will be given, ⅝ for two-year-olds, 1¼ selling, 1⅛ mile for three-year-olds, 1½ mile for four-year-olds and upwards, and an owners handicap of one mile. Several outside horses will be here for the days racing which ought to be up to last weeks standard.

Billy Appleby had $60 on White Cloud at ten to one on Tuesday, and when asked how he dare back him, said, "Well, if he is worth training and starting, surely he is worth fifty or sixty. I can't afford to run horses that are unable to carry money." I wonder did he back Lady Helen. Tom Williams had a modest five each way. Hard luck for him not to have had a plunge on it, but who could?

Mr. L. J. Rose, of Los Angeles, has sold five sucking colts, four of which went to Mr. Outwaite, of Sierra Madra, and one to Dr. G. G. Green, of Philadelphia. Two of the first were by Stamboul, and two by Alcazar, the price for the four being $9,000. The one going East, is by Stamboul, dam Nava by Dictator, 2nd dam Belle Brasfield 2:20½. Dr. Green paid $5,000 for this grand colt.

The Rural Spirit sounds a note of alarm by stating that the big brown gelding Melrose by Sultan has been sold to Montana parties and his name will be changed, casting an insinuation that the change will be made to deceive the public. As John Green is at present at Butte City, it is to be hoped that he will notify the press of any change of name, if such is intended.

It was rather fortunate, all things considered, that Nancy did not run last Saturday, the bookmakers all bulletined her as carrying 112 pounds, while in reality she only had 100 up. Mr. Holly (her owner) said he knew what weight she would carry, and did not care a hang what weight the slates gave. A little more care and consideration might be shown (by the bookmakers) for the public.

Mr. Withers is reported as saying that the Sensation-Faverdale colt has been eating and doing well all winter, and is in better condition than ever before. If he retains his health and the speed which he showed last August and September, this fine son of Sensation will have troops of confident backers in every race in which he takes part this year, no matter what animal he may meet.

Willie Walker, the once famous jockey, who rode the world-renowned Ten Broeck in most of his great races, including many of his record ones, is now a trainer and owner. He has just bought The Lion from Milton Young for $1,500. The horse seems to have sold remarkably cheap, for he has worked a mile this season, with shoes on and weight up, in 1:46½.

Whatever may be Proctor Knott's condition, nothing can really be said of the horse until he makes his first appearance in the three-year-old form, and that will certainly be in the Two Thousand Stake at Nashville on May 2, and toward that race everybody interested in racing matters is now looking. Upon the gelding's performance there much depends. If he had little trouble in winning that stake it is generally understood that he will be a starter in the Derby the next week, and Bryant would have no difficulty in selling him for a fancy price.

The match race between Geraldine, Porter Ashe's mare, and Al Farrow, Tupper's bay horse, is not off, as several of the daily papers have stated, but will take place on the Bay District Track next Saturday. The attempt will then be made to beat Ten Broeck's record, and the weights are consequently calculated from his. Al Farrow will carry 104 pounds, and Geraldine 99, and with favorable weather and the track in as good conditon as it is now the record ought to be broken.

The starter is always at a great disadvantage in every meeting held on the Pacific Coast. The cause is evident, the boys know that they will not face the same starter again for nearly a year, and possibly not then, and consequently they take every advantage they can. Fines may be imposed, but when a boy is ordered to get off in front he will chance them, for if he wins they are easily paid, and if he loses the owner will generally pay them. This state of affairs might be avoided if all the racing and trotting associations in the State combined, and had one official starter who would take in every meeting he could possibly attend.

The Blood Horse Association ought to be able to stand the expense of printing the riders names on their official board, or at least pay a decent writer to chalk them up, for as it is no one on earth knows who is up on any particular horse.

Dan McCarty will start out this morning for New York, stopping off at Chicago, when Buchanan will take Sorrento, Tom Daly, Dochertz, Harry Mac, Pandora, Passadena and C. H. Todd to Louisville to rest up before the racing starts. Two carloads will follow shortly after—in fact as soon as they can be obtained—containing principally trotting stock, which will be sold in New York. Dan says 52 head will be shipped in the three consignments, among them being several very fast trotters liable to get well inside thirty any day, and considering that they are the pick of his lot (280 head) he ought to have a very successful sale.

Don Juan Bocau, who gave 6,000 guineas for Acme, has soon got part of his money back, as Acme won the Liverpool Spring Cup of £700, carrying 136 pounds, distance 1⅛ miles. The horse is heavily entered at Ascot, and will after meeting his engagements, be shipped to Buenos Ayres for stud purposes, and judging from his breeding and racing, he ought to be a success there. He is four years old, by Dutch Skater, he by Flying Dutchman out of Fulvie by Gladiator; his dam is Myra, by Doncaster out of Czarina by King Tom. Myra was one of the brood mares sold at the sale of the late Wm. Blenkiron, the well known breeder.

Racine, Palo Alto's crack two-year-old, is probably the best youngster that has ever been seen on the coast. His dam (imp.), Fairy Rose, is by Kisber, a Derby winner, out of Hippolyta, by King Tom (the half brother to Stockwell and Rataplan); his sire, Bishop, is by Shannon, dam Bettie Bishop, by imported Buckden, a son of Lord Clifden (by Newminster). If this is not royal breeding, what is? Possibly Racine's running may cause Bishop, who is now figuring at Clifton, Guttenberg and the various Eastern shady tracks, to have a well-earned rest in some good harem.

The Wood scandal in England, is practically ended. When the action was commenced Lord Durham pleaded justification and the case was adjourned until Easter, but did not come into court, as Wood withdrew from the action, paying his own costs. Under the circumstances, Lord Durham agreed to a "stet processus" being entered, paying his own costs, but not withdrawing anything that he said at the memorable Glincrack dinner, at New York, in 1887.

The Chetroynd-Durham case will probably be settled in the same way.

Wood, of course, is without a license to ride, and it is highly probable that he will never apply for one again.

Big Jim Garland had a dose of very bad luck on Tuesday last. In the first race, six furlongs, Emotion could not have lost had she been anywhere near White Cloud at the start. Jim took his medicine quietly, but when in the third race Wanderer 2nd was left at the post with his head the other way, then he did kick, and I am sure of one thing, he had at least the sympathy of every one on the ground, for a harder run of luck no man could have. On Thursday Wanderer again had a little the worst of the send off, and to finish the run of luck (bad, of course,) Emotion, at a starvation price, found the mile and three-eighths too far.

To show what the sire of Racine can do as a weight carrier, the following is the result of a race at Guttenburg Saturday, April 13th, of this year. What do you think of it?

Fourth Race—Purse $200, of which $50 to second; for all ages; 20 pounds above the scale; selling allowances. Seven furlongs.

After the Introduction Purse last Saturday, several ugly rumors were flying around about the running of Al Farrow; and in consequence of the publicity given in one of the Dailies to the drivelling remarks of the rider, thedirectors of the association held a meeting on Monday for the purpose of investigating the matter. A postponement was made until Tuesday night when Fred Carillo, the rider, and Jim Brown, the trainer, were ruled off the track, Mr. Tupper being exonerated from all connivance and participation in the alleged fraud.

Jim Brown at once demanded a rehearing of his share in the proceedings and it was decided to reopen the case, as far as he was concerned on Friday, the 26th, the result was not known when we went to press.

From personal observation I feel assured that the horse was fairly run out when he was passed by Brutus and Moses B., the pace and distance being too much for him when carrying the heavy weight of 117 pounds. With light weights he can stand his own against any horse in the country, but he does not relish carrying tons.

The ill luck of some owners is unpleasantly shown in the results on the English turf last year. "Mr. Abington's" Maynooth, which was the most heavily engaged two year old of the year and was entered in 68 races, only won an "overnight race worth £101. Helvellyn and Freemason, the property of the same gentleman, won nothing whatever during the season, though the former ran in 67 and the latter in 61 races. Mr. Benzon's Rigadoon was in 62 races, and won nothing. The Duke of Hamliton's Scottish Fusilier and Jummy had 102 engagements, and thellatter has won nothing, while the former has won £200. "Mr. Manton's" Devil's Dance, with 54 engagements, won £200.

This most interesting bit of gossip of the week touching the Suburban was the scratching of the imported horse Galore from that race, in which he was handicapped at 115 pounds, says the New York Times. No horse has been more curiously handled than he since his arrival in this country. Costing a thousand guineas, he was brought to this country and permitted to be banged around in a manner that was sufficient to ruin any racer, owing to the fact that his owner, Mr. Maxwell, had neglected to have any one at the steamer to receive and care for him immediately on his arrival. Then he was taken over to Long Island, where he had a bad attack of strangles, and came very near dying. He was, in fact, twice reported dead, a rumor which was again in circulation yesterday, but which had no foundation in fact. Quite recently the horse was put in the hands of W. L. Gilpin, who last season was trainer for Mrs. George L. Lorillard. Gilpin has probably discovered that there is no possibility of getting the horse into condition for a hard race by June, and so he has had him scratched, in order to prevent people from backing him in the ante-post betting, in which some one last week backed him for $50 to win $5,000.

The Pacific Incubator.

A pioneer in the fancy poultry interest advertises elsewhere the Pacific Incubator and Brooder, the simplest and most practical machine made for the artificial hatching of fowls. The Incubator Company, at 1329 Castro Street, Oakland, also offers every variety of land and water fowl, and poultry appliances. An illustrated circular may be had by enclosing a two cent stamp to the company.

Wire Netting.

A most useful application of the elegantly finished wire netting offered by Mr. Geo. B. Bayley, 210 and 212 Davis Street, San Francisco, is to kennel fencing. The netting is clean, handsome, durable, safe, and in every way desirable for poultry and rabbit-proof fencing, for cattle and division fences, and for any other use where light, easily erected and thoroughly good wire netting can be applied.

Only An Old Mare.

It is not uncommon to find a dog or a horse with intelligence above its kind in as marked a degree as the superiority of certain men over the common average. This, too, is aside from breeding, as the animal is often a mongrel, with no approach to a type or family. It does not follow that horses could be bred with a view to mental development with startling results; but thus far that does not seem to have been done, and the instances of which we speak were doubtless the result of accident—not that intelligence is ever the result of aggregated stupidity, but the mating of the given animals was done without such result in view. About thirty years ago an old Pennsylvania Dutch farmer named Conrad C——— lived in the western part of that state, several miles from the village where he did his trading. He owned an old black mare, which he always rode on his trips to town, and, being a sort of Tam O'Shanter, the old mare never carried home a sober load. Her care over her owner (for when he was drunk she furnished the sense for both) was remarkable. She would go up to a stump or a fence to enable him to climb on her back when he had great difficulty in managing himself, and would never start until he was in the saddle. When he would lean over her to the right or left she would move in that direction, and would actually strive to keep herself under him. If he fell off, which he often did, she would stand over him till help came or he got sober enough to rise. When she got him home she would whinny till some member of the household came out. She was a mare of spirit, too, and had the witches, like those of Kirk-Alloway, assailed her master, she would doubtless have carried him off with all the speed of the famous Maggie. She was known far and wide, and justly commanded a higher degree of respect than her master.—[Exchange.

Do Cockneys like Fighting?

London, April 6.—Trotting, although so popular in America, has never been really in favor in England, owing in part to the questionable practices with which it has been surrounded, and partly because fashion never lent its countenance to the amusement. It is not, however, unreasonable to assert that trotting, properly carried out, may do for our harness horses what racing and steeple chasing have done for our hunters. The National Trotting Association came to an end last year, and its decease may possibly prove to be the best thing that could have happened if trotting is to take a place in the list of English amusements. The old association stood in the way of many necessary reforms, but now that it is defunct a strenuous attempt is being made to place trotting upon a more satisfactory basis. The first step toward regeneration has been the formation ot the Alexandra Park Trotting Club, of which Sir Edward Lee is president. A new code of rules, formed upon the lines of those in vogue in America, has been drawn up, and includes some stringent provisions against those dishonest practices which in the past have done so much to bring trotting into disrepute. The new departure has been so far successful that 100 persons have joined the club, although its first meeting was held no longer ago than March 11. Six meetings will be held in the course of the forthcoming season; the first is fixed for May 6th and 7th, and will take place at Alexandra Park.

There are several circumstances which should combine to give trotting a chance of raising its head. In the first place, there are in England a great many Americans who doubtless bring over with them a love of the national sport, and would no doubt readily give its establishment some encouragement over here, if they be convinced of the bona fides of the new undertaking. Secondly, a knowledge of trotting, as practiced in America, is becoming more general among us; and without wishing to draw invidious class distinctions, there is now a chance of trotting being taken up by a more influential body than that which patronized it under the defunct National Trotting Association. Only a very short time ago pony and galloway racing was not much thought of, but the foundation of the society which has now taken it under its protection has brought a great change, and it is now a fashionable amusement. Moreover a large number of American trotters have recently been imported into England, and there is a proposal on foot to establish a permanent mart for them in London. In conclusion, therefore, it seems to us that a chance now presents itself for placing trotting on a satisfactory basis; and, remembering the late Hiram Woodruff's dictum that "the English have wasted an enormous sum of money by neglecting their trotters, the blood for which they had ready to hand," those who own fast trotting horses may now be induced to give the amusement a trial.—London Field.

Weak Foals.

The fact that a foal cannot stand during the first nine days after birth is not of itself evidence that the foal must die. If a colt does not stand soon after birth it is well to raise it to a standing position and teach it how to use its legs: If in doing this it is discovered that the colt is too weak to stand, the youngster should be rubbed with a woolen cloth, wet with quite warm water, every pint of which may contain about a tablespoon of alcohol, then rubbed dry, the operation being completed by brisk, but not harsh hand-rubbing. The colt should then be held up to the dam. If it stands, even though it need help, all will be well; but if it is still too weak to stand the dry hand-rubbing should be persisted in until it will stand alone. Of course the foal should be kept in a warm place, anything like a chill being likely either to kill it, or at least seriously interfere with its development. If in spite of this treatment foals die, there is some fault which must be corrected before birth. If the successive get of any horse or foals of any mare die in this way, such horse or mare should not be used for breeding purposes. [Horse Review.

Conducted by Thos. Bowhill, M. R. C. V. S.

Subscribers to this paper can have advice through this column in all cases of sick or injured horses or cattle by sending an explicit description of the case. Applicants will send their name and address that they may be identified. Questions requiring answers by mail should be accompanied by two dollars, and addressed to Dr. Bowhill, 1523 California St., San Francisco.

Please inform me in your next issue whether the big jaw in cattle is curable in its first stages? that is, before the sore is broken. If so, what treatment is required?

Answer.—Assuming by the term big jaw you mean enlargement of the jaw bones, I may state it is incurable in all its stages; but should the enlargement be between the jaws, and not affecting the bones, it can be cut out and good results obtained, but when the bones are affected treatment is useless.

THE GUN.

The Alameda County Sportsmen's Club meets this afternoon at Adam's Point.

Appreciative.

Editor Breeder and Sportsman.—I am this moment in receipt of a copy of the Breeder and Sportsman, and note your graceful paragraph anent myself. Of course it is gratifying to me, as it will be to the boys of the old club in Norwich, Conn., but it rather flutters the nerves to be ranked with the "cracks" in a country where so many crack shots are found. I'll be sure to miss my first five birds at San Bruno, in my anxiety to sustain my title. All the same, I hope to meet you there May 12th, and enjoy with you a California day of recreation, and, whether we score well or ill, we will at least have a good time.

Lincoln Gun Club.

The Lincoln Club grounds at Alameda, are so accessible and so nicely arranged as to make them a favorite gathering place for experts at artificial target practice with the shot gun. Stanley G. Scovern, an athlete who can stand any amount of hammering from a gun, and Mr. Robert Mellish tied for first, with 15 each and shot off at three pairs, Mr. Mellish winning. In the second class Messrs. Quinton and F. Venker tied on eleven, Mr. Venker winning on the shoot-off at five pairs, with eight breaks.

Wanton Killing of Game.

Editor Breeder and Sportsman:—Every lover of sport in fin and wing will cordially commend the remarks of P. J. Shafter in your paper of last week, in reference to the conduct of the class of thoughtless or reckless pursuers and slaughterers of game, who wantonly destroy all that comes in their way, and thereby disgrace the name of sportsman. These graceless, utterly selfish and marauding hunters of fish, flesh and fowl have no thought or care for any except themselves, for any who come after them, or for the due preservation of the noble and prized game which they pursue and kill in much the same temper as the savage pursues and kills the objects of his remorseless passion—only to gloat upon his prey, to satisfy his lust of feasting and gluttony, to enjoy a fresh scalp, and to boast of his disgusting exploiting. Their idea of a day's sport in field or stream is to kill everything and all of game species which happens in thoir butchering way, merely for the brag of the slaughter, graced only by the enjoyment of the stuffing at the table, which comes with the swilling and the boisterousness—as bandits of the field and buccaneers of the flood banquet after their deeds of pillage and enormities.

The true sportsman has conscience and regard for others. He enjoys the sport, and is mindful of the game. He kills according to his purpose and skill, and ceases without slaughter, for he keeps in mind that the game must be preserved so that others shall similarly enjoy and extermination shall not imperil perpetuation. The reckless hunter kills at every opportunity, or maims if he cannot kill, from wanton impulse. He finds he can kill beyond the capacity of bag or basket, revels in the slaughter which goes to waste, and has the shamelessness to play the Munchausen as he blusters his disgraceful exploit, the imitation of which by others of his kind destroys the game, and spoils good sport without benefit to any.

It is this wanton slaughter which has exterminated Buffalo from the great plains, driving elk and deer into inaccessible haunts, and impoverished the streams of their choicest species of the finny genus.

The native Californians before the American occupation slaughtered cattle for their hides and tallow, there was profit in the trade, and the cattle were innumerable. No other suffered by the indiscriminate slaughter. The Spanish cattle have disappeared. In the early gold period, deer and antelope were plentiful in California. There are deer in the mountains still, but the antelope is seen only in the menageries. Wild feathered game was abundant. Game laws have fairly preserved the choice species. But game laws more stringent are needed for the better protection of the fish—for the finer species in the smaller streams especially—against the wanton destruction by reckless fishers who are not anglers.

Thirty years ago, Oregon was the grandest country of the continent, in the abundance and the quality of its wild game of every genus—elk and deer, feather and fin. In the hills and fields were splendid pheasants and grouse; quail were plentiful; in the river bottom lands and marshes snipe of finest species and game birds of every kind abounded. In the rivers and smaller streams were salmon, trout and other varieties of choice table fish. Of this vast abundance Oregon has now only a fraction left in most parts of the State. Elk are very rare and seldom found. Black tail deer have almost disappeared, and the less prized species are hardly plentiful. The native pheasant and the grouse are rarely met with, and snipe are quite a curiosity.

The lack of timely game laws caused this extermination and decimation. The first game law introduced in the Territorial Legislature in 1857, was defeated, the proposition to establish a close season was strenuously opposed by the members from the rural districts who were largely in the majority.

"What!" broke forth the foremost spokesman of this element, "stop a man from shooting pheasant and grouse, quail in the mating season, or on the ground or fences, male or female—whatever time or which ever way man can shoot them easiest? It is outrageous and against the rights and liberty of a citizen. Why, Mr. Speaker, I can't shoot a bird no other way. I haven't got no shot gun; mine is a rifle, and the damned things are mighty hard to shoot when they are flying. I shoot them every time I can, and its only when they are setting that I can hit them. The bill is an outrage and ought not to pass."

It did not pass, this kind of argument killed it, as its advocates killed the game—"setting." Not until Oregon became a State and years subsequently, when the necessity for a game law had become generally apparent, was a law of the kind enacted, and that of so imperfect a nature as to make it quite inoperative. But a better and adequate game law has been in force for some years, and Oregon is recovering from the wanton and indiscriminate slaughter of game which had so much prevailed. Parties were addicted to destroying trout and other fish by throwing poison berries in the streams, and some to the use of giant powder, killing hundreds, merely for the "sport." This sort of sport is now criminally punished, as it should be in every land, and again the waters of Oregon afford good angling for the sportsman and epicure

The thing to do in California is the rigid eforcement of the game law in every part of the State, as to fur, feather and fin alike; and thus early in the season the preparation for this should be made, for the surer and better preservation of all kinds of wild game.

The Gun Club.

The Gun Club returned to Adam's Point for its April meeting on Saturday last, the ground at Klinknerville having such a dark back ground as to make it unavailable. The meeting was a pleasant one, fifteen gentlemen entering, and most of them scoring well, although some got but nine who usually do better.

At 12 birds, Hurlingham. For club prizes.

Blue and White Cranes Protected.

Mr. J. K. Orr sends the following query, which it is a pleasure to answer. The query came to him originally:

FRIEND ORR:—Mr. Beckwith said yesterday that he is informed that a law recently passed makes it a midemeanor to kill blue or white cranes, $50 fine, etc. Will you kindly let me know if such is the case, and I will let Paine know at once, as that is the very business he wants soon to go at. I don't know where to go for the information, and I deem it very important for him to know, so appeal to you to find out and let me know. G. G. BURNETT.

Answer.—Assembly Bill No. 171, introduced by Mr. McKeown of Alvarado, passed both houses, was signed by Governor Waterman, and is now the law. The intent of the act, is to assist in protecting the levees which have been erected about tule and swamp lands. Gophers and other rodents do much injury to the levees, and as cranes catch a great many of the pests the bill seems to be a good and sound one. It is in the following words:

AN ACT.

TO PREVENT THE CAPTURE AND DESTRUCTION OF BLUE CRANES IN THIS STATE.

The people of the State of California, represented in Senate and Assembly, do enact as follows:

SECTION. 1. Any person or persons who shall willfully and knowingly shoot, wound, trap, snare, or in any other manner catch or capture any blue crane in the state of California, or shall knowingly take, injure, or distroy the nest of any [white or] blue crane, or shall take, injure, or distroy any blue crane's eggs, in the nest or otherwise, in said State, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof before any Justice of the Peace of the township in which the offence shall have have been committed, shall be fined in a sum not less than fifty dollars nor exceeding one hundred dollars, and the cost of the action for each offense, or may be imprisoned not less than fifty days nor more than one hundred days, or by such fine and imprisonment, as the the judgment of the court may direct.

SEC. 2. Of all fines collected under the provisions of this Act, one half shall be paid to the informer or informers, and one half shall be paid into the County Treasury for the benefit of the Common School Fund.

SEC. 3. This Act shall take effect and be in force from and after its passage.

CANOEING.

Oakland Canoe Club.

There was a large attendance at the boat house last Sunday in anticipation of the quarterly race for the Mayrisch badge. The trophy was held by Mr. G. Wright, of the Shadow, who secured it by a walk-over last time, all the rest returning on account of lack of wind. The time set for the start was two o'clock, but the breeze was so light it was resolved to wait an hour in hopes of an improvement. About three the summer trade wind in a mild form put in an appearance, and the judge immediately called for the contestants to get within the line. A poor start was made, Mystic and Frolic being left some one hundred yards in the rear, but as the race to a large extent lay between them, it did not so much matter. Before the stake was reached these two canoes showed at the head of the fleet, Mystic rounding first, followed by Frolic some thirty yards behind. The breeze now freshened, and it was a pretty sight to see the fleet working to windward, every skipper hanging well out to hold up his racing sails. In the second tack Frolic was to windward of Mystic, and soon took a long lead. Pirate and Gypsy had it neck and neck for some time, and later, when Mystic got into trouble on the mud, she was over-taken by them. In the meantime Frolic got into the doldrums near home, which enabled the fleet to reduce her lead a little, but she came in an easy winner three and one-half minutes ahead of Gypsy. Mystic and Pirate had a tremendous struggle for third place, the Pirate getting it by one-half minute. The following are the times and expired times:

Start, 2:52.		Expired Time.
Frolic	3:45	53
Gypsy	3:48½	56½
Pirate	3:51	60
Mystic	3:51½	60½

THE KENNEL.

Dog owners are requested to send for publication the earliest possible notices of whelps, sales, names claimed, presentations and deaths in their kennels, in all instances writing plainly names of sire and dam and of grandparents, colors, dates and breed.

It has been decided to hold a public auction of all dogs shown at the P. K. C. show on May 22nd, which owners desire to have sold. The auction will occur on the last evening of the show and will be a most favorable opportunity to dispose of good specimens. The inquiry for premium lists indicates general interest in the show which promises to be a very large one.

Readers are again urged not to overlook the advertisement of the Pacific Coast Field Trial Club which appears elsewhere. Entries enough have already been made to insure a rich and interesting stake, but there are very many first class young setters and pointers which have not been entered. No entry bearing a post mark later than May 1st., can be received.

"The Elms" Kennels, of Forest Lake, Minnesota, advertise English setters, Pointers, Irish Water Spaniels, Great Danes and St. Bernards of the purest and best Field Trial and show winning blood. The kennels are located in a country particularly well adapted to the development of good sporting breeds, and St. Bernards, and local buyers can save much in express charges by purchasing in Minnesota instead of at points further East.

Judge C. N. Post has been in San Francisco for a week on business, but has found time to lighten this editiosial den on several occasions. A more charming raconteur or more thoroughly posted fancier of English setters we do not recall, and his visits are highly appreciated, despite the heated arguments which always ensue. He has several entries for the field trial Derby of considerable promise.

Mr. J. Martin Barney offers through the advertising columns two Tom Pinch-Galatea pointer puppies. The offer is one that should arrest the attention of all who contemplate buying dogs of the breed. Tom Pinch is the best-looking pointer on the Pacific Coast, and, in the opinion of John Davidson, is fit for competition with any pointer he ever saw. His breeding is fashionable. The dam Galatea shows as much quality as ever was done up in pointer form, and is, to our notion, even better bred than Tom for field uses. It is to be regretted that Mr. Barney feels compelled to part with his Derby entries, but his misfortune must result in gain to the fortunate purchasers. Both puppies should be entered in the Derby.

Mr. A. B. Truman has established the Elcho Kennels at 1425 Steiner Street, San Francisco. He was formerly on Bush Street, but needed more room, and at his present location he has secured ample scope both for the care of his present stud of superb Irish setters and pointers, and for growth. The kennel yard proper is very large, and he controls in addition a large sand lot immediately to the rear, where his dogs can romp and exercise. A recent visit impressed us with the idea that Mr. Truman has as good arrangements and takes as good care of his dogs as anybody we know. They are clean, sound and lively, and are just now being put into that faultless condition in which he always shows them, for exhibition at the P. K. C. show.

A recent visit to the kennels of Mr. Wm. DeMott near San Rafael, in company with Messrs. Osborne and Potter, Judge Post and Mr. Tom Burns, took on the character of a delightful picnic. The company was anything but austere, and a lovely day, heightened spirits, already well up. The kennels are placed in a most suitable spot, about a mile from San Anselmo Station, on the North Pacific Coast Railroad. The place is perfectly adapted for such uses, there being shade, dry ground and running water. There are twenty-eight dogs in the yards, most of them in fine shape. Mr. DeMott has wisely adopted the yard system, and none of his dogs are left to mope on chain. High enclosures of clean wire netting serve to confine the dogs safely while they can see all about them on all sides. Mr. DeMott as a pains-taking man who is devoted to his charges and his business of training shooting dogs, and he will undoubtedly turn up a splendid string of cracks for the next field trials. No pleasanter way to spend an afternoon can be imagined than to visit his place.

Sales.

Mr. Geo. Muller, San Francisco, English setter puppies by Toot—Ophelia.

To L. J. Ruffino, two dogs, one white and orange, the other white and black.

Death of Judge Leavesley.

Mr. Francis Edward Noyes Leavesley, more generally known to Californians as "Judge Leavesley," died at Gilroy on April 21st, the cause being pneumonia. Mr Leavesley was an octogenarian, but preserved his faculties to the last. He came to the state by sailing vessel from England in 1849, and for many years shot for market in the counties about San Francisco, being quite successful. About 1855 he entered upon the training of shooting dogs, and followed the business up to the time of his death, with varying fortune, but without ever reaching a commanding position as a breaker. Being the only professional breaker for many years a large number of fairly good dogs naturally passed under his supervision, and he turned out several that were satisfactorily broken. In later years he became more or less indifferent to the need of care in breeding and preserving the breeding of his dogs. Judge Leavesley was a man of considerable force and if he had not in earlier years been soured and estranged he would undoubtedly have reached a noteworthy position in literary pursuits. Intended for the law, he received a good preliminary education, but on leaving England he put aside all books but one, and to his dying day abstained from general reading, confining his studies to Shakespeare, of whose writings he was the most thorough student we have ever known. He thought in Shakespearean phrases, and some of his contributions to this journal were little else but aptly joined quotations from his favorite author. He exemplified the breadth and grasp which close study of such a master of all arts can confer. Personally, Judge Leavesley was a bright, keen, witty, alert and likeable man, and he leaves many sincere friends to mourn his passage into the place of waiting.

Unfortunate!

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—I have had some more of my luck this morning. My mastiff bitch got to the fox terrier puppies and killed four out of the six. They were the prettiest litter I ever saw. JAMES E. WATSON.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—I find in your good paper of the 20th inst., a letter from M. P. McKoon to me which reflects on E. Cohoon as a breeder of cocker spaniels. Its rather amusing to find the old gent's jealous bump so easily stirred up. Its very easy to make a mistake in a letter or figure so a date or a word will sound different from the real meaning. He has very little faith in Cohoon to think he would give a wrong date or to breed a bitch out of proper season.

I purchased these two bitches, Cherry and Vic, on March 4, 1889, so you can see I had nothing to do with the breeding. I will say if Mr. McK. has or raises any finer, healthier or cleaner cocker puppies than these that Cherry and Vic has, he failed to send them to me, for I paid for four, but seen three; one he said died from eating gravel after it was six weeks old, (but I paid him for it). He is aware I have three of the finest cocker bitches in America, and that is what makes him feel bad.

Enclosed please find the pedigree that came with these bitches.

Pet H. by Col. Stubbs—Beauty. Beauty by Flirt—Grip. Hoping this will satisfy my friend.

A. C. DAVENPORT.

STOCKTON, Aprrl 22, 1889.

"Cherry, liver with white marks; bitch; whelped Oct. 27, 1887; breeder E. Cohoon, Franklyn, N. Y.; by Capt. Stubbs, A. K. R. 5964, out of Flossy C. by Dan—Nelly C. by Sport—Curly. Dan by Ned—Rena. Capt. Stubbs by Col. Stubbs, out of Maud by Sam—Daisy. Col. Stubbs by Captain—Flirt. With pup by Jet; due to whelp March 25th to 27th.

Vic, liver and white breast; bitch; whelped Oct. 25, 1887; breeder E. Cohoon, Franklin, N. Y; by Jet out of Beauty by Brag out of Daisy C. by Imp. Racer—Nellie C. Brag by Wildair—Little Butterfly. Jet by Wildair, out of Bird by Treat's Jack—Imp. Topsy. Wildair by Whitman's Doctor—Waddell's Josie. Due to pup March 21st to 23d."

Both certified to have been purchased from Mr. E. Cohoon, Franklin, N. Y., on March 4, 1889.—KEN. ED.

The Chicago Fox Hunt.

Chicago has decided to celebrate Washington's Birthday by following the hounds in an imitation fox hunt. Six months ago the leaders in her best society ceased stamping the little tin pails of lard turned out at their refineries with the familiar porker's profile, but instead emblazoned thereon a lion rampant, says the New York Tribune. It was clear from that moment that American ideas and institutions were doomed in Chicago-by-the-Lake.

We are assured that the most extensive preparations are being made for the meet. Chicago, however, keeps in view the fact that discretion has long been recommended as being the most desirable part of valor, and is determined to take no risks.

To this end we are told, those having the matter in charge, "after an earnest consultation, have determined to have no jumps or obstacles of any kind on the course," even if it somewhat mars the effect, the committee being "fearful of the consequences." All dangerous American barbed wire fences, sign boards, trees, bushes, stones, and other objects are being carefully removed from the course, which will be twelve miles straight-away, and the farmers along the route will be requested to keep in their cows, hogs, and poultry on the day of the meet. The committee hates to take these precautions, but the consequences hang over it by a single hair, and render it fearful.

Various other precautionary measures are under consideration by the committee, and may be adopted. A plan for strewing the course thickly with feather beds, spring mattrasses, and so forth, to ward off, in a measure, the "consequences," has been suggested, but it is thought that the cost will be too great. It is believed that by strapping pillows to various parts of the persons of the riders, practically the same results may be reached at only a fraction of the expense. The idea of strapping each rider firmly to his horse met with no approval except among some of the more timid; but a novel plan has been proposed in its place, and will probably be carried out. Each rider will wear a jacket which will be short enough so that as he sits on his horse the lower edge of it will be some six inches from the cantle of the saddle.

The jacket edge will then be fastened to the saddle by a half dozen stout six inch spiral springs. This, it is thought, will insure great safety and leave the intrepid follower of the hounds ample freedom of motion. In case the horse falls, takes an imaginary hedge, or otherwise becomes highly unpleasant for a Chicago man, the rider will simply fly up into the air a foot or two and be drawn back quickly and surely to the padded saddle. On Washington's birthday Chicago will be in the saddle, and retained there most of the time by strong steel springs.

The hounds will be procured from Detroit. A man from Oshkosh attempted to foist some of his hounds on the committee, but the manifest superiority of Detroit hounds, coming, as they do, from so near British territory, being pointed out, the gentleman from Wisconsin did not get a bid. The committee politely but firmly advised him to take his sample dog back to Oshkosh. Whether or not semi-English horses will also be used is not stated, but it seems probable that they will.

The 22d of February promises to be a most remarkable day for Chicago. Laying aside any little animosities which may have been engendered among her society leaders by surreptitious cutting in the price of leaf lard and side pork, they will mount their spirited bobtailed horses and dash away along the picturesque lake front twelve miles straight toward Milwaukee. With the gamey anise seed bag disappearing on the horizon, the Detroit hounds in full cry, the resolute Chicago riders clinging to the pommels of their saddles with the strength of desperation, and a physician stationed every half mile to render assistance it needed, the scene will be worth a long journey to witness. We wish the meet every success possible, and "no consequences."

Late Importations of Trotters.

The purchases of trotting stock lately made in the East for California appear to some as on a par with "sending coals to Newcastle." There are some grounds for the comparison, as trotting stock is quite plentiful here, but benefits are to be derived from obtaining new strains or superior individuals of families which are fully represented. A positive outcross is difficult to obtain where the recognized trotting families are depended upon to perpetuate the race. That the Hambletonian class is entitled to the first place among all the tribes of trotters will be generally admitted, the second position is not so easily determined. Mambrino Chief and Clay, if put to the test of a popular vote, would run so close that the last ballots would have to be counted before an authoritative settlement could be reached, while Pilot, Morgan, Bashaw, Blackhawk, Champion, Hiatoga and others would get a prominent place in the estimation of a goodly number of the admirers of fast trotting.

While there is little doubt of all the purchases lately made in the East by California breeders being valuable, that of B. C. Holly was assuredly a happy choice. So far as we know there was only one stallion by Kentucky Prince in this State before the importation of Mountain Boy. That is Dexter Prince, and his colts are of more than ordinary promise. Rarely bred, being from a sister to Dexter, it would have been somewhat anomalous if the get of Dexter Prince did not show a good deal of merit, though a majority of trotting horse breeders would prefer the maternal line of Mountain Boy. His dam is a sister to Elaine, Prospero, Dame Trot, and two others in the 2:30 list, and consequently his grandam is the dam of Electioneer. The near crosses are not the only remarkable feature in the pedigree, though these approach the phenomenal. The sire, Kentucky Prince, has eleven representatives with records from 2:12 to 2:19½, three of them inside of 2:20, and the paternal grandsire, Clark Chief, though he died young, has six representatives in 2:30 or better. The maternal grandsire, Messenger Duroc, has 15 in the list, and the grandam, Green Mountain Maid, has six which have beaten 2:30, and another with a record of 2:32. Were all the near kin of Mountain Boy which have trotted in 2:30 sought for the list would be a wonderful exhibition of family speed.

Not the least surprising of all the notable features is the combination of blood in one animal which is found in Mountain Boy. In the third remove are Mambrino Chief, Morgan Eagle, Hambletonian and Harry Clay while back of that there are several lines tracing to Mambrino, the horse which in our opinion has done more for fast trotting than all the other sons of Messenger or as might be stated with sound argument to sustain it, with such a vast number of fast trotting descendants as to practically cover the whole list.

When blood lines are the test there will be comparatively few who will not coincide in the statement that the purchase by Mr. Holly was "judgmatical," and those who have seen him also agree in pronouncing him a horse of high form and with "perfect action."

The old adage that "blood is blood but form is superiority," is rather clumsily put though conveying valuable information. Form and action are the two most essential points in choosing a sire. There should be the addition of blood or pedigree, whichever it may be called, for high excellence in the progeny cannot be reasonably expected without the union, but if either is lacking, our preference would be for animals which had individual merit, if even there was a tinge of plebian in their parentage.

We have heard Mountain Boy described as a horse 15½ hands, in ordinary condition, weighing 1100 pounds, and as might be looked for from height and weight, of great muscular power. He is dark brown with tan-colored flanks and muzzle, and bears a strong resemblance to Uncle Electioneer. Whether Harry Clay or Shanghai Mary had the most to do in fixing the type of the descendants of Green Mountain Maid can only be conjecture, so the fairest verdict will be to credit both. Judging from Elaine, Electioneer and his progeny, there is a distinct departure from the usual type of the descendants of Hambletonian. There is a higher finish, more quality to use an expressive term, and as the combination of Clay and Hambletonian in Stamboul, the son of Sultan and Fleetwing, has produced a like result, it is not out of the way for the admirers of the Clay tribe to urge the claims of their favorite. That Mountain Boy will be a valuable acquisition to the trotting stock of California is beyond question, and that his owner will give him an opportunity is also assured. Mr. Holly has a number of the right kind of mares to couple with his horse, and as his future operations in horse breeding will be mainly restricted to the production of fast trotters, we hope that all the thoroughbred mares in his stud will be coupled with Mountain Boy. The success which has followed the mating of Electioneer with thoroughbred mares is an augury that his near relative will also do well, especially when form and action are so nearly alike. That valuable animals will come from the mixture there is scarcely any doubt, that a fair proportion of fast trotters will likewise be a return is nearly as certain.

Pacific Coast Trotting-Horse Breeder's Association.

There was abundant evidence at the meeting which was held on the 19th inst., that the Pacific Coast Trotting-Horse Breeder's Association had received a favorable start.

Eleven directors were elected, and their names, which appear on another page, are sufficient guarantee that the affairs of the association will be properly managed. The attendance was large enough to show that there was a general interest in the organization, and this is conformed by the number of members already obtained. The low charge for membership, $25, and with annual dues placed at $5, there are good reasons for the belief that the roll will soon show many hundred names. This will depend, however, on the bearing the by-laws will have on entrance to purses and nominations in stakes. Several propositions were presented, and with advocates for them all. Probably a full majority were in favor of restricting both to members, while others would embrace in eligibility the get of stallions owned by members.

Not having the proceedings of the meeting before us at the time of writing, we are in doubt whether the resolution offered by Mr. Hatch, and which was carried, made eligibility dependent on membership or included the other clause, though to the best of our recollection the right to make entries was confined to members.

There was not a dissenting voice when the resolution was offered that parties living outside of the Pacific Coast should have the privilege without being members of the association. The simple method of overcoming the difficulty appears to be the best, and when membership is so easily obtained, it cannot be considered a hardship. If broader ground is covered there will not be the same desire to join, and should the right to enter be acquired by owning a colt which was got by a stallion owned by a member there would still be a curtailment of the list. It might be advisable to make a distinction between purses and stakes, the object being to provide for probable contingencies. That stakes will be usually adopted is altogether likely, but there may be instances when purses will have to be added to make the programme complete, and also necessary to get them up at short notice in order to take the place of stakes which have lapsed at the last moment. There would be a manifest advantage then in making entries "open," confining nominations to members.

A novel proposition was offered and carried, so novel that it is doubtful if there is a precedent in the history of either trotting or racing. That was that a person should acquire the privilege of naming a stake either after himself or a horse on the payment of $300, to be added to the stake which he christened. This will be akin to the practice which prevails in some of the European states of selling titles of nobiliety, and when a person thinks that there is either profit or notority to reemburse him for the outlay, the treasury of the association will be that much "ahead." Whether the accretion will make amends for the innovation is somewhat doubtful.

As a rule stakes are named after men on account of their prominence in turf and trotting circles, or from some connection with the sport. The main idea is that it shall be an acknowledgement of meritorious services, a desire to present a token of esteem and respect, a public recognition of worth, an honor on both sides. But make it an article of purchase and there is little honor left. The association loses its dignity when it stands in the position of a mendicant soliciting purchasers for that which should be above barter and sale; the acceptor exhibits a singular desire to place his name before the public when it is well known that it is a paid for "ad," notoriety in place of celebrity being the return for the investment. There may be a spice of fun, however, which will partially repay for the surrender of the standing of the association.

There are to be no restrictions further than the payment of three hundred dollars. Any one can deposit the amount and claim the reward.

Testimonials in big letters across the poster will be sure to attract attention, while other conspicuous head lines may be in euphorious unison and the Warping Bar's Cup, the Gambler's Ghost Offering, stand out in bold relief as the great events of the Pacific Coast Trotting Horse Breeder's Association.

Though the title seemed appropriate when the project was first agitated, from the present outlook there appears to be a necessity for change and that the elimation of horse breeders will be an improvement. In order to obtain a membership which would insure success it was good policy to open the doors so as to include all who have an inclination for trotting horses, or fondness for track sports. Not one in twenty, perhaps, of the ultimate membership which can be classed as trotting horse breeders, and yet just as valuable to the association as those who have big establishments.

There is a necessity for a wider field of action than could be properly termed an association of trotting horse breeders. There is the future to provide for as well as the present, and a good prospect that ere many years this Coast will demand an organization outside of the Eastern association. With thousands of miles between the eastern boundary of this country and the centers of the oriental district, there is small likelihood of being properly represented, and when questions have to be settled, especially those depending upon oral testimony, there are obstacles in the way which are nearly insurmountable.

The stakes to which the association will open for decision this year elicited a good deal of discussion. The necessity of keeping up the National Trotting Stallion Stake was generally conceded. Still there are difficulties in the way of duplicating the stake of last year. Stamboul will be likely to deter others from coming in, and a bar of any description will be a bad precedent. The owner of Stamboul, however, is a gentleman of so much public spirit that in all probability he would cheerfully agree that Stamboul should not be in the way, and that arranged there should be no trouble in obtaining a full list of nominations. A smaller stake than was required last year will meet the wishes of a majority of stallion owners, and one of $500 each, with a first payment of $100, or a second of $150, and a third of $250, ensure a large number to accept the engagement. The Primary and Junior Stallion Stakes should not be permitted to lapse, and to make the list complete one for four-year-old stallions should be gotten up. If we were asked to name the class which gave the greatest promise of good sport in California this year, there would be no hesitancy in saying four-year-old stallions. While Direct had the call over his three-year-old contemporaries, there were so many only a shade behind that he will be a wonderfully lucky colt to retain the supremacy. It also appears proper to make different class for three and four-year-olds. That is to have a sufficient number of stakes for each age to give all a chance, and to do that three may be required. For instance, one free for all of the stipulated age, one for three year-old stallions, and one for all three year-olds which are eligible under specified conditions.

That the new association will give due consideration to all these points, "goes without saying," and though it cannot be expected that all the machinery will be in perfect running order this season, from the character of those who have been placed in charge, ultimate success is assured.

P. C. T. H. B. A.

On Friday evening, April 19th, the first regular meeting of the Pacific Coast Trotting Horse Breeder's Association met at the Palace Hotel to elect directors and further the interests of the society by establishing stake races for trotters. Mr. J. H. White, of Sonoma Co., who was elected president at the last meeting, occupied the chair. Many queries having been made as to the object of the association, it will be in order to give one clause from the by-laws:

The association shall have for its object the encouragement of the breeding of the highest type of the trotting horse, the elevation of the standard of the trotting turf and the prevention, detection and punishment of frauds thereon.

A large number of gentlemen were present from all over the State, and great interest was manifested in the proceedings. The first business before the meeting being the election of a Board of Directors. On motion the following gentlemen were selected to fill the positions: L. H. McIntosh, Chico; L. U. Shippee, Stockton; H. M. LaRue, Sacramento; F. L. Coombs, Napa; J. H. White, Sonoma Co.; R. T. Carroll, Oakland; N. T. Smith, San Francisco; W. H. Hobart, San Francisco; D. J. Murphy, Milpitas; M. Saulsbury, Pleasanton; L. J. Rose, Los Angeles.

On motion a committee on by-laws and constitution was selected, the following gentlemen agreeing to serve: Wilfred Page, F. W. Loeber, F. H. Burke, W. E. Green and W. Corbitt.

After the election of this committee a sort of "good of the order" discussion ensued, several of the members expressing their views as to the best methods of increasing interest in the association. The opinion was unanimous that the successes of last year should be perpetuated by establishing a grand National Stallion Stake and also National Colt Stakes. The Board of Trustees have the matter in charge, and will shortly announce the stakes and conditions. It was decided that the initiation fee should be $25, and the annual dues $5.

A resolution was passed, the purport of which was that only members of the association should be allowed to make entries in the stakes, except in the case of persons who do not live on the Pacific Coast, they being given the privilege to make entries. As the admission fee is so very small, the resolution should not discourage small breeders, and it will tend to build up this infant Association to very large proportions. The new Board of Directors held a meeting last night, but at too late an hour for us to give any particulars.

D. J. K., Haywards.

Will you please state in your next issue the breeding of Honest John and Billy Cheatham; also their records, if any, as I have a mare sired by the former and her dam by the latter?

Answer.—There have been two Honest Johns in California, one brought here from the East in 1854; he was by Long Island Black Hawk. There was another horse of the same name that trotted about 1877 in this State. We do not know his pedigree. He has a record of 2:44. Billy Cheatham was a running horse, by Cracker, dam Lucy by Mingo.

H. H., Cedarville.

The man that owned Gilpatrick was named O'Brien, who now lives at Mr. Carroll's, Bodega, Sonoma Co. He may be able to give you the information you desire in reference to the horse.

Geo. L. Wolf:

Will you please answer me the following question as early as convenient. If a jockey rider is ruled off for one year on the Stockton track and the time has not expired, does it prevent him from riding races in Honolulu at the present time. This jockey I refer to, is in the Hawaiian Islands, and has chances to ride and would like to do so without trouble. By answering you will greatly oblige.

Answer.—If the Stockton Association have notified the directors of the Kapiolana Park, of the suspension of the jockey they will not allow him to ride. If, however, they have had no official notification, no objection would be sustained.

James McCaw:

Will you please give through the columns of your valuable paper the pedigree and record of Dexter's Prince trotting stallion.

Answer.—Dexter Prince, by Kentucky Prince, dam Lady Dexter by Hambletonian 10 2nd dam, Clara by Seeley's American Star. He is not in the 2:50 list.

B. W. Spear, Los Angeles.

Would you please find pedigree of the old trotting mare Lucy Allen; about twelve years old, and I think sired by Niagara, record 2:26. She was out of a Patchen mare. If you can give me any information about this Lucy Allen; stands about 16 hands high, weight about 1,100, and dapple bay?

Answer.—We do not know the mare.

Coney Island Jockey Club.

The Futurity and Realization Stakes.

The attention of breeders is called to the advantage of entering for these stakes, wherein, by assuming an almost nominal liability, the produce of their farms becomes eligible for the greatest two and three years old stakes in the world. In stakes generally, according to the rules of racing, whenever a horse is sold with his engagements, the original nominator continues to be liable for the whole stake, should his transferee default. This fact tends to discourage breeders and owners from making heavy engagements, as the rule applies to all races when no special provision is made to the contrary.

In these stakes, however, it is provided: "That, by filing with the Coney Island Jockey Club an accepted transfer of the foal's entry, the original subscriber will be released from any liability as to the engagements of said entry, except as to the first forfeit of $25, leaving the purchaser liable for the same unless duly struck out."

Thus the breeder, by availing himself of this clause, and insisting that when he sells a colt a transfer be filed as above provided, will avoid all liability beyond that of $25 in each case, and for even this $25 is only liable in case the party he sells to should default. If the colt be worthless, he can strike him out, pay $25, and end all liability.

The foal entries for the realization of 1892 closes July 15th, 1889.

The Inaugural Realization, to be run July 2d of this year, will be worth over $40,000.

The First Futurity was worth over $46,000.

The Second Futurity, to be run at the coming fall meeting, will be worth over $60,000.

Auction Sales.

We have received from Messrs. Killip & Co. the catalogues of two sales to be held at the Bay District track. The first sale will be held next Friday (May 3rd) and the catalogue includes trotters, roadsters, workhorses and Shetlands. They are the property of Mr. J. B. Haggin, and it is superfluous to say anything more after mentioning the name of the well-known Rancho Del Paso breeder. The sale will take place at 10 o'clock.

The second sale will take place on May 16th, and consists of Galloway, Durham, Devon and Polled-Angus cattle from the farm of the late Seth Cook, the well known breeder and importer. Several of the entries were imported from Scotland and have been procured at great expense; others have been brought from the Eastern States, and taken altogether, such a collection of thoroughbred cattle has hardly ever been seen in the State before, and all cattle breeders should attend the sale and thus get a chance to improve their herd swhile they have a chance.

Sale will take place at 11 A. M.

There will be sold at auction at Menlo Park, on May 18th, several head of horses, the property of Mr. F. H. Burke. Nearly all are well bred Normans, principally yearlings and two-year-olds with several colts; two teams of five to seven-year-old heavy mares; well matched heavy grays equal to any draught; and a three and two-year-old trotting horse. Carriages will meet the early trains, and in the morning all farming implements will be offered, the horses being put up at 1 P. M. A substantial collation will be spread on the grounds, and every attention and courtesy will be shown intending purchasers.

We published on the last page of our issue of the 20th, the advertisement of Messrs. Briggs, Ferguson & Co., announcing the immense sale of real estate to be held at Merced on the 6th, 7th, 8th, 9th, 10th and 11th of May. This sale not only by the length of time it is to last, but in the magnitude of its offerings will beyond the shadow of a doubt far eclipse any sale ever held, not only in California but the United States.

It is the plan of the promoters of the Canal and Irrigation Co. to utilize their water largely for manufacturing purposes, which can be done without any loss for irrigating purposes. It is expected that by this advantage and the fact that the railroad passes directly through the place, quite a manufacturing town will be built up at Merced.

A number of centers for separate colony enterprises have been laid out at points surrounding Merced, and at distances varying from two or three to six or seven miles from the town. There has already been quite an active inquiry for lands in these colonies, which are being disposed of in blocks of 10, 20 and 40 acres or more.

The varied advantages have formed the inducement which has recently attracted so much attention to Merced, and which has created such a desire to invest in town lots and blocks at what must in the early future become an important center of business for the large and industrious population which will soon occupy the six or eight miles square or more surrounding the present town.

When the intention of the promoters of these varied enterprises was made known through the newspaper notices, advertisements, posters, etc., so great an interest was created that what was at first expected to turn out only an ordinary sale became the largest and most remunerative auction sale which ever took place at any interior point in the State. This was made possible from the fact that capitalists some days before the sale went to Merced, looked over the country carefully and satisfied themselves fully with regard to the future possibilities and probabilities of that growing town. The value of town lots and blocks were estimated by a careful examination of the farms, colony tracts and other outside lands in the surrounding country, for which there could be no other possible business center than the present town of Merced.

Much credit is due to the indefatigable energy and skill of Briggs, Fergusson & Co., real estate agents of this city, who have the sole charge of promoting and managing this important sale. Judicious advertising in honest and reliable phrases and through the medium of well known journals, with straightforward and manfully fair dealings at the sale, together with the intrinsic merits of the property, will lead to a success which will more than double the results that have been expected from the enterprise by those who were most largely interested in the outcome. We understand that Messrs. Briggs, Fergusson & Co. contemplate other important sales in the near future, of which we shall from time to time inform our readers.

Mr. H. R. Brown, San Francisco, pointer Donna Sensation (Sensation—Seph G), whelped April 5, 1889, nine, five dogs, to Mr. E. W. Briggs' Climax (Bang Bang—Bellona). Two dogs and two bitches since destroyed.

Mr. Jas. E. Watson, San Francisco, fox terrier Gyp (Spice II—Vixing, whelped April 18, 1889, six, one dog to Mr. J. K. Newton's Teddy.

In sending notice of thewhelping of his beautiful fox terrier Gyp, Mr. Jas. E. Watson adds, "the nicest litter I ever saw." But one of the puppies is unevenly marked, and all are large and vigorous.

Mr. B. F. Seitner Exonerated.

Mr. B. F. Seitner of Dayton, Ohio, has recently rested under a charge of fraud made by Forest and Stream, which if it had been proved, would have placed that gentleman quite outside the pale of decency and honesty and would have debarred him from the friendship of and association with gentlemen everywhere. Forest and Stream charged Mr. Seitner with having entered a pointer bitch at the Philadelphia show in 1885, in the puppy class, when he knew she was over age. The charge was accompanied by a fac simile reproduction of a letter by Mr. Seitner to B. F. Lewis, which in the absence of explanation, gave color to the idea of fraud in connection with the entry.

Mr. Seitner, Forest and Stream, and all parties concerned were cited to appear before the Pointer Club of America, of which Mr. Seitner is Vice-President, to be heard on the charges. No testimony was offered that implicated Mr. Seitner. Messrs. John S. Wise and Geo. W. La Rue, President and Secretary of the Pointer Club report as follows in substance:

"Mr. Seitner gives a version of that letter which is entirely consistent with his innocence and deprives it of any such unfavorable construction as it might bear unexplained by surrounding circumstances. His version is simple and intelligible. He states that meeting B. F. Lewis at the Cincinnati Show early in May, he was induced to send his three dogs, Carrie included, to the Philadelphia Show which was to occur May 19th; that he made out his entry blanks in Cincinnati and delivered them to Lewis; that when he did so his recollection of the date of Carrie's birth was that she was whelped May 23, and therefore put her down when he entered her May 8, as 11½ months; that after giving the entry blanks to Lewis at Cincinnati he returned to his home. That May 14 he wrote the letter in question to Lewis inclosing entry money, etc., for his dogs; that after his return home on consulting his kennel book he discovered that Carrie was whelped May 14, and not May 24; that he enclosed an entry blank for her filled out correctly; that he had no copy of the rules to inform him as to what date was fixed, up to which to count the age of the dog, as a puppy or a grown dog; that his first impression was that she would be barred as a puppy, by reason of this discovery as to her age, and therefore could not be shown, but that afterward it occured to him she might be transferred to her proper class as a grown dog, having been already entered, and that he decided to instruct Lewis so to transfer her, instead of withdrawing her entirely; if she stood a chance to win in the class to which she was eligible.

Whether she was or was not in fact barred, by reason of her age, in the puppy class of said show, we do not know. The A. K. C. rules did not exist in May, 1885, and we have not been furnished with a copy of the rules under which the Philadelphia Show of May, 1885, was held; but we do not consider that question important in the view we take of the the matter.

Mr. Seitner further states, and his statement on this point as well as others stands uncontradicted, that after inclosing this corrected blank to Lewis, he had no doubt, in the light of the correct facts as to her age furnished by him to Lewis five days before the opening of the show, that Lewis and the authorities of the show would classify Carrie correctly, or that if she was not eligible to the puppy class, and Lewis thought her not likely to win in the class for grown dogs she would be withdrawn altogether. He further states that when the awards at said show were made, Lewis informed him by telegraph that his other two dogs had won, but made no allusion to Carrie. This was plausible, as the two other dogs won cash prizes and Carrie only a compliment. That after that he could hear no more from Lewis, and that even to this day his kennel book bears no entry of the V. H. C awarded to said Carrie, corroborating his version of Lewis' neglect, that no catalogue was sent to him; that Lewis collected his prizes, and that when he wrote to the secretary of the Philadelphia Kennel Club requesting the club to pay him the prizes on his other dogs, he informed him that the club recognized Lewis as the party with whom they dealt, he holding the identification blanks for said dogs; that Lewis kept his dogs for several weeks, returning them ultimately to him from Chicago in bad condition and without further explanation, and keeping the prizes, and that since then bad feeling has existed between them.

This is the substance of Mr. Seitner's defense, and there is no testimony before us to gainsay one item of it. On the contrary his version seems sustained by the letter published in Forest and Stream, in several particulars. That letter begins "Inclosed entry money for my dogs, also entry blank filled out correct." As dogs were entered and only one blank filled out correct, it is plain that prior communication had been held between them, and that all was satisfactory as to the other dogs. The dog as to which the corrected blank was sent was evidently Carrie, for the next sentence tells what is to be done with her, she being over age. The language employed is not felicitous to convey the idea Mr. Seitner says he had in his mind it is true, but it is by no means inconsistent with that idea and his explanation is perfectly satisfactory to us as we think it will be to any impartial reader.

Prejudice might arise against this version of the matter by Mr. Seitner, from the fact that he did not protest against the award of V. H. C. to Carrie in the puppy class after it was made, ween he referred to her in his letter as over age; but he removes this prejudice in our minds most effectually by stating that he was not informed by Lewis that she did win a V. H. C.; that he never received an catalogue or other information; that his ignorance on this point is shown by failure to enter any such award in her favor in his own kennel book, and by the statement that the Philadelphia Kennel Club when he wrote to them about the prizes of which he did know, refused to recognize him as the party to be dealt with, and he held to the view that Lewis, holding the identification blanks, was the person with whom it would deal as representative of these entries. We are satisfied in our own minds that touching Carrie, Mr. Seitner did all he could to make known her true age and have her properly classified. That he furnished Lewis such data that he and the Philadelphia Kennel Club need not have made any mistake. That if any mistake was made it was not Mr. Seitner's fault. That the suggestion in the letter of May 14, about transferring her, was entirely consistent with honorable intention. We do not even now know that she was improperly left in the puppy class, for reasons above given; but if she was so improperly left, it was in spite of Mr. Seitner and the information he furnished in the corrected entry blank, and not by his procurement or connivance whoever else may have been to blame, if anybody was.

Mr. Seitner is an utter stranger to the majority of us. Several of our number have never seen him. We have no knowledge of his personal character, and have not considered it outside the facts bearing on this particular charge. It was our desire to hear and decide the matter upon all evidence attainable, and do exact and impartial justice to Mr. Seitner, to the Pointer Club of America, to ourselves and to the sportsmen of America, to whom this charge has been heralded. We feel that in the conclusion arrived at by us we have done right, and done by Mr. Seitner as he and every other man who has a reputation at stake would be done by under like circumstances.

We cannot forbear, in conclusion, from expressing our regret that this publication should have been permitted, accompanied by a charge of fraud, without some one to avouch responsibility and produce testimony to sustain the charge when it was investigated.

With these views, we are unanimously of opinion to acquit Mr. Seitner of the charge of fraud made against him in the Forest and Stream of March 7th, 1889, and to decline to accept the resignation of his office of Vice-President in this club, tendered by him.

JOHN S. WISE, President.
GEO. W. LA RUE, Sec. and Treas.

The following is taken from the minutes of the meeting of the Executive Committee of the Pointer Club of America, held April 9th, 1889:

"The Executive Committee of the Pointer Club of America having this day assembled to investigate a charge of fraud made in the Forest and Stream newspaper of March 7th, 1889, against B. F. Seitner, of Dayton, Ohio, claiming that he won an award at the Philadelphia Bench Show in May, 1885, with a fraudulent entry of his pointer bitch, Carrie, in puppy class 38, when he knew that she was over age, and that her entry was consequantly a fraud. After having fully investigated the matter the following resolution was unanimously adopted:

"Resolved, That we are unanimously of the opinion, upon the evidence submitted and for the reasons as stated in the report accompanying this resolution, that B. F. Seitner is not guilty as charged, and that Mr. Seitner's resignation as an officer of the club be declined.

Mr. A. G. Briggs, of Sierra City, a prominent business man of that Angler's Mecca, has been in San Francisco for some days on business of the Seirra Buttes Gold Mining Company. His home is a haven for any wayfaring angler, and he is himself very deft with fine tackle.

Hints From an Old Angler.

Trout fishing has an importance out of all proportion to the importance of the fish as an article of food. It is undoubtedly one of the finest of table fishes, but that alone would not make it the game fish, par excellence, of all anglers; though without this epicurean flavor trout fishing would cease, for there must be at least an excuse for utility in all pursuits of pleasure. The angler who does not care for the fish has the means of gratifying many friends, for a present of a basket of mountain trout is the highest possible favor.

Trout fishing is reckoned among the most pleasant pastimes of all civilized countries, where cooling streams of pure water, with lakes formed by them, abound. Trout are the natural denizens of wooded mountain streams. At least half the pleasure of fishing arises from the fondness for the beautiful scenery found in these places. If one doubts the general consideration given to trout fishing, let him ramble among the shops where trout gear is kept in stock. He will find poles made of numerous pieces of costly wood, put together so as to have the least possible weight combined with the greatest strength and elasticity, worth all the way from five to fifty dollars. He will find lines braided of the finest silk and covered with elastic, waterproof enamel, which, though almost as fine as a hair, will sustain a weight of fifty pounds. He will find hooks of Damascus steel, rivaling a cambric needle in sharpness of point, polish and temper. He will find a hundred varieties of artificial flies of every conceivable hue and shape, the result of a thousand trials as to what is attractive and alluring. Numerous large establishments, with thousands invested, are getting up the finest possible outfits for this world-wide amusement.

It is true one may catch trout with a cheap hook, baited, as an angler would say, with a vile worm attached to a cotton line, tied to a pole heavy enough to brain a bear. Trout in an over stocked stream will bite a piece of meat tied to a string and suffer themselves to be dragged ashore, as Job would say, by the skin of the teeth. Such sights may be seen in any new country where the brooks remain untished. Some years since a man in Mendocino county caught several hundred in an hour in this way, the trout dropping from the bait, without the trouble of removing a hook from their jaws.

But who can afford to hunt these far-off brooks, where the angler with his $50 outfit is never seen? Such streams are for savages, or those who live on the border of civilization.

One may commence with an alder pole cut along the banks of the stream, a linen line and a hook baited with a worm. The heavy pole will tire his hands; it is awkward to handle; he cannot throw the line where he wishes; he will likely lose the largest fish, owing to its want of elasticity, which enables the trout to tear loose from the hook, and he will eventually seek a light, elastic pole until, one trial succeeding another, he ends in desperation, and buys a split bamboo, made of six pieces, so spliced together that it will bend like a Damascus sword, point to hilt, and fly back unjured.

A good pole, which in the hand of an expert will handle a ten pound trout, will weigh less than eight ounces. It must have thimbles from the point to the reel, so that a big fish may run out a hundred feet of fine line, else the fisher may see the trout turn a contemptuous look on him as he parts company with his taut line. He must carry his line on a reel, not only to let a large trout have play, but to adjust its length to every pool and riffle. Sometimes he wants a line but a foot or two in length, that he may pass it under brush, and let it run out when it reaches running water, perhaps twenty to fifty feet. If he hooks a trout in such a place he must reel the line up until he can land the fish at his feet. He must have a good line. A wary trout will run to his hiding place at the first sight of a coarse string. Fine braided silk, that will not twist or kink, is necessary. A good article is hardly discernible at a distance of a few feet. Then, fine as that is, it must be supplemented with a transparent leader, made of the gland of a silk worm taken out when it is ready to spin its cocoon and drawn to a fine thread. A good angler must have five or six feet of this. Then there are the hooks. There are dozens of patterns. Some have long shanks, so as to be removed easily from the jaws of the fish. Some anglers object to the long shanks, believing that they prevent the hook from entering the jaw, preferring the shorter shank, with the greater trouble of removing it, because it is a "sure catch." There is the Limerick, once famous, and still much used, which has the merit of having the point at a high angle with the opposite side of the hook. It is undoubtedly the best form for bottom or still fishing. Then there is the hook with the point twisted out of line with the bend. In any case a small, sharp and springy hook is necessary for trout.

"What kind of flies did you say?" Well, now you have entered the greatest field of uncertainty, for trout are nearly omniverous. They eat mosquitoes, gnats, millers, bugs, worms, other fish, and sometimes each other. When they are in their best condition they are top feeders, living on insects that play about the surface of the water, leaving the dead things for the suckers and other inferior fish, that act as scavengers of the streams. A man wants a large supply of flies. The black gnat, red ant, professor, coach fly, white and green miller are common and useful varieties. A good angler will form some idea of the kind wanted by watching the stream. A good plan is to carry along an assortment of hair, silk, feathers, etc., and tie or make a fly indicated by the stomachs of the trout, provided you can get one. If one could make a grasshopper that would kick naturally it would be the best thing in the world; but a dead grasshopper, dragged along the surface of the water, is no grasshopper at all. The expert fly fisher endeavors to hook the fish simultaneously with the closing of the jaws, else the fish will spit it out. This, however, requires so much tact and experience that most amateurs put a small piece of worm on the point to induce the trout to hold on until the requsite jerk can be made.

Those wishing to learn trout fishing are advised to get some old hand to go with them at first, to show them how to cast a fly lightly into the water, how to imitate the struggles of a drowning insect, and where to throw it so as to come near the lairs of the trout. Sometimes they are found watching under a shelving rock or under a submerged log. When hungry they usually seek food on a riffle or in swiftly running water, but occasionally they may be found everywhere. Experience will teach the likest places.

We will give a few plain rules for those who wish to make their first experiments alone. Do not take a pole that will lift over four ounces without bending to a quarter circle, otherwise, in your excitement, you may tear the hook out of the jaw. The writer has many times caught fish weighing less than a half pound with healed up broken jaws, showing the work of an unskilled angler. Make yourself as invisible as possible. Take advantage of every bush, rock, log or depression, for a stalwart man tramping along the banks of a creek will send every sensible trout to his hiding place. In the middle of the stream, among the trout, is better than on a high bank. Do not fill your basket with baby trout. It is small amusement to catch little trout, that with a sort of appeal for care, flock around you to be fed. Put nothing in your basket less than six inches long. No skill is required to capture babies of any kind; it is murder of the innocents. If you have no object in fishing but to fill your stomach, work on the road for fifty cents a day and pay the fish peddler ten of that for a mess of herring or suckers. Don't go trout fishing at all unless you have a love for the woods, rocks, clear running streams, and waterfalls frequented by this noblest of all the finny tribe.

The writer hoped to give a brief account of some of the Los Gatos anglers and their methods of fishing, but must defer it to another time. J. D. M.

The Trouts of American Waters.

Although the trouts, popularly so called in America, all belong to the salmon family and are grouped together ichthyologically under the head of Salmonidæ, they are not all salmons, says that competent authority, Mr. W. C. Harris. The classification name of charr (Salvelinus) has been given to most of them. Our speckled trout of the East is a charr, so is the lake trout, the blue-back trout of the Rangeleys, the other so-called varieties of red spotted trout found in New England waters, and the saibling of Germany, recently introduced. In the West the same classification applies to the Dolly Varden trout and also to several imperfectly known species of Arctic America and of Greenland. Of the true salmon trouts (Salmo) we have no representatives in the East except those lately introduced, the rainbow, Lock Leven and the German or brown trout, the latter particularly bidding fair to become an acclimatized and exceptionally popular game fish. In the West they have several species of the true salmon trouts, viz: The rainbow, the steel head, Rio Grande and black-spotted or cut-throat trout, with its several imperfectly described forms, known ichthyologically and locally as the Lake Tahoe, Waha Lake and Kansas River trouts. Thus it will be seen that the angling tourist, in his trout outing, has grand opportunities to indulge in his favorite pastime, and although his intelligence usually keeps fairly abreast with his enthusiasm, he may be sadly adrift in determining at sight the generic character of the trout which he has just basketed after much pleasure and excitement. We will endeavor to make the matter plain to him.

In the salmon trouts teeth will be found on the body of the vomer, as well as on its head; in the charrs teeth are found only on the head of the vomer. Hence, if an angler is in doubt as to the proper generic status of his trout, he has only to put his finger into its mouth and if a single or double series of teeth are found on the front part of the roof of the mouth, he holds in his hand a salmon trout; if only a single patch of teeth occur in the rear and on the roof, he has a charr under inspection.

In this connection, and purely from an angler's standpoint, we feel constrained to protest against a tendency to multiply species and the scientific names of our native trouts (charrs), as recently exhibited through the columns of journals devoted to popular science. We were told, years ago, that modern ichthyologists aimed to be more exact in their methods, particularly in recognizing new forms, and we are aware that they rejected, within the last decade, many of those accepted as new by the former ichthyologists. The anglers of the country understand thoroughly how difficult it is to obtain recognition when they offer a new species to the fish savants, a species which to the observant and loving eye of the angler presents striking variations in color and habits from those of the parent form (vide the sea trout and the mascalonge of the Mississippi system). They are told that the rigid ichthyic law of anatomical identity bars a new classification, and they surrender as gracefully as the circumstances and their disappointment permit; and yet within a year we have been introduced to two species of charrs as native to New England waters, one said to be new and the other accepted as a new form, although baptized years ago, but excluded as such from the official publications of the United States Fish Commission and the Smithsonian Institution. The two species are said to differ as a rule from the typical fish (the common brook trout) in the presence of teeth on the root of the tongue (hyoid bone), when the absence (not persistent) of these teeth in the brook trout is acknowledged to be simply a departure, with exceptions, from the original type. Coloration also, usually a non-factor in classification, seems to be potent in this new one. Gunther, when referring to the salmon family, uses the following language:

"We know of no other group of fishes which offers so many difficulties to the ichthyologist with regard to the distinction of the species, as well as to certain points in their life-history. Although this may be partly due to the unusual attention which has been given to their study, it has revealed rather a greater amount of unexplained fact than a satisfactory solution of the questions raised. The almost infinite variations of these fishes are dependent upon the age, sex and sexual development, food and properties of the water."

But to the subject germane—the trouts of America—from the angling standpoint.

Prominent among the trouts which the anglers of the country prize as a quarry is the brook trout—fontinalis. It is a charr, and the most beautiful of our fresh water fauna, the more so from the mantle of rose and violet which he wears, the mellow diffusion of which, from gills to base of caudal, at once suggests the descriptive phrase so often heard from the angler—"the bloom of the trout." Nor is our admiration lessened as we examine his clipper-built form, the bright vermillion dotlets with their dark blue areolæ, the strength and symmetry of his paired fins and the broad sweep of his propeller-like tail, and when we have him hard and fast upon a barbed hook and a springing rod, we cannot fail to appreciate his knightly qualities, his sturdy resistance and keen intelligence. He is found in the streams flowing north into the Arctic Ocean as far west as Victoria Land; ranging north and westward to the tributaries of the Great Lakes, and as far south as the southern spur of the Georgia Alleghanies; also occurs near the sources of some of the rivers flowing into the Mississippi and the Gulf of Mexico.

The brook trout (fontinalis) may be identified by its mottled body, and, if caught in Pennsylvania and southward, by the absence of teeth on the root of the tongue. In those of Northern New York, New England and of Canada, these teeth are sometimes present, but they are thinly distributed and feebly developed.

As this paper is only intended for a brief description of the charrs and salmon trouts of American waters, and to suggest the simplest methods of identifying species, we now pass on to the namaycush or lake trout, another charr, whose range of habitat is extended, being found in the Great Lakes system and in smaller lakes in our Northern States and in British America, and as far northwest as Alaska. It is readily identified by the raised crest on the roof of the mouth, which extends backward and terminates free from and parallel with the vomer. (The vomer in fishes is the front part of the roof of the mouth, a bone lying immediately behind the bones forming the front of the upper jaws.) Several varieties of lake trout have been described, but none of them, except the siscowet of Lake Superior, has been dignified with a varietal classification by naturalists, among whom Professor Jordan believes it to be a local variety rather than a distinct species.

The Oquassa or blue-back trout is one of the most interesting of the Eastern charrs. Its habitat is confined to Moosehead Lake in Maine, and, as it has not been found elsewhere, there is but little likelihood that the angler will mistake it for another species However, it is well to note that it seldom, if ever, exceeds ten inches in length, and that a bluish tint covers the entire back from head to tail, the latter being well forked.

Another charr, the Greenland trout, which Professor Bean believes to be the sea trout of Canada and of Labrador, is found in Arctic America. Of this charr Professor Goode naively and generously writes: "It is interesting to know that the anglers have probably been in the right and the ichthyologists wrong in regard to this interesting species, concerning which, as yet, we know but little." In explanation it may be stated that Mr. Charles Hallock and other anglers have believed the sea trout of Canada to be a distinct species from the brook (fontinalis), an assertion disputed by ichthyologists until Professor Goode issued his admirable work—"American Fishes." Should any one of our angling readers take an outing in the extreme North to Greenland or Boothia Felix, he will know this trout by its well-forked tail, high dorsal fin (higher than broad), and by its pectoral fins reaching more than half way back to the ventrals. He will be careful, however, in his physical diagnosis, as there are several other species of similar habitat with allied but distinct characteristics.

In addition to the above charr we have in the English, also in the State of Wisconsin, the saibling, introduced from German waters Some 60,000 eggs were deposited in 1887 by the United States Fish Commission in Lake Winnipesaukee, N. H., and perhaps Col. Hodge, the editor of the Fish Culture Department of The Angler, will give us the peculiar markings of the fish and a report of their condition at the present time.

West of the Rocky Mountain range, the "Dolly Varden" or malma trout is the only representative of the charrs, except, possibly, the namaycush or lake trout, which Professor Goode reports as having been found in Knowall river, Alaska. As the malma, also called "bull trout," is the only red-spotted trout as yet discovered on the Pacific slope, it will be readily identified.

As before stated we have no native salmon trouts in our eastern waters, and only one that is of American origin—the rainbow—Salmo irideus. This species has been introduced from the Pacific slope, where its habitat extends from near the Mexican border to Oregon. When caught by the eastern angler it will probably be in waters where the brook trout is found, and it will be easily distinguished from them by a lateral band more or less reddish, which is said by Jordan to occur in the males only; if this is so, our own rod has dealt entirely with the gentler sex of this species. However, the angler cannot be at a loss in identifying the rainbow, owing to its black spots. If he should be so fortunate as to hook a German or brown trout, or a Lock Leven trout, both of which are salmon trouts (Salmo) and have lately been introduced to American waters, he will know the first (German trout) from its almost perfectly square tail, looking as if cut in a direct line by a knife. The back is of a dark green color, covered with well-defined black spots; above and below the lateral line the red spots set in pale blue areolæ appear. The Lock Leven trout have no red spots, and its flesh is said to be always of a deep red color.

The most widely known to anglers of the western salmon trouts is the black spotted or Rocky Mountain trout, which has almost as many aliases as it has rays in its dorsal fin. Besides the two above named it is also called the salmon trout of the Columbia, Yellowstone trout, lake trout, silver trout, and cut-throat trout. The latter name, given to it by Mr. Charles Hallock, although repulsive, and without any right of priority, will probably cling to it, as it indicates a striking physical peculiarity of the fish—a red blotch, or rather a slash, of crimson on the lower jaws. This characteristic marking may possibly be also found on the Waba Lake, Kansas River and Lake Tahoe trouts, as Professor Jordan classifies them as simply variations from the parent form, the cut-throat trout (Salmo purpuratus). The males of this fish are said to have a lateral band, but when present it is of a much lighter color than that of the rainbow trout. We have caught many hundreds of the cut-throat in the Yellowstone and Gallatin rivers of Montana, and did not meet with a fish showing this lateral marking.

The Rio Grande trout (Salmo spilurus) and its twin brother (pleuriticus) are found in the headwaters of the Rio Grande and Colorado rivers, and probably exist in all the mountain streams of Utah. The most striking features of this fish are: Its very large mouth, the usual convexity of the head, and the profusion of black spots, which are most numerous posteriorly, especially on the adipose and tail fins. The fact of the angle of the mouth being placed far back of the eye may serve the angler for purposes of identification, as it has the largest mouth in proportion to size of any of the salmon trouts of the West.

The last of the salmon trouts with which we have to do is the steel-head, hard-head or salmon trout. It is found near the coast from the Sacramento river to Kodiak, Alaska. It is the largest of the pure salmon trouts of American waters, growing to a weight of twenty-five pounds. Its most striking feature is the wide, square tail in the adult fish and the broad crimson lateral band in breeding season.

The Electioneer Stallion LANCELOT,

SEAL BROWN STALLION, 15½ HANDS, FOALED APRIL 15, 1881.

Bred by C. C. BEMIS, San Francisco, Cal.

Sire Gov. Stanford's ELECTIONEER; first dam Lizzie Harris by Comus; second dam by Arnold Harris. Comus by Green's Bashaw, dam Topsey by Prophet, son of Hill's Black Hawk. Young Bashaw by Grand Bashaw (Arabian) (182), dam Pearl by First Consul (913); g d Fancy by imp. Rockingham. Arnold Harris by Whalebone, dam Sportsmistress by American Eclipse.

All the sons of Electioneer in the Eastern States have their books filled for the season. This is a rare opportunity to breed to Lancelot at a very low price. Lancelot has shown quarters better than a 2:30 gait, and had it not been for an accident would have had a record as low as the fastest of the sons of Electioneer.

The Nutwood Stallion SALADIN.

Bred by C. C. BEMIS, San Francisco.

SALADIN, chestnut stallion, 16 hands 1 inch high; foaled April 9, 1880. By Nutwood; first dam Lady Utley Jr. by Speculation, son of Rysdyk's Hambletonian; second dam Lady Utley. Grandam of Western Girl. Record 2:27¾.

NUTWOOD (record 2:18¾), half brother to Maud S., 2:08¼, by Belmont, son of Alexander's Abdallah; first dam Miss Russell by Pilot Jr.; second dam Sally Russell by Boston; third dam Maria Russell by Thornton's Rattler; fourth dam Miss Shepard by Stockholder; fifth dam Miranda by Topgallant; sixth dam by imported Diomed; seventh dam by imported Medley; eighth dam by imported Juniper. Nutwood is the sire of Felix, 2:18¾; Dawn 2:19½; Manon 2:21; Menlo 2:21¾; Nutbreaker, two years old, 2:29½; Nutwood Jr. 2:26; Mount Vernon 2:21; Woodnut 2:16¾, and several others that have trotted under 2:30.

The Thoroughbred Stallion Judge McKinstry,

Will make the Season of 1889, from March 1 to July 1, at San Felipe Rancho, near Gilroy.

PEDIGREE.

Foaled 1879, by Grinstead or Thad Stevens, dam Katy Pease; second dam Minnie Mansfield by imp. Glencoe; third dam Allegrante by imp. Young Truffle.

DESCRIPTION.

JUDGE McKINSTRY is a bright bay with black points, 15¾ hands in height, of a conformation combining power and speed. His breeding is one that cannot be excelled. The families on both sides being noted for their gameness and fleetness. Speakin of JUDGE McKINSTRY, Matt Storn, the well-known trainer, says: "He is the fastest race-horse I ever saw on the Sacramento track. He has shown me trials that were marvelous, one especially of a mile and a quarter that was ahead of the present record." He was started in several races when not in condition to run, and even then developed an amount of speed that is characteristic of the noted families from which he descends. His performances are too well known to need repetition here. Good judges of horses state positively that there can be no doubt of his sire, as he is a perfect picture of Grinstead, but rule compels us to name both sires.

TERMS: $75 payable when the mare is moved from ranch, or, $100, with the usual privilege. Good pasturage, $3 per month. Mares at owners risk. All communications must be addressed to Prince Imperial.

DESCRIPTION.—PRINCE IMPERIAL is a black horse, 15-3 hands high; weighs 1 150 pounds, and is a model of beauty, action and power.

PEDIGREE.—Sired by Black Prince, he by Dictator, own brother to Dexter, dam Daisy by Witherell Messenger, he by Winthrop Messenger, son of imp. Messenger.

MR. Peter Brandow's statement in regard to Prince Imperial: "I met A. Weske in the Park in 1887 driving the above horse, both strangers to me. I was driving a good horse, but the above horse, hitched to a phaeton, beat me easily. I followed him to find out what horse it was, and he finally allowed me to hitch him to a sulky, which I did, and drove him easily in 2:42¼. I think him one amongst the best horses in California, and firmly believe that in six months I can drive him in 220."
PETER BRANDOW.
Trainer of trotters for 25 years.

In 1881, while visiting Salt Lake City, I saw the colt Prince Imperial, and bought him for my own use, and have used him for family purposes ever since. In offering him for public service last year, not knowing anything about horses' pedigrees I made a mistake in his. I wrote to the owner of the mare in Salt Lake, Dr. S. B. Young, and he says she was by Henry Clay, brought from Kentucky by him.

Will make the season of 1889 at the farm of A. Weske, 2½ miles from Santa Rosa, on the Healdsburg road. Season commencing March 1st.

SIRE OF YOLO MAID, 2:14.

Alexander Button.

Alexander's Record, 2:31 1-4!

DESCRIPTION.

Alexander Button is a dark bay with fine flowing mane and tail; stands 15-3¼ hands high; weighs 1,200 pounds, and is of excellent disposition. When three years old he made a record of 2:28½, and when four years old, in his first race, he obtained a record of 2:26¾. Has been driven a mile in 2:16 in his four-year-old form, and has been driven a last half in 1:07. Alexander Button is a natural trotter, inherited through the speed-lines of his ancestors, and imparts his speed to his offspring with uniform certainty. Yolo Maid, as a three-year-old, paced 18 heats, never leaving her feet—carrying the world's record of 2:14. Rosie Mc, as a five-year-old, rarely ever breaks; has a record of 2:20¾. R. H. Newton's colt, with very little handling, paced a 2:16 gait, and there are several other colts that show gaits from 2:16 to 2:20. Considering that Alexander Button has never been mated with a standard-bred mare—his colts show him to be a wonderful producer—and with his breeding, and terms of service, he is the cheapest and most wonderful horse in the State.

PEDIGREE.

Alex. Button was sired by Alexander, he by Geo. M. Patchen, Jr., his dam Lady Button by Napa Rattler by Biggett's Rattler, he by Sir Henry, and he by imported Henry, dam of Biggett's Rattler by Rysdyk's Hambletonian, dam of Napa Rattler, thoroughbred.

TERMS: $75, payable at end of season. Mares not proving with foal may be returned next season free of charge. Good pasturage will be furnished at $2 per month, and due care taken to prevent accidents or escapes, but no liability whatever assumed.

Will stand at City Stable, Woodland, on Thursday, Friday and Saturday of each week. The remainder of the time he will stand at my ranch, which is situated about 1½ miles west of Yolo station.

All mares sent to Fashion Stable, Woodland, Yolo County, will be forwarded free of charge.

LONGWORTH.

High Bred Trotting Stallion.

WILL BE FOUR YEARS OLD IN MARCH.

Dark Bay, Black Points, by Sidney.

OWNED BY A. C. DIETZ, OAKLAND.

Also the owner of Bay Stallion Ringwood, four years old, by Sidney, half brother to Longworth, which has showed trials over the Oakland Track, 2:30; quarters, in 34 seconds—2:16 gait —as a three-year old.

LONGWORTH, for finish, style and form cannot be excelled by any four-year-old horse in the State. His gait is perfect; going low to the ground, with smooth, easy motion, and has shown wonderful speed with but two month's work. As a two-year-old, he showed a 2:40 gait; as a three-year-old showed—trial—full mile over the Oakland track, 2:26; half mile, 1:10; quarters, 34 seconds; eighths, 16 seconds—a 2:08 gait.

Longworth is the result of a long line of distinguished ancestors, endowed with speed on the sire and dams' side that follows back for generations—consequently he cannot help but produce great speed.

He is half brother to the great three-year-old Adonis, record 2:14¾.

Gold Leaf, three-year-old record, 2:15.
Memo, three-year-old trial, 2:20½.
Sister V., two-year-old trial, 2:32.
St. Nicholas, three-year-old trial, 2:27¾.
Ringwood, three-year-old trial, 2:30.
Miss Sidney, one-year-old trial, half mile, 1:38.
Brown colt, three-year-old trial, 2:40.
Black colt, three-year-old trial, 2:39.
Linda, one-year-old trial, one quarter, 40 seconds.
Sorrel colt, two-year-old trial, quarter, 34 seconds, and a number more that have shown remarkable speed. One yearling that has shown one-eighth of a mile in 16 1-5 seconds—a 2:40 gait.

Sidney, the sire of Longworth, has a record of 2:19¾; Santa Claus, the grand sire, has a record of 2:17½; Sweetness, the grandam, record 2:21½; Strathmore, the sire of Santa Claus, has twenty-two that have trotted below 2:30; Volunteer, the sire of Sweetness, has twenty-six that have trotted below 2:30. Volunteer is the sire of St. Julian, record 2:11¾.

Longworth's first dam Grey Dale, the dam of Daisy C., Silver Threads, and grandam of Phaeola; Grey Dale by American Boy, Jr.; he by American Boy, the sire of Belmont. Second dam Grey Poll by Winfield Scott, by Edward Everett; third dam Sorrel Poll by Sir Henry; fourth dam Daughter of Printer.

Grey Dale, the dam of Longworth, has shown herself a great producer of speed through Daisy C. and Silver Threads, the sire of Phaeola.

All letters pertaining to the service of this horse should be addressed to J. J. FAIRBANKS, Oakland, Alameda County, Cal.

TERMS: Fifty dollars, payable at the end of the season or sooner if the mares are taken away. Season will close June 15th, 1889. The number of mares limited to twenty-five. The best of care will be taken to insure mares with foal. Pasture $5 per month, which can be procured at the Oakland Race Track. Mares at the owners' risk, as to escapes or accidents.

The stallion will be kept at the stables of the undersigned, at the junction of San Pablo Avenue and Park Street.

R. H. FARMER,
DIETZ OPERA HOUSE,
Oakland, Cal.

Thoroughbred Stallion Prince of Norfolk,

Will Make the Season of 1889, from Feb. 15th to July 1st, at Sacramento.

PEDIGREE.

PRINCE OF NORFOLK, ch c, foaled 1881, by Norfolk; 1st dam Marion by Malcolm; 2nd dam Maggie Mitchell by imp. Yorkshire; third dam Charmer by imp. Glencoe; 4th dam Betsy Malone by Stockholder; 5th dam by Potomac; 6th dam by imp. Diomed; 7th dam by Pegasus, etc. Norfolk, the unbeaten son of Lexington, is the sire of Winters, Twilight, Conner, Ballot Box, Trade Dollar, Flood, Duchess of Norfolk, Lou Spencer, the Great Emperor of Norfolk, an many others. Marion's sire, Malcolm, was one of the first horses to bring Bonnie Scotland into notice. Through the Maggie Mitchell cross comes the blood of two of the most celebrated race mares of their day, Charmer and Betsy Malone. The combined speed of these great families seem to be concentrated in the get of Norfolk and Marion, as is instanced in the case of the Emperor of Norfolk, who is a full brother to the Prince of Norfolk.

The blood lines here displayed cannot be surpassed in the world, there not being a single cross that has not been celebrated for speed and endurance, and it is fair to assume that the get of this stallion will show equally well with those of past generations.

TERMS, $80 for the season. We offer first class pasturage on our own ranch, at $4 per month and the best of care will be taken of mares sent to us, but no responsibility can be incurred. For further particulars address

W. P. TODHUNTER, Sacramento.

Mambrino, Jr., 1789.

(formerly Carr's.)

By MAMBRINO PATCHEN 58, the great Brood Mare Sire of the day.

PEDIGREE.

Mambrino Jr. 1789, trial at three years, 2:39; record 2:45, sire of Merchant, trial, 3:25; Lady Ellen, record 2:28, dam of Ella 2:29, by Mambrino Patchen 58.

First dam, brown mare, bred by Dr. L. Herr, of Lexington, Kentucky, by Mambrino Chief 11.

Third dam by Betrand, thoroughbred son of Sir Archy.

Fourth dam by Cherokee, thoroughbred son of Sir Archy.

Sir Archy thoroughbred son of imp. Diomed.

Terms $60, to insure mare with foal. Good pasture at $3 per month. Book open to fifteen mares of approved feeding, besides my own, and must be regular breeders or young mares. All bills payable before the removal of mares from premises, and service fee refunded when mares show proofs that they are not with foal.

THREE CHEERS

Will make the Season of 1889 at Oak land Race Track, Oakland, Alameda County.

Pedigree.

Hurrah by Newminster (winner St. Leger 1851), dam Jovial by Bay Middleton (winner Derby 1836.)

Newminster by Touchstone (winner St. Leger 1831), dam Beeswing (winner of 54 races out of 64 starts) by Dr. Syntax (winner Doncaster Cup 1837, 40, 41, 42, the only horse that ever accomplished that feat.)

THREE CHEERS is bred in the speediest and stoutest lines. His dam, Young Fashion was the dam of Surprise, Scotland (the only horse that ever beat Asteroid a heat), Liverpool, Columbia and Bonnie Kate, the dam of Little Buttercup and the flying Bonnie Lizzie. His grandam, Fashion, was the greatest race mare of her era, defeating Boston in that historical match at four-mile heats, that is recorded as one of the greatest events in the annals of the turf. He is thoroughly sound in wind and limb, his family on both sides being noted for their exemption from curbs, spavins, roaring, or any other hereditary unsoundness. Horsemen, who can appreciate the highest type of the thoroughbred, are specially invited to inspect Three Cheers.

THREE CHEERS is the sire of Almont, Applause and Why Not, the only three of his get ever trained, and all are stake winners.

TERMS: $75 for the season. Mares not proving with foal can be returned the next season free of charge. Good pasturage at $5 per month. Mares cared for in any manner owners may desire, and fed on hay and grain, either or both, at reasonable rates. None but competent grooms employed, but no responsibility assumed for accidents or escapes.

N. B.—Mares sent from a distance in care of J. W. Morshead City Front Stables, San Francisco, will be forwarded without delay.

THE WILKES STALLION

Mambrino Wilkes, 6083

(Half Brother to Harry Wilkes, 2:13 1-2.)

Sire of Gus Wilkes, 2:22; Alpheus, 2:27; Balkan 2:29½, three-year-old; John O'Brien, lapped out the winner in 2:36 as a three-year-old; H. A. W.'s Black Colt, trial 2:29 with very little work as a four-year-old.

Will remain in the future at San Miguel Stock Farm, Walnut Creek, Contra Costa County.

DESCRIPTION.

MAMBRINO WILKES is a black horse, 16 hands high, and considerably longer than his height; has immense muscular development and weighs 1,260 pounds. He has the utmost symmetry of proportion and elegance of finish. No competent judge who has seen this horse has failed to pronounce him a perfect individual, and his breeding is certainly fashionable enough to satisfy the most fastidious. His colts are large, stylish and handsome, and Balkan has been pronounced by many the most stylish trotter on the turf.

PEDIGREE.

Sired by George Wilkes, dam Lady Chrisman by Todhunter's Mambrino; second dam by Pilot Jr.

Todhunter's Mambrino by Mambrino Chief, dam Ripton's dam by Hunt's Commodore, son of Mambrino, by imp. Messenger; second dam by Potomac, son of imp. Messenger.

George Wilkes sired 65 colts that have beaten 2:30. Of these 39 have average records of 2:23, 14 of 2:19 and 12 of 2:18.

TERMS.

Mares from a distance will be received at the Dexter Stables, Oakland, or Livery Stable, Martinez, the owner notifying Smith Hill, Superintendent at the farm. Good pasture and plenty of water. For the purpose of placing the service of a Wilkes within reach of breeders, the same rate will be maintained as last year, to wit, $75 for the season. Although it is not admitted thereby that this horse is inferior as a producer to the horses whose fees are placed at from $150 to $500.

BALKAN,

Three-year-o d Record 2:29 1-2; trotting many heats faster, when he did not obtain a record.

PEDIGREE.

Sired by Mambrino Wilkes, dam Fanny Fern by Jack Hawkins, son of Boston; second dam S. F. B. by Jim Crow.

It will be readily seen that this colt is from strong producing lines on both sides. Fanny Fern having produced Mollie Drew, May Queen, Onyx and Fred Arnold, all noted trotters and all by different sires.

This colt will be kept at the Oakland Trotting Park, and will be stinted to ten approved mares at $100 for the season.

MEMO.

The Fast Trotting Stallion, the Best Son of Sidney.

Will make the Season of 1889 at the Oakland Trotting Park.

He was bred by G. Valensin at the Arno Stock Farm, Sacramento County, California; foaled spring of 1885.

PEDIGREE.

By Sidney.
First dam Flirt by Buccaneer.
Second dam Mohaska Belle by Flaxtail.
Third dam by John the Baptist.

Sidney by Santa Claus, 2:17½, his dam Sweetness, 2:21½. Strathmore, the son of Santa Claus, has 22 of his get which have trotted in 2:30 or better, up to close of 1887, several having entered since, and Volunteer, the sire of Sweetness, has 26 in the same list, Buccaneer is the sire of Shamrock, two-year-old record 2:25, and of Flight, 2:29, and in him are combined the strains of Long Island Blackhawk, Vermont Blackhawk, and the dam of Ryadyk's Hambletonian. Flaxtail figures prominently in both pacing and trotting descendants, and is the sire of the dam of Apex, 2:26, Flight, 2:29, J. H. McCormack, 2:29, and Shamrock, 2:25.

PERFORMANCES.

Memo only trotted in public in his two-year-old form, obtaining a record of 2:19, though he was close to Grandee in a race on the Bay District Track, the second heat of which was made in 2:31½, the first in 2:32. He exhibited phenomenal speed when three years old, and had it not been for a slight strain of his fore fetlock there is little question that he would have shown in public very close to the best record. On the Oakland track he was timed a mile in 2:20½, and frequently trotted quarters in from 32½ to 34 seconds.

DESCRIPTION.

He is nearly if not quite sixteen hands high, and of powerful build throughout. His color is a glossy black, with both fore-feet white and a touch of white on his off hind quarters. His disposition is all that could be desired, and his action superb.

TERMS: One hundred dollars the season, which will commence on the 5th of February and close on the 1st of July. Due care will be taken of mares, but no responsibility for accidents or escapes.

Mares taken and kept as desired by the owners, and at reasonable rates.

Pasturage at $5 per month within the track enclosure; feed first rate, and a living stream of water in the field. There is a double protection against escape, as in addition to a strong fence on the inside of the track, the gates of the outer fence are enclosed at night, which gives almost positive assurance of safety. ELECTIONEER STALLION

EROS,

Standard No. 5326.

Electioneer, his sire, has more 2:20 trotters than any living horse, and more 2:30 trotters than any stallion LIVING OR DEAD.

Eros has a record of 2:29½, made in the fifth and deciding heat against a field of eight horses in his maiden race, and with only four weeks preparation after coming out of the stud.

Progeny.

Eros had last fall but three colts trained; the oldest a three-year-old trotter, an exhibition mile during the San Jose Fair in 2:34, last quarter in 36½ seconds. A two-year-old (timed by the judges) made a mile in 2:46½, and the other two-year-old in 2:47. All of these trials being made without a single skip, and none of these colts had then been handled three months from the bitting harness.

TERMS: $50 for the season, from February 1st to July 1, 1889. Due at time of service.

WILKES PASHA.

STANDARD 2618.

Dark bay with white hind feet, 16½ hands high, bred by R. P. Pepper, of South Elk Horn Farm, Frankfort, Kentucky. Sired by Onward, 1411, record 2:25¼, trial 2:17. He by George Wilkes, 2:22, sire of sixty-five horses in the 2:30 list, ten of them with records below 2:20. First dam Fisher (dam of Clara Wilkes, 2:20¾, trial 2:25) by American Clay, 34, sire of Granville, 2:26; Maggie Briggs, 2:27; Ella Clay, 2:27½; and the dams of Executor, 2 24½, Ranchero, 2:23½; Judge Hawser, 2:24¾; Ambassador, 2:25, and nine others in 2.30; second dam by Wilson's Snow Storm, sire of Jim Irving, 2:24; third dam by Paddie Burns, thoroughbred.

Onward, 1411, is one of the noted sires of to-day. In 1887 he placed seven performers in the 2:30 list, including Houri, three-year-old record 2:19¾; while in 1888 he still further sustains his reputation by adding nine of his sons and daughters to the list. Onward combines the blood of the two great trotting families, Hambletonian 10 and Mambrino Chief 11, and derives his speed inheritance direct through the greatest son of the one family, and the greatest daughter of the other.

Onward's dam was Dolly (the dam of Director, 2:17, and Thorndale, 2:22½), by Mambrino Chief. Dolly was one of the greatest speed-producing brood mares that ever lived. George Wilkes stands at the head of the list of sires of fast trotters with 65 performers with records of 2:30 or better, and the combination of these two great producers will breed on with absolute certainty.

WILKES PASHA will make the season of 1889 at the stables of the undersigned, at the Trancas Bridge, two miles north of Napa, on the Soda Spring Road.

TERMS,

For the season ending July 1, 1889, $35 in U. S. gold coin.

Alfalfa pasturage $4 per month; natural grass $2.50 per month.

Every attention and care will be given to mares, but no liabilities assumed for accidents or escapes.

VINELAND BREEDING FARM.

Whippleton, 1883,

STANDARD UNDER RULE 4 & 6.

The most successful stock horse in California for his opportunities. WHIPPLETON has no equal as a producer of carriage and general purpose horses. Sire of Lily Stanley, record 2:17¾, dam's breeding unknown; Homestakes pacer, 2:16½, dam's breeding unknown; Flora B., 2:30, dam's breeding unknown; Cora C., three-year old pacer, 2:33½, dam by Naubuc, Rachel, 2:38, dam's breeding unknown.

DESCRITPION.

WHIPPLETON is a beautiful black, tan muzzle and flanks and exceptionally strongly made all over. He stands 17 hands high and weighs 1400 pounds. He is beyond doubt the most uniform breeder on the Coast for size, color and finish. Most of his colts are 16 hands or over, and all bay, brown or black in color. He has never sired a sorrel or white faced colt; if he does I agree to refund service money.

PEDIGREE.

WHIPPLETON, sired by Hambletonian Jr. (sire of Hancock 2:20), by Whipple's Hambletonian; dam Lady Livingston; (dam of Lady Blanchard 2:28½, Bloomfield Maid, trial 2:22); by General Taylor (sire of dam of Wells Fargo 2:18¾, Nearea 2:24½, Bickford 2:29½, Lady Blanchard 2:26¼) and Stella 2:30, son of the Morse horse.

TERMS.

Fifty dollars, with usual return privilege.

ALCONA, 730.

By the great Almont (sire of Westmont, 2:15¼, Puritan, 2:16, Fannie Witherspoon, 2:16¼, Piedmont, 2:17¼, and 31 others with records better than 2:30, and grandsire of Bell Hamlin, 2:13¾) by Alexander's Abdallah (sire of Goldsmith Maid, 2:14), he by Rysdyk's Hambletonian. Alcona's dam, Queen Mary by Mambrino Chief, sire of Lady Thorn, 2:18¼, Woodford Mambrino, 2:21¾ and 4 others in 2:30 list, and sire of the dams of Piedmont, 2:17¾. Director, 2:17, Onward, 2:25¾, and many others; 23 of his sons have produced 2:30 trotters.

Almont has 38 sons that have produced 2:30 trotters, which number is only equaled by his grandsire, Rysdyk's Hambletonian.

DESCRIPTION.

Alcona is a beautiful chestnut, 16¾ hands high, and weighs 1,300 pounds. His colts possess speed, style, finish and beauty, and if they don't trot fast they command the highest price for carriage and general purpose horses. Eleven of Alcona's colts that have been sold UNTRAINED brought $7,810, an average of $710 per head.

TERMS: $35. Usual return privilege.

Grandissimo,

Full Brother to GRANDEE. 3-year-old record 2:23 1-2.

Sired by La Grande (son of Almont, and out of Jessie Pepper by Mambrino Chief; Jessie Pepper is the dam of Iona 2:22, Alpha 2:23½, Sterling Wilkes 2:33¾, and others) dam Norma, by Arthurton (sire of Arab 2:15, Joe Arthurton 2:20½, etc).

Grandam Nourmahal, (full sister to A. W. Richmond, sire of Arrow 2:13¾, Romero 2:19, and sire of Columbine, dam of Anteeo 2:16¾, and Antevolo 2:19¼ at 4 years old),

DESCRIPTION.

Grandissimo is 3 years old, will make a sixteen hand horse; he is a rich mahogany bay in color and perfect in style and action. Limited to ten mares, at $50 for the season. Usual return privileges.

In case any of my horses are sold before the next season, parties breeding mares have the privilege to return them to any other stallion I have making the season at the same price. Mares kept in any manner desired. Best of pasture the year round, at $4 per month. Some choice young stallions, colts and fillies by Whippleton, for sale reasonable. Correspondence solicited.

For further information send for circular or call at farm (one mile south of St. Helena.

ANNUAL FALL MEETING.

In addition to the regular racing programme to be given at this meeting, the following Guarantee Stakes are announced:

RAISIN HANDICAP. For all ages. 1¼ mile dash. Guarantee Purse $1,000. $100 entrance. $10 May 1st, $15 June 1st, $25 July 1st. Weights will be declared August 15th and acceptance September 1st, when the other $50 is to be paid. To be run at Fall Fair, 1889, Fresno, Cal. If entrance money amounts to more than $1,000 it shall be added to the purse, and the association will add 20 per cent. of amount of purse; 3 moneys, 70, 20, 10 per cent. of purse. Horses winning any purse or stake of one mile or more at Sacramento or Stockton when purse or stake amounts to $800 or over, shall carry 10 pounds extra. Horses winning a purse or stake of one mile or over at Sacramento or Stockton when purse or stake amounts to $500 or over, to carry 5 pounds extra.

Weights to be declared through BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN, August 15, 1889. Entries close May 1st with the Secretary.

American Association Rules to govern.

REMARKS.

As to the Handicap Running, 1¼ mile dash, the Handicapping Committee will use due diligence in learning the performance of every horse entered, and weighting them fairly to their merits. Each entry must be accompanied by entrance money or be considered no entry. All payments not made when due the nominator forfeits all money paid in. We propose at the finish of the race the horse winning the purse, or any part of it, gets his money and not forfeit papers.

GUARANTEE PURSE.

For horses that never beat 2:30. Trotting Purse $1,000, $100 entrance, $25 May 1st, $5 July 1st, $50 August 15th, when horses are to be named. To be trotted at Fall Fair, 1889, Fresno, Cal. THE Stanford Stakes 1891.

A sweepstakes for trotting colts and fillies, foals of 1888, $175 each, $25 payable on the 2d of April, 1889, which must accompany the nomination, and none will be recorded in which there is a failure to comply with this requirement, at which time the stakes will close; $25 on the 1st of January 1890; $25 on the 1st of January 1891, and $100 thirty days before the day fixed for trotting, whatever amount up to be considered forfeit, and the neglect to pay at the stipulated time incurring forfeiture of the previous payments. The race to be heats of a mile, best 3 in 5 to harness. First to receive six-ninths of the whole sum, the second two-ninths, the third one-ninth. In addition to the stakes and forfeits the proportion of the gate money, profit on pool sales, and all other sources of emolument will constitute the gross amount, to be divided in the foregoing proportions. Five or more subscribers to fill. The race to be trotted in 1891, not sooner than the 1st of August. The exact date to be fixed and announced on the 1st of April, 1891, or sooner.

The stakes for 1892 will close January 2, 1890. $25 entrance.

Race to be governed by the Rules of the National Trotting Association. Nominations to be made to N. T. SMITH, Treasurer, S. P. Railroad Office, Fourth and Townsend Streets, on or before the 2d day of April, 1889. The colt must be named, the name and pedigree, so far as known, given.

Should a Pacific Coast Trotting-Horse Breeder's Association be gotten up, the above stake may be transferred to that, the Treasurer, N. T. Smith, having the power to make the transfer, and also to arrange anything else, in connection with this stake which is not expressed in the above conditions. Should it occur that Captain Smith cannot act at any time, then a majority of the subscribers still eligible to start will have the power to fill the vacancy.

Under the new trotting rules letters legibly postmarked April 1st will be eligible.

N. T. SMITH, Treasurer.

Pleasanton Stock Farm

STALLIONS.

DIRECTOR 2:17.

DIRECTOR will stand at Pleasanton from March 1st to August 1st, 1889, for fifteen good mares more than are now booked, at $200 for the season. Mares not proving with foal may be returned next season free of charge of service to same stallion, or money will be refunded, at option of the Stock Farm Co.

Pasturage $4 per month, hay and grain extra. Accidents and escapes at owner's risk. Service fees due at time of service and must be paid, together with pasturage, etc., before mares are taken away, or a good approved note given, payable August 1st, 1889, at which date all bills must be settled

THISTLE,

Full brother to Gold Leaf, pacing record 2:15 at three years old. By Sidney, dam Fernleaf, she the dam of stallion Shamrock, trotting record at two years old, 2:25. Thistle is a large, speedy pacing colt, showing more speed than Gold Leaf at the same age, and double the speed of his sire; so if anyone wants to breed pacers, here is a chance.

Thistle will stand for seven approved mares at $100 for the season, with same conditions and return privileges as Director.

TROTTING—Citizens' Purse for Buggy Horses.

REMARKS AND CONDITIONS.

Entrance fee ten per cent. of purse, to accompany nomination. In all races five to enter and three to start. The club reserves the right to start a race with a less number, and cut down the purse proportionate. In all races three moneys, viz.: 60, 30 and 10 per cent. All races best three in five. The American Trotting Association Rules to govern all races. Entries to be made May 1st, with C. W. GARDNER, Secretary, Napa City.

FRED. W. LOEBER, President.

GROVER CLAY,

Bay Stallion, bred by Hon. W. W. Traylor, San Francisco. Foaled 1883. By ELECTIONEER.

First dam MAGGIE NORFOLK by NORFOLK, son of Lexington.

Second dam by BILLY CHEATHAM.

Third dam by DORSEY'S GOLDDUST.

GROVER C. is a very handsome shade of bay, 15¾ hands high, and showing as much quality as a majority of thoroughbreds. He is as square-gaited a trotter as can be, and has shown a great deal of speed for the amount of handling. Has been worked very little, though he can show a thirty gait or better whenever called upon.

TERMS.

Fifty dollars the season, payable at time of service. Proper care will be taken, but no responsibility incurred for accidents or escapes. Mares will be pastured inside of the Oakland Trotting Park, which is especially safe, having two fences which give ample security against escape. There is a never-failing stream of water which runs through the field, and the food is good.

Season commencing first of January and ending the first of July.

This is the only son of Electioneer standing in Alameda County, and the high breeding on the side of his dam is a guarantee that his colts will inherit qualities already made famous through the mixture of Electioneer and Lexington blood. Ansel, 2:20, is from a Lexington mare, and Sunol's granddam, two-year-old record 2:18, was by Lexington, both Sunol and Ansel by Electioneer, Lexington the sire of Norfolk.

ABBOTSFORD.

SIRE OF CONDE, 2:20.

PEDIGREE.

By Abbottsford, dam the Gillespie mare. Abbottsford by Woodford Mambrino, son of Mambrino Chief, dam Columbia by Young Columbus. This horse was brought to California by J. W. Knox, and made a record in 1883 of 2:19¾, and has always proved a great speed producer.

The Gillespie mare by the celebrated Wilson's Blue Bull, who has probably more of his get in the 2:30 list than any horse that ever lived.

Arlington has as yet no record, but has shown very fast trials. He will be limited to twenty-five mares only, as he will be trained for a record immediately on the conclusion of the season.

TERMS: $50 the season, with usual return privileges. The best of attention will be given mares, but no liability assumed for escapes or accidents. Call on or address

T. H. GRIFFIN.
Bay District Track.

AMBERINE.

$25. $25.

PEDIGREE.

Sired by PROMPTER No. 2305, with six weeks training at the close of a stud season, he won a stallion race of five heats, winning the last three heats and getting a record of 2:33¾; he has never been trained since.

His sire, Wilson's BLUE BULL, No. 75, has more of his progeny in the 2:30 list than any horse that ever lived, except it may be George Wilkes, and it is a disputed point between the two which has most.

PROMPTERS' dam, PRAIRIE BIRD, 2:28¾, is in the GREAT BROOD MARE TABLE, a proved producer, and of a family of wonderful producers, as an examination of the produce of Flaxtail mares will prove.

AMBERINE'S dam, "BONNIE," owned by G. W. Hancock, of Sacramento, is one of the best road-mares in the State; she has many times covered 50 miles on the road in five hours, and 125 miles in 17 hours. She is the dam of Daisy, yearling record, 2:38¾; her sire is John Nelson, sire of the dams of Albert W., 2:20, and Valensin, 2:24.

AMBERINE is a beautiful bay, three years old, very powerfully built, 16 hands, and trotted a mile in his yearling form in 3:20, and has never been trained.

Will serve 15 outside mares at the low price of $25 the season. Should the mare not prove in foal, the money refunded or mare bred following season. Service fee payable, when I pasture the mare, at the time of her removal; but if served outside, payable at time of service.

He is full brother to DAISY; yearling record, 2:38¾. THE BEST IN THE WORLD FOR PACING. Two-year-old trial, two miles, 5:07; last mile in 2:28.

Good pasturage for a limited number of mares only, at $5 per month. Ranch 18 miles from the City, San Pedro Valley. Horses taken down at owner's risk. This horse will stand in San Francisco, San Mateo, or Alameda Counties. Owned by

KALAMAZOO, Mich., Sept. 15, 1888.

GENTLEMEN:—We have used Ossidine for the past two years and consider it invaluable for Sprung Tendons, Curbs, Ringbone and Spavins; there is nothing equals it; and for us it effected a permanent cure where firing failed, although performed by one of the most successful veterinarians on the continent. We have recommended it to others with like success, and believe it has more merit than any blister ever used.

Very respectfully yours, S. A. BROWNE & Co., Prop's.

This scientific preparation is an absolute cure for all bony or callous lumps on horses, and is a more powerful absorbent than "firing," without creating the slightest blemish. After a few applications the excrescence is so palpably reduced that even the skeptical frankly acknowledge that it is by far the most valuable outward remedy for horses ever invented.

The ONLY preparation in the world that will remove a Bone Spavin after it has become ossified.

Owner of Eole, St Saviour, Eolist, etc, says; I have long used it in my stables, and find it to be all that is claimed for it in removing callous and unnatural bony growths, without leaving the slightest blemish. From my experience, I most strongly recommend the use of Ossidine, and feel that it is a necessary adjunct to every stable. Yours respectfully,

The "L. C. Smith" Guns.

As PRIZE WINNERS we challenge any other make of Gun to make a showing like the following:

All Previous Records Broken.

Never before were 100 live pigeons killed straightly in a similar match under same conditions, until the L. C. SMITH GUN was made and did it. In the hands of Mr. Al Bandle, of the firm of Bandle Arms Co., Cincinnati, Ohio, this wonderful score was made. Capt. A. H. Bogardus scoring with a 12-gauge L. C. Smith in the match against Bandle, the very high score of 95. A remarkable score with a 12-guage.

——OFFICIAL SCORE——

Made in the match at 100 live pigeons, Hurlingham rules, barring gauge of gun, between Capt. A. H. Bogardus, of Elkhart, Ill., and Al Bandle, of Cincinnatti, Ohio, on Independent Gun Club grounds, Cincinnati, Ohio, Christmas Day, December 25, 1888:

BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN

Vol XIV. No 18.
No. 313 BUSH STREET.

SAN FRANCISCO, SATURDAY, MAY 4, 1889.

SUBSCRIPTION
FIVE DOLLARS A YEAR.

RACINE,

The Property of the HON. LELAND STANFORD.

We have great pleasure in presenting our subscribers this week with a likeness, Palo Alto's much vaunted two-year-old. He is as his picture shows, a splendid example of a thoroughbred, his color is light bay with black legs, his conformation and general proportion is admirable. He has a very intelligent bloodlike head, well set on a lean muscular neck with good sloping shoulders, withers running well back. a strong short coupling and wonderfully good hind quarters rather drooping but better for it; wide hips, long powerful stifles and lower thighs, with nice clean hocks, particularly short cannon bones, good pasterns and splendid feet; his forelegs look like lasting, being wiry and sinewy, with good big flat knees, and all over he is as sound as a bell and as pretty as a pink.

Racine's breeding is exceptionally fine. His sire Bishop is by Shannon (Monday) dam Bettie Bishop by Buckden imp. His dam imported Fairy Rose is by Kisber, 1st dam Hippolyta by King Tom, 2nd dam Daughter of the Star by Kremlin, third dam Evening Star by Touchstone, 4th dam Bertha by Rubens, 7th and 14th dams are by Arabians.

When looked into carefully and critically, this is a truly regal racing pedigree, for Shannon is full brother to Mollie McCarty, being out of old Hennie Farrow. Buckden is a grandson of the mighty Newminster, the most valuable blood in the world, while Kisber (a Derby winner) was bred in Hungary, being a son of Buccaneer and Mineral (by Rataplan dam Manganese by Bird Catcher) and then to back up the pedigree there is a King Tom and Touchstone cross with Bertha for a fourth dam and a better one no man could wish for.

Senator Standford, the owner and breeder of Racine, is rapidly proving that in racing as well as trotting, if careful attention is given to choosing a suitable cross, success is almost sure, and in Racine he has a colt who in time is bound to make a successful racing season and ought afterwards to prove one of the best sires in America.

Henry Walsh deserves every credit for the careful preparation and beautiful condition in which he sent his colt to the post in all of his engagements. He has faced the starter five times, winning on four occasions and when beaten at San Jose in his first race it was palpable that he would have won had it not been for his run away in a false start. Hereafter the So So Stakes will be called the Racine Stake, as he cut down the time of So So by half a second, making the three-quarters in 1:14¼, which is remarkably fast time for a two-year-old in the spring of the year.

Blood Horse Association.

FOURTH DAY.

Officers of the day—Judges, M. F. Tarpey, J. C. Wolfskill and C. W. Aby. Timers, O. A. Hickok, Christopher Green and R. T. Carroll. Clerk of course, Harry Lowden.

Saturday afternoon always sees a larger attendance at the track than any other day of the week, yet notwithstanding the programme was a weak one, over thirteen hundred persons paid for admission. The weather was of the best, the racing more than passible, the starting very much improved on, the bookmakers happy, because not a favorite won, and the "long shot" folks pleased when they chanced to have winning cards. The restaurant, now run by the management, is a boon to the public, and is well patronized by those who enjoy a first-class meal.

The first race of the day called out the youngsters, and as Palo Alto had an entry, it was naturally well supported in the betting, although the decided favorite was King Hooker, a chestnut colt owned by the Volcano Stable. It may just be possible that he has lately shown a fast trial, but most assuredly his performance on the opening day of the meeting did not warrant his being made first choice on Saturday last, and that he was in no better form on the fourth than on the first day was proven by the easy manner in which he was beaten.

The field got away after several false starts, with Atalanta in the lead, closely followed by Alice and Muta. When but a few strides away from the starter. Marigold evidently stumbled, and it was all the lad could do to keep her on her feet, when she finally recovered and set sail for the balance; they were fully fifteen feet to the good. At the first turn Atalanta was five lengths in the van, with the race at her mercy, for she was held well in hand, and had plenty of reserve speed. At the middle of the turn Muta was sent with a slight rush, but she had not the power to cope with the Santa Anita filly. Of the rear division only one made an effort to catch up, and that was Marigold, who made the last five-eighths in 1:02. As the wire was reached, Atalanta was the first to pass under, two lengths in advance of Muta, with Marigold two lengths further behind.

SUMMARY.

Book odds: King Hooker 8 to 5, Muta and Atalanta 4 to 1, Mirope 6 to 1, Marigold and Alice 15 to 1.

The Resaca Stakes was the means of bringing out half a dozen three-year-old fillies, Picnic being the only one on the card who did not start. Songstress, of the Shippee stable, had the call in the betting, and from her looks in the paddock, seemed fit to run for a man's life. Faustine, the second choice, was also in splendid fettle, but the favorite among the ladies was the unfortunate Glen Ellen, unfortunate because she has run many game races this season, but in company always a little too good for her. She is a delicate creature, but if brackets are not earned by her before long, it will be a wonder. Alfarata evidently has a temper of her own, for she was very unruly at the post, and tried several times to kick Faustine, against whom she seemed to have a spite. Bessie Shannon and Alaho have not had work enough, but are both on the improving order.

After a little delay the flag fell to a good start, Alaho and Glen Ellen leading, which was kept to the quarter, where Alfarata came very quickly and joined Glen Ellen, Alaho falling back. The two leaders now made a gallant showing, going up the back-stretch neck and neck. At the half-mile pole Morton on Faustine moved the mare up a peg, Winchell on Songstress doing likewise. At the middle of the turn the four were head and head, presenting a pretty spectacle, Alaho coming on behind as a sort of rear guard. Turning into the stretch Faustine had the best of the going, and drew away, with Songstress on her girth, but the Palo Alto entry had plenty of go in her, and won handily by three lengths, Songstress second, Alaho third.

Glen Ellen 113 and Alfarata 112 ran unplaced.
Book odds: Songstress 4 to 5, Faustine 8 to 5, Alaho 4 to 1, Glen Ellen 6 to 1, Alfarata 10 to 1.
Auction pools: Songstress $50, Faustine $35, field $25.

What are called "Owners' handicaps," usually brings out a large field, but the handicap lot were mostly entered in the $600 purse, so only six came to the post in the third race, and at weights that should have made them all winners, except Duke Spencer, whose owner asked the bay colt to carry more than he should have done. Somehow Reward is a disappointment, for if ever a horse gave promise of being a world beater in speed he is that horse. Reward is a typical thoroughbred, not unlike old Tenbroeck in conformation, with the same great long reaching stride, that carried the record breaker on to victory so many times, but in the case of Reward there is something that prevents him getting to the wire first, and what that something is no one seems to know. It should not be a surprise if he won a good race, in first class time, and that before long, if he is properly handled. Kildare looked the race horse all over, and gladdened the hearts of his backers by winning easily. Mozart was again the great tip, although on public form Joe Hoge had a strong backing, and he warranted it, for although he could not beat Kildare, he made a good run for second place. Reward and Kildare had a little the benefit of the flag when it fell, but the deceptive stride of Reward did him but little good, for Kilnare soon passed him and was leading by five full lengths when the three-quarters was reached. At that point Joe Hoge was given his head, but he was not fleet of foot enough to catch the diminutive Irish named horse who won in a canter by two lengths from Hoge, Mozart third.

SUMMARY.

The fourth race was noticeable from the large amount of money wagered, and also from the fact that Al Farrow was again going to start, the race at San Jose and the story of his being pulled on the first day of the meeting, making him a somewhat notorious individual. He sold in the pools at the same price that the couple of Kelly and Samuels brought, but in the book betting he was favorite at 8 to 5. As the horse passed the wire on the first time around, Welcome was leading Farrow by a length, the latter held well in hand, the balance of the field bunched two lengths in the rear. Around the turn and down the back stretch the positions were not changed, except that White Cloud came away from the ruck and made play for the leaders, McGinnis being ten lengths in the rear. The pace was too much for the pinto and he fell back, McGinnis moving slowly up. Around the turn and into the homestretch Welcome still lead, Farrow catching her at the last eighth, McGinnis coming down close to the rail at great speed. Farrow passed Welcome, but could not keep up the pace, and McGinnis coming strong beat him out by two lengths, Welcome being third. The rider of Welcome made a complaint to the judges that Jockey Tompkins on Al Farrow had fouled the mare, the objection being sustained, and Farrow was relegated to last place, Laura Gardner getting third place.

The fifth and last race of the day was a special handicap at seven furlongs, in which Tom Daly, a northern importation, was made favorite at 8 to 5. Lady Helen and Nerva were the next two choices, although Ito received more or less support. When the flag fell Hello was the first away, Ito and Bessie Shannon close up. At the half Ito was in the lead, but the black could not keep the position, being quickly supplanted by Bessie Shannon, Viente and Hello. As they turned into the home stretch Hello was sent forward with a rare burst of speed, and quickly led his field, Tom Daly pressing him hard, but without effect, as he won by half a length, Daly second and Viente third.

FIFTH DAY.

Officers of the day: Judges, Messrs. Tarpey, Thornton, Walsh, Finigan and Dustin; timers, Messrs. Hickok, Carrol and Titus; clerk of course, Harry Lowden.

When the original programme was issued by the association, only four days racing were announced, but from the great interest manifested, an extra day was deemed not out of order, so the Centennial Inaugural day was added to the list, and a first class card arranged for the day. The great attractions in the city, it was thought by some, would keep the crowd away, but on the contrary, the largest gate receipt of the meeting was taken on Tuesday, which goes to prove that the public will support honest racing at any time, and just here it will not be out of place to say a good word for the Directors, who have given so much of their time, that all other business has had to be neglected, that the meeting might be a success. To a man, they have worked day and night, allowing nothing to go undone that would add to the comfort and pleasure of their patrons; races have been watched closely that no jobbery might be attempted and while at times the ruling of the judges may have seemed harsh to those interested, still the general public are satisfied that honest racing can be had in San Francisco, when held under the auspices of this association. The meeting has been a financial success and it is generally understood that at the Fall Meeting this year, the purses will be larger and the entries undoubtedly larger, as it is not the desire of the members of the association to make a profit but simply give good honest racing in the interest of the public who patronize, and have a love for the King of Sports.

A selling race was the opening attraction of the day for which there were five entries, four of the starters being old timers and well known by past performances, the only one who was not known to have any speed being Capt. Hobbe' bay colt Duke Spencer. He has started several times but never distinguished himself, and consequently went begging in the books at 10 to 1. When the flag fell Black Pilot was in the lead with Jou Jou and Lady Helen fighting for place, in which the old gelding came off best as before the wire was reached the first time he was in the lead, Black Pilot a shade better than Lady Helen. No change occured until the half was reached, where Pilot fell back and Duke Spencer took third place, Rosa Lewis also improved her position and very soon displaced Spencer. At the turn Murphy got another move on Spencer, the latter taking the bit between his teeth and made a runaway race of it, the boy not being able to hold him in. As the balance of the field turned into the stretch, Spencer was so far ahead that the contest was virtually over, he coming under the wire at least four lengths in advance of Black Pilot, who was two lengths ahead of Jou Jou.

The Try Again Stakes brought out four of the two-year-old division, but by common consent before they started the race was "all over barring the shouting," Guido first, Reata second, being the universal tip. Florilla was the first to show in front, with Guido at her girth, the two contesting every foot of the way, but the pace out out by Mr. Tupper's colt was too much for the Santa Anita filly and she quit at the first turn, where Guido had a full length of daylight between him and the second horse. In the middle of the turn Casey came with a rush on Reata and a furlong from the wire passed Florilla, but was only second to Guido who won by six lengths.

In honor of the day, the next stake was called the "Inaugural," for three-year olds, and four of that age came to the post. In the betting Geoffrey, the Palo Alto entry, was a strong favorite, with Flood Tide second choice. The start was a good one, Flood Tide and Joe Hoge being away first, with Geoffrey in close company. Geoffrey passed Hoge at the turn, and had a battle royal with Flood Tide, the others so far behind that they were really out of the fight. The two leaders went at it hammer and tongs, reaching the half, nose and nose in 53 seconds. Around the turn and into the homestretch they came as a team, not a particle of difference between them; as they came under the wire, from the reporters stand, it looked as though Geoffrey won by a short nose, but the judges announced it a dead heat, at which a great shout of approbation rose from the thousands present.

Bookbetting: Geoffrey even money, Wild Oats 4 to 1, Flood Tide 5 to 2, Joe Hoge 4 to 1.

The judges asked the owners what they would do, divide or run it off, and the latter alternative was chosen, so it was ordered that the two game sons of Flood should decide the question of supremacy, after the last race on the card was run off.

The Owners Handicap gave Al Farrow, Ed. McGinnis, White Cloud, Alabo and Geraldine, a chance to show their speed. This was probably the greatest betting race of the meeting, as the followers of Geraldine and Al Farrow were both convinced their respective favorites could win, consequently the gold fairly showered into the bookmakers boxes while the adherents of old White Cloud and Ed. McGinnis also backed their choices liberally. The race was one mile, Mr. Meagher relegating his position as starter to Henry Walsh, notwithstanding that, a San Francisco daily paper states to the contrary, and uses the following language. "The starting at the Bay District Track yesterday was something execrable. Captain T. F. Meagher's honesty is not questioned, but as a starter he has been a signal failure all through the meeting. The utter incompetency of the starter in handling the flag was never more fully demonstrated than yesterday, and the best thing the Blood Horse Association can do is to import a good starter from the East, if the place cannot be filled in California; else the Fall meeting of the Association will receive but faint support for local owners. Take for example, the start in the Geraldine race. To leave Ed. McGinnis at the post, the way he was, was—to put it mildly—a downright fiching of the money out of the pockets of those who had wagered on his chances."

The above is strong language to use, but as everyone was aware of the change, except the reporter who wrote the above, T. F. Meagher will not suffer from the screed, especially as the worst starts were made when he was not acting as starter.

When the flag fell Geraldine rushed to the front, White Cloud and Al Farrow being second and third, while McGinnis was virtually left at the post, at any rate getting such a bad send off that he was never in the hunt. Jockey Hart on Geraldine evidently thought he was going to have a very hard race, for he set off at a terrific speed going the first quarter in 23 seconds, here he pulled up a little, but even with the let up in the running, the mare reached the half-mile pole in 48 seconds, White Cloud in second place, Al Farrow third, and not running at all like the Al Farrow of old. "Gerry," as she is familiary called in the stable, had things all her own way and came under the wire two lengths to the good, without either the use of whip or spur in the remarkably fast time of 1:40¼. The performance stamps the mare as being one of the fastest animals in the world, for when coupled with the San Jose mile, it is easily seen that the first performance was no fluke, and it was evident to all present on Tuesday, if the mare had had a good runner up Tenbroeck's record would have been in danger.

The last event on the card was a Special Handicap of six furlongs for a purse of $250, and has nine starters, the Oregon horse Tom Daly being considered a sure winner but as "the best laid plans of mice and men gang aft aglie," so it was in this race, a rank outsider won easily, no one dreaming for a moment that Bessie Shannon could win. At the start the imported horse Hearst took the lead and out out the pace, Edwin F. following closely on his flank. At the half mile post it looked as though the Australian was going to have things all his own way, and he kept the lead until the last furlong post was passed when he quit, Bessie Shannon and Hello coming out of the ruck, making a game fight for the last sixteenth, but the mare outlasted the horse and won by a head, Longshot a good third. It afterwards transpired that Hearst was badly buck-shinned and had been blistered but a short time before, which accounted for his shutting up.

Immediately on the termination of the preceeding race, a rush was made for the betting ring, as the dead heat between Geoffrey and Flood Tide was to be run off. The odds varied in different books, but averaged about 2 to 5 Geoffrey, 6 to 5 Flood Tide. When the flag fell the Maltese Villa entry rushed off in the lead and got a length ahead, and on the back stretch increased the lead by another length. On the turn Morton moved up with Geoffrey and from the head of the homestretch there ensued one of the grandest finishes ever witnessed on a race course, they thundered down from the furlong post to the wire, neither being able to gain an advantage. As the pair passed the judges' stand a shout went up from the crowd and cries of "another dead heat" was heard on all sides. When the judges gave their decision it was in favor of Geoffrey, although this time from the reporter's stand, it looked as though they passed under the wire exactly even. Time, 1:57¼. Thus closed one of the most successful meetings ever held by the association and if all accounts are true there will be such a programme presented to the public this fall, that all former efforts will be outdone.

Missionaries and Breeders.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—The caption may seem awkward to some, and to others offensive; but after due consideration of the subject these will discern that the association of the two classes is appropriate and mutually commendatory. The main study and object of the missionary, in temporal concerns, is to redeem savage and cruel natures to humane conduct, to kindly feelings and actions. The missionary strives to teach and to instill into the nature of the unreclaimed barbarian the lessons of wholesome civilization and the examples of bettered humanity. In these are included man and beast. The savage who tortures or butchers the victim of his brutality and passion, or thirst of blood, is worse only in degree, but not in kind, than the civilized man who is cruel to the domestic beasts which are subject to his temper and rage. Each is possessed of similar barbarian and brutal nature, and each gratifies his passion or satiates his savagery to the measure of his opportunity, according to the methods of his tribe or the habits of his class and the license he is permitted. The true missionary labors to reclaim the heathen from this savagery, and to lead to reformation the low and vicious who live in enlightened communities. To do this more effectually in the case of the heathen he endeavors first to inculcate the lessons of Christianity and implant spiritual instruction. But to bring men of every race and every class to works of humanity, to good, kind spirit and gentle conduct, is the chief object of the missionary in the practical field of his christianizing labors.

It is an axiom that the man who is humane and kind to his beast is good in other qualities—to his family, to his neighbor, and in community. In this respect the good and humane breeder of his stock, of the domestic animals useful to mankind, worthily ranks with the missionary. As the purpose of this article is with regard to the care and treatment of horses, this noblest of the brute creation will be adapted in the consideration of the subject to embrace all.

It was the pithy remark of an observant and shrewd old English breeder and turfman, after he had witnessed the extraordinary and successful methods of John Rarey, the noted American trainer of horses in England, "I'll tell you what I think of it. What is wanted is good men to train our grooms, so that they will know how to train our horses." In many of the States are laws and societies for the protection of dumb animals from the cruelty of man. Henry Bergh wrought great reformation by his ceaseless vigilance, his exemplary prosecution of the law against offenders. But that species of legislation and punishment strikes at the top. At the root is the place to make connection. Instead of penal laws to fit the offence, there should be adopted the means to eradicate the evil. As with every reform, to begin at the beginning is the only effective mode. Teach those to whom the training of horses is committed that gentleness, patience and firmness are essential to observe in the care and handling of the animal, and impress it upon them that rough treatment and frequent recourse to the whip will not be tolerated and their selfish regard for hire and employment will bring them to compliance.

Rarey and Rockwell and other successful horse trainers employed only gentle and patient but resolute methods in bringing under complete subjection and to recognition of their mastery the most vicious horses, such as the English Cruiser and the Norman stallion Cognac, each having been wrought to excesses of brute savagery by ignorant, reckless and brutal training and handling. These horses had been fairly docile and gentle as colts, but brutish handling had so perverted their nature that each became actually dangerous, and each had torn grooms to death. By the intelligent, studious, gentle and firm methods of Rarey, Cruiser was reclaimed to thorough docility, and a follower of his system to whom Cognac was given in charge very nearly reclaimed that terror of the stud.

Horses the same as human beings possess their order of intelligence, which rises higher through blood, breeding, surroundings and situations. The heathen savage marks the lowest type of mankind; the thoroughbred exemplifies the highest type in the equine kingdom. The missionary who should go among heathen savages to convert them to Christianity, and practice toward them forcible methods, with the discipline of angry speech and the whip would have only himself to blame for the resultant torturies and violent death, and the missionaries who succeeded him would find their pious efforts much marred or utterly unavailing on account of his most unwise and exasperating methods of implanting Christian precepts and practices.

Similar consequences follow in the case of horses. Ignorant and brutal trainers affect the colt, as unfit and cruel school teachers affect the pupil. The boy of spirit, mettle and pluck will not submit to the rod, and the abuse of it subdues the yielding lad of gentle nature to the submissive condition of the craven. The high bred colt subjective to the mastery of a careless, inconsiderate, passionate and inhuman trainer is thereby spoiled in disposition and action. The horse discovers his feeling toward his groom or owner, agreeably as he is used or abused by either, quite as human species reveal and denote the similar quality. The best breeding and the higher intelligence are readily discernable to the practiced observer. The manner of training and handling the animal is made apparent by its look and action. Good trainers can be secured. It is difficult to replace a valuable horse hopelessly spoiled by careless or vicious training. Require trainers to practice only gentle and humane methods, and give employment to none who do not, and good trainers will become more numerous, qualified for the service, to the material benefit of the breeder and the great improvement of his horses.

The increasing attention devoted to the breeding of horses, the great enhancement in the value of superior breeds and grades, and the rapidly growing demand for these qualities in every quarter of the enlightened world, with the wealth there is to promote and sustain this demand, and the noble pride and gratifying profit there is in this field of commendable enterprise, devolve upon all engaged to it the appreciation of the importance of advancement to the best methods in every essential to the development of the higher types for every requirement. In this the training holds material place.

As to the benefit of careful and methodical training, one example will suffice, and it is adopted without intention of invidious discrimination, with the remark that similar examples exist at other breeding farms now famous in California. Palo Alto is selected on account of its wider celebrity, and as its owner, Senator Stanford, is conspicuous among the foremost in the promulgation and practice of this sound gospel of the humane care, the kind treatment of the horse, allied with the strong qualities which are essential in the thorough training of the noble animal from foaling to exercise and usefulness through life. Particular care is observed in the management of the yearling—that it shall be gentle and considerate, so as to ensure in the horse the docility and action which warrant ease and safety in the use or handling by any. The boy or the man whose treatment of the colt demonstrates unfitness or incapacity for the employment is replaced by another who is well qualified. The vicious teaching of colts, by teasing or tricks, is not tolerated. Biting and kicking, the tremulous fear of the whip, shying and fright, and other faults or consequences of reckless or vicious training are not witnessed in the colts of Palo Alto. To correct faults and eradicate them, not to beget and provoke them, is the study and command. This system assures that the high bred colts shall be also well bred colts—suitable for saddle, harness, or the turf.

But the redeeming labors of the breeder reach faster than their effect upon the horses, as the benefits which flow from good mission work extend beyond the individual, and have good effect throughout the tribe or community. The reformation which converts from evil to good in one quality, works to similar benefit upon other qualities. The missionary reclaimes the heathen savage to Christian civilization, to better methods of life in every walk. The good example affects others to the same purpose, and the native savagery with its proneness to brutality and lust of blood is eradicated, and to it succeeds laudable humanizing tendencies and conduct.

The labors of the enlightened breeder lead from carelessness, recklessness, cruelty and brutality in the treatment of the horse to humane and better methods. The trainer is taught, and is affected in a measure as the horse is. Gentleness begets gentility, as recklessness begets violence, and indulgence of passion begets brutish deeds. The example spreads. That which is at first wrought through compulsion is finally accepted as a duty and meritorious, and is followed as a good example. The disposition of the man reclaimed is changed from perversity to betterment, and he is turned to strive for excellence in his general demeanor. The whip is discarded from the stable as the cruel Spanish bit has been excluded from use in most enlightened lands. The nature of the horse is studied, and his training is adapted to the prime object—that of bettering him to the utmost. In training the animal the trainer schools and improves himself. The horse becomes more valuable to the breeder, and brings higher price in the market. The benefit ramifies in every direction, extends to every one concerned—is of profit to all. And as the missionary is an exampler in Christianity, the breeder is a benefactor to man and beast alike. J. O'M.

Robert Bonner Objects.

He Does Not Believe Tips a Good Substitute For Shoes.

Several weeks ago we published a long article, copied from the New York Sun, on the merits of tips and toe weights. From the same ground we cut the following, which gives an opposite view of the question, and from as high an authority as Robert Bonner:—

"Ever since the two California stallions, Anteeo and Antevolo, were purchased and brought to the Eastern States horsemen have been discussing the merits of the method employed by their breeder, Joseph Cairn Simpson, in shoeing these fast young trotters. Mr. Simpson, as recently reported in the Sun, has used light shoes, called tips, which cover only about half of the wall of the foot, on all his horses for several years, and the fact that he was able to give Anteeo and Antevolo records better than 2:20, although Anteeo made his fastest mark in shoes, and to win several races with them, has naturally caused practical turfmen and lovers of a speedy horse to give some consideration to the system of shoeing advocated by Mr. Simpson. One important consideration is the effect of the use of tips on trotters that have been trained and campaigned with this half covering for the feet.

"When J. W. Knox arrived at Lexington during the recent combination sales held in that city, bringing Anteeo along, the horse was critically examined, and, of course, the condition of his feet and legs was carefully examined by many. Some contended that Anteeo's legs showed the wear and tear of racing more then they should under ordinary circumstances, and argued that in his case tips had been an injury. In fact, Anteeo has two well-developed ringbones, which the anti-tip people cite as conclusive evidence against this style of shoe. Mr. Simpson claims that the ringbones came after Anteeo passed out of his hands, when he was shod in the ordinary way and given a mark of 2:16¼. Mr. Knox himself, though a horseman of long experience, having owned Nutwood and other choice stock, is evidently not a convert to the Simpson faith, for he gives it as his opinion that 'any man who shoes a horse with tips should be arrested for cruelty to animals.'

Other persons interested in breeding and developing trotters that have visited California, report that Mr. Simpson has no following among the leading horsemen and breeders on the Pacific Coast in the matter of tips, though he has continually presented his pet theory in his paper, the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN, in addition to having written a book on the subject.

Mr. P. C. Kellogg, the well-known auctioneer of this city, who crossed the Rockies last year and inspected the famous stock farms of the Golden State, is authority for the statement that Antevolo's feet are badly contracted from toe to heel, being much narrower at the ground surface than at the coronet, and that in showing the stallion to him, Mr. Simpson apologized for the condition of the trotter's hoofs, and said it was owing to a lack of moisture.

Mr. Robert Bonner, who has been the friend and patron of trotters for more than thirty years, was seen at his home on West Fifty-sixth Street recently, and asked to give some of the results of his experience in shoeing horses. While Mr. Bonner has given much time and attention to everything connected with his favorite animal, and has studied the problems of breeding, training and driving as few men outside of the ranks of professional horsemen have done, the care of the foot has been his particular hobby, and he has spared no pains or expense to make a thorough investigation of this special subject.

Mr. Bonner said that he had not had an opportunity to read carefully the article on the use of tips which recently appeared in the "Sun," but he had heard it referred to briefly by a friend the day after it appeared. "I have read Mr. Simpson's book 'Tips and Toe-Weights,' and have followed him in his paper since he began to advocate the use of tips instead of shoes for horses' feet," said Mr. Bonner, "and my opinion briefly is that the tip is not an improvement on the regulation shoe."

"What is your chief objection to tips?"

"Because they violate the fundamental law that a horse's foot must be perfectly poised or balanced in order that he may attain his speed without strain or injury to his foot or leg."

"As a practical illustration of what this balance is, Mr. Bonner took the reporter's arm and held it out somewhat as a tailor would in measuring one for a coat, placing the hand with the fingers pointing upward.

"When I press against the lower part of your hand below the thumb," said Mr. Bonner, suiting the action to the word, "you feel no discomfort, and you can resist quite a force against that part. But when I press against the tips of your fingers, so, you feel a strain at once, and it would be easy to cause you pain by using more strength."

The reporter admitted the truth of this from the experiment, and awaited explanations.

"That pressure of the lower part of your hand," continued Mr. Bonner, "corresponds to what happens whan a horse that is properly shod places his foot on the ground, in walking, trotting, or going any of the gaits. Every part of the wall of the foot receives the concussion equally and the animal incurs no injury. On the other hand, if the foot is not properly poised the blow comes at an angle, the sensitive tendons or cords are strained, and some one of the many ailments that cripple the horse is the result.

"It is my belief, based on practical experience," said Mr. Bonner, "that the only sensible way to protect a horse's foot is to protect the entire wall, and I do not believe in a shoe which covers only the toe. If any one has driven horses in tips, and given them fast records, it has been in spite of the tips and not because of their use. When I was a young man in the Courant office at Hartford, I heard a merchant say of a man who was then over 80 years old:

" 'He always drank his glass of New England rum, and it did him good'. It would be quite as logical to claim that a man can prolong his life by drinking rum as to say that the use of tips will enable a horse to trot fast and keep his feet and legs sound."

An extract from The Sun article was then read, giving Mr. Bedford's experience with his mare Kitty Patchen, who was cured of lameness and contraction by being shod in tips.

"It is possible that in some cases where there is a peculiar defect or deformity in the foot," said Mr. Bonner, "the use of a tip may serve to balance, and thus enable the horse to recover from previous bad treatment or natural disability; but the same results can be obtained by the proper use of the whole shoe. As to their aiding an animal to go fast, I have no doubt there are horses that can go as fast in tips as in shoes, just as they could trot barefooted. My own mare Manetta can go about as fast barefooted as in shoes. I remember seeing her trot a mile when unshod in 2:17¼, driven by her groom. Murphy drove her that way in 2:17, and her fastest trial in shoes with Murphy behind her is 2:16¼. Maud S., on the other hand, could not trot at all if shod with tips, as she requires an entire shoe to balance her properly, though her gait is all any one could desire. When I purchased Maud from Mr. Vanderbilt she was not shod as I thought she should be; in fact; one leg had been ailing, and had been cased in ice to reduce the fever, but under the treatment followed since then the mare has not taken a lame step, her feet and legs are perfect, and the records are the best proof of how her speed increased."

When Mr. Bonner bought Maud S. her record was 2:09¾. She has trotted in 2:09¼ and 2:08¾ since that time, besides her numerous private trials in harness and to wagon.

Referring again to the Simpson theory, Mr. Bonner remarked: "It is strange, if the plan pursued by him is the proper one, that the leading breeders and horsemen in his own State do not follow his example. During the recent sale of California stock here I met Messrs. Rose, Corbett and Valensin, all large breeders of trotters, and all opposed to tips. I am also informed they are not used by Marvin, Senator Stanford's trainer at Palo Alto.

The case of the grey gelding Jack, that Budd Doble drove in tips last year, was cited, and Mr. Bonner replied: "Yes, he trotted very well shod that way, but you may not have heard that when Doble returned to Chicago he lowered Jack's heels, as I suggested to him when he was here last September, and he showed him a faster mile than he had ever trotted previously; at least so Mr. Wm. L. Simmons, the Kentucky breeder, stated to me as coming from Budd Doble himself."

Mr. Bonner said that he could cited many cases where he had been asked by friends to examine and prescribe for a horse that had gone lame, but he would rather that some one else gave the testimony. He showed the reporter a letter received in January from J. S. Brown, Westerly, R. I., which stated that the method Mr. Bonner had suggested for shoeing Mr. Brown's stallion Mount Morris, who had gone lame after getting a record of 2:19½ at Utica, had resulted in absolutely relieving the horse from his lameness.

A New Racing Rule.

According to the By-Laws of the Pacific Coast Blood Horse Association, the Directors are not allowed to change any of the racing rules, but any member can give notice that he intends to move for a change at the next annual meeting of the association. In pursuance of this by-law Carlton Coleman, Esq., at a late meeting of the Directors, gave notice that he would add to the racing rules the following clause:

"Any owner, trainer or jockey running horses at the meetings of this association who shall loan his colors to another person or allow them to be used on any horse other than his own, shall be subject to all penalties that may be incurred in the race by the person to whom the colors were loaned or the horse upon which the colors were ridden."

Secretary Culver has handed us the above for publication, as it is necessary that the resolution should be placed prominently before the public.

The sporting writer in "Truth" says:—"It is the imperative duty of the stewards of the Jockey Club to investigate the recent transactions in connection with Acme. The moral sensibilities of the Newmarket divan are deplorably fluctuating; but, after all the chatter that has been raised about the firm resolution of the stewards to punish any irregularities which may come under their notice, it is ridiculous that they should view the Acme business with stupid unconcern. The 'Sporting Times' rightly maintains that a sharp detective would soon be able to discover the truth, and everyone knows that in all such cases the springs of action are to be found in the ring. Who were the people who backed Acme at the long odds when he had been kicked out?" Probably it was somebody acting on behalf of Don Juan Bocau, whoever the Don may be.

Grim's Gossip.

Broadchurch and Arthur H. have been declared out of the American Derby.

The match race between Geraldine and Al Farrow for $1,000 has been declared off.

Walter Maben is jogging Dubec along about 2:25 at Rosemeade, Los Angeles county.

Marion, who was bred to Norfolk some weeks ago, has also been stinted to Joe Hooker.

Mr. Rose tells me that Alcazar will be trotted again this fall, as his bad leg has entirely disappeared.

The great English horse Donovan is now selling at evens for the Derby. He has also been heavily backed at 7 to 4 on for the £2,000.

The Chicago Horseman has moved from its old quarters to the large and commodious quarters situated at 323 and 325 Dearborn street.

The Baldwin string has arrived at Louisville in excellent condition, the only ailing one being Ganymede, who has a slight cough.

The Daily Racing World and the San Leonado Reporter are the only two papers which have given the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN credit for issuing the programmes.

It is reported that one of the valuable brood mares brought by Mr. Valensin from Kentucky lately, is dead. We have received no positive information about the matter, however.

The horses in the Castle stable are headed by Diablo, who promises to turn out a first-class three-year-old. He has not been pressed in his work, but has gone a half in 51 seconds.

Owing to an oversight, it was last week stated that Winchell rode Flood Tide when he won. It should have been Hart, who deserves every credit for his brilliant performances.

The celebrated Minhehaha has a horse colt standing by her side, by Stamboul. He is a very dark bay, with a white star in forehead, and there is very much of the Stamboul look about him.

Prior to the races on Tuesday last the odds laid against the American Derby winner was Proctor Knot, 10; Sorrento, 25; The Czar, 20. The odds now are, Proctor Knot, 12; Sorrento, 15; The Czar, 10.

George Hankins of the Chicago Stable has offered $22,000 for Proctor Knott, but Bryant refuses to part with the Futurity and Junior Champion winner for less than $25,000, and the sale has fallen through.

Mr. W. H. Wilson, of Abdallah Park, Cynthiana, Ky., writes me that his annual catalogues will be ready for distribution next week. Any person desirous of obtaining one should address an application as above.

A rumor is current that Matt Storn has offered $10,000 for Racine, but was not accepted. I do know positively that C. V. Tupper was tendered $1,500 for the little sorrel Guido, but he would not listen to the offer.

A telegram says that at the Newmarket spring meeting the 2 000 guineas stakes for three-year-olds, one mile, was won by Douglass Baird's colt Enthusiast, Duke of Portland's colt Donovan second, Abington's colt Pioneer third.

The Blood Horse meeting has drawn down many of my old Butte County friends, among the number being Congressman Briggs, Col. W. L. Perkins, E. W. Fogg, Assemblyman Burwell, Major Frank McLaughlin and L. H. McIntosh.

Tom Hazlitt will go from Denver to Chicago, and from there to the Twin Cities with his string, and hopes to pick up some shekels with Laura and Brady, while his two-year-olds are very promising, though short of work at present.

They were coming out of the gate together, and the taller of the two had evidently lost some money, for I heard her say to the lady beside her: "I would like to meet the man that steered me onto Mozart; I wouldn't leave him hair enough to swear by."

The time given in the So So stakes for the winner is in all probability wrong, as fully forty watches caught the time at 1:13¾, even the judges making it that. Mr. Hickok made it 1:13¾, but as the other two timers made it 1:14¼ he gave in to them, and the latter time given as official.

The horses at the Brooklyn Jockey Club track which attract most attention are those in Dwyer Bros.' stable. Hanover, as a matter of course, is the great synosure of all eyes; the horse looks lusty and well, and is much advanced in preparation, and will doubtless represent the stable in the Brooklyn handicap.

I heard a rumor last fall that Frank Harper of the Nantur Stock Farm was going to prepare the filly Valuable to try and beat the record of Ten Broeck, 1:39¼. A telegram states that the attempt will be made at the next Louisville meeting. Valuable is by Ten Broeck, dam Lizzie Stone, and is reputed very fast.

The Baltimore book on the Brooklyn Handicap has been marked full on Exile, the old horse having been heavily backed by parties in this city, the owner of the horse, William Lakeland, and David Johnson, the bookmaker, being two who got about 30 to 1 against him for their money.

An intelligent reporter on one of the evening papers says that R. Porter Ashe had been cited before the board, to show cause why Geraldine was beat in the three-quarter race, that White Cloud won. Nothing of the kind was ever dreamed of.

That good all round horseman James Dustin, of Oakland, was in the judges' stand during the racing at the track last Tuesday, and he showed as much knowledge of the bang tails as he knows of trotters, and that is not a little by any means.

Mr. Dalmas, a well known steeple chaser, called in last Wednesday to see me. He is now ranching in the State, but still has a hankering for the illegitimate game and hopes to have a ride across the sticks or timber before the year is out. Oakland used to have a steeplechase or two in bygone years. Why don't they revert to it again, for what prettier sight can there be than a nice field of chasers?

Cy Mulkey has sub-leased from C. V. Tupper, the racing qualities of the two-year-old Guido, and also Al Farrow.

The Duke of Portland after winning the Prince of Wales Stakes at Leicester, denoted £1000 to the Leicester Infirmary. Is not that a much better way than giving riders excessive presents, and thus encouraging cupidity? Some of our prominent racing men might vary the monotony, by giving a few thousand to establish a home for infirm jockeys instead of giving their money to rich and prosperous riders.

Dan Hennesey spoilt a nice race last Tuesday when Samuels offered to bet Porter Ashe a thousand that McGinnis could beat Geraldine weight for age one mile. Had they been left to themselves, a match would have resulted, but Dan jumped in, asking whether the horse was expected to race every day in the week, and added, "Sure, he has had work enough for the present. Wait till Sacramento."

Frank Van Ness is in trouble at Clifton. It is claimed he has been doctoring the pedigree of a colt called Kenneth, which he has been running. He described the colt as three years old, by Mr. Pickwick, dam Kate McDonald. Charles Reed says the pedigree is not "straight." Van Ness has letters from W. L. Collins of Frankfort, Ky., who says the pedigree is correct.

One of our enterprising dailies in its Sunday edition says that Dan McCarty shipped his horses East that morning, and furthermore states that Bedford, St. David and Hidalgo will again try their speed with the fastest horses at Sheepshead Bay. Did Dan furnish the information, or who did? Can't think Dan intends starting his trotters against Sam Harper and Firenzi.

Fullerton, who ran second for the "City and Suburban" on the 6th of April, is reported sold to a Buenos Ayres syndicate for the special purpose of beating Bismarck, who was sold to go to Buenos Ayres last fall. The price is said to be £5,000. He is by Touchet, dam Caroline by Musket, out of Carine by Stockwell, so that for stud purposes he cannot be dear. Why do not some of our enterprising Americans go out and have a shy at both of them with an American horse. There is a barrel of money in it if they can beat the pair.

The Petaluma track has been nearly covered with a coating of clay mixed with sand, and those who have seen it declare that it is now the best in the State. Before the covering was put on, the old surface was thoroughly ploughed up to a depth of six inches so that the new covering might mix well with the soil. The directors have determined that nothing shall stand in the way of making the next meeting the most successful one ever held in Sonoma Co.

How is this for news. The following telegram was sent from San Francisco to the Eastern news papers. "It transpires that the reason C. V. Tupper did not let Dwyer Bros. have Al Farrow for $20,000 is because he only has a lease of the horse's running qualities. The lease expires next November. A Mr. Walters, of Fort Bidwell, Modoc County, Cal., owns the animal, and offered him not long since to Tupper for $18,000, but he did not secure him; otherwise he would doubtless be on his way to the Dwyers' stable."

Sam Bryant started Conie To Taw in the two thousand on Thursday to win, while Proctor Knott was out for the place. It was current gossip at Nashville that such was Bryant's intention, and the stable money was placed accordingly. In some few instances Proctor Knott was backed outright by people who imagined Conie To Taw was not good enough to win, but the owner evidently knew what he was about and showed good judgment in saving his gelding and also preventing his incurring a penalty for the Derby.

Salvator, who was expected to be the sensational three-year-old of the year, has been veey sick with others of Mr. J. B. Haggin's horses at Monmouth Park, says the N. Y. Times. Lung fever has been the trouble, and Fresno, Yum Yum, Aurelin and other horses in the string have been sufferers, though Firenzi fortunately escaped the disease, whose consequences every trainer dreads so much. The trouble will probably keep the Haggin lot back for some time, as Mr. Byrnes will hardly ask the horses to do any hard work until all traces of the disease have been removed by treatment.

The race for the City and Suburban handicap of 15 sovereigns each, with 1000 sovereigns added, the owner of the second horse to receive 50 sovereigns out of the stakes, for three-year-olds and upward, winning penalties, about one mile and a quarter, was won by Mr. Leybourne's four-year-old bay colt Goldseeker, by The Miser, out of Swallow. Lord Dudley's six-year-old brown horse Fullerton, by Touchel, out of Caroline, was second, and Sir R. Jardine's four-year-old chestnut colt Wiseman, by Wisdom, out of Sweet Jessie, third. There were 19 starters.

'In Re' the Al Farrow case, E. J. Baldwin made an offer at the first hearing of the case to bet $5,000 that Al Farrow could beat any horse in the race; the mere fact of offering to bet did not prove anything and certainly could not be called evidence. Mr. Baldwin had a chance last Wednesday to back his fancy against one of the starters in the doubtful race and distinctly declined, saying that he did not keep his offer open for five months. He also said that he was in earnest when he made the proposition but had slightly changed his mind after seeing the further running of the horse.

Last Tuesday, a great combination sale of thoroughbreds took place at Lexington, Ky., the produce of Woodburn, Runnymede, and Coldstream being sold. Mr. L. U. Shippee, of Stockton, purchased two yearlings at the sale, one being a full sister to Jennie T., by Falsetto, dam Queen Victoria by Lexington, 2nd dam Magenta (dam of Duke of Magenta, Larkin and Duke of Montalban) by imp. Yorkshire, 3rd dam Miriam, by imp. Glencoe. The other one purchased was a bay filly, by Falsetto, dam Glenluine (dam of Troubadour and Windrush) by imp. Glenelg, 2nd dam Lute by Lexington, 3rd dam Lulu Hornton, by imp. Albion. The two were purchased for $3,000 which is not out of the way considering the breeding.

This item should be read by all parties who are liable to be in the judge's stand. The following is the objection laid against The Saxon after he had won the Blackrock Hunters' race at Leopardston: "I object to The Saxon being declared the winner of the Hunters' hurdle race, because that the wrong wetght was carried; and also because that the horse was entered in Mrs. Tiernan's name to avoid the penalty attached to Mr. Tiernan, who is in the forfeit list." Signed, "W. FULTON." The former part of the protest was disallowed, but the latter section sustained, and the horse consequently disqualified.

The little trotting beauty Lady Whitefoot, with which Jack Feek surprised the talent at Cleveland last season, and landed a snug fortune, giving her a record of 2:18¼, will be campaigned by Budd Doble this year. She is by William M. Ryskyk, son of Rysdyk's Hambletonian; dam by Matthews' Black Hawk, a descendant of Vermont Black Hawk.

An Australian bred horse won the Billesdon Handicap at six furlongs at Leicester, England, carrying 114 pounds, and was their objected to under the Plais auterie rule, which says that a horse must have been habitually trained in the United Kingdom, or have run twice there during the preceding six months of the racing season before he can be handicapped. This rule was passed after the French mare won the double event (Cambridge & Cesarewitch). The objection in this case was overruled, and the Australian got the race. He (Ringmaster) is by First King, dam Yardley.

Last week I mentioned that Acme had been sold to go to Don Juan Bocau.

Who is Don Juan Bocau? the English racing public would like to know. Judging from the various sporting papers, he is a mythical personage, and (if in the flesh) very hard to beat, for a telegram was sent in his name, stating that Acme would not run at Lincoln; yet he was steadily backed by a mysterious coterie, and went to the post a better favorite than ever. Whether the Jockey Club will hold an investigation or not no one seems to know.

More trouble and lack of condition are caused by ulcerated teeth than is generally supposed. Such teeth should be promptly removed with forceps. There is no reason to doubt that a horse with ulcerated teeth suffers as intensely from toothache as a human subject. Irregular growth or fractures of the enamel on the outer edges makes the teeth so rough as to injure the inside of the cheek, sometimes causing ulcers. In other cases some of the grinders grow more slowly than others, and fail to meet those in the opposite jaw, causing what is called "quidding" or imperfect mastication of the food. The remedy is to file the teeth into the proper shape. Horse dentistry is now recognized as an important branch of veterinary practice.—American Agriculturalist.

The 200 guineas was won by Douglas Baird's chestnut colt Enthusiast; Donovan, the hottest favorite we have seen for years, ran second. Enthusiast, who was bought by Mr. Baird at the Yardley yearling sale, is own brother to Energy and Enterprise (Sterling—Cherry Duchess). Energy was one of the best sprinters in the Grafton Scarlet a few years ago, while Enterprise won the 2,000 in '87, and had his forelegs been better would have made a lasting mark. Enthusiast was easily beaten by Donovan in the rich Prince of Wales stakes, finishing fourth. He is a good, hard chestnut, deep bodied, short backed, well ribbed, with exceptionally good, flat legs and sound feet, and judging from his general conformation, ought to have a brilliant future before him.

Admirers of that game two-year-old colt, French Park, who was thrown out of training last year owing to a slight accident to one of his hoofs, will be glad to know that there is now no good reason for doubting that he will stand the hard work of training. He is more carefully watched than any horse at Jerome Park, and, while he has not been asked to do any very fast work, he has up to the present time done all that his trainer, Hyland, has asked him to do, and responded cheerfully, and as if he enjoyed his work. If he retains his old speed and all continues to go as well in the future as in the past, he will probably be able to give all the three-year-olds about here all they want to do to beat him. His stable companion, Radiant, keeps improving; is nearly fit for a race now, and promises to make one of those very good little ones that every horse owner likes to have in his string. He is honest, a hard worker, a good feeder, and will be a good winner during the year.

Spuyten Tuyvel—Yum Yum, Winfield, Laramie, Magnetic.
Decoration—Yum Yum, Salvator.
Arrow—Robert Adams, Lady Margaret, Magnetic, Saracen, Lannes, Winfield, and the Glengarry—Rosa Clark colt.
Harlem—Penman, Magnetic, Lannes, Winfield, Lady Margaret, and the Glengarry—Rosa Clark colt.
Bronx—Melrose, Wabassa, Lady Margaret, Magnetic, Saracen and Winfield.
Minimum—Triana, Flora Ban, Pauline F., Australand, Masterlode, Pilgrim, Beckie Knott, Felipa, and the Lyttleton—Massification filly.
Yonkers—Triana, Flora Ban, Pauline F., Rosetta, Australand, Cadet (dead), Index and Masterlode.
Sequence—Beckie Knott, Cornelia, Australand, Masterlode, Rosette and Cadet.
Maximum—Australand, Rosette, Ten Shiner, Masterlode, and the Springbok—Easter Planet colt.
Encore—Despair.

About twenty years ago, writes Thomas B. Armitage in the Kentucky Stock Farm, Hambletonian's service fee was $500, and that was considered an unapproachable figure for generations to come; yet, to-day there are several stallions with books full at that price. Recently I was bid $1,000 cash for the privilege of using the service of Electioneer, which Senator Stanford had presented to me (and which I purpose using for myself this year), a price never before equaled for the service of a trotting stallion, and double that commanded by his own sire. Who doubts that Electioneer would readily command $1,500 to $2,000 a mare, if he were in Kentucky? These figures will illustrate the probabilities that are yet in store for trotting stock. Stamboul sold for $50,000, and $75,000 has since been bid for him, and it will not be long before $100,000 will be the ruling price for our best stock, and $1,000 to $1,500 the stud fee for our great stallions. I expect to see the best trotting-bred brood-mares command from $25,000 to $30,000 within five years.

A Hot Finish.

[By G. A. Sykes.]

I am by profession a jockey, and the incident I am about to relate occurred on one of the large Eastern tracks last summer. I was standing in the paddock one afternoon, when the owner of a small string of horses—a Captain Folsom—came up to me and said: "Charlie, my boy, I've done a good deal for you at one time and another, and now I'm going to ask you to do something for me; to speak plainly to save me from going to smash. I have had nothing but bad luck lately, and unless I make a big haul with Dragon in the Glenwood I shall have to go under, for I can't meet my last week's obligations."

I knew that the Captain had been very unfortunate lately, but never thought that he was so low, for it was the general impression that this veteran turfite was fabulously wealthy; however, repeated losses on the turf will eventually sink the largest fortune.

Captain Folsom had been very kind to me in the past, and it was mainly through his influence that I had been promoted from stable boy to jockey, and I had long wanted an opportunity to prove my gratitude to him. He had a four-year-old entered for the Glenwood Handicap; a magnificent brute he was, too, with a wonderful turn of speed, but with such a devil's own temper and obstinate disposition that he never would run when wanted to. The Captain had lost large sums of money on Dragon, for he well knew that the horse was a flyer when he felt disposed to gallop, and the question had often been discussed how to make him feel disposed; but no solution had as yet been discovered.

My stable had nothing entered for the race, so I was free to ride for any one, and willingly promised to do my best to bring Dragon under the wire first. I cautioned the Captain against risking much on the result of the race, but he informed me that he had every dollar that he could possibly rake up invested on the horse, and it literally meant "make or break" for him.

That Dragon was speedy I knew, and if he only chose to run had his horses practically beaten; still there was one animal in the race—a big, rakish, easy-going chestnut called Huron—that I knew was fast enough to make it very interesting for me on my present erratic mount, and to add to the chances against me. Huron was gifted with an amiable disposition, and would do his utmost whenever and wherever called upon. I have changed the names of the horses and owners for obvious reasons, but the facts are almost literally as they transpired.

While weighing for the race, just before the saddling-bell rang, I noticed that Captain Folsom's face was as pale as death, and that his hands were twitching convulsively as he watched Dragon plunging and kicking. Usually the Captain awaited the result of a race with imperturbable features, and his conduct now, so different to his usual self, made me realize fully how much this race meant to him, and I mentally vowed to do my utmost to bring the generous, good-hearted Captain's colors first past the judges' stand.

Dragon was quoted at long odds in the betting when the post-bell rang, and I sent a little money into the ring to back my mount, more from sympathy with the Captain than from hope of winning. When we were at the post Dragon behaved like a demon, and got the starter, the jockeys and myself thoroughly out of temper. Many false starts were made, and once more the starter drops his flag and the field breaks away in a bunch, leaving Dragon kicking at the post.

Suddenly he snatched the bridle almost out of my grasp, tears after the horses like a mad creature, and I pulled and fought until my arms ached before I got control of him again. We were now two lengths behind the last horse, and gradually I crept up with my field, which fortunately had not been going very fast, so Dragon did not feel regaining his lost ground as he might have done, still I was concerned to find that he was more winded than I would wish considering the work we had to do yet.

One by one I worked through my horses, nursing Dragon as much as possible, and easing him by every means in my power. Now I was running third, next to the rails, with Huron right in front of me, and a little chestnut gelding making the running two lengths ahead of him.

On we went, the thud of the flying hoofs ringing strangely in my ears, and Huron kicking up the mud all over me. Faster and faster does the little chestnut in front make the pace as we get near the straight, and round the bend we swung in the same order. Now we are in the homestretch, and now for the tussle; the contest of speed, endurance and riding ability, and it is pace that kills.

The track all the way around has been heavy, and my mount feeling the effects of that burst at the start. Dragon, if you had started properly with the rest, this race would be ours already.

The gelding shoots his bolt and falls back beaten; it is another instance of survival of the fittest, and the race is now between Huron and myself.

I steady my horse in his stride. He is doing better now, and I wonder if he can finish brilliantly. Huron is in front still, leading a red-hot pace, but he is starting to finish too far from home, and is making his rush too soon. Now he is beginning to falter, and Luke, his jockey, starts riding in dead earnest. I also call on Dragon to do a little better, but I have to do it with the nicest care, for I must have a little in hand to finish with. Inch by inch I creep up to the girths in front of me—inch by inch he comes back to my horse's neck, and the wire is not more than eight lengths ahead.

I hear a confused roar of voices, and can distinguish in a dim way above the rest, "Huron wins!" "Dragon's done!" "Huron wins!" But no! Huron has not won yet. Now, Dragon, now! I'm calling on you to save your owner; stretch yourself as you never did before. I grip him with my knees and lift him through the mud at every stride, and, though he is tiring all too rapidly, he makes a gallant response to my appeal, and it is now neck and neck, nose and nose—a struggle that calls for every sinew and muscle in both horses and riders. Huron is rocking badly, and makes a miss in his stride; he is about exhausted; and I make one last rush, and Dragon shoots past the judges, a winner by a neck!

I was reeking with perspiration. The strain had been something terrible, and while riding back to the paddock nearly fainted from exhaustion. I felt more than repaid, however, when I saw the glad light in Captain Folsom's eyes, and heard his earnest words of thanks; also, I had the additional satisfaction of receiving my winnings from the sum I had sent into the ring. It was the opinion of everybody that, had Huron not stumbled, the race would have resulted in a dead-heat. Huron strained a sinew in his off fore leg, and was not able to run again until very late in the season, when he met Dragon in a five furlong race, and beat him by four lengths, Dragon sulking all the way round the track—The Horseman.

The Osborne Steel Frame Self-Binder.

An interesting adaptation of unusual means to an end, which might be deemed characteristic of the wide-awake rancher of California, is in the use of the Steel Frame Self-Binder for hay making, manufactured by Messrs D. M. Osborne & Co., Auburn, N. Y., whose local office is on Bluxome street, between Fifth and Sixth, San Francisco. The Binder was of course primarily designed for harvesting grain, and its general use by the leading grain farmers of the State gives the best possible assurance of its perfect adaptability to that purpose. But in addition to the demand for the splendid machine for that use, there is a call for it from all sections where hay is made. The Self-Binder is made almost wholly of steel and malleable iron, and combines with extraordinary ingenuity the indispensable qualities, lightness and durability, besides being beautiful in design and simple in mechanism.

Messrs. D. M. Osborne & Co. possessing their own rolling mills, were first to substantiate steel for the cumbersome wood frames, the cast parts being mainly of malleable iron, particularly the binder gearing, road wheel and other important parts, thus securing lightness with the greatest possible strength. The drive wheel is made in sections, with very wide face, thereby securing lightness of draft. The entire frame of the machine is made of angle steel, while the finger bar is made of extra thick, double angle steel, which cannot sag or warp, thereby always securing easy play for the knife, which has a short pitman, and has a direct connection with the crank head. The bottom is secured by a steel-protecting plate, riveted to the finger bar and bottom of platform, which can be raised or lowered at will, leaving a stubble from three inches to two feet, according to the length of straw or notion of those using binder, thus allowing the shortest or tallest grain to be handled, as the elevators are five feet wide. The binding attachment is automatic, leaving the bundles of uniform size, the whole making one of the most perfect and complete machines ever invented, and one which is comparatively indestructible.

In its application to hay binding it presents advantages which entitle it to the commanding place it holds. Raking, and consequent clods, sand, leaves and grit are avoided by its use, although they are unavoidable where the old-fashioned mower is used. The hay is deposited in well tied bundles, compact and convenient for hauling, storage and feeding. The hay cures perfectly in the bundles, preserving its life and nutritious properties without bleaching. Twine is the binding material used, and is readily renewed, thus eliminating danger of injury from the wire fastening formerly used; and when to all other advantages is added the crowning virtue, that making hay by the Osborne Self-Binder costs less per acre than when any other appliance is used, there is certainly justification for unreserved commendation of the machine.

There may be Californian farmers who do not know the Osborne Self-Binder, but there can be none who do not know and respect Mr. L. J. Rose, the famous horseman, and he has this to say of the machine:

SAVANNAH, Cal., March 3, 1887.

Messrs. D. M. Osbourne & Co.—Gentlemen: I want to say for your benefit that the No. 11 Steel Frame Binder we purchased of your agent last year, cut my crop of three hundred acres without a single break, and was put up at the end of the season in good order, ready for this year's work.

We started it early in the season, cutting and binding for hay which was thought by some rather hazardous, but your agent was so sanguine that the green grain would cure, that we cut our hay and it proved sweet, clean and good. It will make fine hay; if the bundles are stood in ricks they will never mould or spoil. We have more hay to cut this year and shall put it all up this way. Yours,

L. J. Rose.

The Self-Binders are of two sizes, cutting five and six feet; and can be adjusted to shave the ground almost as close as a mower. Messrs. Osborne & Co., also have mowers cutting 4½, 5 and 6 feet; also, single reapers, and combined reapers and mowers with self rake, the most complete assortment.

For descriptive catalogues, address the firm at Bluxome St., between 5th and 6th, San Francisco.

CANOEING.

We are indebted to Mr. W. A. Stringer of the committee of arrangements of the Corinthian Yacht Club, for an invitation to the opening day celebration on Saturday last, at Tiburon. A programme including a handicap boat race, a sailing race for small yachts, a marine tug of war, and an evening low jinks seemed to attract a choice company of guests, all of whom were delightfully entertained. The Corinthians may well be proud of their success.

THE KENNEL.

Dog owners are requested to send for publication the earliest possible notices of whelps, sales, names claimed, presentations and deaths in their kennels, in all instances writing plainly names of sire and dam and of grandparents, colors, dates and breed.

Mr. Bernard Waters' long promised book, "Modern Training, Handling and Kennel Management," was received too late for review this week, but will be noticed in the next issue.

Those who intend to make entries in the bench show of the Pacific Kennel Club, would serve the convenience of the officers, and assist in making the catalogue perfect if they would hand in the names and description of their dogs, poultry and pigeons at once. The habit of delaying until the last moment is a nuisance.

More than 140 prizes have already been listed for the Pacific Kennel Club show on May 22nd, the last one being a case of champagne for the best English setter, presented by A. Finke's widow, at the request of Mr. J. B. Barber. Preparations for the show are going forward smoothly, and prospects are bright for a thoroughly good and successful exhibition of dogs, poultry and pigeons. An ample supply of freshly prepared Spratt's biscuit has been secured, and the feeding of the dogs will be unexceptionabte.

Mr. G. H. Covert, of Chicago, has recently purchased in Ireland, the Irish setter Gurryowen IV, by Avondale (20411 E)—Dora (20467 E).

Mr. M. D. Walter, the trainer and handler, writes from Galt as follows: I had quite a time with distemper. Had thirteen dogs down at once and all of them had it bad but only lost one by the disease. They are now all about well and doing finely. I have room for ten more dogs yet, for this year pointers or setters.

Pacific Kennel Club.

The Pacific Kennel Club met last Wednesday night to make preparations for the second annual bench show, which commences on the 22d inst., and continues until the 25th. H. W. M. Sanebach presided.

The bench show committee reported that they were hard at work preparing for the event. The following extra classes were provided for:

Miscellaneous class shall be understood to comprise all pure breeds of dogs for which no regular class has been provided in the premium list.

The selling class must be for dogs to be sold for a price to be stated in the premium list. An exhibitor may catalogue his dog in this class for any sum less than the maximum.

The novice class shall be understood to be of a recognized breed for which a regular class has been provided, and for competition in which a dog shall not have won a prize at any American Kennel Club show, or in a recognized show held in England or Canada.

The puppy class, which shall embrace only dogs of twelve months old and under in age, excepting for the following breeds, which may be extended to eighteen months of age at the option of the Bench Show Committee: St. Bernards, mastiffs, deerhounds, Irish setters, great Danes.

The open class is for dogs of any age which have not already qualified for the challenge class and for which no challenge class has been provided.

The challenge class provides for all dogs having won four first prizes in the open classes. A dog having won three first prizes in this class shall have the title of champion without further competition.

Old Black Joe Again.

"James Watson's Pointer." The Pacific Field Trials went off well. There was a surpise in store for "the boys" in the shape of the black pointer dog Black Joe, owned by Mr. J. E. Watson, who won both the Derby and the All-Aged Stake. His breeding, age and history are unknown, so why was he allowed in the Derby?—Sports Afield, (Denver). That is just what we have been asking.—Shooting Times, (London).

[Both Sports Afield and our caustic English colaborer, display commendable zeal in keeping alive the inquiry about the antecedents of Old Black Joe. The dog was undoubtedly a crack, and all information about him is of importance, but it is feared that the carelessness, indifference or ignorance of a gun smith at New-Castle-on-Tyne, Northumberland, Eng., named W. R. Pape, who claims to have bred the dog, may result in failure to establish anything about Black Joe. Mr. Pape has been repeatedly requested by the purchaser of Joe, to furnish proper data, but has invariably refused to do so, without giving any reason for such extraordinary conduct. Whether neglect of ordinary business courtesy and disregard of common propriety are characteristics of Mr.

Pape, we have no means of learning, but the reasonable inference, is that he either breeds so recklessly as to be unable to furnish pedigrees, or he does not consider Mr. Watson entitled to one, although he paid some eight pounds for the dog when young. Mr. Watson has exhausted all means of procuring the proper information from Mr. Pape. As for the other aspect of the case, it may be said that on the evening of the draw for the Derby, there was some informal discussion about the age of Old Black Joe, and several expressed the opinion that he was older than two years. His handler, who owned his field trial qualities, produced a letter from Mr. J. E. Watson, stating upon information and belief that the dog was whelped on February 7, 1887. When the names of the Derby starters were handed to the secretary, Joe's was among them, and no one protested the entry, and the win therefore stands.

Dogs of History.

Of all the dogs that have a place in history Tyras, the noted Realm dog of the German Chancellor, is the only one whose death has been deemed of sufficient interest to be cabled round the world as an event, not merely of European, but of Cosmopolitan interest. Indeed the record of Tyras hardly ended with his life, for the cable has since told the world that the first visitor to Prince Bismarck on his recent birthday was the youthful Emperor, who brought as a present another dog, of the type of the lamented Tyras.

For nearly sixty years Prince Bismarck has owned specimens of the Great Dane, and generally has had one or more of unusual size, says a writer in the English Kennel Gazette. His first hound, acquired while living with his parents at Kneiphof, was one of the largest ever seen, and was an object of awe to the peasantry of the district. The dog afterwards accompanied his young master to the college at Goettingen, where he speedily made his mark. Once when Bismarck was summoned to appear before the rector for throwing an empty bottle out of his window, he took with him his enormous hound, to the great dismay of the reverend dignitary, who promptly took refuge behind a high-backed chair, where he remained until the hound had been sent out of the room. Bismarck was fined five thalers for bringing this "terrific beast" into the rector's sanctum, in addition to the punishment meted out to the original offence.

As a law student and official at Berlin, during his travels in many lands, throughout his diplomatic career at Frankfort, St. Petersburg, Paris, and elsewhere, as well as at Varzin and at Freidrichsruh, Bismarck has always had the companionship of one or more of his favorite dogs. Probably the one to which he was most attached was Sultan, which died at Varzin in 1877. Tyras, who was of unusual size, and of the slate color which is most popular in Germany, was then quite a young dog, and he was the constant companion of his illustrious owner, till the time of his death, sharing his walks, his rides, his business, and his meals, and keeping guard in his bedroom at night. Owing to his uncertain temper he was not often seen in the streets or gardens of Berlin. He was, indeed, regarded more as belonging to the "Pomeranian squire" side of the Prince's life than to his official establishment. At Varzin or Friedrichsruh, however, the two were inseperable. No sooner was the most absolutety necessary business of the morning despatched than the Reichskanzler sallied off with the Reichshund at his heels, and for the rest of the day the long light coat and the battered felt hat of the famous statesman were not greater objects of interest than the huge dog which followed him everywhere, on horseback or on foot.

A most interesting book might be written on the dumb friends of celebrated people, though it would be difficult to draw any useful conclusions from these canine friendships. Not a few of the least amiable of men have been fond of dogs, while many of the kindliest of mortals have cared nothing for them. The Dog of Icarius, and the Dog of the Seven Sleepers, which in spite of the Moslem dislike of its race, was admitted by Mohammed into Paradise, share the more substantial fame of the Dog of Montargis and the Dog of Aubri, who killed the murderer in judicial combat more than five centuries ago. Geryon's dogs, Gargittius and Orthos enjoy a less agreeable fame, for, though their reputation is linked with that of Hercules, it is solely because he slew them both. Orion's dogs are also brutes of much renown, while the fifty dogs of Actaeon are well known to all students of ancient lore, although the names are seldom found in our catalogues.

But the dogs of men whose names have a more human history for us are those which appeal most directly to our feelings. King Arthur had his favorite Cavall, and Fingal's dog Bran has become embalmed in a Gaelic proverb. As for Gelert, Llewellyn's dog, it has long had a place in song and story as the faithful guard who slew the wolf which had seized the sleeping Prince, and was in turn killed by the frantic father. Bert-gelert, its burial place, is a name still preserved in Welsh traditions. "Lazy as Ludham's dog" is an adage referring to an animal of a different type, for it was owned by a Farnham witch, and "leaned its head against a wall to bark." The dog of Alcibiades and the dog of Ulysses (which alone of all his friends remembered the roving warrior) are even more celebrated than Lance's dog Crab or the dog of Savandurga.

Coming to modern times, it is remarkable what a strange mixture of contradictory celebrities owned to a common love for dogs. Charles II., who had the lowest opinion of his species, and, indeed, had but little reason to admire them, seemed to be of the same opinion as the eminent individual of more recent times, who declared that the more he saw of dogs the less he thought of men. The Merry Monarch has, indeed, given his name to a peculiar breed of spaniels, and in the most agreeable pictures which have been preserved of him he is usually playing with them in the Park or in the Place. Kings, it is said, can have no friends, yet few of them seem to have tried to get on familiar terms with these associates who could not flatter and would not betray. The men of letters and the politicians do not seem to have been very different, for though some of them cherished dogs, they valued them as a rule, simply for use in the chase.

It is difficult to find a reference in Shakespeare, or Milton, or Dryden which can be construed to express a love of dogs. Samuel Johnson cared nothing for them, but Dr. John Brown, author of "Rab and His Friends," not only wrote lovingly of them, but it is seldom that one was not peeping over his carriage door when he rode abroad. Byron reserved a large corner in his somewhat egotistical affections for Boatswain, while Scott, with that breadth of sympathy for which he is noted, is declared to have had his life fairly divided, just as history is divided into reigns, "by the succession of his horses and dogs." His deerhounds, one of which sits beside him on his monument, from a long and most honored succession. There was Camp, and Maida, and Nimrod, besides many others whose names have not been preserved. When Camp died he begged off a dinner party to which he had previously accepted an invitation on the ground that the decease of an "old friend" made him too sad to enjoy himself. Over Maida he erected a marble tomb, and Nimrod he valued so highly that he refers to him during his last journey to Italy as too good a dog for his diminished fortunes. He never wrote at at ease—so Lockhart tells us—if at least one favorite dog did not lie watching his eye. And among the memories of old people on Tweedside the figure of the lame "Shirra," followed by his deerhound, still holds a prominent place.

Enough has been said to remind readers that a strong and abiding love for dogs is common to all ages, and to all sorts and conditions of men. Some other time, the dogs here touched upon, with many others now crowded out for want of space, may receive more extended notice.

THE GUN.

Nevada Shooting and Fishing.

Mr. Philip B. Bekeart, the alert and observant travelling representative of Mr. E T. Allen, is now on one of his regular trips through Nevada and the territories, and kindly sends us the following interesting notes about sport in the sections thus far visited.

"You may get a few items out of the following: In Reno small trout fishing is still going on, although the season is closed, considerable interest is manifested in the New Parker and Smith Hammerless guns. In Carson they are having nice lake fishing at Tahoe and look forward to a good dove season as they do in Virginia City. The later place has a first class gun club. Mr. Jas. Conway generally carries off the palm. Grouse have become very scarce. I was told by an "old resident", that he went out a short while ago, and only got two grouse where he formerly used to bag from two to four dozen. It was such a mild winter that what quail they have up here went over the mountains early; hence they had very poor quail hunting this season. Trout will be very scarce in the streams this year, as the water was very low, and the large trout fell easy prey to minks which abound in this section. One sport in Truckee told me they only got small fish this season running from six to ten inches. He told me he got a fourteen pound lake trout in Tahoe last season. In trolling in the lake they used a plain spoon, copper outside and nickle inside and a treble hook attached and strong swivels. In fly rod fishing in the streams they use light colors mostly at the present season and brown later on. At Donner Lake they are taking out a good many pound fish. The weather is rather warm and the fishermen complain of lack of rain early in season, although they now have plenty. There is very little snow left on the mountains and all expect hot tramping after doves later on. The Reno and Virginia part of Nevada, look very much like San Diego country, and is an easy ground to hunt on."

Pacific Sportsmen's Club.

Last Sunday was one of those delightful spring days for which the Sacramento valley has become renowned, and people were out in crowds at all the suburban pleasure resorts. It was field day among the knights of the trigger—both of shotgun and rifle—and there were large delegations of sportsmen before the traps and rifle targets.

The first shoot of the Pacific Sportsmen's Club was held at the new grounds at Gerber's ranch, near the city. The place has been fitted up by the Forester and Pacific Gun Clubs in fine style. A new house, judges' stand, benches, etc., have been erected, and everything necessary added to complete a sportsman's shooting grounds. Refreshments were served at the grounds in abundance, and everybody present enjoyed a good time. Several of the Foresters took part in the main match and also in pool shooting. George Vaughn won the gold medal, with a score of 11, and Louis Nicolaus the silver medal, with a score of 10 birds killed out of 12. Following are the scores:

Several sweepstake matches were shot after the medal shoot.

A lady in a family having recently married and gone to New York, it was noticed that the dog and the two cats belonging to the home establishment felt the loss very deeply. Yesterday morning, on going into the drawing-room very quietly, I saw the dog (a fox terrier) take a photographic album off the table, and after turning over the leaves until he found the absent lady's portrait, call the two cats up and point out to them whom it was meant for. He then deliberately went into the study, and, fetching an atlas, showed them on the map where their friend had gone, and marked with some soot from the grate on his claws where New York was.—London Pink 'Un.

The matter of "cast off," a much neglected and too often overlooked point in fitting guns to buyers is being exhaustively discussed in shooting circles, and the discussion cannot but result in good both to the makers of shot-guns and to the users. Several points of interest are suggested by a writer in an exchange who says that "a discussion on long shots may not at first sight seem to bear any reference whatever to the effect of cast-off, but it has a very great deal to do with it. Some time ago a correspondent committed himself in the London Field to the statement that it was necessary to aim six feet above the game at very long shots. It was at once pointed out that this was ridiculous. The reason a good gun does not want elevation at long distances is because it behaves on the same principle as Sir Henry Halford's rifle, with a small charge of powder. Sir Henry records, in Land and Water and in the book he has republished, the fact that he was trying a rifle with four drams of powder (if we remember right); this shot to the center; he then reduced the charge by one dram, and the rifle, as he expected, shot under the mark. He then reduced it another dram, and to his surprise he found the rifle shot as it did with the four drams. This is explained by Colonel Metford; who discovered that the stock was the cause of the barrel making a curve with the muzzle downwards, so that at near distances the bullet struck below the point it should have struck; turning the barrel round with the toe of the butt pointing outwards from the body, and horizontal with the bump, he found the rifle shot just as much to the right as it had previously shot underneath; then turning the rifle the other way, with the toe on the right shoulder, but pointing to the left shoulder, he found that the barrel shot just as much to the left as it had previously shot to the right and underneath (of course taking gravity and the axis of the barrel into account.)

Thus Colonel Metford discovered that the barrel made a curve downwards consequent on the bend of the stock. It was, however, left to Sir Henry Halford to discover that, with a smaller charge of power the curve had time to react before the shot left the barrel, and that the flip upwards given by his barrel enabled 2drs. of power to shoot with as flat a trajectory as 4drs. and a flatter one than 3drs Cast-off acts exactly as the bend of the stock does, except the the movement in the one case is vertical, and in the other it is horizontal; hence it will be seen that cast-off in Sir Henry Halford's rifle with 2drs. of power would have sent the bullet as much more to the left than was expected, as bend of stack did send it high of the point expected. It is clear that a good shot-gun wants no elevation at long ranges. The reason can only be one—that the barrels flip the shot in an upward direction, otherwise point-blank at thirty yards would not be point-blank at sixty; yet given a good gun, it is so in practice as we ourselves have long ago learned, We, therefore, have something definite to go upon. Cast-off or bend of stock first make the barrels bend to the right, or downwards, as the case may be, but the reaction of the curve which is set up and the natural action of recoil both counteract the movement to degrees which are variable, according to the load and the barrel, and more particularly in the case of cast-off, by the presence or absence of a second barrel, which will vary the curve caused by the stock, or, in some cases, stop it altogether, and in the case recoil alone will influence the direction of the projectile."

ROD.

Deputy Fish Commissioner Robinson writes a letter in which the charge is made that a corporation, at the head of which is ex-Senator Langford, is doing all in its power to prevent the migration of fish and their multiplication in the Mokelumme river, says the Chronicle. Mr. Langford is president of the Mokelumme River and San Joaquin Irrigation Company, which maintains the Westmoreland dam. This dam, up to the time of the appointment of Mr. Robinson as Deputy Fish Commissioner, had no fish ladder. Mr. Robinson gave the required notice directing that a ladder be supplied, and no attention being paid to it, caused the arrest of Langford, who was held and fined $250, whereupon he took an appeal and the case was dismissed on the ground of insufficient service. A second notice was filed by Mr. Robinson, who took every conceivable precaution, whereupon a ladder was built, but one that does not follow specifications, and therefore does not permit the fish to ascend the dam As a consequence the people of the upper river are deprived of fish. We do not know what motives prompt Mr. Langford to act as an obstructionist, but if there is any power in the State which can be exercised to bring him to terms it ought to be called into play. And as Mr. Langford is somewhat of a politician, it might not be a bad idea for the people he asks to vote for him to remember that a willful law-breaker can hardly be a good lawmaker, and govern themselves accordingly.

Mr. J. G. Woodbury, Deputy Fish Commissioner and Superintendent of the State Hatcheries, reportsthat for some months past he has been employed at Sissons in constructing an immense hatchery. He has been actively engaged in pisciculture since 1870. He says that for many years at the United States salmon hatchery on the McCloud River there were taken, principally during the month of September, from 8,000,000 to 12,000,000 salmon eggs. In July of last year Livingstone, of the United States Fish Commission, wrote to the State Board that he intended re-opening the salmon hatcheries on the McCloud River, and offered to give the State Board 4,000,000 salmon eggs, eyed and packed ready for shipment, for hatching and distributing in the waters of California. This hatchery has not been in operation for a number of years past, but it was thought that this 4,000,000 eggs and many more could be easily obtained, but at the opening of the spawning season, about September 1st, there could be scarcely a salmon seen behind the rack, while in former years at this season the river would be black with them. Every salmon was taken and spawned that came up all through September, during what is called the summer or early fall "run," but all the eggs that could be secured were about 1,300,000, a little over one-tenth of what were taken years ago in a less number of days during the same run.

Mr. Woodbury says the close season should begin by the 1st of August and continnue until the middle or last of September.

The salmon hatchery at Sissons has a capacity of forty-four troughs sixteen feet long and sixteen inches wide.

There was almost an entire cessation of salmon passing up the McCloud after the 1,300,000 eggs were taken in September. But there was an unusually large run of fall salmon in the last of October and November, so that, by an unceasing effort to get all the spawn that could be taken then by Livingstone Stone and his men at the McCloud hatchery, something over 3,000,000 salmon eggs were secured. Of these about 2,600,000, after being "eyed," were received at the State hatchery at Sissons the first part of January. They were hatched there and kept till they could swim and be able to handle themselves in the swift current of the Sacramento. The distribution of these young salmon was made in the latter part of March and the first two weeks of April. They were put in the west fork of the Sacramento, Big Spring creek, School House creek, Sulloway creek, and in the main Sacramento River (below the sawmills) from the Upper Soda Springs down to Big Castle creek.

There were about 600,000 Lake Tahoe trout hatched out and distributed last September and October in the following places: Squaw Valley creek, 20,000; Donner Lake, 100,000; Fresno County streams, 300,000; Lake Tahoe. 245,000; South fork American River, 20,000; Taylor creek, 25,000; Truckee River, 105,000; South Yuba River, 35,000; Shafer's creek, 7,000; Richardson's creek, 7,000; Baker's creek and Lake, 5,000; Gilmore's Lake, 1,500; Lake Watson, 500.

The Thoroughbred Stallion

Judge McKinstry,

Will make the Season of 1889, from March 1 to July 1, at San Felipe Rancho, near Gilroy.

PEDIGREE.

Foaled 1879, by Grinstead or Thad Stevens, dam Katy Pease; second dam Minnie Mansfield by imp. Glencoe; third dam Allegrante by imp. Young Truffle.

DESCRIPTION.

JUDGE McKINSTRY is a bright bay with black points, 15¼ hands in height, of a conformation combining power and speed. His breeding is one that cannot be excelled. The families on both sides being noted for their gameness and fleetness. Speakin of JUDGE McKINSTRY, Matt Storn, the well-known trainer, says: "He is the fastest race-horse I ever saw on the Sacramento track. He has shown me trials that were marvelous, one especially of a mile and a quarter that was ahead of the present record." He was started in several races when not in condition to run, and even then developed an amount of speed that is characteristic of the noted families from which he descends. His performances are too well known to need repetition here. Good judges of horses st te positively that there can be no doubt of his sire, as he is a perfect picture of Grinstead, but rule compels us to name both sires.

TERMS: $75 payable when the mare is moved from ranch, or, $100, with the usual privilege. Good pasturage, $3 per month. Mares at owners risk. All communications must be addressed to

GROVER CLAY,

Bay Stallion, bred by Hon. W. W. Traylor, San Francisco. Foaled 1883. By ELECTIONEER.

First dam MAGGIE NORFOLK by NORFOLK, son of Lexington.
Second dam by BILLY CHEATHAM.
Third dam by DORSEY'S GOLDDUST.

GROVER C. is a very handsome shade of bay, 15¾ hands high, and showing as much quality as a majority of thoroughbreds. He is as square-gaited a trotter as can be, and has shown a great deal of speed for the amount of handling. Has been worked very little, though he can show a thirty gait or better whenever called upon.

TERMS.

Fifty dollars the season, payable at time of service. Proper care will be taken, but no responsibility incurred for accidents or escapes. Mares will be pastured inside of the Oakland Trotting Park, which is especially safe, having two fences which give ample security against escape. There is a never-failing stream of water which runs through the field, and the food is good.

Season commencing first of January and ending the first of July.

This is the only son of Electioneer standing in Alameda County, and the high breeding on the side of his dam is a guarantee that his colts will inherit qualities already made famous through the mixture of Electioneer and Lexington blood. Ansel, 2:20, is from a Lexington mare, and Sunol's granddam, two-year-old record 2:18, was by Lexington, both Sunol and Ansel by Electioneer, Lexington the sire of Norfolk.

Thoroughbred Stallion

Prince of Norfolk,

Will Make the Season of 1889, from Feb. 15th to July 1st, at Sacramento.

PEDIGREE.

PRINCE OF NORFOLK, ch c, foaled 1881, by Norfolk; 1st dam Marion by Malcolm; 2nd dam Maggie Mitchell by imp. Yorkshire; third dam Charmer by imp. Glencoe; 4th dam Betsy Malone by Stockholder; 5th dam by Potomac; 6th dam by imp. Diomed; 7th dam by Pegasus, etc. Norfolk, the unbeaten son of Lexington, is the sire of Winters, Twilight, Conner Ballot Box, Trade Dollar, Flood, Duchess of Norfolk, Lou Spencer, the Great Emperor of Norfolk, an many others. Marion's sire, Malcolm, was one of the first horses to bring Bonnie Scotland into notice. Through the Maggie Mitchell cross comes the blood of two of the most celebrated race mares of their day, Charmer and Betsy Malone. The combined speed of these great families seem to be concentrated in the get of Norfolk and Marion, as is instanced in the case of the Emperor of Norfolk, who is a full brother to the Prince of Norfolk.

The blood lines here displayed cannot be surpassed in the world, there not being a single cross that has not been celebrated for speed and endurance, and it is fair to assume that the get of this stallion will show equally well with those of past generations.

TERMS, $50 for the season. We offer first class pasturage on our own ranch, at $4 per month, and the best of care will be taken of mares sent to us, but no responsibility can be incurred. For further particulars address

W. P. TODHUNTER, Sacramento.

Finely Bred Trotting Stallion.

ARLINGTON.

$50. $50.

TRIAL 2:26½; BY

ABBOTSFORD.

SIRE OF CONDE, 2:20.

PEDIGREE.

By Abbottsford, dam the Gillespie mare. Abbottsford by Woodford Mambrino, son of Mambrino Chief, dam Columbia by Young Columbus. This horse was brought to California by J. W. Knox, and made a record in 1883 of 2:19½, and has always proved a great speed producer.

The Gillespie mare by the celebrated Wilson's Blue Bull, who has probably more of his get in the 2:30 list than any horse that ever lived.

Arlington has as yet no record, but has shown very fast trials. He will be limited to twenty-five mares only, as he will be trained for a record immediately on the conclusion of the season.

TERMS: $50 the season, with usual return privileges. The best of attention will be given mares, but no liability assumed for escapes or accidents. Call on or address

T. H. GRIFFIN.
Bay District Track.

Mambrino, Jr., 1789.

(formerly Carr's.)

By MAMBRINO PATCHEN 58, the great Brood Mare Sire of the day.

PEDIGREE.

Mambrino Jr. 1789, trial at three years, 2:39; record 2:45, sire of Merchant, trial, 2:25; Lady Ellen, record 2:28, dam of Ella 2:29, by Mambrino Patchen 58.

First dam, brown mare, bred by Dr. L. Herr, of Lexington, Kentucky, by Mambrino Chief 11.

Third dam by Betrand, thoroughbred son of Sir Archy.

Fourth dam by Cherokee, thoroughbred son of Sir Archy.

Sir Archy thoroughbred son of Imp. Diomed.

Terms $60, to insure mare with foal. Good pasture at $3 per month. Book open to fifteen mares of approved feeding, besides my own, and must be regular breeders or young mares. All bills payable before the removal of mares from premises, and service fee refunded when mares show proofs that they are not with foal.

Prince Imperial.

DESCRIPTION.—PRINCE IMPERIAL is a black horse, 15-3 hands high; weighs 1,150 pounds, and is a model of beauty, action and power.

PEDIGREE.—Sired by Black Prince, he by Dictator, own brother to Dexter, dam Daisy by Witherell Messenger, he by Winthrop Messenger, son of imp. Messenger.

Mr. Peter Brandow's statement in regard to Prince Imperial: "I met A. Weske in the Park in 1887 driving the above horse, both strangers to me. I was driving a good horse, but the above horse, hitched to a phaeton, beat me easily. I followed him to find out what horse it was, and he finally allowed me to hitch him to a sulky, which I did, and drove him easily in 2:32¼. I think him one amongst the best horses in California, and firmly believe that in six months I can drive him in 220."
PETER BRANDOW.
Trainer of trotters for 25 years.

In 1881, while visiting Salt Lake City, I saw the colt Prince Imperial, and bought him for my own use, and have used him for family purposes ever since. In offering him for public service last year, not knowing anything about horses' pedigrees I made a mistake in his. I wrote to the owner of the mare in Salt Lake, Dr. S. B. Young, and he says she was by Henry Clay, brought from Kentucky by him.

Will make the season of 1889 at the farm of A. Weske, 2½ miles from Santa Rosa on the Healdsburg road. Season commencing March 1st.

A. WESKE, Santa Rosa.

ELECTIONEER STALLION

EROS,

Standard No. 5326.

Electioneer, his sire, has more 2:30 trotters than any living horse, and more 2:30 trotters than any stallion LIVING OR DEAD.

Eros has a record of 2:29¼, made in the fifth and deciding heat against a field of eight horses in his maiden race, and with only four weeks preparation after coming out of the stud.

Progeny.

Eros had last fall but three colts trained; the oldest a three-year-old trotter, an exhibition mile during the San Jose Fair in 2:34, last quarter in 36½ seconds. A two-year-old (timed by the judges) made a mile in 2:46½, and the other two-year-old in 2:47. All of these trials being made without a single skip, and none of these colts had then been handled three months from the bitting harness.

TERMS: $50 for the season, from February 1st to July 1, 1889. Due at time of service.

Eureka Jockey Club.

A letter from Mr. R. W. Rideout informs us that the Eureka Jockey Club is now an incorporated body, with the following officers: C. F. Roberts, president; H. M. Devoy, vice-president; R. W. Rideout, secretary; C. G. Taylor, treasurer; C. F. Roberts, H. M. Devoy, T. F. Ricks, R. Gross, S. F. Pine, C. M. Dollison, Dan Murphy, Alex Cormick, and W. D. Clark, directors. The club have decided to hold a meeting of one week's duration, commencing July 1st, and it has been determined to give more liberal purses than ever have been offered before. The programme has not yet been arranged, but it will be shortly, when our readers will be able to see what the new directors are going to do.

Capital Turf Club.

On Monday next the Sacramento Association will begin a weeks racing with a very large list of entries, and everything points to a highly successful meeting. Hundreds of persons are going from San Francisco to witness the sport, and as the Sacramento people are noted for their generous support of anything in the racing line, the attendance will be very large. A large number of horses have gone up from Los Angeles, Fresno, San Jose and San Francisco, and as there are new elements from what were shown at the late Blood Horse meeting, the guessing of the winners will be even harder than it was at the Bay District. A special correspondent of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN will be on hand to give full and detailed accounts of the sport, so that those who by any possibility cannot attend, will be able to get accurate accounts of the various contests in our next issue.

Nevada State Fair.

All persons interested in running or trotting should carefully read the preliminary advertisement of the Nevada State Fair Directors. They offer very liberal purses, and as Mr. Winters, the President, says, "We don't bar nothing." The association is to be highly commended for giving out such a programme, as the legislature positively refused to render them any assistance, and the Directors have had to guarantee the necessary amount of funds themselves. Nevada in the past has given very successful meetings, and this one should be no exception to the rule. There is every prospect that quite a number of Eastern horses will winter in California during the next cold season, and this meeting at Reno will give the owners a chance to show the merits of their horses prior to going into winter quarters. Remember the running races close earlier than the trotting and pacing races do.

Trotting Purses and Stakes.

The Pacific Coast Trotting Horse Breeder's Association is now an assured fast, and the first announcement relative to purses and stakes appears in this issue of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN. It will be seen that the largest purse is offered for the 2:20 class of stallions, and very properly too, for if this had been made free for all, there would in all probability have been two entries only, Stamboul and Sable Wilkes. However, there are to-day at least twenty stallions eligible for the 2:20 class, all of them so close together in speed, that this will be the most interesting contest that has ever been witnessed on the coast. It is also to be presumed that the entries will be very large, for there is no one who has had his stud in service this season that can afford to miss making the entry, if simply for advertising purposes.

The Directors have arranged for the payments of the entrance money to be made in four equal parts, making it very easy for those who will nominate. $2,000 is offered for the "free-for-all" class, and the same amount for the 2:30 class. The two, three and four-year old trotters are not over-looked, handsome additions being made to the stakes by the association. Read the conditions carefully, and if not already a member of the P. C. T. H. B. A., send in your name at once to the Secretary, Mr. Wilfred Page, Penns Grove, Sonoma County.

An Announcement.

"The following notice appears as an introduction to the catalogue issued by Killip & Co. for their Second Annual Combination Sale, which takes place at the Bay District track on Tuesday, May 14th.

The catalogue for the Second Annual Combination Sale, while not extensive in numbers, contains some of the choicest bred animals in the State. Particularly is this the case with the young stallions offered. They are representative of the speediest blood lines extant, and their high form warrants the belief that they will make valuable animals in the stud. Pedigrees are given as fully as possible, and candid statements will be made as to all facts within the knowledge of the auctioneers. While not anticipating the splendid success met with by the gentlemen who shipped their horses East within the last few months, it is to be hoped the result will at least be satisfactory and encourage the continuation of these sales, and thus afford our own people the opportunity to select animals which will enable them to "breed up" and still farther improve the American trotter.

The horses will be on exhibition at track from Saturday, May 11th, until sale."

This is a particularly modest announcement when the character of the horses are taken into consideration, for really the pamphlet fairly bristles with all the great blood lines which have made this state so famous. Electioneer, Stamboul, Sidney, Valensin, Alcona, A. W. Richmond, Prompter, Antevolo, in fact, any blood desired can be found among the numerous entries in the catalogue. All persons interested in breeding should send to Messrs. Killip & Co. for one of the catalogues, and see for themselves what first-class stock has been placed in the combination.

The $20,000 Race.

Now, that the directors of the Fair Grounds Association have fully decided to offer the magnificent purse of $20,000 for a two and a half mile and repeat running race over their track this fall, says the Fresno Republican, they should at once make arrangements to not only thoroughly advertise the race, but to do so as quickly as possible. This race is not like the big purse and stake races of the East, that have been run season after season for years, but it is a new thing, and horsemen have taken no account of it in making up their season's books. It is more than likely that there are a number of horsemen who will want to enter in this race and save a particular horse for it. The stake to be run for is large enough to justify them in doing this, and they should be fully informed as to the date, terms and conditions of the race, at the earliest possible moment. If, as has been announced, the entries for this race are to close July 1st next, there remains but two short months in which to advertise it, and this will be found entirely too short a time even if the work is commenced immediately.

There is no doubt of the success of this race if it is properly advertised, and while it will in a great measure advertise itself after awhile, it will not do so in the start. The Fresno association and the Fresno track are unknown to eastern horsemen. Being engaged in a business where there is always more or less "jobbing" done, owners of race horses will look upon this magnificent offer coming from an unknown association with a degree of suspicion, unless it is accompanied by such guarantees that there can be no doubt but what the money is up and awaiting the winners. Then, again, the fact that the Fresno race course is far superior to nine out of ten of the eastern courses must also be made known in a way that will leave no room for doubt. It will take time to make these preliminary arrangements, and until they are made no advertising can be done. The fair ground directors haven't a minute to lose, and if they are wise they will have their arrangements made and their printed matter all ready by May 1st, and also have at least one, and, if possible, two good wide-awake men on their way East with it before May 2d. The association must work if they want to make this race a success, and if the right kind of work is done, and done in time, it will be the "making of the Fresno fair grounds.

As predicted not long ago the prices obtained at the New York sale of California trotting stock were phenomenal, and that there is already a reaction was shown last week when Secretary of the Navy, Tracy, offered his choice collection from the Marshland farm under the auctioneer's hammer, says the Breeder's Gazette. Mambrino Dudley, the premier stallion at Marshland, is a horse that has in no small degree received the benefits of printers' ink, because Gen. Tracy, like "Pa" Hamlin, is always ready to enter into a newspaper controversy over the merits of any family of horses of which he owns representatives, and even when there was no antagonist in sight, Gen. Tracy was willing to put before the public some valuable information regarding the strains of blood that predominated in the most prominent stallion on his farm. Since he bought Mambrino Dudley a few years ago, the Woodford Mambrino family has had no other such enthusiastic champion as Gen. Tracy, and during the past winter he contributed to one of the turf journals a series of articles to show that in some respects Woodford Mambrino was the most prepotent stallion of which we have any record. Another thing that made the public familiar with Mambrino Dudley was the fact that after making a record close to 2:20 and being placed in the stud he was put in training after the lapse of severa years and given a mark of 2:19¾, which performance by a horse whose services as a sire were open to the public of course gave him quite a boom. The wonderful prices that the Californians received for their colt trotters no doubt stimulated Gen. Tracy in the matter of disposing of his stock at auction, but while the result was eminently satisfactory from a financial stand-point, there was none of the fierce rivalry between wealthy bidders that characterized the California sale, and in no instance was this better shown than when Mambrino Dudley was offered, the price on him reaching only $6,000, which is little enough for a stallion with a record of 2:19¾, whose sire had a mark of 2:21¼, and whose colts are already showing well. It was a fair price only, not so much in proportion as the sums brought by the rest of the stock, in the veins of most of which ran the blood of this very stallion. Perhaps this was because of the fact that the Woodford Mambrino family is not esteemed so highly as it was a few years ago when Patron set the trotting world afire by his three-year-old performances, and then two years later went a mile in 2:14¼ as a five-year-old, on which day he defeated Harry Wilkes. It was the fashion in those days to see no "outs" in anything that bore the blood of Pancoast, but the other trotters by the son of Woodford Mambrino that were said to be following on the heels of Patron, Pericles, and Issaquena did not materialize that fall, nor have they since come to light, although they have been given three seasons in which to do so. Of course it was natural that what Patron did as a three-year-old should set horsemen and breeders crazy about his sire, for that horse was also a trotter, having a record of 2:21¾, but there is no way of getting around the fact that the Pancoast trotters have not shown up in the last three years, and that is all there is to it. To say that the colts by Pancoast have been given all the advantages that accrue from early training is superfluous, for of course every man that owned one of them thought he might have another Patron, and was willing to find out if such was the case. It was Patron's mile in 2:19½ as a three-year-old that sold Pancoast for $28,000 at auction. Nutwood, a sire of the very highest rank, going for $22,000 at the same sale, and the price of Pancoast was a speculation based on what his get were going to do. Had Mr. Shults placed Pancoast at public service exclusively he could by this time have gotten back the purchase price, and no doubt he has already seen a good portion of it return, and his action in paying such a price for a stallion was a plucky one that deserved success. Perhaps it was because of the diminished fame of Pancoast that his half brother Mambrino Dudley went for $6,000, but at all events the figures show for themselves that just now the blood that auction buyers will pay fancy prices for is that of Electioneer, Stamboul and Sidney, all Pacific Coast stallions.

The Corbitt Brood Mares.

A few days ago, at the invitation of Dr. Bowhill, the veterinary surgeon, a representative of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN accompanied him to San Mateo, and while in the neighborhood, thought it a favorable opportunity to make a call at the well-known stock farm of William Corbitt, Esq., the fame of whose brood mares is now world wide. The San Mateo Stock Farm has been written up so often that it would seem there is nothing else to be said in relation thereto, but as Mr. Corbitt keeps buying and selling continuously, one can hardly expect to make two visits to the farm and find on his second visit exactly what he saw on the first. Having heard that Mr. Corbitt had lately purchased Sweetness from M. Saulsbury, we wanted particularly to see the grand old mare in her new quarters, and find out if she had foaled yet.

"Is Mr. Corbitt at home?"

"Yes, sir; you will find him at the correls examining the colts."

A short walk brought us in view of the owner of these magnificent acres, and we were soon saluted with a hearty "Good morning" and a cordial shake of the hand from both Mr. Corbitt and his able superintendent, Mr. John Goldsmith. There are so many visitors that daily go to this celebrated farm, that a few extra ones never occasions a surprise. Apologies for our intrusion will not be listened to, and we are at once taken to look at the stallions, who are more comfortably housed than many persons in comfortable circumstances. The owner has spared no money in fitting up quarters for his royally bred studs, and they are in great contrast to many of the stables in which the writer has seen valuable stallions kept. Everything was in apple-pie order, and as clean as a new pin. The great sliding door on the stall of Guy Wilkes was rolled to one side, and there stood as grand a blooded animal as ever drew breath. While Mr. Corbitt and the scribe were discussing the merits of the great stallion, Mr. Goldsmith and the doctor were busy examining "his leg." It took but a moment for all four of us to get down on our knees, and the arguments pro and con, flew backward and forward, while the skilled veterinary was pinching here and pressing there, taking into consideration everything in connection with the affected part. After a careful scrutiny, the opinion was given that there was no injury to the flexor tendons or the suspensory ligament, and that a windgall was the cause of the trouble. It would have looked an odd sight undoubtedly, if a stranger had come along and peeked into the stall as we all kneeled in close proximity to the leg, looking like a lot of Wiseaces, yet all anxiously waiting for a decision. There stood the grand horse quiet and gentle as a lamb, poking his nose first at one and then at another, wondering, no doubt, what all the fuss was about. When the inspection was through, his various points were examined and commented on. He stands nearly 16 hands in height, probably a shade over 1,100 pounds in weight, rangy, very stylish, grand head, with a face full of intelligence. He has fine powerful shoulders, with a perfectly turned neck; well barrelled, excellently quartered, plenty of power and muscle, well formed legs, and for his large size, has not a grain of coarseness about him. In addition to all this, he has the great faculty of producing speed, and there was not a single one of his colts seen but what had remarkably good legs. In a sire this is a very potent factor, and makes him one of the most favored stallions in the State, for he has served this season the cream of the brood-mares of California. But that put the writer in mind he did not propose to say anything about the stallions, it was the brood-mare we came to take a look at. However, our host would not be denied, we must take a look at Sable Wilkes, and we found the black beauty in the best of spirits. Want of space forbids a description, or opinion of him at the present writing, but attention will be paid to him hereafter.

A look was taken through the stalls where Mr. Goldsmith has the trotters, which are in training, and a finer lot of youngsters were never witnessed in one stable. Reports have reached town about the very fast colts and fillies which were at the farm, and if looks do not altogether belie, the rumors are not exaggerated. It was with very pardonable pride that Mr. Goldsmith showed us from stall to stall, expatiating on the merits of each individual, and telling us of quarters and halves which are fast enough to beat anybody's horses. And now we hie away to the paddocks where the great mothers are. Can you fancy five mares and five colts, only a few days old, representing a fortune? That is what the first field contained, just look at the names, Sweetness, dam of Sidney, 2:19¾, with a colt at her side by Director; Ruby (full sister to Stamboul) with filly by Guy Wilkes; Sable (dam of Sable Wilkes, 2:18), with filly by Guy Wilkes; Margaret, 2:28, by Sultan, has a colt by Guy Wilkes; while last, but by no means least, we find Hattie by Electioneer, with a filly at her foot by Guy Wilkes. Is it likely that anyone can find in one field five as well bred mares in the world? Mr. Corbitt has gone at the breeding problem in the proper manner, he knew he had two good horses (Arthurton and Irvington) when he first started in the business, and he made up his mind that the next necessary essential, was the highest type of brood matrons that money could procure, so no expense was spared, and from all over the United States the best combined strains of blood have been secured, until to-day the proprietor of the San Mateo Stock Farm can say that there are but very few, if any, breeders in the country that can show such a collection of well bred mares. On leaving the first field where the grand and stately five were suckling their young, visits were paid to any number of adjoining fields, each containing its quota of the richly bred dames, and from time to time we have pointed out to us some illustrious individual, daughters of producers and producers themselves. Two daughters of Nutwood are in one field, Vixen out of Sister, (dam of Albert W. 2:20) and Tabbie Rosenbaum, a finely proportioned mare that will surely make a grand name for herself. Doctor Bowhill, at one field exclaimed, "why there is a perfect picture of Beautiful Bells."

"Yes," said Mr. Corbitt, "that is Atalanta, a full sister to Beautiful Bells."

In still another field we find that very fast trotting mare, Mamie Comet, 2:23¼, but who has been driven in 2:17 since she came into Mr. Corbitt's possession, and Mr. Goldsmith feels confident he could drive her in 2:15. La Grand and Arthurton mares are scattered in profusion throughout the various fields, and, with their foals by their side, afford a picture that is worth a great deal of trouble in going to see. One thing that strikes the observer particularly is the muscular legs that all the youngsters on the farm show, there not being a single instance where exception could be taken to the "underpinning" of the foals. In conclusion, we must thank the owner for the very hospitable manner in which we were entertained, not forgetting Mr. Goldsmith for the trouble and bother he was at in showing us his particulrr favorites; and bear this in mind, at least one, and perhaps two, records will be broken this season, and the San Mateo Farm will produce the horse to do it,

Great Auction at Bakersfield.

The BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN, as opportunity has offered, has been very pleased to call attention to the grand potentialities resident in that tract of 8100 square miles known as Kern County, at the extreme southern portion of the San Joaquin Valley, and the full page advertisement of Messrs. McAfee and Baldwin which appears elsewhere may be made the reason for another brief mention of what is without exception one of the richest portions of the State. Messrs. McAfee and Baldwin, by order of Mr. J. B. Haggin, offer portions of the Mountain View Dairy, Greenfield's Ranch, Cotton Ranch and Jewett Ranch, and also a line of desirable lots and blocks in Bakersfield, adjacent to which most desirable place of residence the farming lands offered are situated. The desirability of farming lands may be said to depend upon four or five features, climate and healthfulness, transportation, water and essential richness of soil. In all these particulars, Kern County offerings are so superior as to fairly entitle them to the utmost prominence. The rain fall is slight, but an ample and unfailing supply of water is obtained from Kern River and from Artesian wells. The flow of the river is sufficient in volume to insure a depth of three inches of irrigating water per month to all the lands of Kern Valley, a quantity much more than enough to make every foot of the rich warm alluvium of the valley to blossom perpetually. For more than three-quarters of the year, the climate is delightful, the temperature being uniform and not oppressive. In the other months it is quite warm, but a dry and invigorating heat that never deters from out-door labor, and the nights are always cool.

The death rate of Kern is very low, being but about 14 to the thousand. Means of transportation are adequate and readily accessible, the Southern Pacific Company's trunk line running through the center of Kern Valley.

There is also the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Railway running 56 miles into the county, and connecting with the Southern Pacific at Mojave. It cannot be denied that the San Joaquin Valley is a "dry country," but the same power that decreed the dryness has also placed a superabundant supply of water within easy reach by artificial means. The finest belt of artesian wells in the world are already flowing from a few hundred thousand gallons to 2,500,000 per twenty-four hours each in many parts of the county, and there is beside a large supply of irrigating water from Kern River brought by canals to every part of the valley. There are more than forty canals in Kern Valley, aggregating three hundred miles in length, and covering a half million acres of the valley. On the irrigated lands Alfalfa gives four or five crops a year, an average of two tons per crop, beside pasture. The cost of irrigating has been reduced to from three to one cent per acre under favorable conditions. Of the ranch property offered, parts of Greenfield's Ranch of twenty full sections is not the least desirable. The ranch begins nine miles south of Bakersfield, and embraces 12,800 acres of rich alluvial deposit, a sandy loam, with water everywhere for the soil, the stock, and domestic uses, of excellent quality and inexhaustible abundance. Apples, peaches, plums, apricots, pears, nectarines, all berries and all citrus fruits are now growing on the ranch, reaching great size, superior color and flavor, and good firmness for shipping purposes.

Part of Mountain View Dairy, another piece offered, embraces 5,280 acres, 13½ miles southwest from Bakersfield, is similar to Greenfields in soil, has all possible advantages in situation, productiveness and water supply, and is already under high culture, particularly in a dairy way. The Cotton Ranch, the third splendid offering, is smaller, being but 729 acres on the northern line of Bakersfield. Kern river runs along the north western boundary of the Cotton Ranch for a mile, and the Farmer's canal with the Jewett ditch furnishes plenty of water, although sub-irrigation from the river, canal and ditch is such that but little surface water is needed. The ranch is all improved, most of it being in alfalfa. The serials and root crops have proved enormously remunerative upon the ranch, and all fruits do well there.

All that can be said in favor of the ranches mentioned applies equally to the Jewett Ranch, the fourth place now offered, and of all the places it may be said that they are well fenced, accessible by good roads, most favorably situated and in every way desirable as home places.

Of Bakersfield, either as a place of residence, merely, or as a city in which to invest speculatively, it may be said that it is by odds the most attractive in Southern California. The streets are well shaded by ornamental trees, the situation is pleasant, accessible and healthful. It is the most convenient point of access to the railroad for the products of Kern Valley; it is well supplied with stores, and all the mechanical trades are carried on. Its court-house and school-house are among the finest in the State. The water supply is ample for all uses, and for protection against fire. It has one of the best hotels outside San Francisco; and what is of not less importance than anything else, it has a pushing, energetic, broadminded, generous, public spirited body of business men in whose hands its future is assured. Social conditions are most attractive, and the city cannot but be the great city of the San Joaquin Valley.

Messrs. McAfee & Baldwin have made arrangements by which people can go to and from Bakersfield at nominal rates, and the trip will do so much to open up the minds of those who have never visited Kern County that is well worth the taking, even if no purchase be made, while as a business proposition it is very attractive.

The sale begins on May 14th after steamer day, and a large number of business men can and should attend and secure a holding in what will soon be the Eden of California.

Will you be so kind as to let me know whether the stallions Stamboul and Antevolo have been sold, also price of each? To whom sold, and if they are still in this State?

Answer.—Stamboul has been sold by L. J. Rose to W. S. Hobart, of San Francisco, for a reputed price of $50,000. Stamboul is still in California. Antevolo has been sold to R. Steele, of Cedar Park Farm, eight miles from Philadelphia, where he now is. The price paid was $18,000.

A Fault of Figures.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—I am made to say, in regard to the selling of California bred horses in last week's paper, within the year an offer of $15,500 has been refused for a great California favorite. My recollection is that I wrote $75,000, as the fact as to the offer refused was currently stated. Figures won't lie—not if they know it; but the types do hoodoo them occasionally. My next raise will be $100,000, and I think that I can safely call upon your correspondent, Mr. Thos. B. Armitage, to bear me out in case any body undertakes to put me in. J. O'M.

SANTA ROSA, April 30, '89.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—Being familiar with the circumstances of the case mentioned by "Regular Reader" in the number of April 20th, I deem it but justice to a most worthy person to state the facts of that case fully that, you and the reading public may better judge of the legal or moral merits of the question.

In October, 1887, A leased from B a mare to breed for two seasons. The conditions for the first season were that B guaranteed that the mare should be with foal. If not with foal A should pay nothing. The conditions for the second season agreed upon were that A should breed the mare at his own risk, and that the stipulated price should be paid by him whether she was with foal or not. It was further agreed that the expense of keeping the mare should be paid by A.

In August, 1888, the mare foaled and the price was paid. It being so late in the season A was reluctant about breeding the mare, but B, not wishing to loose the use of a valuable brood-mare, proposed to A to take her off his hands and release him from all risk or obligation for the second season, but with a full understanding of the terms and of the chances to be taken. A concluded to breed the mare again, and did so at the proper time, and the mare was handled during the season following the foaling of her colt in a manner calculated to secure the desired result.

On February, 1889, it was discovered that the mare was not in foal. A was notified accordingly, and asked by B to go and see the mare and satisfy himself, as he desired to breed the mare. A replied that he would not give his permission, and that if B did breed the mare he would claim an interest in the colt. On the 21st of March, nearly eight months after A had bred the mare, she was sent away by B to be bred.

Is it to be presumed that the season in which A was to have the chance of getting the mare in foal is to extend on and on indifinitely for months and years till A finally gets a colt? The terms of the contract, both expressed and implied, were that A should pay so much for the chance of getting the mare in foal during the season of 1888, following the time the mare foaled. Does it not conform with common sense, with reason and justice and the practise of horsemen to assume, as B did, that A's season for breeding was limited to the three or four months following the time of the mare's foaling.

The case is similar to a man breeding a mare to a stallion for the season. When the breeding season ends he is done, and no man is foolish enough to attempt to hold the owner of the stallion responsible for the failure of his mare to get with foal after the season is ended and he has paid his money for the privilege of breeding during the season.

B complied with the terms of the agreement, A bred the mare during the season, got what he paid for, the chance of a colt, and when B bred the mare in March, 1889, he in no way injured A nor infringed upon his rights. Has A any "legal or moral" right, after getting what he paid for, to attempt to prevent B from breeding his mare for the next season?

Has A any "legal or moral" right, after getting all that he contracted for, to attempt to get back his money by threatening to deprive B of the use of his mare for another season? With this plain statement of the facts, I submit the case.

Charles Derby, 4907.

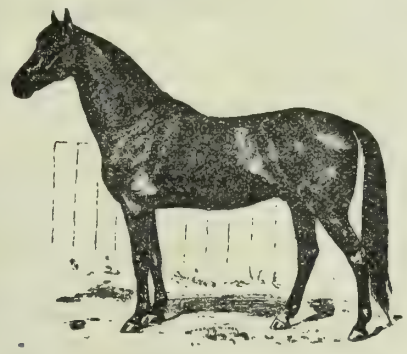
Two-Year-Old Trial 2:36.

Sired by STEINWAY 1808, record 2:25. The sire of Strathway, 3-year-old record, 6th heat, 2:26.

First dam Katie G. (the dam of H. R. Covey, 3-year-old trial 2:27), by Electioneer, the sire of Manzanita, 2:16, and of Sunol, 2-year-old record 2:18, and of eight others with records of 2:20 or better.

Second dam Fanny Malone (record 2:36, trial 2:23) by Niagara, sire of Cobb, 2:31, double team record 2:26, and of Lady Hoag, trial 2:18), said to be by Mambrino Chief, the sire of Lady Thorn and of the dam of Director, 2:17

Third dam Fanny Wickham, record 2:13, by imp. Herald, (thoroughbred).



Fourth dam by imp. Trustee, (thoroughbred.)

CHARLES DERBY will be limited to 10 approved mares. Terms $100 for the season.

The above standard bred stallions will serve mares the present season, commencing February 1, and ending September 1, 1889, at Cook Stock Farm, Danville, Contra Costa County. All bills payable before the animal is removed. Mares not proving with foal will have the usual return privileges. Pasturage $1 per month. Hay and grain $10 per month. Best care taken, but no liability assumed for accidents or escapes. Mares sent to Fashion Stable, Oakland, Bennett's Stable, Martinez, or to Geary and Grindle's Stable, Haywards, will be forwarded to the farm free of charge. Address,

COOK STOCK FARM,
Danville.

THE WILKES STALLION

Mambrino Wilkes, 6083

(Half Brother to Harry Wilkes, 2:13 1-2.)

Sire of Gus Wilkes, 2:22; Alpheus, 2:27; Balkan 2:29½, three-year-old; John O'Brien, lapped out the winner in 2:36 as a three-year-old; H. A. W.'s Black Colt, trial 2:29 with very little work as a four-year-old.

Will remain in the future at San Miguel Stock Farm, Walnut Creek, Contra Costa County.

DESCRIPTION.

MAMBRINO WILKES is a black horse, 16 hands high, and considerably longer than his height; has immense muscular development and weighs 1,260 pounds. He has the utmost symmetry of proportion and elegance of finish. No competent judge who has seen this horse has failed to pronounce him a perfect individual, and his breeding is certainly fashionable enough to satisfy the most fastidious. His colts are large, stylish and handsome, and Balkan has been pronounced by many the most stylish trotter on the turf.

PEDIGREE.

Sired by George Wilkes, dam Lady Chrisman by Todhunter's Mambrino; second dam by Pilot Jr.

Todhunter's Mambrino by Mambrino Chief, dam Ripton's dam by Hunt's Commodore, son of Mambrino, by imp. Messenger; second dam by Potomac, son of imp. Messenger.

George Wilkes sired 65 colts that have beaten 2:30. Of these 39 have average records of 2:23, 14 of 2:19 and 12 of 2:18.

TERMS.

Mares from a distance will be received at the Dexter Stables, Oakland, or Livery Stable, Martinez, the owner notifying Smith Hill, Superintendent at the farm. Good pasture and plenty of water. For the purpose of placing the service of a Wilkes within reach of breeders, the same rate will be maintained as last year, to wit, $75 for the season. Although it is not admitted thereby that this horse is inferior as a producer to the horses whose fees are placed at from $150 to $500.

BALKAN,

Three-year-old Record 2:29 1-2; trotting many heats faster, when he did not obtain a record.

PEDIGREE.

Sired by Mambrino Wilkes, dam Fanny Fern by Jack Hawkins, son of Boston; second dam S. F. B. by Jim Crow.

It will be readily seen that this colt is from strong producing lines on both sides. Fanny Fern having produced Mollie Drew, May Queen, Onyx and Fred Arnold, all noted trotters and all by different sires.

This colt will be kept at the Oakland Trotting Park, and will be stinted to ten approved mares at $100 for the season.

MEMO.

The Fast Trotting Stallion, the Best Son of Sidney.

Will make the Season of 1889 at the Oakland Trotting Park.

He was bred by G. Valensin at the Arno Stock Farm, Sacramento County, California; foaled spring of 1885.

PEDIGREE.

By Sidney.

First dam Flirt by Buccaneer.

Second dam Mohaska Belle by Flaxtail.

Third dam by John the Baptist.

Sidney by Santa Claus, 2:17½, his dam Sweetness, 2:21¼. Strathmore, the son of Santa Claus, has 22 of his get which have trotted in 2:30 or better, up to close of 1887, several having entered since, and Volunteer, the sire of Sweetness, has 26 in the same list. Buccaneer is the sire of Shamrock, two-year-old record 2:25, and of Flight, 2:29, and in him are combined the strains of Long Island Blackhawk, Vermont Blackhawk, and the dam of Rysdyk's Hambletonian. Flaxtail figures prominently in both pacing and trotting descendants, and is the sire of the dam of Apex, 2:26, Flight, 2:29, J. H. McCormack, 2:29, and Shamrock, 2:25.

PERFORMANCES.

Memo only trotted in public in his two-year-old form, obtaining a record of 2:49, though he was close to Grandee in a race on the Bay District Track, the second heat of which was made in 2:31½, the first in 2:32. He exhibited phenomenal speed when three years old, and had it not been for a slight strain of his fore fetlock there is little question that he would have shown in public very close to the best record. On the Oakland track he was timed a mile in 2:20½, and frequently trotted quarters in from 32½ to 34 seconds.

DESCRIPTION.

He is nearly if not quite sixteen hands high, and of powerful build throughout. His color is a glossy black, with both fore-feet white and a touch of white on his off hind quarters. His disposition is all that could be desired, and his action is unsurpassed.

TERMS: One hundred dollars the season, which will commence on the 5th of February and close on the 1st of July. Due care will be taken of mares, but no responsibility for accidents or escapes.

Mares taken and kept as desired by the owners, and at reasonable rates.

Pasturage at $5 per month within the track enclosure; feed first rate, and a living stream of water in the field. There is a double protection against escapes, as in addition to a strong fence on the inside of the track, the gates of the outer fence are enclosed at night, which gives almost positive assurance of safety. Address

JOHN ROWEN,

Oakland Trotting Park.

SIRE OF YOLO MAID, 2:14.

Alexander Button.

Alexander's Record, 2:31 1-4.

DESCRIPTION.

Alexander Button is a dark bay with fine flowing mane and tail; stands 15-3½ hands high; weighs 1,200 pounds, and is of excellent disposition. When three years old he made a record of 2:28½, and when four years old, in his first race, he obtained a record of 2:26¼. Has been driven a mile in 2:16 in his four-year-old form, and has been driven a last half in 1:0 . Alexander Button is a natural trotter, inherited through the speed-lines of his ancestors, and imparts his speed to his offspring with uniform certainty. Yolo Maid, as a three-year-old, paced 18 heats, never leaving her feet carrying the world's record of 2:14. Rosie Mc, as a five-year-old, rarely ever breaks; has a record of 2:20¾. R. H. Newton's colt, with very little handling, paced a 2:16 gait, and there are several other colts that show gaits from 2:16 to 2:20. Considering that Alexander Button has never been mated with a standard-bred mare—his colts show him to be a wonderful producer—and with his breeding, and terms of service, he is the cheapest and most wonderful horse in the State.

PEDIGREE.

Alex. Button was sired by Alexander, he by Geo. M. Patchen, Jr., his dam Lady Button by Napa Rattler by Biggett's Rattler, he by Sir Henry, and he by imported Henry, dam of Biggett's Rattler by Rysdyk's Hambletonian, dam of Napa Rattler, thoroughbred.

TERMS: $75, payable at end of season. Mares not proving with foal may be returned next season free of charge. Good pasturage will be furnished at $2 per month, and due care taken to prevent accidents or escapes, but no liability whatever assumed.

Will stand at City Stable, Woodland, on Thursday, Friday and Saturday of each week. The remainder of the time he will stand at my ranch, which is situated about 1½ miles west of Yolo station.

All mares sent to Fashion Stable, Woodland, Yolo County, will be forwarded free of charge.

Woodland, Yolo County, Cal

The Electioneer Stallion

LANCELOT,

SEAL BROWN STALLION, 15½ HANDS, FOALED APRIL 15, 1881.

Bred by C. C. BEMIS, San Francisco, Cal.

Sire Gov. Stanford's ELECTIONEER; first dam Lizzie Harris by Comus; second dam by Arnold Harris. Comus by Greek's Bashaw, dam Topsey by Prophet, son of Hill's Black Hawk. Young Bashaw by Grand Bashaw (Arabian) (182), dam Pearl by First Consul (913); g d Fancy by imp. Rockingham. Arnold Harris by Whalebone, dam Sportsmistress by American Eclipse.

All the sons of Electioneer in the Eastern States have their books filled for the season. This is a rare opportunity to breed to Lancelot at a very low price. Lancelot has shown quarters better than a 2:30 gait, and had it not been for an accident would have had a record as low as the fastest of the sons of Electioneer.

The Nutwood Stallion

SALADIN.

Bred by C. C. BEMIS, San Francisco.

SALADIN, chestnut stallion, 16 hands 1 inch high; foaled April 9, 1880. By Nutwood; first dam Lady Utley Jr. by Speculation, son of Rysdyk's Hambletonian; second dam Lady Utley. Grandam of Western Girl. Record 2:27¼.

NUTWOOD (record 2:18¾), half brother to Maud S., 2:08¾, by Belmont, son of Alexander's Abdallah; first dam Miss Russell by Pilot Jr.; second dam Sally Russell by Boston; third dam Maria Russell by Thornton's Rattler; fourth dam Miss Shepard by Stockholder; fifth dam Miranda by Topgallant; sixth dam by imported Diomed; seventh dam by imported Medley; eighth dam by imported Juniper. Nutwood is the sire of Felix, 2:18¾; Dawn 2:19½; Monon 2:20; Menlo 2:21¾; Nutbreaker, two years old, 2:29½; Nutwood Jr. 2:26; Mount Vernon 2:21; Woodnut 2:16¾, and several others that have trotted under 2:30.

The above stallions will make the season of 1889 at the Hoag Stables, corner 1st and B Streets, Santa Rosa.

TERMS: $40 for the season for either of the above stallions.

Pasturage $3 per month. All mares at the owners risk. Apply or address,

GEO. W. BROOKS, Agent.

At Main St., between 2d and D Sts, Santa Rosa.

ENTRIES CLOSE JUNE 1, 1889.

First payment, whether for purses or for stakes MUST ACCOMPANY NOMINATIONS or they will not be considered.

Neglect to provide payments at the time stipulated will incur forfeiture of all previous payments.

All States and Territories lying in whole or in part west of the Rocky Mountains are held to be part of the Pacific Coast.

The Board of Directors reserves the right to declare any purse or stake filled or not filled without binding itself to any specified number of entries.

Purses and stakes will be divided into four moneys, of which 50 per cent. will be paid to the winner; 25 per cent. to the second horse, $15 per cent. to the third, and 10 per cent. to the fourth horse.

No added money will be paid for a walk-over. If only three horses start in a stake race, only first, second and third money shall be paid; if but two start, first and second money will be paid; if but one starts only first money and one-half of the entrance money received from the other entries for said stake will be paid. In purse races three horses will be required to start.

A horse distancing the field shall only be entitled to first and third moneys.

Otherwise than the above, National Trotting Association Rules will govern the stake and purse races offered.

Entries close June 1, 1889, with

P. O. Penn's Grove, Sonoma Co.

N. B.—Persons desirous of making entries in the above purses and stakes, and those who have not as yet joined the P. C. T. H. B. A., are given the privilege of joining the same by remitting together with the payment due June 1, 1889, the sum of $25 to cover the membership fee.

LONGWORTH.

High Bred Trotting Stallion.

WILL BE FOUR YEARS OLD IN MARCH.

Dark Bay, Black Points, by Sidney.

OWNED BY A. C. DIETZ, OAKLAND.

Also the owner of Bay Stallion Ringwood, four years old, by Sidney, half brother to Longworth, which has showed trials over the Oakland Track, 2:30; quarters, in 34 seconds—2:16 gait —as a three-year old.

LONGWORTH, for finish, style and form cannot be excelled by any four-year-old horse in the State. His gait is perfect; going low to the ground, with smooth, easy motion, and has shown wonderful speed with but two month's work. As a two-year-old, he showed a 2:40 gait; as a three-year-old showed—trial—full mile over the Oakland track, 2:26; half mile, 1:10; quarters, 34 seconds; eighths, 16 seconds—a 2:08 gait.

Longworth is the result of a long line of distinguished ancestors, endowed with speed on the sire and dams' side that follows back for generations—consequently he cannot help but produce great speed.

He is half brother to the great three-year-old Adonis, record 2:14¾.

Gold Leaf, three-year-old record, 2:15.
Memo, three-year-old trial, 2:20½.
Sister V., two-year-old trial, 2:32.
St. Nicholas, three-year-old trial, 2:27¼.
Ringwood, three-year-old trial, 2:30.
Miss Sidney, one-year-old trial, half mile, 1:38.
Brown colt, three-year-old trial, 2:40.
Black colt, three-year-old trial, 2:39.
Linda, one-year-old trial, one quarter, 40 seconds.
Sorrel colt, two-year-old trial, quarter, 31 seconds, and a number more that have shown remarkable speed. One yearling that has shown one-eighth of a mile in 16 1-5 seconds—a 2:10 gait.

Sidney, the sire of Longworth, has a record of 2:19¾; Santa Claus, the grand sire, has a record of 2:17½; Sweetness, the grandam, record 2:21½; Strathmore, the sire of Santa Claus, has twenty-two that have trotted below 2:30; Volunteer, the sire of Sweetness, has twenty-six that have trotted below 2:30. Volunteer is the sire of St. Julian, record 2:11¾.

Longworth's first dam Grey Dale, the dam of Daisy C., Silver Threads, and grandam of Phaeola; Grey Dale by American Boy, Jr.; he by American Boy, the sire of Belmont. Second dam Grey Poll by Winfield Scott, by Edward Everett; third dam Sorrel Poll by Sir Henry; fourth dam Daughter of Printer.

All letters pertaining to the service of this horse should be addressed to R. H. FARMER, Oakland. Alameda County, Cal.

TERMS: Fifty dollars, payable at the end of the season or sooner if the mares are taken away. Season will close June 15th, 1889. The number of mares limited to twenty-five. The best of care will be taken to insure mares with foal. Pasture $5 per month, which can be procured at the Oakland Race Track. Mares at the owners' risk, as to escapes or accidents.

The stallion will be kept at the stables of the undersigned, at the junction of San Pablo Avenue and Park Street,

R. H. FARMER,

Entries to all trotting and pacing races close Sept. 1st.

Five or more to enter, and three or more to start in all races for purses.

National Trotting Association Rules to govern trotting races. Pacific Coast Blood Horse Association Rules to govern running races.

All trotting and pacing races are the best three in five, unless otherwise specified; five to enter and three to start But the Board reserves the right to hold a less number than five to fill, by the withdrawal of a proportionate amount of the purse. Entrance fee, 10 per cent. on purse, to accompany nomination.

National Association Rules to govern trotting; but the Board reserves the right to trot heats of any two classes alternately, if necessary to finish any day's racing, or to trot a special race between heats. A horse making a walk-over shall be entitled only to the entrance money paid in. When less than the required number of starters appear, they may contest for the entrance money, to be divided as follows: 66⅔ to the first, and 33⅓ to the second.

No horse shall receive more than one premium.

In all purses entries not declared out by 6 P.M. of the day preceding the race shall be required to start.

When there is more than one entry by one person, or in one interest, the particular horse they are to start must be named by 6 P. M. of the day preceding the race. No added money paid for a walk-over.

Racing colors to be named in entry.

In trotting races drivers will be required to wear caps of distinct colors which must be named in their entries.

Each day's races will commence promptly at 1 o'clock P. M.

All entries must be directed to C. H. Stoddard, Reno, Nevada.

THEODORE WINTERS,
PRESIDENT.

C. H. STODDARD,
Secretary.

WILKES PASHA.

STANDARD 2618.

Dark bay with white hind feet, 16½ hands high, bred by R. P. Pepper, of South Elk Horn Farm, Frankfort, Kentucky. Sired by Onward, 1411, record 2:25¼, trial 2:17. He by George Wilkes, 2:22, sire of sixty-five horses in the 2:30 list, ten of them with records below 2:20. First dam Fisher (dam of Clara Wilkes, 2 29¾, trial 2:25) by American Clay, 34, sire of Granville, 2:28; Maggie Briggs, 2:27; Ella Clay, 2:27½; and the dams of Executor, 2 24½, Ruchero, 2:23½; Judge Hawser, 2:24¾; Ambassador, 2:25, and nine others in 2:30; second dam by Wilson's Snow Storm, sire of Jim Irving, 2:24; third dam by Paddle Burns, thoroughbred.

Onward, 1411, is one of the noted sires of to-day. In 1887 he placed seven performers in the 2:30 list, including Hourl three-year-old record 2:19¾; while in 1888 he still further sustains his reputation by adding nine of his sons and daughters to the list. Onward combines the blood of the two great trotting families, Hambletonian 10 and Mambrino Chief 11, and derives his speed inheritance direct through the greatest son of the one family, and the greatest daughter of the other.

Onward's dam was Dolly (the dam of Director, 2:17, and Thorndale, 2:22½), by Mambrino Chief. Dolly was one of the greatest speed-producing brood mares that ever lived. George Wilkes stands at the head of the list of sires of fast trotters with 65 performers with records of 2:30 or better, and the combination of these two great producers will breed on with absolute certainty.

WILKES PASHA will make the season of 1889 at the stables of the undersigned, at the Trancas Bridge, two miles north of Napa, on the Soda Spring Road.

TERMS,

For the season ending July 1, 1889, $35 in U. S. gold coin.

Alfalfa pasturage $4 per month; natural grass $2.50 per month.

Every attention and care will be given to mares, but no liabilities assumed for accidents or escapes.

P. O Address,

STALLIONS.

DIRECTOR 2:17.

DIRECTOR will stand at Pleasanton from March 1st to August 1st, 1889, for fifteen good mares more than are now booked, at $2 0 for the season. Mares not proving with foal may be returned next season free of charge of service to same stallion, or money will be refunded, at option of the Stock Farm Co.

Pasturage $4 per month, hay and grain extra. Accidents and escapes at owner's risk. Service fees due at time of service and must be paid, together with pasturage, etc., before mares are taken away, or a good approved note given, payable August 1st, 1889, at which date all bills must be settled

THISTLE,

Full brother to Gold Leaf, pacing record 2:15 at three years old. By Sidney, dam Fernleaf, she the dam of stallion Shamrock, trotting record at two years old, 2:25. Thistle is a large, speedy pacing colt, showing more speed than Gold Leaf at the same age, and double the speed of his sire; so if anyone wants to breed pacers, here is a chance.

Thistle will stand for seven approved mares at $100 for the season, with same conditions and return privileges as Director.

AMBERINE.

$25. $25.

PEDIGREE.

Sired by PROMPTER No. 2305, with six weeks training at the close of a stud season, he won a stallion race of five heats, winning the last three heats and getting a record of 2:33¾; he has never been trained since.

His sire, Wilson's BLUE BULL, No. 75, has more of his progeny in the 2:30 list than any horse that ever lived, except it may be George Wilkes, and it is a disputed point between the two which has most.

PROMPTERS' dam, PRAIRIE BIRD, 2:28¾, is in the GREAT BROOD MARE TABLE, a proved producer, and of a family of wonderful producers, as an examination of the produce of Flaxtail mares will prove.

AMBERINE'S dam, "BONNIE," owned by G. W. Hancock, of Sacramento, is one of the best road-mares in the State: she has many times covered 50 miles on the road in five hours, and 125 miles in 17 hours. She is the dam of Daisy, yearling record, 2:38¾; her sire is John Nelson, sire of the dams of Albert W, 2 20, and Valensin, 2:24.

AMBERINE is a beautiful bay, three years old, very powerfully built, 16 hands, and trotted a mile in his yearling form in 3:20, and has never been trained.

Will serve 15 outside mares at the low price of $25 the season. Should the mare not prove in foal, the money refunded or mare bred following season. Service fee payable, when I pasture the mare, at the time of her removal; but if served outside, payable at time of service.

He is full brother to DAISY; yearling record, 2:38¾. THE BEST IN THE WORLD FOR PACING. Two-year-old trial, two miles, 5:07; last mile in 2:28.

Good pasturage for a limited number of mares only, at $5 per month. Ranch 18 miles from the City, San Pedro Valley. Horses taken down at owner's risk.

This horse will stand in San Francisco, San Mateo, or Alameda Counties. Owned by

VINELAND BREEDING FARM.

Whippleton, 1883,

STANDARD UNDER RULE 4 & 6.

The most successful stock horse in California for his opportunities. WHIPPLETON has no equal as a producer of carriage and general purpose horses. Sire of Lily Stanley, record 2:17¼, dam's breeding unknown; Homestakes pacer, 2:16½, dam's breeding unknown; Flora B., 2:30, dam's breeding unknown; Cora C., three-year-old pacer, 2:33¾, dam by Naubuc, Rachel, 2:38, dam's breeding unknown.

DESCRIPTION.

WHIPPLETON is a beautiful black, tan muzzle and flanks, and exceptionally strongly made all over. He stands 17 hands high and weighs 1400 pounds. He is beyond doubt the most uniform breeder on the Coast for size, color and finish. Most of his colts are 16 hands or over, and all bay, brown or black in color. He has never sired a sorrel or white faced colt; if he does I agree to refund service money.

PEDIGREE.

WHIPPLETON, sired by Hambletonian Jr. (sire of Hancock 2:20), by Whipple's Hambletonian; dam Lady Livingston; (dam of Lady Blanchard 2:24¾, Bloomfield Maid, trial 2:22); by General Taylor (sire of dam of Wells Fargo 2:18¾, Nearea 2:24¾, Bickford 2:29½, Lady Blanchard 2:26¾) and Stella 2:30, son of the Morse horse.

TERMS.

Fifty dollars, with usual return privilege.

ALCONA, 730.

By the great Almont (sire of Westmont, 2:15¼, Puritan, 2:16, Fannie Witherspoon, 2:16½, Piedmont, 2:17¾, and 31 others with records better than 2:30, and grandsire of Bell Hamlin, 2:13¼) by Alexander's A dallah (sire of Goldsmith Maid, 2:14), he by Rysdyk's Hambletonian. Alcona's dam, Queen Mary by Mambrino Chief, sire of Lady Thorn, 2:18¼, Woodford Mambrino, 2:21½ and 4 others in 2:30 list, and sire of the dams of Piedmont, 2:17¾, Director, 2:17, Onward, 2:22¾, and many others; 23 of his sons have produced 2:30 trotters.

Almont has 38 sons that have produced 2:30 trotters, which number is only equaled by his grandsire, Rysdyk's Hambletonian.

DESCRIPTION.

Alcona is a beautiful chestnut, 16¾ hands high, and weighs 1,300 pounds. His colts possess speed, style, finish and beauty, and if they don't trot fast they command the highest price for carriage and general purpose horses. Eleven of Alcona's colts that have been sold UNTRAINED brought $7,810, an average of $710 per head.

TERMS: $35. Usual return privilege.

Grandissimo,

Full Brother to GRANDEE. 3-year-old record 2:23 1-2.

Sired by La Grande (son of Almont and out of Jessie Pepper by Mambrino Chief; Jessie Pepper is the dam of Iona 2:22, Alpha 2:28¾, Sterling Wilkes 2:33¾, and others) dam Norma, by Arthurton (sire of Arab 2:15, Joe Arthurton 2:20½, etc).

Grandam Nourmahal, (full sister to A. W. Richmond, sire of Arrow 2:13¾, Romero 2:19, and sire of Columbine, dam of Anteeo 2:16¾, and Antevolo 2:19¾ at 4 years old),

DESCRIPTION.

Grandissimo is 3 years old, will make a sixteen hand horse; he is a rich mahogany bay in color and perfect in style and action. Limited to ten mares, at $50 for the season. Usual return privileges.

In case any of my horses are sold before the next season, parties breeding mares have the privilege to return them to any other stallion I have making the season at the same price. Mares kept in any manner desired. Best of pasture the year round, at $4 per month. Some choice young stallions, colts and fillies by Whippleton, for sale reasonable. Correspondence solicited.

For further information, send for circular or call at farm (one mile south of St. Helena.

ELECTION,

BY ELECTIONEER.

DESCRIPTION.

ELECTION is a beautiful bay, with small star in forehead. Near forefoot and pastern white; both hind feet white above ankles. He was foaled April 10, 1884, at Palo Alto Stands 15¾ hands high and weighs 1075 pounds. Election was sold in his yearling form to B. R. Crocker of Sacramento, who kept him for two years and then sold him to Mr. H. J. Palmer, who placed him in charge of Wilbur F. Smith to develop. From an ordinary road gait he was made, after three months training, to trot a mile in 2:30.

PEDIGREE.

ELECTION by Electioneer, dam Lizzie H. by Whipple's Hambletonian; 2d dam Lizzie Harris by Comus, son of Green's Bashaw, sire of Josephus 2:19¾, Fred Douglas 2:22½, and fourteen more in 2:30 or better; 3d dam by Arnold Harris.

Comus by Green's Bashaw, sire of dams of Joe Young 2:20½, Trampoline 2:23¾, dam Topsy (dam of Iowa Chief 2:21½), sire of Corisande 2:24½, by Prophet, son of Hill's Black Hawk, sire of Ethan Allen 2:25¾.

Green's Bashaw by Vernon's Black Hawk, son of Long Island Black Hawk, 1st dam Belle by Webber's Tom Thumb; 2d dam Chas. Kent mare, dam of Rysdyk's Hambletonian by imp. Bellfounder. Arnold Harris by Whalebone, dam Sportmistress by American Eclipse, etc.

This fine Electioneer horse will make the season of 1889 at Woodland. Service limited to a few mares of approved breeding. Season commencing March 1st and ending July 1st.

TERMS.

Fifty dollars for the season, due at time of service. Mares not proving with foal may be returned next season by paying difference in price, provided no change in ownership of horse. For further particulars address

OSSIDINE

KALAMAZOO, Mich., Sept. 15, 1888.

GENTLEMEN:—We have used Ossidine for the past two years and consider it invaluable for Sprung Tendons, Curbs, Ringbone and Spavins; there is nothing equals it; and for us it effected a permanent cure where firing failed, although performed by one of the most successful veterinarians on the continent. We have recommended it to others with like success, and believe it has more merit than any blister ever used.

Very respectfully yours, S. A. BROWNE & Co., Prop's.

This scientific preparation is an absolute cure for all bony or callous lumps on horses, and is a more powerful absorbent than "firing," without creating the slightest blemish. After a few applications the excrescence is so palpably reduced that even the skeptical frankly acknowledge that it is by far the most valuable outward remedy for horses ever invented.

The ONLY preparation in the world that will remove a Bone Spavin after it has become ossified.

The Trotters at Butte City, Montana.

An old friend of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN, passing through Montana, paid a visit to Butte City, and sends a lot of news which will be found of interest to those who attend the Montana circuit. He says: Here I am away up in the mountains, 6,000 feet above the sea level, but in the midst of atmosphere that must be good for man and beast. The air is very invigorating, light and pure, and seems especially prepared for this favored Territory.

From all I can see, this is bound to be a great horse section, as there are quite a number of gentlemen who have gone into the business methodically, and it will not be long ere the fame of Montana will equal that of any other State in the Union for its wonderful breeding farms. It is only those who have fortunes that can go into the business and buy the best blood in the country, but in this speculative neighborhood there are a number who love horses dearly, and as they are fortunate enough to have plenty and to spare of this world's goods, have invested largely at late sales, and are now ready to reap the reward of their outlay.

Within the past twelve months the Hon. Marcus Daly, who owns a farm of 3,000 acres in Bitter Root Valley, has expended over $150,000 in blooded stock, and when the balance of the purchases are forwarded, there will be but very few stables in the country that can show such an aggregation of speed as will be centered there. Last fall the gentleman purchased the game and speedy mare Favonia, who at Buffalo last year made her record of 2:15 under the able handling of Scott Quinten, the well known driver of Trenton, N. J. Favonia is now ten years old, and her owner thinks that with ordinary luck she should reduce her record still further. Senator, 2:23¾, is a California-bred horse, by Echo 462, dam the Senator Jones mare, she by Winthrop Morrill 373. Senator is a bay horse foaled 1883, and made his record August 8, 1888, at the Butte City track. Lord Byron is a bay colt only four years old, who gives great promise of being a very fast trotter. He is by Gen. Benton, dam May Day by Wassahickon; second dam Nora Marshall by Union. As a three-year-old he entered the charmed circle, his record being 2:29, and from his work it may safely be said that he will lower it very materially between now and when the snow flies. Hattie D. is an Electioneer filly, only three years old, who made a record of 2:42 in her two year-old form at Helena, there being only one competitor against her, Tempest Belmont, who was distanced in the first heat. Hopes have been built very high about this filly, and if she does not prove game, full of endurance and very speedy, there will be great disappointment. The two-year-old, Mascot by Stamboul, dam Minnehaha, is the grand gem in this great circlet of trotting brilliants, and as everyone knows was purchased by Mr. Quinten for Mr. Daly at the New York sale of California trotters, for the enormous price of $26,000. It is believed that in time this magnificent youngster will make a name for himself both on the track and in the stud. There are many others of less renown at the Bitter Root Farm, most of whom will be heard from during the present year.

Among other breeders in this section largely interested in the trotting question are Hundley & Clark, Harvey Bros., Morgan and Phil Evans, Noah Armstrong, Ed and Charley Larribae, Dr. Amsden, and several whom I have not met yet, but all are doing well and prospering in the business, each having several fast ones, and anxious to have the racing season begin so they may show what they can do in the way of speed. At the track here there are a number of horses in training, several of which are worthy of mention, so I will take them in turns as I saw them. The first allotment of stalls are occupied by the horses belonging to Col. C. G. Bradshaw, whose eloquence at the bar and on the forum has given him a national reputation. The first one inspected was the well known Charley Hilton, 2:17½, who gave the spectators at the Spokane meeting, last year, a taste of what he could do. In an adjoining stall stood Fantasia, who made her record of 2:25 on the northern circuit last season. She is a fine bay mare, only eight years old, and is of the improving order. You might whisper to the boys that when they are figuring how many first moneys they will win over in Montana this year, that they had better take Hilton and Fantasia into their calculations. Much to my astonishment and surprise, I found my old antagonist, John Green, here with quite a stable, and I am pleased to say he has "caught on" in good shape. Johnny is not one of the kicking fraternity, but is very much put out just at present about a squib that appeared lately in a Portland paper anent the gelding Melrose, wherein it was claimed that the horse had been sold, and sounded a note of alarm that in all probability the horse would be used as a ringer. Now John claims that Melrose has not been sold, nor will he be sold; and he further says, Mr. Baker, of the Rural Spirit, has always been one of the suspicious sort, but in this case wholly without reason; in fact, much as the suspicions were, when at Salem, Oregon, last year, the driver of Conde was taken out of his sulky for what was deemed suspicious handling of his horse, the new driver could not improve the position of Conde, and his owner was almost heartbroken, for not a word had ever been said against his work before, and the chances are that it will be a long time before he gives the Portland paper a chance to bandy his name as a by-word and reproach, when there was no truth in the charge. Newspapers should have a care how they make charges without being able to substantiate them, for, with their over amount of zeal, much harm may be done an innocent man. Well, to the stables again. Johnny is looking first rate after his sojourn in the land of sunshine and flowers, and, in answer to my request, brought out Maud Singleton, a very promising mare, of whose speed I have heard a great deal. Mr. Green drove her a quarter (after warming her up). the time being excellent. She is very finely formed, can show much better than a "30" clip, and has that easy, skimming motion characteristic of all fast trotters. The next to be looked at was the bay gelding Chico, who has a record of 2:35, which is no way near his mark, for with what little work he has had this spring he can beat that time now. Mr. Green also has a chestnut pacer which I think very highly of, and if he does not collect the first money when the green pacers are called, I shall be much mistaken. There is also another pacer which he has in charge, called Ike McElso, hardly as good as the one mentioned previously, but a good shifty animal, one who will without doubt win his oats this season. Last, though not least, we come to the much talked about Melrose, and John has confidently informed me that this year will witness a great lowering of the gelding's record.

The adjoining stable is that of Commodore C. B. Jeffries, the veteran trainer of Montana, of whom it is claimed that he has done more to develop trotters than any other ten men in the Territory. He has the celebrated Conde, 2:20, in hand, and is making him do good, useful work. He has wintered well, and is looking in splendid form just at present, taking his preparatory spins with a relish. One of the most improving youngsters I have yet seen is Ilton, who last year made a record of 2:35. Still I fancy to-day he is showing more speed than any horse on the track, and you need not be surprised, Mr. Editor, if Ilton makes or lowers a "20" record in 1889. The Commodore also has Ranchero Jr., a colt of grand promise, with plenty of speed and great staying power. Victor is an aged stallion, without a mark, but I should judge he can gain brackets in about 2:25. Tarantula is the next to be examined, and we find him a large, powerful stallion, very fast, and I fancy if he should enter in your Pacific Coast Trotting-Horse Breeders 2:20 stallion race, he would stand a good chance of gaining one of the moneys. He seems a trifle unsteady and very wilful, but his driver manages to handle him all right, and will before long have ready for him the word. Commodore Jeffries also has a number of young trotters on which he has built considerable expectation, and if careful, steady, conscientious labor will produce good results, depend upon it that the colts will be heard from later on.

Charles Jeffries is a son of the Commodore, and also has several horses under his management, among them being Evening Star, 2:50 at three years old, Doncaster, Jr., Mary S., and quite a string of youngsters. They are all looking and doing well, and as Charlie has the reputation of being a careful, patient and reliable trainer, the horses under his care should give a good account of themselves.

We now come to the stable of James Matheson, a young, level headed man, who has several colts which are being prepared in a masterly manner, and developing good speed.

Taken all in all, there are about fifty horses in training at Butte city, twenty at Anaconda, fifteen at Deer Lodge, and about sixty at Helena, with several at Missoula, Bitter Root and Great Falls.

The boys here are very anxious to meet again Mr. Gonzales, Lee Shaner, B. C. Holly, G. Valensin, M. Saulsbury (not forgetting the irrepressible Andy McDowell) and all the others who came up last season, at the initial meeting at Deer Lodge, August 7th, when they promise to give you hotter contests than ever before. The summer meeting is July 2d, 3d, 4th and 5th: If this is acceptable, you will hear again from

TROTTER.

The Baldwin Trotters.

The following is part of a letter written from San Francisco to the St. Louis Globe-Democrat, and goes to show how much care the ordinary reporter takes in preparing copy. Mr. Baldwin will be surprised to hear that his stock farm is used for breeding trotters, and that he will shortly rank well up with Palo Alto:—

Millionaire Baldwin now divides his time between this city and his Santa Anita ranch. He looks a little grayer than he did five years ago, but he seems as vigorous as ever. He still owns about 60,000 acres of the finest land in the San Gabriel Valley, and boasts of the most beautiful orange grove in Southern California, as well as the largest and choicest stable of thoroughbreds. During the great boom in land in Southern California Baldwin sold about 5,000 acres at prices ranging from $500 to $1,500 an acre for unimproved land. He sold forty acres to Studebaker, the great wagon maker, for $1,000 an acre. Upon his ranch at Santa Anita grew up several large towns, with fine hotels and costly brick business blocks. Baldwin, however, refused to sell any of the orange groves or vineyards about his pretty chateau on the artificial lake at Santa Anita, and every year adds to the beauty of this great domain.

Here are the paddocks and stalls of his costly trotting horses, with the circular tracks for exercise. The place has never been so completely fitted up as Stanford's Palo Alto stud farm, but much good work has been done there. Baldwin told a friend of mine, when he first began to canter his horses in races, that his sole reason for going on the turf was to escape from the habit of stock speculation. He felt the need of strong excitement, which the reckless gambling in mining shares in San Francisco gratified, and the only substitute that he could think of was horse racing. He was a good judge of horses, and he believed the Southern California climate, near the Sierra Madre Mountains, was better adapted to breeding than any other in the State. He spent money liberally on his stable, and all his best trotters were born and bred at Santa Anita. His recent announcemrnt of his retirement from the turf is regarded by his friends as a sign that he has grown weary of the cares of managing a string of valuable trotters, and that even the excitement of staking large sums on races has palled on him. If he devotes himself to breeding, as he announces that he will, his stable ought to rank well up to Palo Alto for his youngsters.

The Control of Sex In Breeding.

A very warm discussion is presently going on in the pages of some of our American contempararies respecting the occult subject of regulating sex in breeding. The discussion has so far been a very profitless one, and most of the theories propounded on the subject has been ridiculous in the highest degree. As a sample of these, we may note that only the other week a correspondent gravely stated in a leading American stock paper that all that was wanted in order to produce either male or female offspring at pleasure was to keep the animals standing in a particular direction during the act of copulation. How a keen-cut business paper like the Breeder's Gazette should have thought it worth while to pile up a column of editorial ridicule on the top of such unmitigated rubbish as that, is a point that passes ordinary comprehension. Another section of the writers on the subject have insisted that any attempt to control the sex of the offspring is a piece of presumptious daring, as the control of sex in breeding is a Divine prerogative. But surely this contention is the height of absurdity, and it might be argued with equal justice that any attempt to investigate the reproductive systems of plants or animals was a piece of presumptious daring, and an encroachment on a Divine prerogative.

It is certainly a noteworthy fact that the so-called New World, where the ideas of the leading stock breeders and stock writers on this subject are in such a chaotic state, is, at the same time, the country in which the only reasonable theory of controlling the sex in stock breeding was first promulgated, and promulgated, too, by a physiological authority of the very highest standing. How true it is that a prophet has no honor in his own country! The subject, however, is one that has received a great deal of attention from many medical writers of the greatest eminence. In very ancient times Hippocrates, who has been well called the father of medicine, noted that the two testis in the male and the two ovaries were analogous to each other, and he held that this quality of parts in each sex must be intended for a particular use, as there was not in creation, and especially in the wonderous machinery of the animal body, a single superfluous or useless part.

No one, however, seems to have thought of working out this idea until, some twenty years ago, a German physician, P. F. Sixt by name, worked it out in a very philosophical way. He submitted his discovery, with all the details of his experiments, to Dr. Trall, of New York, the eminent author of the Hydrophathic Encyclopædia, and many other well-known works on medical subjects. Dr. Trall examined Sixt's theory minutely, and being convinced of its value, he bought it up and published it himself. Briefly stated, Sixt's theory is that the right testis produces male 'sperm-cells,' and the right ovary produces male 'germ-cells,' while the left testis produces female 'sperm-cells," and the left ovary produces female 'germ-cells.' The semen of the right testis cannot impregnate the ovum of the left ovary, nor can the ovum of the right ovary be impregnated with the semen of the left testis. Sixt made numerous experiments himself to test the accuracy of his theory, and Dr. Trall did the same, and in every case the results were in strict accordance with the theory. Incidentally, too, Sixt noted a pregnant fact recorded by Mr. Sander, the Royal Danish Regimental Veterinary Surgeon. "There has been," wrote Mr. Sander, "for three or four years among the horses of the regiment, in spite of all endeavors, and to the regret of the General, some pregnant steeds after the time of pasture. It was known that this had been the case several times at the same season, and the watch was particularly active, no strange horses having been admitted to the pasture grounds; and I tried to get at the bottom of the matter, in which I was finally successful, for I found that among the horses of the regiment there was an old stallion whose right testicle had been taken out, and also that the foals generated by him were fillies, every one of them." But although in all the experiments made by Drs. Sixt and Trall to test the theory the results in every case confirmed the theory, there were several cases communicated to Dr. Trall, after the publication of the theory, in which the results were conflicting. In these cases, however, it was found that the reproductive function had been intentionally performed as soon after the removal of one of the reproductive organs as the healing of the wound would permit. In these latter cases the result might be easily and satisfactorily explained if the theory were correct. We understand that some years ago Dr. Trall entered on an exhaustive series of experiments to test the theory in all its fullness; and perhaps we may know now, before many weeks are over, whether the theory has stood the test or not.—North British Agriculturist.

Colts That Trained On.

Under the caption of "colts that trained on, Pilot," in the Sportsman, gives a short synopsis of the doings of horses well known to Californians, which will bear reprinting.

Oakland Maid was one of the most successful trotters ever foaled. She was a gray mare, by Speculation, out of Lady Vernon, who made a record of 2:31 at Sacramento, Cal., in 1855, and was bred by Jos. Sessions, Brooklyn, Cal. In her three-year-old form she won two races without stopping the watches below three minutes, and was then retired until 1873, when she received third money in a race won by Ella Lewis at Sacramento. As a six-year-old Oakland Maid started in five events, all of which she won without losing a heat. The first was trotted at San Francisco in September, against Maysville Queen, Lou Whipple, Oregon Jake, and Muggins, and won in 2:31¼, 2:28¾, 2:30. At Sacramento, the gray filly won three races in one week, the third being at two mile heats which were rattled off in 5:01¼, 4:57½. Oakland Maid reduced her record to 2:26 in the deciding heat of the only race in which she was started in 1875. In 1876 she heard the bell ring twice, and secured winning brackets on each occasion. Her second victory was a hard earned one, her rivals being May Howard, St. James and George Treat. May Howard won the first heat in 2:24½, Oakland Maid the second in 2:27½, St. James landed the third in 2:24¼ and George Treat the fourth in 2:27½. This gave each starter a heat, but when the word was given for the fifth Oakland Maid shot away from the field and won in 2:22½, and surprised her opponents' friends by coming back again in 2:22 in the sixth heat. This proved her last victory, although she was started in two races in April, 1877, being defeated in one by Occident, and in the other by Bodine. While in training this mare started in 13 races, of which she won 10, was second in two, and third in one. She trotted 44 heats in her races, winning 29, 16 of which were finished in 2:30 or better.

George Treat was a brown gelding by Dave Hill, by Black Lion, by Vermont Black Hawk out of Kate, by McCracken's Black Hawk, by Vermont Black Hawk, which made him not only an inbred Morgan, but also gave him the qualities essential in a colt trotter. He was bred in California, and did all of his trotting in that State, his first race being trotted in his three-year old form at San Francisco, where he defeated five foals of 1868, and made a record of 2:53½ in the second heat. As a four-year-old he was started in eight races, the first being trotted in May, when he won a six-heat race and reduced his record to 2:38¼ in the deciding heat. In September he was defeated by Regulator, Ajax and Moscow. He also started in a team race, with Highland Mary for mate, and was outfooted by Ajax and Moscow. At Chico, however, he defeated Regulator and May Howard in a five-heat race, but afterwards finished third in a race won by the latter at Sacramento in November.

In his five-year-old form George Treat was defeated in his first two races by Sam Prudy, being distanced in both. He, however, won a race at Marysville, but was afterwards defeated by Westfield, May Howard and Ella Lewis. The following season opened with a sensational race at Sacramento, where George Treat was started against Ella Lewis, May Davis and Blackbird. The latter won the first heat in 2:27, and was cut loose in the second, being sent for a record. He trotted in 2:22 and when he passed under the wire his three competitors were beyond the distance stand. Sisson Girl also defeated the Morgan gelding before he won a set of brackets in 1875. At Stockton he threw down San Bruno and Hope in a six-heat race, and cut his record to 2:27½ in a fourth heat. After being defeated by May Howard in two races, he also won a seven-heat race.

George Treat won five out of 10 races in 1876, the first being trotted at San Francisco in April, when, after losing four heats to Dirigo and Confederate, he went on and won. Prince Allen and Gold Note had too much speed for him in his next bids for the money, but at Stockton he disposed of Dirigo and American Maid in straight heats, and after being distanced by Chicago he won another race at San Francisco. The race of his life was also trotted at San Francisco that year against May Howard, Stanford and Gold Note. May Howard won the first heat in 2:24, but she could not carry the clip and was behind George Treat in the next three, which were finished in 2:25¼—2:27—2:28½. He also won a race at Reno that year, and was defeated by May Howard and Oakland Maid before the close of the season.

The campaign of 1877 opened at Chico in May in a race with Brushy John, Alameda Maid and Sweet Briar. George Treat won the first heat in 2:31½, but was defeated by the Rappahannock gelding. At the same meeting he also won his last race, it being trotted against Alameda Maid and Dutchman. He was not retired, however, until November, being defeated during the autumn circuit by St. James, Tommy Gates, Confidence, Nutwood, Dirigo and May Howard. While before the public George Treat was started in 43 races, of which he won 11, was second in 11, third in six, fourth in six, and unplaced in nine. He trotted 189 contested heats in his races, and won 50. As a three-year-old he trotted in 2:53½, as a four-year-old in 2:35¼, as a five-year-old in 2:33¼, as a six-year-old in 2:27½, and a seven-year-old in 2:25¼.

Ella Lewis was a bay mare got by the inbred Morgan stallion Vermont, who had a record of 2:34, out of Kate McDonough. She was bred by James McDonough, Willow Springs, Cal., and began her turf career as a four-year-old, her first appearance being in a $10,000 match race with Sam Purdy, who distanced her in the first heat. That race was trotted in July. Two months later she started against Jupiter, Oakland Maid, Dutchman Frank, Swamp Angel, American Maid and Oregon Jack at Sacramento, and defeated them in 2:30, 2:29¾, 2:31½. After being defeated by Westfield she won another race at San Francisco from Ajax, Jerome and George Treat, and closed the year by trotting second to St. James in two races.

Ella Lewis' first race in 1874 was trotted at San Francisco in February, when she was defeated by Mollie Morris. In April of that year she was defeated by Jerome and California Dexter in two split heat races, while she won two races in May, making her record of 2:27 in the second heat of a $4,000 match with California Dexter. In her next two races Ella Lewis was distanced by May Davis and Blackbird, being in the race in which the latter made his record of 2:22. In 1876 Ella Lewis was distanced by George Treat and Gold Note, and trotted her last race at San Francisco in 1879, where she defeated St. Helena in a five heat race. Ella Lewis was started in sixteen races, of which she won five, was second in four, third in one, and unplaced in six. She trotted fifty-eight contested heats, winning twenty-four, made a four-year-old record of 2:29¾, and a five-year-old record of 2:27.

Corisande is a brown mare by Iowa Chief, son of Green's Bashaw and Topsey, by Prophet, he by Vermont Black Hawk out of a mare of unknown breeding. She was bred by Jos. Tuplin, Lee County, Ia., and trotted her first race as a four-year-old at Keokuk, where she defeated Red Fox. She was then retired until 1877, when, after being defeated by Nelia, Don and Lady McD., she was taken to California, where she won two races the following September. The first was trotted at Sacramento against Harry, Lady Emmett, Proctor and Goldfinch, the last three being distanced before Corisande made her record of 2:24½, in the third heat. Her last race was trotted at Stockton, where she defeated Gibraltar, who won the first heat in 2:27, Harry Abbottsford and Lady Emmett in 2:26½, 2:26½, 2:27.

Whipple was a bay horse by Whipple's Hambletonian, out of a mare of unknown breeding. He trotted his first race as a three-year-old at San Francisco, where he defeated Comet, O. L., Marshall and Lady Babcock, and make a record of 2:52¾. He was also defeated in a stake for foals of 1867, by San Mateo Maid. Whipple trotted his next race at Lexington in 1876, with Midway Belle, Almont Jr., Lady Prewitt, Little Brown Jug and Pilot Hutchinson, and won, reducing his record to 2:34¾. In 1877 he was defeated by Bashaw and Nettie C., making his record of 2:33¾ in his race with the latter. In 1878 he was defeated by Essex Maid, Hambrino, Joe Kellogg and Kitty Bates, and won his last race at Sharpsburg, Ky., the following year from Kentucky Star and Lulu Moore.

San Mateo Maid only heard the bell ring once. That was in her three-year-old form when she defeated Whipple and Lady Babcock, and made a record of 2:51. Lady Babcock also secured a record of 2:57 in this race, after which she was retired to the stud, where additional honors awaited her. To the cover of Electioneer she produced the bay horse Elector, that made a record of 2:21¼ last year, while in 1887 her black colt Soudan by Sultan, made a three-year-old record of 2:30.

California Maid was a gray mare by Hamilton Chief. She was bred in California, and started at Sacramento as a three-year-old, defeating Stockton Maid and Onward in 2:59½—2:50¼. She also won a stake ran at San Francisco that season, distancing Lady Clara and Fanny in the first heat, which was trotted in 2:46. As a five-year-old California Maid was started in four races, three of which she won, her single defeat being at San Francisco, where she was handicapped to wagon, and won the third and fourth heats in 2:47—2:48¼.

The chestnut horse Onward, that defeated California Maid in her four-year-old form, was defeated by her in his first race, which was trotted in 1869, when they were three-year-olds. He also won a race at San Francisco without beating three minutes, and afterwards won the first heat of a race from Regulator in 2:36. As a four-year-old he was defeated in two races by California Maid, and secured second money in a team race won by Robin Rough and Joe.

Venture is one of the few thoroughbred horses that have managed to place their names in the 2.30 list. He was a chestnut horse, got by California Belmont out of Miss Mostyn, by American Boy, Jr. In the fall of 1866 he was started in a two-year-old race at San Francisco, and won it, defeating Lady Dooley and The Maid, and trotting the third heat in 2.54. Three years later he was started in a two-mile heat race over the same track against Harvest Queen, who finished behind him in 5:12½—5:15. Two months later the pair met again in a race for $10,000 at Alameda. The track was very heavy and time slow in the race, which the daughter of Hambletonian won without beating 2:40. After this defeat Venture was again started at San Francisco, where he disposed of Ajax in slow time.

Venture's first race in 1870 was trotted at Sacramento against Alexander, Blackbird, and F. F. Low. The first and second heats were won by Alexander, and the next two by the chestnut stallion. Eoff then began to move up with Blackbird, and after winning the fifth heat distanced Venture in the sixth. At the same meeting Venture was distanced in a two-mile heat race by California Dexter, who also defeated him in a three-mile heat race at San Francisco one month later, the two heats being trotted in 8:10½—8:29.

After a retirement of four years Venture was again placed in training in 1876, and started at Sacramento in a field of eleven horses. He was distanced in the second heat by Sweetbriar, who was defeated in the race by Tommy Gates. Two weeks later he again took the word in a stallion race at San Francisco, where he won the first heat in 2:29, but was, together with Alexander, Billy Haywood and Jim Lick, defeated in the race. Venture won his last race at San Francisco, October 10th, 1876, the fastest heat being trotted in 2:31½. The following season he was defeated by Dirigo and Nelly Patchen, and made his record of 2:27½.

Lady Dooley was a brown mare by one of the Morgan stallions taken to California. As a two-year-old she was defeated by Venture after winning a heat in 3:00. She was then retired until 1869, when she made one of the most memorable five-year-old campaigns on record. The first start was made at San Francisco in June, when she finished second to the pacer Dick Gough. Five days after her defeat she reversed the decision in a two-mile heat race. In the first trip she trotted a dead heat with Unknown in 5:25½. She won the second in 5:23, and the race in 5:26, after Dick Gough had secured the fourth heat in 5:21½. The two met again in a race at three-mile heats the following week, and Eoff again landed the filly under the wire first in 8:29½, 8:32½. After defeating Pride of the Bay in straight heats, Lady Dooley was for the fourth time started against Dick Gough and Unknown. This time the race was at four-mile heats, and the filly was again victorious in 11:05, 11:08¼.

After the above race Lady Dooley was given a rest until September, when she trotted three races in one week at Sacramento. In the first she defeated F. F. Low, Plumas and Alicia Mandeville, and reduced her record to 2:38½. She then defeated Pride of the Bay and Regulator in a two-mile heat race, and was in turn distanced the following day in a five-mile dash, won by Democrat in 13:57½.

J. E. Turner's first great mare May Queen, who was sold to J. Gallen in 1867, and taken to California, defeated Lady Dooley in two races in 1869, and was also defeated by her in the races in which the stout-hearted filly made her record of 2:31¾. Regulator also defeated Lady Dooley in 1869. In 1871 Lady Dooley made her last appearance in two races won by Harvest Queen. She was distanced in both events, although she managed to win a heat in 2:35¼.

The Maid was one of the two fillies that started against Venture in his first race. She was a gray filly of unknown breeding, and was retired until 1870 after her unsuccessful attempt to defeat the thoroughbred trotter. In that year she was defeated by Nora McNeil and Jas. Eoff's mare Don't Bodder Me, and also won her only race at San Francisco, where she defeated a field of four, the fastest heat being trotted in 2:54. In 1871 she was defeated in two wagon races by Conness, and made her record of 2:35½ in a dead heat with Lady Signal.

Alicia Mandeville was a bay mare of unknown breeding that was placed in training as a four-year-old and won a race at Sacramento, Cal., in the fall of 1864, defeating Brown Mack and Ben Franklin, trotting the first heat in 2:44½. Two years later she finished second to the Ethan Allen mare, Rosa Livingston, in a race at San Francisco, and was also defeated by the gray horse, Gen. Taylor, in the last race he placed under his name. After being defeated by Princess and Lady Dooley in 1869, she was retired.

Both Brown Mack and Ben Franklin, who were defeated by Alicia Mandeville in their four-year-old form, trained on. In 1870 Mack finished second to Sorrel Ned in a race at Sacramento, and made his last appearance two years later on the same track, when he defeated Paddy McGee, trotting the deciding heat in 2:36½. Ben Franklin trotted three races in 1867, being defeated by Flora in the fifth and April Fool in the third. In the second he disposed of Fly by Night and Kentucky Hunter, six heats being trotted before he secured the honors and a record of 2:44¼.

Foul Sheath in Horses.

There is nothing, says a practical farmer, that pulls a horse down faster than foul sheath. Farmers and all having charge of horses should know that it is no hard matter to clean. The best way is to feed good wholesome food, that will prevent disease, but that cannot always be done, and then we have to resort to a cure, which I find generally a very easy matter. Pare the nails of the right hand smooth, and take as much clean lard, free from salt, as can be held by the point of the finger and thumb; insert the hand to the bottom of the sheath, and, as the hand is withdrawn, leave all the lard. Repeat the operation two or three times at intervals of about two days, and my experience is that in nine cases out of ten the horse will be all right. If not, wash out carefully with lukewarm water, but it is a bad plan to use the water in very cold weather. I am now nearly three score year old, but never saw a foul sheath until about 25 years ago, and I find now, when my horses are fed on good pure hay, or well-cured fodder, free from all mold or dust, that they are not troubled; but, while feeding hay, it is next to impossible to keep them clean. I have never seen a horse troubled with that disease while fed on good corn fodder.

Stable Winnings.

It may be interesting for our readers to know how much the different stables won during the past meeting of the Blood Horse Association. While the sums won may seem very large in several instances, the expenses beyond doubt are also something stupendous, so that the sums given can not be considered as clear profit by any means. The largest winner of the meeting was Theodore Winters, The Czar bringing in $5,260, while Jon Jose won $200. Palo Alto's Racine puts to the credit of the farm $3,610; Geoffrey, $475; Faustine, $425; Brutus, $300; Pliny and Muta $50 each. W. L. Appleby's stable won as follows: White Cloud, $450; Wild Oats, $475; Lady Helen, the property of T. Williams, but trained in the same stable, $300. L. U. Shippee pulled down $150 with Farsalara, $50 with Songstress. Mr. Garland was only fortunate to win $50, and that by Emotion coming in second to White Cloud. The Santa Anita Stable placed to its credit $475, divided among the horses this way: Atalanta $425, Alaho and Florilla $25 each. J. B. Chase, although he had several fast horses, could only win $25, and that with the promising two-year-old Marigold. Kelly & Samuels were lucky enough to win $684 with Welcome, while E. McGinnis added to their exchequer $650. The Maltese Villa Stable, owned by R. Porter Ashe, had the fleety Geraldine to win $800, Flood Tide $765, and the old gelding secured $50. The Golden Gate Stable usually very fortunate, had little or no luck this spring, as all they have to their credit is $86, won by Laura Gardner and Black Pilot. Nerva won $50 for the Elmwood Stable, being the only one that came 1, 2, 3. Col. H. I. Thornton gets $100 by Reata, while Joe Hoge added to the stable's credit $75. Longshot brought his owner Mr. McBride, $20 in place money. Mat Storns won $400 with the gelding Kildare. A. D. Harrison's Hello was a winner to the tune of $250. Moses B. proved good enough to win $50. Bessie Shannon gladdened the heart of John Reavy $200 worth. Cy Mulkey only managed to draw $50 by Tom Daly coming in second. Capt. H. H. Hobbs won with Duke Spencer $175. C. V. Tupper would have lost considerable, but Guido proved himself fast enough to win $515.

A Gift Colt Earns $100,000.

The San Francisco correspondent of the Chicago Tribune, tells the story of how a gift colt made $100,000 for his owner: "A breeder of trotting stock who can get a colt for nothing, keep him seven years, make money with him every season after he becomes two years old, and then sell him for $50,000, may be classed as successful, if not fortunate. Such a man is L. J. Rose, owner of Rosemeade Farm, near E. J. Baldwin's ranch in San Gabriel valley. In 1869 Mr. Rose bought of George C. Stevens, of Milwaukee, three yearling fillies, Minnehaha, Maggie Mitchell and Barbara, the yearling colt Overland, a yearling gelding by Clay Pilot, and the two-year-old colt The Moor. With these he began breeding in California. Among the offspring of The Moor was the stallion Sultan, out of Sultana, by Delmonico. Sultan was at the head of Mr. Rose's stud in 1878. Since then he has been sold to Kentucky parties for $17,000. In 1878 John W. Mackay of "Bonanza" wealth and fame sent the mare Fleetwing, by Rysdyk's Hambletonian, to Los Angeles to be bred to Sultan. She had three foals by him. In 1880 the foal was a brown filly afterward known as Ruby, with a five-year-old record of 2:19¾. Mackay liked the filly and announced his intention of keeping and training it. When the owner of Sultan said he would like to have Fleetwing's next colt the answer was: "All right; you may have it. Consider it yours." In 1882 Fleetwing foaled a brown colt. Mr. Rose named the colt Stamboul. As a yearling he was given a little work. The next year he was trained and acquired a record of 2:37. Then in successive years he made records of 2:16½, 2:23, 2:17½, 2:14¾. In February of this year he was sold to W. S. Hobert of San Francisco for $50,000. In March Mr. Rose took twenty-two of Stamboul's colts to New York and sold them at public auction for $88,375, an average of $4,017. Stamboul's individual earnings since he was two years old, including winnings and stud fees, at a low estimate amount to $17,000, which gave a yield of $67,000 on an investment of two years' keep—not over $100—and $150,000 when the proceeds of his stock are added. Give the blood of the brood mares in the colts as extravagant a valuation as $50,000, and Fleetwing's colt, which Mr. Rose obtained as a gift, has a clean $100,000 to his credit at Rosemeade. The history of horse breeding in this country presents no parallel to this remarkable case.

A Peculiar Match.

[By Glen Cairn.]

"Race-hoss man, I reckon?" The words were uttered in sharp, genial tones, as a heavy leathern valise was plumped down in the seat opposite mine, for I was journeying from Memphis to Louisville, and I had just stopped at one of those little way stations that dot every Southern railway at close intervals. I looked quickly up and saw a man somewhat over the middle age standing in the aisle-way looking down on me with a half amused and wholly inquiring expression on his broad, jolly countenance. He was dressed after the manner of the typical Southerner, and in his general air there was that which said to the stranger as plainly as words, "Here is a fellow who has knocked around some, and seen a good deal of the battle." His face was clean-shaven, and the broad brim of his cream-colored hat shaded a pair of fearless blue eyes, which peared out beneath heavy gray lashes.

"Somewhat," returned I, briefly. "I sized you up for one, stranger, said the new comer, as he proceeded to take possession of the vacant seat. "I most always take a squint round for my kind when I get aboard the cars. Smoke?" and he produced a well filled case of excellent Havanas. His manners overcame any feelings of reserve that I might have had, so I accepted the proffered weed, and as I settled myself comfortably back in the corner of the seat, propounded the question that so often proves a stickler in every walk of life. "How did you know I was connected with horses?"

A knowing smile light up his features. "Why, I reckon if I ain't able to pick 'em out now I never will be," said he, with the complacent air of one who knew what he was talking about. "Oh, no! I ain't been in this Southern county twenty years for nothing."

'Have you been largely connected with racehorses?" I inquired.

"Well, I should articulate the affirmative. Why, stranger, (I don't know your name), I have raced all the way from Mobile to Brighton Beach and all the way back again in the fall, and that more than once. I've been dead broke a thousand miles away from home, and I've won many a dollar here and there. Yes, I have had many ups and downs, but I'm all right now;" and he took a long pull at his cigar and watched the smoke meditatively as it curled up toward the ceiling.

"Sure as you are born, and plenty of sport besides. I could tell you some curious things that have happened to me at different times. I remember pulling up one winter at Mobile. I had been playing to light houses all along the line, and had only a few old skates left in the string. All the rest of 'em had gone in the box exceptin' the old mare Sunshine, and she was in soak up to New Orleans for the feed bill. In them days a fellar could always get a match on in most any Southern town, and could keep a goin' that way, but what beat me was I had nothing fit to run an eighth, not to talk of goin' half-mile heats, which was the popular race. Things began to look pretty blue. I didn't know a soul in the town that I could strike for a loan, so I moved my nags out to a farm-house, and made a dicker with the farmer to stay there all winter. I had old Orange Blossom then, like enough you've heard of him, but he was away off, and couldn't work fast enough to keep himself warm. Well, I used to ride him into town every day and hitch him in front of Martin's place. Then I would loaf around for hours just waiting for some one that I knew to turn-up. There was plenty of sharks round, but I kept clear of that gang, and only knew one or two just slightly. One thing I noticed particularly, was the attention a few of them seemed to pay to the old horse, and after awhile I figured it that they thought I had something awful fast, and was laying for a good match, so I made up my mind that they would make a move before long. It happened that I was in town later than usual one evening, and it was just about dusk when I started for home. I hadn't got much over a mile when I heard some one hollerin.' I pulled up quickly, and over the fence pops a little nigger. "Mistah Jackson says dat he'll hab de mare at de track at seben o'clock sah," said he, as soon as he recovered his breath. "What mare?" said I, at a loss to know what he was driving at. "Why ain't you Mr. Jimmie Clark?" exclaimed the boy. I replied in the negative. "Well den, I reckon he'll be 'long 'fore a great while fur Mistah Jackson had to go over de creek, an' he tole me to wait heah an' tell Mistah Jimmie Clark." I started the old horse up again, and left the little nigger perched on the fence, but I could not help thinking over what the boy said about having the mare to the track for Jimmie Clark at seven o'clock. I knew that Clark was generally on the lookout for something fast, and besides, he was one of those who had been most active in trying to find out the ins and outs of my business. I came to the conclusion that they were going to give something of a trial on Jackson's half-mile track, so I resolved to see the rest of the performance out if possible. I looked at my watch; it was just six o'clock, and I saw that I would have time to go home, stable my horse and cut across country so as to reach the track by seven. I put Orange Blossom into a gallop and in a few moments had him safely housed. Then I started at a smart pace across the fields, and took up a position behind the fence just opposite the starting point. A half hour passed away. I consulted my timer and it was half past seven. Another quarter, and still there was no sign of a human being. The moon had risen and it was nearly as light as day. I began to grow stiff and chilly as I lay on the ground, and had almost given up all hope of seeing anything, when I heard the sound of voices coming up the track. I peeped cautiously out and could see two men walking in the direction of where I lay, and following them came a boy leading a horse hooded and blanketed.

"The track ain't particularly fast, I reckon?" said a voice that I at once recognized as Clark's.

"No, I haven't given it much attention lately; its pretty deep in some places, and mighty rough on the backstretch," returned his companion. "A horse that can run here in :52 to-night ought to be good for :49½ or :50 on any kind of a fair track."

The party halted a few yards above the wire and proceeded to take the clothing off the horse. I could not distinguish the color, but could see that the animal was under-sized and very nervous, for she kept moving about uneasily as they saddled her up.

"How much does the coon weigh?" said Clark, as he caught the boy under the arms and lifted him off the ground.

"About eighty pounds, I reckon," returned his companion.

"Yes. I guess that's about right," said Clark.

"Now Nigger, climb on," and giving the boy a leg-up, he walked over to the side of the track nearest where I lay.

"Let her jog around to the quarter-pole, and then start her up and gallop slow. Break away from here when you come round again, and work a full half," were the instructions I heard Jackson give the boy, and with a parting admonition to keep a good hold on her head he sauntered over to where Clark stood. "We might as well go and sit on the fence; we can catch her just as well from there," said Clark, and before I had time to think what was best to be done both men were seated directly above me, so that by reaching out my hand I could have touched either one; luckily for me they were facing toward the track, and my greatest fear was that one or other of them might get over on my side.

"That d——d Yankee is pretty cute, but I guess we can trim him with this mare," said Clark. "He hasn't made a break to make a match yet, but I think I have a scheme that he will bite on sure. We'll make him think his friends want to see him at home before we get through with him," and he laughed boisterously as he clapped Jackson on the shoulder.

"It's a wonder he hasn't been stumping some of you fellers for a race," returned his companion.

"Oh! I can figure that to a knock-down. He hasn't come all the way down here to fish for minnows. He wants a whale on his hook, and he'll get one too," replied the knowing Clark.

Patter, patter, patter come the hoof-beats down the stretch faster and faster, near and nearer. I had just time to reach for my watch when the mare came flying past, and the thud of the hoofs grew more indistinct as she rounded the corner and turned up the backstretch. "She's a bird, ain't she?" said Jackson, and I looked at my timer and saw 35 seconds had flitted away. But the hoof-beats came nearer again, and in shorter space than I can relate it, the mare again raced under the wire. A glance showed the time :51½.

"What, did you catch it?" said Clark.

"Fifty-one and one-quarter," replied his companion.

"I made the half, but it is all the same; either is good enough for me. Bring the mare down in the morning, and I'll pay you for her," continued Clark; and both men got off the fence and walked over to meet the boy returning with the mare.

I couldn't afford to stay around any longer and take chances of getting caught, so I crept quietly away, and was soon comfortably in bed. Next morning I started at the usual time for town, and was just hitching old Orange Blossom when Clark came out of Martin's.

"Nice morning, stranger," he began. I remarked that it was. "Ever take a nip?" he inquired, when I had secured my horse. I informed him that it would not go against the grain, so he led the way to the bar, and in a few moments we were nob-nobbing like old friends.

"Let's go and sit down somewhere," he proposed. So we took possession of one of the small tables that lined the room, and after a few more rounds Clark leaned over and said, "Mighty clever old horse you have out there, stranger." I replied that if he was I didn't know it. At which he laughed and appeared to think it was a rich joke. "Come, now, you can't fool me," said he, smiling in a superior kind of way, "for I know you have something pretty good. Now, I can put you on to a big thing if you want to win a pot;" and he proceeded to unfold his plan. "You see," said he, "I have a mare that is pretty glib, and most of the boys here think she can't be beat, so we can make a match and put up $500 or $1,000 a side, and take them into camp on the outside betting. Oh, I mean business," and he pulled out a wad that fairly made my mouth water. "Now," continued he, "here is $1,000 for you, and when we get the gang in here this evening I will commence to badger you and want to make a match, so we can put up the money in Kelly's hands (he is all right), and chances are we can get a few thousand in outside bets. Then we can go out and win with the old horse." After some more talk, during which he hinted I had better have a few thousand round me in the event of betting in the evening, we separated, and I rode out home, giving him the idea that I had gone after some money.

I journeyed along slowly, pondering deeply as to how I could get the best of this trickster. "Bring on a few thousand to bet on the outside." It made me laugh ruefully every time I thought of it, for I hadn't $50 that I could call my own in the world. Something must be done before evening, but what to do I didn't know. I looked around at the broad country up and down the dusty road as if I expected a ready-made idea to spring out of the ground. But suddenly my eye caught sight of a horseman approaching. There was not anything peculiar about that, but as he neared me there was something in his style of riding that attracted my attention, for his horse was cantering, and instead of the long Southern stirrup, his leathers were short, and his knees hugged the saddle closely.

"Who can it be?" I muttered. "It can't be Billy Grady, surely." But a few strides more convinced me that I was not mistaken, and that the redoubtable Billy was before me in the flesh. We recognized each other with a shout and a hearty grip of the hand, such as can only be given by two friends who meet among strangers in a strange country.

"What do you know?" says Billy, after the first salutations were over. "Not much," I replied. "But I do know that I could win a big pot here if I only had the money and a good horse."

"Tell us all about it," said my genial friend, and in a few moments more we are jogging along side by side and I was relating to him the incident as already told.

After I had finished my narrative my friend rode along thoughtfully for awhile and never spoke a word, but I knew Billy well, and I was confident if there was any way out of the difficulty that he was the man to solve the problem. At length he said: "I think there is a way of fixing it, Jack. Now I have about $1,500 that I scraped together at New Orleans, and we ought to make it $2,000 if we work it right."

"But you forget that we haven't a horse that can run a half better than :53, and this mare can go in :50 bang up, sure."

"That's all right," returned he, "but you forget that they have fixed it for you to win. Of course it is plain that they don't intend you shall, but then you see," and a broad smile spreads itself over his countenance, "they won't watch their mare very much, and they will never dream of your meddling with her. Now you leave the whole thing to me, and take my wad and bet it on the old horse."

Well, we met in the evening as appointed, and quite a gang could be observed loafing around saloons. Clark feigned to be pretty well "shot," and was declaring in loud tones as I entered that he had a mare that could out-run anything in Alabama, and finally he tackled me for a match. I hung back for awhile, and finally I offered to match for $1,000 a side, a half-mile dash, to be run the next day. He produced his money, and the stakes were put up in the hands of a prominent merchant who was known to be thoroughly responsible.

"I'll bet you $200 more," said a tall gambler who was standing at the bar. I took him, and the money was posted with the stake-holder. We had a few more rounds, and I commenced to act as if I was full.

Every once in awhile some of the sharks would badger me for a bet, but I protested that I wanted odds, and they doubtless thinking they had a sure thing laid me 2 to 1 till I got all my wad up and then the party broke up to meet at the track; but I could notice their ill-concealed attempts at satisfaction.

I found Billy sitting up waiting for me when I got home. He looked as if he had just come in from a journey, and after I had told him that I had made the match and got all the money up he seemed highly pleased, much more so than myself, for I was as sanguine as he that we would come out all right. However, he was risking his money, and I asked no questions.

At 10 o'clock the next day a large crowd had assembled at the track, and when we arrived we found our opponents had been there before us. A prominent banker was chosen for judge, and the horses were saddled and brought to post, no further betting being indulged in, and I intimated that I had placed all I could scrape together on the race. The flag dropped, and the mare opened a gap of several lengths on poor old Orange Blossom before they entered the back-stretch. Clark was standing near me, and his face wore a satisfied smile as he banteringly remarked that my "old plug was not at himself to-day." I began to feel terribly uneasy, but a roar from the spectators woke me up, and I saw that the old horse was gaining rapidly and that the mare was coming to him evidently just about done up. As they turned into the stretch Orange Blossom had pulled up even, and halfway down he was a length to the good, and Clark's mare fell back hopelessly beaten, and the old horse galloped home an easy winner in :54.

I have seen surprised men in my time, but I don't think I ever saw the equal of that gang. They were done brown, at their own game. They made a vigorous kick, but the stakeholder was all straight and handed me over the money, and Billy and I led the old horse off the track followed by the scowls of Clark and his friends who could not for the life of them account for the manner in which their mare ran. "How did you do it Billy?" said I, when we got well out of hearing. He smiled in a superior kind of a way, and replied briefly: "Jack, a little salt, a pail or two of water and a ten dollar bill to a nigger sometimes goes a long way," and that was all the information I ever got out of him.—The Horseman.

Sacramento News.

[By Our Special Commissioner.]

Owing to the heavy rainfall at the end of last week, the track was in no condition for racing on Monday last, and as the rain still continued, a meeting of the Capital Turf Club was held in the morning (Monday), and after some discussion it was ultimately decided in accordance with the wishes of most of the trainers and owners to postpone the meeting until the following week. It is rather a bad omen for the meeting, but there is every probability of it turning out one of the most successful ever held in the city, as there are plenty of good horses, all doing well, and quite an enthusiastic population in the Capital and surrounding country, who evidently intend doing their best to ensure a successful result to what will probably be the last meeting held under the auspecies of the Capital Turf Club, as it is intended next year if possible to have spring racing on the Blood Horse plan, the Directors of the State Fair Association controlling the meeting and arranging for stake races, etc.

This being the case, it behooves the whole racing community within a reasonable distance to show their appreciation of the efforts the club has made in the past for racing in general, by turning out in larger numbers than ever, and also prove that it is possible in Sacramento to have as brilliant meetings in the spring as they have in the fall, and thereby foster and encourage one of our rapidly increasing industries in the breeding of race-horses in the State.

"Spanish Charley," who has been in Chili, Valparaiso and Mexico for fifteen years, says, that there is any quantity of money for any one who can go out to Chili or Buenos Ayres and beat the class of race-horses they have there on their own ground. They are all mile tracks on the American plan, but instead of soil they are grass, cut short, and consequently are very hard. The weights are much heavier, five-year-olds and aged horses carrying 145 pounds in a weight for age race. Principally English trainers and riders are employed, and longer races are run than are now fashionable here. No auction pools are sold at all, the betting being all in the books. He said that he had met Don Juan Bocan across the mountains, and that he was a fairly wealthy man, very shrewd, cautious and difficult to beat in racing matters. This rather tallies with the English accounts of the Don.

Bob Allen, about the only man who ever made money as lessee of the Sacramento track, indulged in divers reminiscences of the palmy days when Lucy and Goldsmith Maid were brought to the state in 1872 to trot against Occident, for the five races they gave in the state three of course were hippodromes, the two mares trotting together, and the other two against Occident, single handed, were the big drawing cards. When the Sacramento one came off 16,000 dollars was paid at the gate alone, two dollars admission being charged. Allen was lessee of the track then but had an agreement with the San Francisco contingent who had paid Mr Smith $25,000 to come here, and though he did fairly well having a small percentage of the gate money and all the bar priveleges, the other parties must have cleared at least $60,000 on their agreement with Mr. Smith, for nearly half the $25,000 they paid was subscribed in San Francisco and Oakland beforehand. Since seventy six, he said there had not been much profit in track leasing as prices have kept increasing while crowds do not turn out now as they did then 'en masse' to see the famous trotters.

Jas Woodburn, a well-known resident of Sacramento, has gone home to Boston for a visit, the first time in 35 years. Though not much given to racing he showed us a fair sample last year when his mustang, as he calls J. M. R., came down on us. A pleasant visit and a speedy return to the genial Sacramentian.

Joe Courtney will leave for Reno either to-day or Sunday, to once more educate the Winter's youngsters. Joe, who has been teaching young ideas how to race for several years at Reno, has lately had charge of the Australian colts brought over by Mr. Newton, but since McCormick went East with part of the Winter's stable, he has arranged with Mr. Winters to train several two-year-olds and a couple of three-year-olds for the fall, and also keep an eye on the yearlings. Courtney has had plenty of experience, and being a painstaking and careful trainer, ought in the fall to have something very handy, as there is some pretty good material to work on in Leh Telish (Norfolk—Ballinette) both three-year-olds, a five year-old by Joe Hooker, dam Farallones, and among the two-year olds Chan Haskell, a bay Norfolk colt out of Addie O'Neil, a chestnut filly by Joe Hooker, dam Avail, (dam of Laura Gardner.) A full sister to Alta and two Hooker fillies out of Alice M, and a Langford mare, ought to keep up the Winters boom. Bronco, a 3-year-old ch c by Hooker, dam Laura Winston, although sold by Mr. Winters, will also be under Courtney's charge.

The Australian colts trained by Courtney will be superintended by the veteran, Albert Cooper, for a couple of months after which Albert will take them to Chicago, en route for New York, where, according to present arrangements, they will be sold. Mr. Newton, the importer and owner has been very unfortunate with his purchases, as all of them have bucked shins and are undergoing a strong dose of blister, thereby preventing them from winning races at this season, which, judging from the form they have shown in their work, they could not well have lost.

Ab Stemlar has nine of the best looking two-year-olds ever seen in one string in California, and had he only a few good three-year-olds and aged horses, would have been shipping East ere long. As it is, it is very doubtful whether he will cross the Rockies this year. His youngsters are all (with the exception of Whisban and Farsalara) barefoot, and are only indulged in light work. Ab's favorite is a beautiful dark bay colt by Prince Charlie, dam Nota Bene by Glenelg, standing about 15.2, with a beautiful head, neck and shoulders, good short back, nice quarters, and big knees, with clean hocks, good pasterns and feet, and taken all round a grand specimen of a race horse, with much less daylight under him and generally stouter looking than the majority of the gets of the Prince of the T. Y. C. To my mind the most racy looking is the bay son of Longfellow and Trinket, (a Great Tom mare), who resembles the Bard a good bit though with all due deference to the prestige of the mighty Bard, rather better loooking. He has been sick nearly all the winter, with a peculiar kind of rheumatism, but has now evidently outgrown it, and is ready for a reasonable amount of work. The other colt, a chestnut, very long on the leg, 16 hands high, is by King Ban, dam Hearsay, by imported Australian, and when extended looks a different horse to what he does when in his box. Among the fillies Farsalara and Whisban are well known to Californians, but in the two bay fillies, Ten Broeck—Bonnie Katie (Knight of St. George) and Longfellow—Carrie Philips (Pat Molloy) there ought to be a gold mine, for they look as racy as it is possible to be, and besides are bound to make great brood mares. Elsie, a chestnut Glenelg filly (dam Meredi by King Ban) is rather leggy, but evidently only wants time to thicken out and make a long striding mare of the Los Angeles stamp. Ab says he should have purchased several good yearlings at the yearling sales (East) lately for Mr. Shippee, but happened to strike the Dwyers who got outside his limit. As it was he got two for $1,500 each who are bad to beat for look and breeding.

The Maltese Villa Stable is not yet sure to go East, for they have only Geraldine and Flood Tide to take with the exception of a couple of two-year-olds. Abdiel though, the two-year-old half brother to Geraldine, is very promising, and looks like making (with time) a stouter and stronger race-horse than his half sister. He showed quite enough in January to warrant his being rested and gradually worked up, and although now as fat as a hog, moves with a nice free stride, with none of the headstrong traits of Geraldine, and seems to have more bottom.

Albert Cooper will go to Chicago in June, and has great hopes of getting hold of a nice sprint or two with his three-quarter horse Gladstone, who ought to start at a long price. Albert says he is bound to have money for sure, as he wishes to pick up a horse to win the Fresno two mile and repeat. "Dars too much money for dem boys to fool with down dar, I guess I must tend to it." Hope he will.

Big Jim still swears by Emotion up to a mile and a quarter, bar none. Trust he will have better luck at Sacramento next week, but think seven furlongs is her mark.

Wilbur Smith cuts a wide swath with Thapsin at Sacramento, just now, evidently being under the impression that he lays over all the trotters there. Wait until the Palo Alto pair show up in Marvin's finished style, then there will be fun.

The Sacramento programme will not suffer through the postponement, for although all trotting entries were off, the Secretary, Mr. Jones, says nearly all have re-entered with several additions.

Matt Storn has a chestnut two-year-old colt by Jils Johnson, dam Leveret by Lever, the property of Dr. Aby, who looks like making a speedy miler though he has a curly hock which does not seem to bother him much. His other colt, Forester, is looking wonderfully well, though only in easy work at present.

W. L. Appleby will return to the ranch after the Sacramento meeting and start in on his youngsters, several of whom require attention and handling just now.

Look out for the two-year-old brother to Jim Gore, the first time he starts out East, as he is said to be a long way above the average, and that possibly accounts for the Dwyers buying the yearling sister.

In consequence of the unavoidable postponement at Sacramento, the trotting and pacing entries are void. It was at first hoped that all of them would stay in, although not obliged to, but some few having intimated that they should not start, it was decided to hold a meeting of the Directors on Friday evening (yesterday) and decide whether what is left of the old programme stands or to have a fresh entry and remodel both classes. The result of the meeting was not known when we went to press.

The track is now in better condition than ever. As is well known, it dries with marvellous celerity, and on Thursday last was in fair order, while yesterday it was very fast, and will be faster if the weather lasts.

Frank De Poister will in all probability officiate as starter in the next weeks racing at Sacramento, Wilber Smith taking his place when Frank has any horse running there.

John Mackey will start East on or about the third of next month. Before then I shall probably pay a visit to the ranch and have a look at the youngsters who are to be sold in New York.

Palo Alto has two trotters at Sacramento in preparation. Marvin will turn up in time to drive one of them, Emeline, a five-year-old bay mare (Electioneer—Emma Robson by Woodburn), as she is entered in two of the purses, and it is intended to give her a record. She is a very even gaited, square trotter, and as her dam is thoroughbred, she ought to possess the requisite amount of stamina and vim to carry her well inside the thirty class. The other mare, Lady Morgan by Piedmont, is six years old. According to present arrangements she will not attempt to make a record until Napa. She shows the well known Palo Alto characteristics all through, being as intelligent and well educated as any Charley Marvin has turned out.

John L. McCord, the owner of several well known trotting and pacing horses in the last few years, has been improving and remodeling his ranch at Consumnes, about 18 miles from Sacramento. He has struck a happy idea in naming it the Sunny Knoll, as the country and general surroundings are said to be splendid, and the sun is always there. He has a mile track on the ranch under R. H. Burton's care, and in this pleasant region hopes to raise and educate trotters and pacers equal to any ones. He seems to rather favor the pacers, and speaks very highly of one youngster, and if the weather is propitious, I hope to avail myself of his kind invitation and look over the sunny slopes and pedigreed stock thereon ere long.

There are upwards of a hundred race horses at present stabled at the Sacramento track in anticipation of the meeting next week, while trotters of all shapes and sizes are innumerable, the only thing required to ensure success is good weather and a crowd.

The Sacramento racegoers are almost as disappointed about the Al Farrow fiasco as the interested parties, for all had a lingering hope that they would see the bay horse and Geraldine again try conclusions at a mile, and judging from the general tone of conversation in the capital it would have proved the best drawing card since the Maid and Occident were there in 72. The whole city was demoralized when Al Farrow was first taken by the Sheriff. The horse is looking very well, though he has not had much hard work, and probably is not improved by his perigrination to and from the track. He returned to the track last Tuesday night about eleven after a seven hours visit to Wilson's stable under the officer's care. All things combined it would be Geraldine's race if they should meet just now, as she is very fit.

Guido's compulsory withdrawal from next week's racing will increase the starter in the two-year-old race, as he had scared nearly all his opponents. Farsalara will probably be trusted this time instead of Whisban, being evidently more reliable.

Big Jim is going for the pieces again, Emotion being as fit as a fiddle. Why not match her against Geraldine? It would make as good a race as the Farrow one would have done, though I have a preference for the unlucky Falsetto mare, and should like to see Jim in a winning vein.

Betting In Futuro.

Before the next issue of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN reaches our readers the Brooklyn Handicap for 1889 will be a thing of the past. Already thousands of dollars have been bet on the result, and there is many an anxious man waiting to see if he will get a run for his money. Since we published the price laid against the entries, several changes have occured, the following being the latest quotations given by Cutler and Whitney:—

Arrival of Stamboul.

Peter Brandow, the old-time driver and trainer, started early last week for Los Angeles to bring up Stamboul for his new purchaser, W. S. Hobart, Esq., of this city. In addition to the great stallion, Mr. Brandow also brought up with him the grand brood-mares Trinket, 2:14, Silverone, 2:19¾, Astrione by Alcyone, dam Jessie Pepper, and Bon-Bon. These royally bred horses have attracted many visitors to the track, where they have been placed in charge of Orrin A. Hickok, who will, after the necessary amount of rest, begin jogging Stamboul, to get him prepared for the work that he will have to accomplish on the track this year. Mr. Brandow feels highly elated at delivering over the valuable consignment in good order, and it can be surmised that titled individuals never had better care taken of them while traveling than was taken of this precious car load. Stamboul is in fine condition, none the worse for the journey, and is worth going a day's journey to look at.

To the Public.

The stock advertised by me in last June of BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN, were held and accumulated by me through the assistance of friends, for the last ten years. The mare, young Miami, I bought from the late Bill Hall, of Santa Clara, in 1875, then a yearling past, for a good round figure. I have clung to her through might and main, but now she has to go with five of her fillies and one stud colt. The colts I have bred with an eye single to their retaining the trotting interest, with sufficient backing up to enable them to stay in a contest until the service was over. Trotters are born, not made; and I am satisfied if those colts fall into the hands of an artist, they will add to his fame, and bring fortune to their owner. The two black fillies offered in this lot I did not raise, but have the breeders' sworn certificate as to their breeding. Atlamont who sired one, the dam of the other all horsemen know, as he trotted at Bay District, two years ago, to wagon in 2:26¼, which was not the measure of his speed. Kisber, the sire of the dam of one and sire of the sire of the other, was considered by horsemen to be one of the greatest stallions living He trotted in a race, a half in 16½ with heavy track, showed a mile in 2:16 private, and came to San Francisco with a record of 2:27½, willing to meet all comers for the championship; got pneumonia on the steamer coming down from Oregon, and died in this city about two years ago, a great loss to this country.

The brown horse offered is out of Lady Hercules, the dam of Arab, is 12 years old; was foaled on Corbett's Place, San Mateo, (Howard Ranch). The first colt she ever had the bill shows bred to Irvington Straight but whether he or the teaser served the mare I refer the public to Corbett. I have held on to him, hoping I would be able to have him worked, as he has gait and breeding enough to trot as fast as any horse living. He has not had harness on for ten years. This sale is absolute on account of exhausted credits and cracked friendship. 3t* F. S. MALONE.

The Stockton Races.

The directors of the Stockton Fair have held several meetings of late, and in the course of a few days will make the usual arrangements in reference to stakes and purses. The programme, as far as arranged, is a good one, and will be about as follows:—

District, free for all, for a purse of $400.
Heliotrope purse for $400.
Pavilion stakes of 1889.
Yo Semite stakes of 1889.
Big Tree stakes of 1889.

TROTTING.

District stallion race for a purse of $400.
District two-year-old, $50 each.
District three-year-old, $50 each.
Free for all, two-year-old, $50 each.
Free for all, three-year-old, $50 each.
Free for all, four-year-old, $50 each.

THE BIG PURSE.

Free for all trotting horses; purse $1,000.
Free for all horses of the 2:20 class; purse $1,000.
Free for all horses of the 2:23 class; purse, $1,000.
Free for all horses of the 2:26 class; purse $1,000.

PACING.

Free for all pacers; purse $700.
Free for all of the 2:22 class; purse $500.

In each of these races five entries will be required to fill, and three or more to start. Four moneys will be paid of 50, 25, 15 and 10 per cent. The general conditions of the association's rules of 1888 will govern.

The Eureka Meeting.

The Humboldt horsemen had a meeting on Wednesday and Thursday of last week, there being mixed racing, which was thoroughly enjoyed by all who participated. Owing to the racing in San Francisco, all the noted horses of the coast were congregated here, but withal the local flyers gave good entertainment, which was highly appreciated. Our Eureka correspondent has evidently been lost in the scoring, for we have failed to receive any word from him, so take the following reports from the Eureka Times:—

The first race was a trotting stake race, to which the club added $30. The entries were W. A. Young's Able, Wm. Perrott's Colt, and B. McGarrihan's Diamond. In the assignment of positions Colt secured the inside, Diamond second, and Able on the outside. By agreement the distance limit was abolished. As the horses were young and the owners drove, a long time was taken up in scoring, and it was only after being admonished by the judges and sent from the 60-yard pole that they got away. In the pools Able sold choice for $10 and the field for $6. Able took the lead in the start, and held it throughout the mile, gradually increasing the gap until the finish, with only three breaks. He trotted the first quarter in :49, and the second quarter in 1:40, the third in 2:28, and the mile in 3:20. The other two horses kept well together until after the half mile was passed, both breaking badly, when Colt forged ahead of Diamond and came in an easy second. For the second heat they were tapped off the second time they came up to the wire, well together. As in the previous heat, Able took the lead at an easy pace, and held it throughout, passing the first quarter pole in :48, the half in 1:35, the three-quarters in 2:19½, and the mile in 2:08¾. Diamond came in second, and was awarded second money. Colt behaved badly, and although he outfooted Diamond and ed by a large gap in the start, he went up near the half mile pole, and was passed by Diamond and failed to recover. Very little money changed hands on the race, as it was conceded Able's race in the start.

The next was a running race, half mile and repeat, for a $150 purse, for horses owned in Humboldt or Del Norte counties prior to April 1, 1889. The entries were Little Cap, Jo Hooker and Stoneman, assigned positions as given above. In the pools Little Cap sold choice for $10, Stoneman second for $6, and Jo Hooker brought $6. They were flagged off the first time they came up to the half mile post well together. Stoneman soon took the lead, closely followed by Little Cap with Joe Hooker close after. Hooker commenced to gain before the quarter pole was reached and came down the home stretch at a grand pace making a dead heat with Stoneman in 50½. The time was remarkably fast and as is always the case in close races there was considerable discontent expressed at the decision of the judges. T. J. Knight being dissatisfied with the decision of the judges, sent Stoneman to the stables, when the judges called him up into the stand and notified him that they would rule him off the track unless he brought his horse back. The language he used to the judges and before ladies present was anything but gentlemanly and resulted in the judges announcing from the stand that T. J. Knight was forever barred from the track of the Eureka Jockey Club. This decision elicited another profane epithet from Knight when the judges ordered the officers to remove him from the grounds, which was done. The pools for the race were declared off. At 4 o'clock Little Cap and Joe Hooker were sent around to finish the race. They got off with Hooker slightly in the lead, which position he held throughout, winning the heat and race by a neck in 51½.

SECOND DAYS' RACES.

The attendance at the races Thursday was as good as the previous day, notwithstanding the fact that it had rained the preceding night and was showery during the forenoon. The attendance of ladies was very good.

The first race called was the three-quarter dash for a purse of $150 for horses owned in Humboldt and Del Norte counties prior to April 1, 1889; five to enter, three to start; first horse $110, second $40. They were assigned positions as given below: Sagebrush Sam, Susie D., Lucky Dan and Edith R. The judges were Wyman Murphy, A. Connick and R. D. Gross, while S. F. Pine and Miles Thompson acted as starters for the running race. In the pools Edith R. sold choice for $10, Sagebrush Sam $9, Susie D. $4 and Lucky Dan $3. They started without much trouble. Susie D. soon took the lead and held it to the finish, winning the race in the excellent time of 1:22. The result of this race was a surprise to the knowing ones, who backed Edith R. heavily in the pools.

The next was a trotting race for a purse of $150; mile heats, best three in five; first horse to receive $110, second $40. The entries were McGregor's Poscora Hayward Jr, Quinn's Nellie Q. and Dr. Wallace's Johnny Q. Much interest was taken in this race, as the horses were very evenly matched, and it was a matter of judgment as to the staying qualities. Before the first heat Nellie sold choice in the pools for $10 against $7 for Johnny Q., and $6 for Poscora Jr. In the assignment of the position, Johnny Q. secured the inside, Poscora second and Nellie Q. on the outside, after considerable scoring they were tapped off well together, but Johnny Q. soon took the lead and kept it, winning the heat in 2:47, with Nellie Q. second, while Poscora broke badly and came in a bad third.

The result of this heat caused a change in the pools, although the admirers of Nellie Q. still took some pools on her. In the second heat Johny Q. broke several times, and lost the heat to Nellie Q. in 2:47 with Poscora again taking third place. After this heat the pools again changed and Nellie Q. sold choice for $15 against $6 for Johny Q. and $3 for Poscora. They scored a long time before they were tapped off, but were finally sent away very even. Johny Q. soon took the pole from Nellie Q. and kept in the lead throughout with two slight breaks, winning the heat in 2:47¼. Nellie Q. cast a shoe before the first quarter pole was reached and was held up so that she was distanced, and sent to stables.

This left only Poscora and Johny Q. to start with two heats in favor of the latter. A few pools were sold at $10 to 3 in favor of Johny Q.

The next heat was a walk over far Johny Q. winning easily in 2:52. Poscora broke badly just after they started and lost ground that he failed to recover.

The last race of the meeting was a consolation purse of $60 for horses that had not won a race; half mile dash with $40 for the first and $20 for the second. The entries were Little Cap, Sagebrush Sam and Lucky Dan: assigned positions as given above. Little Cap sold the favorite in the pools and won the race in :51.

A Big Favorite Beaten.

As there is a great deal of interest manifested to hear how Donovan was beaten for the 2,000 guineas, the following telegram to the N. Y. World will be acceptable to our readers:

LONDON, May 1.—English backers had another "facer" today at Newmarket, where the winter favorite, the Duke of Portland's Donovan, went to the post a 4 to 1 on favorite for the 2,000 guineas. It was run over the Rowley mile, and between Mr. Douglas Baird's Enthusiast and his cousin Mr. "Abington's" Pioneer, they just managed to "do" the favorite. The other starters included Prince Soltykoff's Gold, Lord Bradford's Swift, Mr. J. Gretton's Miguel, Mr. T. Jennings' George, Mr. H. Milner's Homely and Mr. Hamar Bass's colt by Hermit, out of Ma Belle.

George took the lead at the start, followed by Donovan and Pioneer as named. They held the same positions to "the bushes," where Donovan went to the front, followed by Pioneer and Enthusiast. It was a great race, and amid much excitement Enthusiast won by a head, Donovan second, three-quarters of a length in front of Pioneer.

The eighty-first running of the 2,000 guineas, for three-year-olds, at £100 each, half forfeit; the second to receive £200 out of the stake and the third to save its stake; colts to carry 126 lbs.; fillies 121 lbs.; closed Nov. 1, 1887, with 79 subscribess; Rowley mile.

Mr. Douglas Baird's ch c Enthusiast by Sterling, dam Cherry Duchess, 126	1
Duke of Portland's b c Donovan by Galopin, dam Mowerina, 126	2
Mr. Abington's br c Pioneer by Galopin, dam Moorhen, 126	3
Mr. Hamar Bass's ch c by Hermit—Ma Belle, 126	0
Lord Bradford's b c Swift, 126	0
Mr. J. Gretton's blk c Miguel, 126	0
Mr. T. Jennings' ch c George, 126	0
Mr. H. Milner's ch c Homely, 126	0
Prince Soltykoff's ch c Gold, 126	0

Betting—4 to 1 on Donovan, 12 to 1 against Pioneer, 17 to 1 Gold, 20 to 1 Enthusiast, 100 to 1 each Swift, Miguel, George, Homely and Ma Belle colt.

The winner (Enthusiast) was bred at the Yardley stud, and was sold a yearling in July, 1887, for 2,000 guineas to his present owner, Mr. Douglas Baird. He was trained at Newmarket by Mr. J. Ryan, and the above is probably his first win. He ran fourth ridden by Tom Cannon for the Prince of Wales Stakes at Leicester, which Donovan won easily, with Pioneer second. As a two-year-old Enthusiast ran three times without winning. He was unplaced for the Middle Park Plate, second each for the Criterion and Dewhurst Plate. Enthusiast's next big engagement is the Prince of Wales Stakes of £7,000, a mile and quarter, on the 21st inst., and the Derby, a mile and a half on June 5th.

A Valuable Road Horse.

The chestnut gelding, Dick Stauffer, record 2:21¼, was recently sold by B. F. Stauffer, of Chicago, to C. H. Smith, and the transaction recalls the fact, known to not a few men, that Dick Stauffer is, without exception, the best road horse in the country, and also that his history is a peculiar and interesting one, says the Breeder's Gazette. He was bough about six years ago by Mr. Stauffer, being then four years old, and came into his possession at the price of an ordinary road horse—$250—not being able to show better than a three-minute gait, and those who had previously owned the big gelding were not sanguine that he would ever materially improve those figures. Stauffer at once began driving the horse on the road, and not very gently at that—being a man who weighs over 200 pounds, and one who likes long and fast drives. Usually he was accompanied by a friend, the buggy was a heavy one, and the load, therefore, better fitted for two horses than one. But the Blue Bull gelding improved every day of his life, and by the time he had been banged over the Chicago boulevards for a year he could trot in 2:30 instead of three minutes, and the following summer he was sent to the track at Washington Park to take part in a matinee. The style in which he drew a wagon surprised even the old heads, and some of them persuaded Mr. Stauffer to have the horse trained for a few weeks. This was done, and under Budd Doble's handling Dick Stauffer went to St. Louis, and at the fall meeting there won a good race, getting a record of 2:27½. Then he went on the road for the winter, and was driven every day, most of the time to a sleigh, and never failed of getting a fast drive whenever another animal of speed came alongside. When the snow disappeared the heavy buggy was brought into use again, and to this he was given a daily spin of from five to twenty-five miles all summer. In September there was to be a race at Washington Park between Harry Wilkes and Oliver K., and, as an addition to the day's programme, another event for horses belonging to members of the club was gotten up. Stauffer was asked to enter his horse in this race, the other entries being Editor, that had shown himself capable of a mile in 2:22; Opal, that had gone miles in 2:21, and Jeannette, with a record better than 2:30. There was barely two weeks' time in which to prepare the horse, while the others had been in training all summer, but Stauffer never weakened, and Peter Johnston took the Chestnut in hand. Peter knew there was no time for training, and so devoted himself to balancing the horse that had never been hitched to a sulky a dozen times. He soon discovered that Stauffer had plenty of speed, and a quarter in thirty-four seconds the day before the race was good enough evidence on that point. The race came off, Dick Stauffer sold for five dollars in pools of one hundred, and he won in straight heats, trotting every mile better than 2:24, and one of them in 2:21¼. Then he went back to pulling the old buggy up and down the boulevards again, just as if he had not accomplished something wonderful, and he is still at it, the best road horse in Chicago, and the only one in the world that ever went from between the shafts of a buggy and with thirteen days' work to sulky went three heats to average 2:22¼.

The Palo Alto Sale.

New York, May 8th.—As in comparison to the sale of the Rose, Corbitt and Valensin consignments, there were not nearly so many persons present to-day, still representative horsemen were here from all over the country. The stock was in magnificent condition, and from all quarters Mr. Marvin is receiving unqualified praise. The prices are only moderate, the general opinion being that the sale was set for too late in the season, and we have been surfeited with trotting horse sales for the past six weeks. Probably the cheapest horse in the lot was the "Bob" Morrow stallion Elector, consigned by O. A. Hickok. He was knocked down for the ridiculously low price of $2,200 to Miller & Sibley, of Franklin, Pa., their representative feeling highly delighted at securing such a bargain. The balance sold are as follows:—

Clarissa, br f, $2,050, to M. A. Dougherty, New York; Liela, br f, $1,000, Miller & Sibley; Coin, b c by Electioneer and Cecil, $2,500 to A. J. Feck, Syracuse, N. Y; b f by Electioneer and Alvaretta, $1.000, to Robert Steele, Philadelphia; Alva, b m, $1,350, to Robert Steel, Philadelphia; br c by Electricity and Cecilia, $1,350, to Alein Bros., Milwaukee; b c by Electricity and Mary, $425, to J. W. Ogden, of New York; b c by Electricity and Gilberta, $350, to J. H. Schults of Brooklyn; br f by Electricity and Mecca, $2,000, to J. H. Schults; Fate, br c by Electricity and Fatina, $380, to Powell Bros., Springboro, Penn; b f by Piedmont and Extra, to D. B. Harrington of Poughkeepsie, for $1,200; Collector, by Piedmont and Mischief, to W. M. Peak, of Brooklyn, $1,075; b f by Piedmont and Unis, to E. T. Bedford of Brooklyn, for $2,100; Admont, b s, by Piedmont and Addie, to Nathan Strauss, New York, for $650; Fair Boy, ch c, by Piedmont and Fairest, to M. Fitzgerald of Troy, N. Y., for $675; ch c by Piedmont and Daisy D., to Uhelin Bros. of Milwaukee, for $800; b c by Piedmont and Thalla, to E. W. Weed of New York, for $380; b c by Piedmont and Piney, to M. W. Seaman of New York, for $1,100; ch f by Piedmont and Prima Donna, to Nathan Strauss of New York, for $900; b c by Piedmont and Lodema, to M. Fitzgerald of Troy, N. Y., for $860; ch c by Piedmont and Lily, injured on the journey and not offered; b f by Whips and Urania, to J. H. Schults, for $1,200; b f by Whips and Millite, to W. H. Lines of Rochester, N. Y., for $1,025; b f by Whips and Fidelia, to E. F. Morgan of Connecticut, for $530; Whipster, b c by Whips and Maybird, to L. F. Herrick of Worcester, Mass., for $1,450; b c by Whips and Maybird, by Whips and Edith Carr, to L. M. Carhart of White Plains, N. Y., for $600; b f by Whips and Glendale, to G. W. Bailey of New York, for $620; b f by Whips and Cassandre, to G. W Daily, for $650; b f by Whips and Cleopatra, to G. W. Bailey, for $700.

The second day of the sales brought out a much larger attendance, the extremely low prices attracting purchasers from near and far. Frank Cole, of New York, got a bargain in the Electioneer colt Conductor, out of Sontag Mohawk, the price being $4,125. The total for two days sale amounted to $79,560.

The purchasers and prices to-day were: Baden, blk f, by Clay and Barbary Maid, to Nathan Strauss of New York, for $1,000; b f by Clay and Adelaide, to Robert Steele of Philadelphia for $850; b f by Clay and Melissa, to M. L. Carhart of White Plains for $410; b f by Clay and Melissa, to Robert Steele, $640; br f by Clay and Lize, to J. H. Schults of Brooklyn for $500; b f by Clay and Lisbon, to W. M. Peek for $550 (this filly was put up twice, the first buyer taking exception to the filly's eyes); b c by Clay and Uinta, to W. A. Brennan of Prince Edward Island for $375; b f by Clay and Lady Beecher, to W. A. Brennan for $470; b f by Clay and Theodora, to W. A. Brennan for $410; b f by Woolsey and Alvinza, to Edward F. Steele of Philadelphia for $1,250; b c by Woolsey and Amlet, to J. G. Davis of Lee, Mass., for $1,550; Wehina, ch f by Woolsey and Wilhelmina, to C. D. Ely of Clyde, N. Y., for $1225; b f by Woolsey and Contention, to Robert Steele, for $700; b f by Woolsey and Cassandre, to H. R. Watson of Westchester, for $825; Discount, b c, by Nephew and Edith, to Miller & Sibley, of Franklin, Penn., for $1,200; b f, by Nephew and Almira, to W. W. Seaman of Wilkesbarre, for $230; Minugo, b c, Nephew and Morning Glory, to J. H. Bruce of New York, for $300; b c, by Benton Frolic and Dolly, to C. D. Vreeland of Patterson, N. J., for $260; Albina, b c, by Alban and Fidelity, to E. T. Bedford of New York, $700; b f, by Alban and Bijou, to W. H. Lines of Rochester, N. Y., for $580; b f, by Ansel and Prima Donna, to L H. Herrick of Worcester, $610; b c, by Ansel and Sally Hamlet, to H. C. Watson of Westchester, for $610; b f, by Follis and Wilmina, to J. W. Daly of Mount Kisco, N. Y., for $800; b f, by Fallis and Mohawk, to J. W. Daly, for $850; b f, by Eros and Manette, to ——— of Brooklyn, for $2,750; b f, by Eros and Theora, to H. J. W. Bailey of New York for $1,475.

The Derby.

Gossip About the Starters in Kentucky's Classic Event.

The following is clipped from the St. Louis Republic, and gives the latest account of the probable starters and their chances of success in the Kentucky Derby:

On Thursday next the great Kentucky Derby will be run and the twenty-eighth meeting of the Louisville Jockey Club inaugurated. Notwithstanding the antagonism of the bookmaking fraternity, and despite the withdrawal of certain stables because of the Kentucky handicap blunder, the thousands of people who will assemble at Churchill Downs between May 9th and 18th next will doubtless witness one of the greatest race meetings in the history of the Kentucky turf. There may not be as many horses here this year as last, but there will be an abundance, at least half a thousand, and there will be no lacking in the matter of quality. The best horses in the Western country will meet here and battle for the rich turf trophies offered by the Louisville Jockey Club—equine giants from California, the flower of Kentucky and the seasoned veterans of the South. Many a record has been lowered at Churchill Downs since the day upon which Aristides captured the Kentucky Derby, and it is not unreasonable to expect that one or more will suffer similarly at the coming meeting. Ten Broeck's great record of a mile in 1:39¾ has remained unbroken for twelve long years. No horse save Stuyvesant has ever approached it, and he failed of reaching it by a quarter of a second. Old man Harper, Ten Broeck's owner while he lived, will endeavor, however, to eclipse even Ten Broeck's record next week or the week following. To accomplish or attempt this feat he has selected that fleet-footed daughter of the dead sire, Valuable. The race will be made against time, as was the case of Ten Broeck in 1877, and as the mare has already covered a mile in 1:40 in her trials this spring, there is excellent prospect of her succeeding. The coming meeting will comprise nine days' racing in all, and the following review will give a foretaste of the quality and nature of the sport to be expected:

The principal event of the first day is, of course, the Kentucky Derby, a mile and a half, for three-year-olds. It is the blue ribbon event of the American turf, and while it may not in intrinsic value equal several of the important events in the West, and a number of those in the East, to it attaches greater prestige than to any race probably run on American soil. It enhances the value of the winner as a racer, and as a sire. Take the Derby winners from 1875 to that of 1888—Aristides, Vagrant, Baden Baden, Day Star, Lord Murphy, Fonso, Hindoo, Apollo, Leonatus, Buchanan, Joe Cotton, Ben Ali, Montrose and Macbeth II.—and you will find that everyone of them were racehorses from muzzle to heel. With the exception of Fonso, who went to pieces with lung fever shortly after the race, all were winners again in good company. Hindoo, Aristides, Leonatus, Fonso, Baden-Baden, Day Star, Buchanan and Ben Ali are to-day making fame for themselves and gold for their owners in the stud, while Montrose and Macbeth II. are still on the turf battling with the newer equine generations. Lord Murphy was taken to England and is doubtless doing stud service there to-day. Joe Cotton is dead, so is Apollo, who was saved the fate of the only other gelding besides Macbeth II., who won the Derby, namely, Vagrant. Poor old Vagrant is still paying the penalty of impotency by dragging a buggy over the streets of Lexington. So much for the past Derby winners; now a word as to the first probable coming one.

Of the horses remaining undeclared the following are likely to come to the post: Sam Bryant's pair, Proctor Knott and Come to Taw; Spokane (Montana stable); the Beverwick stable pair, Cassius and Castaway II.; Kason (J. J. Carter); Harper's pair, Lee Christy and Casella; Hindoocraft (Ireland Bros.); Moxie (Labold Bros.); Robin Hood (Hearst & Murray); Sportsman (I. K. Megibban & Co.); Long Dance (George Rye); the best of Baldwin's pair, Caliente or Ganymede, and Once Again, who won the Phœnix Hotel stakes in 2:08¾, dangerously close to the record. This will give a field of 14, which may be reduced by the dropping of one of Harper's pair, the worst one of the Beverwick pair, and possibly Kasson. Nothing is known of the condition of Baldwin's couple outside the stable, and it is quite possible that neither will be found at the post when the flag falls next Thursday. To off-set these, however, additional starters may be found in Cartoon, Vatican and Teuton. Heron will hardly start; it would be apt to cause a coolness between Guest and Hankins. Almont won't start for the simple reason that he has been declared inside of the past three days, being sick from the effects of his journey from the Pacific slope. Indeed, Senator Hearst has been peculiarly unfortunate in this respect, his only other Derby representative beside Robin Hood, N. Y. M., having died since his arrival here. Kasson is reported a doubtful starter, but this lacks official confirmation.

Should the first 14 named go to the post, Proctor Knott, of course, will be a pretty warm favorite. The Futurity winner has improved immensely in the past fortnight and developed his old-time speed. There need be no fear of his not being able to go the route. He is bred that way. Come-to-Taw may cut some figure, and he may be permitted to win by license of his stable companion, but this is doubtful. Spokane is apt to make a showing. He is both speedy and game, and has made many friends by his creditable performance in the Peabody Hotel stakes at Memphis. The Blue Ribbon stakes, a mile and a half, to be run at Lexington next Monday, will doubtless disclose the best of Harper's pair, as both are entered in that race. So is Once Again, Milton Young's Derby hope, now being keyed up by Brown Dick, that veteran trainer who handled Gallifet last year. Hindocraft has been showing excellent work in his trials, and his victory at Lexington on Wednesday last, in the Distillers' stakes, makes him a very dangerous factor in the race. Moxie is a stable secret. He may be another Montrose horse, but it is doubtful. The Labold Bros.' luck is not apt to run in the Derby channel the second time. Robin Hood was undoubtedly fit before he left California, and is still looking well. But he has been eased up in his work—not a very flattering sign. Cassius is said to be Johnny Campbell's hope and not Castaway II. Cassius ran disappointingly in the Montgomery stakes at Memphis, but the same thing could have been said of Macbeth last year, and yet Macbeth won. Baldwin's pair, as before stated, are uncertainties. The remaining one of the 14, Long Dance, is reputed to be receiving especial training for this race, but has yet to disclose any especial prowess. Altogether, the race seems a pretty open one outside of Proctor Knott. Bryant still maintains that the latter will not start, but it is no breach of confidence to state that nobody believes him. But in any event, whether he starts or not, Kaintuck's classic event will be a contest worth coming miles to see, and the winner, let him be whom he may, will be cheered by probably 20,000 throats as he passes under the wire.

"Weather warm and track fast" was the first telegram received Thursday from Louisville, and a second read, "It is generally believed that Hindoocraft and once again can beat Knott." In this city, Hindoocraft once again and Bootmaker were liberally backed for place, hardly any one thinking for a moment that the great gelding could be beaten. However, the outcome proved that Noah Armstrong was right when he said in the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN office early this year, "there is only one thing can beat me for the Kentucky Derby and that is Longfish. The running of the latter named horse shows what a long head old Noah had, for Longfish has proven himself a first class three-year-old, but he did not start for the great classic event, so there is no telling how they would have been placed. The following telegram has been received at this office from our Kentucky correspondent.

LOUISVILLE, May 9th.—At a rough calculation there are twenty thousand persons present to witness the Derby. Great disappointment is felt that there will be no starters from California, as both of Baldwin's entries have been scratched. There were eight to face the flag, the pools selling $100 for Proctor Knott, against $70, $75 and $80 for the field. When the start was effected, Hindocraft had the advantage and led almost to the quarter, where Proctor Knott passed the game son of Lady Crafton. Before the half was reached Knott was three lengths to the good, Spokane being now second, the balance bunched behind. At the three-quarters Knott was five lengths ahead, but not moving steady, Barnes not seeming to have command of the horse. The same position was maintained to the mile where Kiley on Spokane moved up, and at the mile and a quarter was on even terms, Knott showing signs of distress, they came down the home stretch together, making a gallant fight, but in the last few yards Spokane got his nose in front and was awarded the victory. There is a rumor current in town to-night that Bryant sold Knott several days ago, and that the Chicago Stable now owns the grand son of Luke Blackburn. The time is the fastest ever made in a Derby, and the Kentuckians are crowing about beating the Czar's time, 2:34½ was never touched before, can Sorrento, Don Jose, The Czar or Flood Tide lower it at Chicago?

Spokane, the winner, is a fine large chestnut colt, the property of the Montana stable, and started last year five times, winning twice, his first bracket being the Maiden stakes at Latonia, where he beat a field of fourteen. His second win was at the Nashville fall meeting, where he captured a $300 purse from six others. He is considered an in and out performer, being inclined to sulk at the post, and will not break away, but when he gets started is a very fast horse.

Lots of people try to solve the annual puzzle, who will win the Brooklyn Handicap? The following arrangements of some of the probable starters may help them out:—

CORRESPONDENCE.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN—Dear Sir: In your paper of April 27th, the plan of giving running horses slow work hitched to a sulky was advocated. You stated that you thought it was likely that trainers would be slow in adopting such an inovation as they were rather a conservative class. For my part I think it a very sensible idea. I think also that if running horses when they are being trained for any particular race, were to have all their heavy work and strong gallops, about the same time the race would be run, it would be much better. Under the present system the horse does most of his work early in the morning and then gets his feed. On the morning of the race he gets just a "pipe opener," perhaps has a light feed, and very little water. The muzzle is then put on to prevent his eating his bedding, and he is kept in suspense until it is time for him to be taken out and saddled. Is there anything that would conduce more to upset a nervous high strung animal than such treatment as this; more especially when you consider that he who is usually kept so calm and quiet, has to face a noisy shouting crowd. On the other hand if he did his chief work in the afternoon, he could on the morning of the race get a good feed, and would go out to do his work without any great change in treatment to upset him; and would, consequently, be much more likely to take things quietly.

Grim's Gossip.

The Don has been declared out of the Brooklyn Handicap.

Mr. B. C. Van Houten, of Spokane Falls, will start a first-class breeding farm shortly.

Joe Narvice goes East to join the Hearst stable under Allen's charge immediately after the Sacramento races.

Chas. Boots goes to Sacramento with two or three horses to assist in the racing next week.

Jou Jou is working in his old form again, and with ordinary luck will soon earn his oats

Frank Black, manager for E. J. Baldwin, started East last Saturday to take charge of the Santa Anita flyers, which are now at Louisville.

Knap McCarthy telegraphs that he has arrived at Terra Haute with his string of trotters, and they are all in good condition.

The celebrated brood mare Nevada, dam of Luke Blackburn, died last Friday. She was owned by Capt. James Franklin.

The Report has discovered that Hanover trotted last week in 2:15, and Exile half a second faster. Great dailies, the papers of San Francisco.

James Golden, the well known Boston trainer, who paid California a visit last winter, has twenty head of horses under his charge at Mystic Park.

Pleasanton Stock Farm Co. has sold to Mr. Outhwaite, of Los Angeles, suckling black filly by Director, dam Echora by Echo, full brother to Direct. Price $5,000.

F. A. Lovecraft, Secretary of the Coney Island Jockey Club, telegraphs the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN that Torchlight has been declared out of the Suburban.

Mr. A. A. Newberry, of Spokane Falls, W. T., has started East, and it is thought likely that he will bring back a trotter or two, if he can find just what he wants.

J. Cairn Simpson has purchased from L. E. Clawson, the gelding Big Jim, conditionally on the latter being able to show a quarter in 35 seconds.

Fullerton, who has been rated as a first class race-horse in England for the past three years, has been sold for 5,000 guineas. He will be sent to South America.

Murray has had bad luck since he started for the East. Almont has been very ill, not expected to live, and now comes news that N. Y. M. has succumbed.

Mr. T. J. Knight wants to trot his stallion Idaho Patchen, against any horse in Humboldt County for the sum of $500 a side. This is a chance for the owner of Poscoro Hayward.

Among the buyers at the sale of the youngsters from Woodburn Farm, at Lexington, Ky., was W. M. Murray, who purchased a chestnut or grey colt by Powhatan, dam Geneva. Price paid, $110.

The filly which died at the Valensin Stock Farm week before last was Lottie Simmons, by Simmons, 2:28, dam Lottie Thorn, 2:27, by Mambrino Patchen. Mr. Valensin has sent East to secure the next foal of Lottie Thorn's.

The directors of the Blood Horse Association have retained W. W. Foot to defend them in the suit brought for damages by a reporter of one of the daily papers, who was expelled from the grounds during the late meeting.

Charlotte Cushman, the full sister of Procter Knott, was one of the starters in the Ivy Leaf stakes and was well backed just because she was Knott's sister. She did not get off in the first division and did not finished near the front.

In the course of a week or two, Almont Patchen, 2:15, will be sent to the stables of James Dustin at the Oakland track for a preparation preliminary to the summer campaign. Mr. Dustin has great faith in the famous pacer, and expects to lower his public record considerably.

At a meeting of the Board of Appeals of the American Trotting Horse Association, held on Wednesday last at Chicago, the Sire Bros. were reinstated. There was no action taken in the Frank Van Ness matter, although they were all ruled off together.

J. W. Knox writes that never before has he seen so many horses and colts in training at Lexington as there are this year. He reports that Anteeo is looking splendid, and is admired by every one, and that his book of sixty mares was filled in five days, twenty-eight applications being refused.

Dr. C. W. Aby, manager of the Langtry farms, Lake Co., writes that he has just received for the proprietress from Sangatuck, Conn., a very fine Jersey bull, seven months old, by Mabel's Gold Mine, out of a Coomassie cow. The name chosen for the youngster is Nugget. Dr. Aby adds: "Imported Friar Tuck looks as slick as an eel."

Speaking of the Pacific Coast Trotting Horse Breeder's Association, the Horseman says: The association has a grand career of usefulness before it, and the breeding associations on this side of the mountains, in the great friendly battle of rivalry, will have to look to their laurels.

F. A. Jones, the Secretary of the Capital Turf Club, says that in all probability there will only be one trotting race to alter, the pacing, colt and special all being sure, while the forty class is almost certain to stand with one withdrawal. There is some talk of arranging a special race for Kelly's trotter if they can find a class slow enough to suit Mike. He says he will go one heat anyway.

I want you to read the advertisement of Trullinger & Co., of Yreka, if you are in the stock business, for they have patented the very least castrating forceps ever introduced. All who have used them speaks in the higest praise of the instruments, and claim that they excel anything heretofore on the market.

From the press accounts of the race, Al Farrow, when in the lead up to the last furlong, was so palpably pulled back, that it is a mystery why the judges, from their own point of observation, did not take immediate action.

The above is from the New York Sportsman, and now I should like to have the editor name a single paper that said he was pulled. The charge is "he was not out for the money," and there was no pulling done.

Do not forget to attend the great combination sale Tuesday, May 14th.

Secretary Culver has received official notification from R. W. Rideout of the Eureka Jockey Club, that T. J. Knight and his horse Stoneman have been ruled off.

A private telegram sent to this city from Nashville says, that Sam Bryant has sold Proctor Knott to George Hankins, of the Chicago stable, for $32,500, with the understanding that the big gelding shall start in the Kentucky Derby in Bryant's name. This is the largest price ever paid in the United States for a thoroughbred gelding.

Poor old Drake Carter has been resurrected in Canada somewhere, and is entered in the Cash Handicap at 115 lbs. The old gelding is now nine years old and it would seem had outlived his usefulness, but one can never tell. The old horse Malua in Australia, has had many ups and downs, yet bobs up serenely every now and then, paralizing the bookmakers, and gladdening the hearts of his backers. Let us watch old Drake Carter.

A correspondent writing from Nashville says: The Chicago stable animals are not showing to advantage. Galen was beaten off yesterday, and to-day Huntress and Marie Foster were among the tailed-out division. The fact of the matter is there is hardly a horse in the stable fit to race yet, and when they are ready for bruising races it will be much later on. They nearly all look well, but a shade too high. Chilhowie is probably nearer fit than any of them.

The sportsmen of Los Angeles are fortunate in having a newspaper like the Tribune to further their interests. The issue of Monday, May 6th, comes to hand with three columns and a half of good live matter, containing everything in the sporting line from pugilism to lawn tennis. There is one thing for which the Tribune deserves credit, the items are always accurate, and that is more than can be said of the San Francisco dailies.

David Nevins of Framingham, Mass., who at one time owned Fearnaught Jr., wants to match his filly, Mary Stamboul, against any two-year-old in the world, for $5,000. This is the filly that won the premium at the recent Boston horse show. The following tells the story:

"Premium No. 19. Trotters, fillies, 2 years old and under 3. Prize, $50 in money or plate. First, Mary Stamboul, bay filly, 14 2 hands, 2 years, by Stamboul, dam Mary Arnold, entered by David Nevins, Jr., Framington."

Two races were announced to be trotted at Sherwood Park, Salinas, on Inauguration Day, but in the first event, a play or pay race, Mr. Anderson did not produce his mare, so Mr. Allen's Black Diamond had a walk-over. The second contest was for a purse of $40, the entries being Charles S. and Bay Clem. It was necessary to trot three heats, Charles S. winning the second one, Bay Clem taking the first and last. Time, 3:01, 3:05, 2:54.

Tom Hazlett's Black Pilot and L. D. Merriwether's Edwin F. ran a mile at the Bay District last Friday afternoon, each carrying 108 pounds, Edwin F. winning cleverly by two open lengths. The match was said to be for $500, but I have good reasons for stating that $40 is about the mark. What was their real object? The ostensible one was of course the fictitious $500. There was no pool-selling on the track, and it looked as though it was impossible to make anything at it —but who knows?

The stables of Captain Moore, near Cynthiana, were burned Monday night. Fifteen valuable horses were distroyed. The following is a list of the horses burned and their values: Twilight Wilkes, $5,000; Bourbon Bismarck, $4,500; Bismarck Pilot, $4,000; Johnson, $2,000; Von Wilkes, a two-year-old, $15,000; Mike, $1,000; Star Bismarck $3,500; Kentucky Hambletonian, $10,000; Bourbon Mark, $3,000; Lillti, $2,000; Perfection, $1,500; Count Bismarck, $500. There was no insurance.

Among some of the most prominent thoroughbred trainers who a few years ago gave their attention exclusively to trotters are Sam Bryant, B. J. Johnson, W. McGlynn, Ed. Corrigan, John A. Campbell, Cliff Porter, James F. Caldwell, the starter, and his son; John Crocker, Frank Van Ness, B. J. Treacy, William Letcher, Father Bill Daly, Willian McMahon (Garrisons's father-in-law), W. P. Maxwell (the latest addition in Lexington), John Madden, Dwyer Bros., Dan Macauley, Dan Mozier, Lyle Simmons and Jack Chinn.

James McLaughlin, the premier jockey of America, and Terra Cotta, the almost invincible crack of the Chicago stable, were ruled off at Nashville on Thursday. The instructions from the stable were, that Santelene must win if possible, and McLaughlin held in Terra Cotta to allow the stable companion to carry off the honors, but at the last moment Carrie C. won by a nose, causing the judges to rule horse and rider off.

We have Electioneers, Stambolds, Wilkes, Directors and Sidneys, but there is one other blood that has been overlooked in the scramble for fine stock in this state. D. M. Reavis of Chico has scores of magnificent colts and fillies by his old stallion Blackbird, and marvelous stories are told about the speed of some of the youngsters. A number of entries will be made this fall to show what speed the old horse can transmit. When Blackbird made his record of 2:22 it is generally supposed that every man in Butte County won a new hat.

Some months ago I had occasion to call attention to the splendid appearance of a young filly who was being trained by Mr. Hickok, named None Better. She was the property of the late Seth Cook, and has been sent back to the ranch. Mr. Hickok, feeling assured that horses bred like her were of the improving kind, sent back word to see if there were any more Allendorf-Bashaw Belle colts or fillies to be had. The answer came, "There is only one here, a two-year-old, and she has paced a mile this spring in 2:25." It is probably needless to say that the price asked for this wonderful filly is simply prohibitive.

Be sure and attend the combination sale on Tuesday next, if you wish to buy good pedigree stock. Messrs. Killip & Co. have carefully eliminated every entry that would not stand the closest scrutiny, consequently prospective purchasers may rest assured that whatever is offered for sale is of the very best. The stock farms of M. Sanisbury, W. M. Hicks, G. Valensin, F. M. Burke, Mrs. Silas Skinner and other noted breeders will contribute entries to the sale, which will be positive and without reserve. If you do not visit the Bay District track on May 14th you are liable to miss great bargains.

Henry Pierce has in the sale of horses to be sold by Killip on the 14th inst. the pacer Sir Charles; with a little handling went a half mile in 1:12. A two-year-old filly, Grace B. by Stamboul out of Moor Maid, well broken and speedy. Prices in the late sale in New York for the get of Stamboul, namely twenty-four head, sold for an average of $3,776, shows how the blood is appreciated. Vernon, grandson of Nutwood and Rysdyk's Hambletonian, is a great individual, and should sell well. Standard N., a three-year-old stallion by Almore (dam by John Nelson; second dam Belmont), dam of Standard N., being by Nutwood; second dam by George M. Patchen Jr., is a well broken and speedy colt, and should bring a large price. There are ten others, one of which is a saddle horse not included in the catalogue.

When Mr. W. S. Hobart purchased Alma Mata there was a condition attached to the sale. The mare was in foal to Wilton, and it was stipulated that if the foal should prove a filly the vendor should be allowed to purchase her for $2,750, but if on the contrary it should prove a colt Mr. Hobart might keep it. During the night of May 3d the grand old brood mare dropped a brown filly foal, near hind foot white, the off hind foot having a slight sprinkling of white hairs, and very small star in forehead. The filly is all that could be desired, having great bone and substance, and promises to equal if not exceed any of her dam's former progeny.

J. K. Newton's Australian colt Derelect (by Robinson Crusoe) arrived in San Francisco on Wednesday last from Sacramento. He ought to prove the most valuable colt in the whole string, being descended from the best racing blood in Australia, Fisherman predominating in him to a marked degree; but he has been ailing ever since his arrival, and is now said to be suffering from bighead. If this is so, the case is hopeless, but it is to be hoped Mr. Newton will have a shade of luck, and find that this is not the case, although it probably is, for several of the horsemen in Sacramento who have seen a good deal of that disease assure me that the colt is most certainly wasting under that deadly disease.

While looking at Gorgo in her stall in the old Dwyer stable at Sheepshead Bay, now occupied by Matt Allen, Superintendent Frank Clark remarked to a reporter: "This stall, old No. 1, has had more famous horses quartered in it since it was built than any other in the country. Nearly all the champions of the different years have looked over this bar, and its occupants have won almost a million of money on the turf. Luke Blackburn, Hindoo, George Kinney, Miss Woodford, Tremont and Hanover, and now Gorgo. Isn't that a string of great ones? You observe how the ceiling is painted blue, with a cross band of red. That was done by Hanover's rubber two years ago when the colt swept the deck of the three-year-old stakes, and won almost $90,000. I happened along a few days before Hanover had been brought home from Baltimore in the fall, and I found the boy hard at work. It was a labor of love, and the home coming was a joyful one I assure you."

When the news was telegraphed East that Racine and The Czar were winners on the opening day of the Blood Horse meeting, reporters swarmed around Sheepshead Bay to interview Matt Allen in reference to the two colts. The following is a fair average of what he told them all. "Racine was one of the best looking yearlings that I ever saw, and I'm not surprised at his good showing. He was sired by the horse Bishop that carried 140 pounds on two occasions at Guttenburg a few weeks ago, and spreadeagled his field, and is out of imported Fairy Rose, by Kisber. The colt of Mr. Winters's The Czar, that broke the Derby record, is a clinker when you get him going. He is a great big lumbering sort of a fellow, and you would think he was going to fall every minute to see him gallop, but he has even more power than his brother, the Emperor of Norfolk, and has tremendous muscles behind His neck is thick and short, and his throttle is wide enough to ram your fist into. He is sluggish, but I guess Winchell, who is riding for that stable this year, rode him up a bit in the Derby."

The races at Dixon on May Day were a great success, the liberality of the managers in providing large purses being productive of sufficient entries to make the sport highly exciting. The Tribune says: There were two events, one for pacers in the 2:30 class, and the entries were John Skelton, Thos. Rider, Belle Button and Little Doc, and they started in the order named. Rider won the first heat, Little Doc second, Belle Button third and Skelton fourth; time 2:33¼. Little Doc won the second heat; time 2:31. Belle Button won the third heat; time 2:35½. The fourth heat was won by Little Doc, John Skelton had not so far taken a heat, but his friends were backing him for a stayer, and the result proved that their calculations were correct. He won the fifth, sixth and seventh heats, best time 2:40. In the 2:40 class for trotters, there were only three entries, Dinah, Madura and Bracelet. Dinah was distanced in the second heat for running. The race was an easy one for Bracelet, and his best time was 2:34. There were nine entries in the race to see which horse could trot nearest four minutes. Edgar McFadyen won in 3:58.

The walking match craze is again on us, and Thursday night saw the mamouth Pavilion crowded to the doors to witness the start of the great six-day go-as you please race, in which are entered the greatest walkers of the age. Every attention has been paid to the details, ensuring comfort and convenience to those who attend. Albert declares that he is going to break his own record, and there are several others in the contest that swear he will have to to win. At 8:30 Friday morning the score was as follows:—

THE GUN.

AMERICAN SHOOTING ASSOCIATION RULES.

For Live Bird Shooting.

SINGLE BIRDS.

Rule 1. Referee.—Sec. 1. A referee shall be appointed, whose decision shall be final in all tournament or sweepstake shooting.

Sec. 2.—In individual matches a referee, scorer and pullers may be agreed upon and named by the contestants.

Rule 2. Appeals.—Sec. 1. In all matches other than tournament or sweepstake, appeals from the referee's decision will be decided by the Association's Court of Appeals.

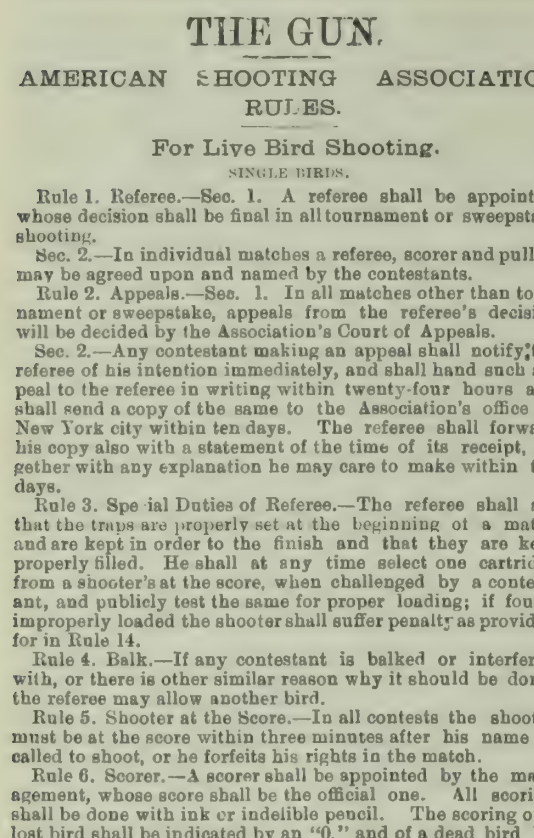
Sec. 2.—Any contestant making an appeal shall notify the referee of his intention immediately, and shall hand such appeal to the referee in writing within twenty-four hours and shall send a copy of the same to the Association's office in New York city within ten days. The referee shall forward his copy also with a statement of the time of its receipt, together with any explanation he may care to make within ten days.

Rule 3. Special Duties of Referee.—The referee shall see that the traps are properly set at the beginning of a match and are kept in order to the finish and that they are kept properly filled. He shall at any time select one cartridge from a shooter's at the score, when challenged by a contestant, and publicly test the same for proper loading; if found improperly loaded the shooter shall suffer penalty as provided for in Rule 14.

Rule 4. Balk.—If any contestant is balked or interfered with, or there is other similar reason why it should be done, the referee may allow another bird.

Rule 5. Shooter at the Score.—In all contests the shooter must be at the score within three minutes after his name is called to shoot, or he forfeits his rights in the match.

Rule 6. Scorer.—A scorer shall be appointed by the management, whose score shall be the official one. All scoring shall be done with ink or indelible pencil. The scoring of a lost bird shall be indicated by an "0," and of a dead bird by a "1."



Rule 7. Announcing the Score.—At the close of each shooter's score the result shall be announced; if claimed to be wrong, the error, if any, shall be corrected before another shooter goes to the score.

Rule 8. Distances.—All distances mentioned in these rules must be accurate measurement.

Rule 9. Arrangement of Traps—All matches shall be shot from 5 ground traps placed 5 yards apart, in the segment of a circle; the radius of the circle shall be 30 yards from the shooter's score. The traps shall be numbered from No. 1 on the left to No. 5 on the right, consecutively.

Note.—A ground trap is one that lies flat with the surface of the ground when open, and gives the bird its natural flight in starting.

Rule 10. Boundary.—The boundary shall be a semi-circle, the radius of which is 80 yards from the shooter's score; the ends of the semi-circle shall terminate at the dead line, the rear boundary, which shall run at right angles to a line drawn from the shooter's score to trap No. 3. (See cut A.)

Rule 11. The Rise.—The rise shall be 30 yds. for 10-bore guns, and 28 yds. for 12-bore and smaller gauges; use of both barrels allowed. If the weight of any 12-bore gun, except a magazine or repeating gun, exceeds 8 lbs. the rise shall be the same as for 10-bores. Magazine or repeating guns may weigh 8 lbs. 2 oz. without penalty; if over that weight the rise shall be the same as for 10-bores.

Rule 12. Pulling the Traps.—Section 1. The puller shall be placed at least 6 feet behind the shooter, and a trap-pulling indicator must be used to designate which trap shall be pulled. The traps shall be pulled evenly and fairly for each contestant, and instantly after the shooter calls "pull." All traps must be full before the shooter calls "pull."

Sec. 2. Should the puller not pull in accordance with the indicator, he shall be removed and another puller substituted.

Sec. 3. If more than one bird is liberated the shooter may call "no bird," but if he shoots the result must be scored.

Rule 13. Caliber of Gun.—No gun of larger caliber than 10-bore shall be used.

Rule 14. Loads.—Charge of powder unlimited. Charge of shot 1⅛ oz. American Shooting Association shot measure, struck off. Any shooter using a larger quantity of shot shall forfeit his entrance money and rights in the match.

Note.—If, in the opinion of the management, with the unanimous consent of the contestants, the shooter has not willfully violated this rule, his entrance money shall be returned to him.

Rule 15. Loading Guns.—No gun shall be loaded except at the score. Cartridges must be removed from the gun before leaving the score.

Rule 16. Position of Gun.—The shooter may hold his gun in any position, except against the shoulder, until he calls "pull." If the position of the gun is challenged, and sustained, the result of the shot, if a dead bird, shall be declared "no bird;" if a miss, "lost bird."

Rule 17. Failing to Load.—If the shooter fail to load his gun, another bird shall be allowed from an unknown trap.

Rule 18. Gun not Cocked.—If a gun is not cocked, or the safety not properly adjusted, and the bird escapes, it shall be scored a "lost bird."

Rule 19. Miss-fire with the First Barrel.—If the shooter's gun miss-fire with the first barrel, and he uses the second barrel and misses, the bird must be scored "lost bird;" but if killed with the second barrel, on the wing, it shall be scored "dead bird."

Rule 20. Miss-fire with the Second Barrel.—If a miss-fire occur with the second barrel, the shooter shall have another bird, using a full charge of powder only, in the first barrel. He must, however, put the gun to his shoulder, and discharge the blank cartridge in the direction of the bird, and the bird must be on the wing when the first barrel is discharged.

Rule 21. Birds Killed on the Ground.—Sec. 1. A bird killed on the ground with the first barrel is "no bird," but it may be killed on the ground with the second barrel, if the first is fired while it is on the wing.

Sec. 2. If a bird is shot at on the ground with the first barrel, and the shooter fails to kill with the second barrel, it is a "lost bird;" if killed, "no bird."

Rule 22. Birds Refusing to Fly.—When a bird refuses to fly, such artificial means as have been provided by the management, may be used to start it, by direction of the referee. A bird hit with a missile shall be declared "no bird." The shooter may declare a bird refusing to fly, when the trap is pulled, "no bird."

Rule 23. Leaving the Score.—A shooter having fired his first barrel and left the score, cannot return to fire his second barrel.

Rule 24. Gathering Birds.—Sec 1. If challenged, a bird to be scored must be gathered in bounds, by a dog or shooter, or, the shooter may appoint a person for that purpose. Three minutes time will be allowed to gather, but no extraneous means shall be used, and no other person shall be allowed to assist in gathering.

Sec. 2. If any gatherer cannot locate the bird, he may appeal to the referee to locate it for him.

Sec. 3. All birds challenged must show shot marks to be scored "dead bird."

Rule 25. Out of Bounds.—A bird once out of bounds must be scored a "lost bird."

Rule 26. Birds Shot at by Another Person.—If a bird be shot at by any other person than the shooter at the score, the referee shall decide whether it shall be scored or another bird allowed.

Rule 27. Endangering Person or Property.—If any bird shall fly so that to shoot at it would endanger any person or property, it shall not be shot at, and the referee shall allow another bird.

Rule 28. Ties.—Sec. 1. All ties shall be shot off at the original distance, and as soon after the match as practicable, at the following number of birds: In matches of 10 birds or less, 3 birds. In matches of 11 to 25 birds inclusive, at 5 birds. In matches of 26 to 50 birds inclusive, at 10 birds. In matches of 51 to 100 birds inclusive, at 25 birds. The shooting shall continue until each tie is decided, provided that the shooting shall cease at sunset, unless the contestants otherwise agree.

Sec. 2. Ties if not shot off at the close of any day will be continued the next morning at a specified hour. Any contestant not present when called to the score after the hour named, or within three minutes thereafter, shall forfeit his rights in the match.

Rule 29. Challenges.—Sec. 1. No one but a contestant or his representative can challenge, and the challenge must be made before the next shooter goes to the score.

Sec. 2. In tie shooting no one shall be considered a contestant except those in their respective ties.

Rule 30. Forbidden Shooting.—No shooting will be permitted within the inclosure other than at the score, and in case there is no inclosure, no shooting within 200 yards of the score except by those at the score.

Rule 31. Mutilating Birds.—If it is proved to the referee that any contestant has willfully mutilated a bird or is a party thereto, the referee shall declare all his rights in the match forfeited.

Rule 32. Class Shooting.—All shooting shall be class shooting unless otherwise stated.

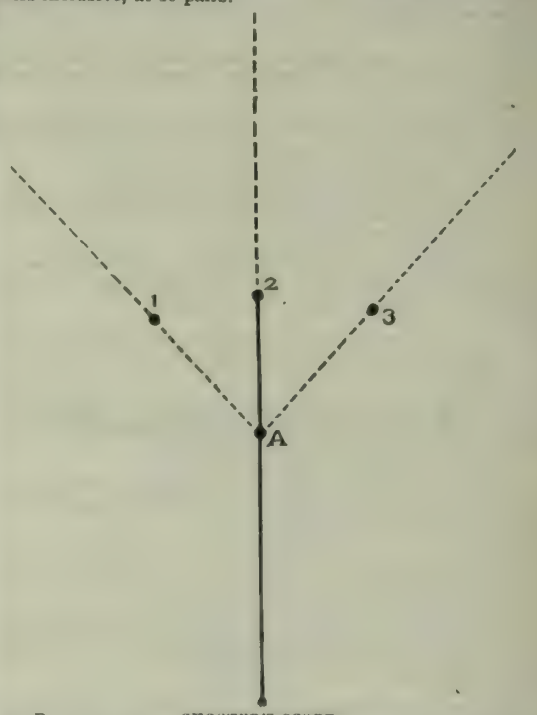
Rule 33. Conduct.—No person, whose conduct is ungentlemanly upon the grounds, or who shall persistently violate any rule after his attention has been called to the fact, shall be permitted to participate in a contest; and the referee shall so decide. The management giving a tournament under the rules of the American Shooting Association may suspend the offender and report the suspension to the Association for final action; and the Association shall have the power to suspend the offender for such period of time as the gravity of the offense may warrant, and during the period of such suspension the individual suspended shall not be allowed to participate in any contest held under the rules of this Association.

RULES FOR DOUBLE BIRD SHOOTING.

Rule 1. Rules for single bird shooting shall govern double bird contests when not conflicting with the following:

Rule 2. Double Birds.—The double rises shall be from two traps of any kind, 10 yds. apart, pulled simultaneously; 26 yds. shall be the rise for 10-bore guns, and 24 yds. for 12-bore and smaller gauges. If the weight of any 12-bore gun, except a magazine or repeating gun, shall exceed 8 lbs., the rise shall be the same as for 10-bores. Magazine or repeating guns may weigh 8 lbs. and 2 oz. without penalty; if over that weight the rise shall be the same as for 10-bores.

Rule 3. Both birds should be on the wing when shot at. Should only one bird fly, the shooter shall have another pair of birds if he does not shoot, or, if he does shoot and kill the bird on the wing, but if he shoots and misses, the bird shall be scored as lost, and in such event he shall shoot at another pair of birds, with a full charge of powder only in one barrel. The referee shall load the gun, not allowing the shooter to know which barrel contains the full charge, and which contains the powder charge only.



Rule 4. If the shooter's gun miss-fire with the first barrel, he will be entitled to another pair of birds if he does not shoot his second barrel; but if he fires the second barrel the result must be scored, and the shooter shall shoot at another pair of birds, with a full charge of power only in one barrel, as provided for in Rule 3.

Rule 5. If the shooter's gun miss-fire with the second barrel, the result of the first barrel must be scored, and the shooter shall shoot at another pair of birds, with a full charge of powder only in one barrel, as provided in Rule 3.

Rule 6.—If a shooter fires both barrels at one bird, it shall be scored a "lost bird."

Rule 7.—If both birds are killed with one barrel, it shall be declared "no birds," and the shooter shall shoot at another pair of birds.

Rule 8. Ties.—All ties must be decided in shooting off, as follows: In matches of 5 pairs or less, at 2 pairs. In matches of 6 to 10 pairs inclusive, at 3 pairs. In matches of 11 to 20 pairs inclusive, at 6 pairs. In matches of 21 to 50 pairs inclusive, at 10 pairs.

SHOOTER'S SCOBE.

NOTE.—To get angles for right and left quartering birds, measure six yard from trap No 2, back on toward shooter's score o point marked A. A line drawn from this point across traps 1 and 3 will give the proper direction of flight.

FOR INANIMATE TARGET SHOOTING.

Rule 1. Judges and Referee.—Sec. 1. Two judges and a referee, or a referee alone, shall be selected to judge.

Sec. 2. If the judges cannot agree, the referee shall decide, and his decision shall be final in all tournament and sweepstake shooting.

Sec. 3. In individual matches a referee, scorer and puller may be agreed upon and named by the contestants.

Rule 2. Appeals.—Sec. 1. In all matches other than tournament or sweepstake, appeals from the referee's decision will be decided by the Association's Court of Appeals.

Sec. 2. Any contestant making an appeal shall notify the referee immediately, and shall hand such appeal to the referee in writing within twenty-four hours, and shall send a copy of the same to the Association's office in New York city within ten days. The referee shall forward his copy also, with a statement of the time of its receipt, together with any explanation he may care to make, within ten days.

Rule 3. Special Duties of Referee.—The referee shall see that the traps are properly set at the beginning of a match, and are kept in order to the finish. He shall endeavor to make the targets conform to the flight and direction indicated in Rule 13. He shall test any trap upon application of a shooter at any time, by throwing a trial bird therefrom. He shall select one cartridge from a shooter's at the score, when challenged by a contestant, and shall publicly test the same for proper loading; if found improperly loaded the shooter shall suffer penalty as provided for in Rule 17.

Rule 4. Balk.—If any contestant is balked or interfered with or there is other similar reason why it should be done, the referee may allow another bird.

Rule 5. Shooter at the Score.—In all contests the shooter must be at the score within three minutes after his name is called to shoot or he forfeits his rights to the match.

Rule 6. Scorer.—A scorer shall be appointed by the management, whose score shall be the official one. All scoring shall be done with ink or indelible pencil. The scoring of a lost bird shall be indicated by an "0," and of a dead bird by a "1."

Rule 7. Keeping the Score.—Sec. 1. The call for a broken bird shall be "dead bird," and the call for a missed bird shall be "lost bird."

Sec. 2. When two judges and a referee are serving, one of the judges shall announce the result of each shot distinctly, and it shall be called back by the scorer. If the second judge disagree with the decision of the judge calling, he shall announce it at once, before another bird is thrown, and the referee shall decide it. In the event of another bird being thrown before the referee's decision, the bird so thrown shall be "no bird."

Rule 8. Broken Birds.—A bird to be scored "dead bird" must have a perceptible piece broken from it while in the air; a "dusted" bird is not a broken bird. No bird shall be retrieved for shot marks. If a bird be broken by the trap the shooter may claim another bird; but if he shoots the result must be scored.

Rule 9. Announcing the Score.—At the close of each shooter's score the result shall be announced; if claimed to be wrong, the error, if any, shall be corrected before another shooter goes to the score.

Rule 10. Screens.—Either pits or screens, or both, may be used, but the screens must not be higher than is actually necessary to fully protect the trapper.

Rule 11. Distances.—All distances mentioned in these rules must be accurate measurement.

Rule 12. Arrangement of traps.—All matches shall be shot from three or five traps, set level, 5 yards apart, in the segment of a circle or in a straight line. When in a segment of a circle the radius of the circle shall be 18 yards. In all cases the shooter's score shall not be less from each trap than the rises provided for in Rule 15. The traps shall be numbered 1 on the left, to number 3 or 5 on the right, consecutively, according to the number used.

Rule 13. Adjusting Traps.—Sec. 1. All traps must throw the birds a distance not less than 40 yards, nor more than 60 yards; and each trap must be tested for this standard distance before the shooting begins. If any trap be found too weak to throw the required distance, a new trap or spring, that will, must be substituted.

Sec. 2. The lever or projecting arm of the trap shall be so adjusted that the elevation of the bird in its flight, at a distance of 10 yards from the trap, shall not be more than 12 ft. nor less than 6 ft., and the angles of flight shall be as follows:

If three traps are used, No. 1 trap shall be set to throw a left quartering bird. No. 2 trap shall be set to throw a straightaway bird. No. 3 trap shall be set to throw a right quartering bird. (See cut B.)

If 5 traps are used, No. 1 trap shall be set to throw a right quartering bird. No. 2 trap shall be set to throw a left quartering bird. No. 3 trap shall be set to throw a straightaway bird. No. 4 trap shall be set to throw a right quartering bird. No. 5 trap shall be set to throw a left quartering bird. Traps Nos. 1 and 5 shall be set to throw their birds so that their line of flight shall cross that of the straightaway bird at a point not less than 10 yards, nor more than 20 yards from trap No. 3. (See cuts C and D.)

C SHOOTER'S SCORE.

Sec. 3. After the traps are set for these angles, if the bird for any reason shall take a different course, it shall be considered a fair bird, provided the trap has not been changed.

Rule 14. Pulling the Traps.—Sec. 1. The puller shall be placed at least 6 feet behind the shooter, and when the shooter calls "pull," the trap or traps shall be instantly sprung. In the single-bird shooting he shall pull the traps as decided by the trap-pulling indicator.

Sec. 2. If the trap is sprung before or at any noticeable interval after the shooter calls "pull," he can accept or refuse the bird; but if he shoots the result shall be scored.

Sec. 3. Should any puller not pull in accordance with the indicator, he shall be removed and another puller substituted.

Rule 15. The Rise.—In single-bird shooting the rise shall be 28 yards for 10-bore guns, and 16 yards for 12-bore and smaller gauges. In double-bird shooting the rise shall be 16 yards for 10-bore guns and 14 yards for 12-bore and smaller gauges. If the weight of any 12-bore gun, except a magazine or repeating gun, exceeds 8 pounds, the rise shall be the same as for 10 bores. Magazine or repeating guns may weigh 8 pounds 2 ounces without penalty; if over that weight the rise shall be the same as for 10-bores.

Rule 16. Caliber of Gun.—No gun of larger caliber than a 10-bore shall be used.

Rule 17. Loads.—Charge of powder unlimited. Charge of shot 1¼ ounce. American Shooting Association shot measure struck off. Any shooter using a larger quantity of shot shall forfeit his entrance money and rights in the match.

Note.—If in the opinion of the management, with the unanimous consent of the contestants, a shooter has not wilfully violated this rule, his entrance money shall be returned to him.

Rule 18. Loading Guns.—In single-bird shooting, only one barrel shall be loaded at a time, and the cartridge shall not be placed in the barrel until after the shooter has taken his position at the score. In double-bird shooting both barrels shall be loaded at the score. Cartridges must be removed from the gun before leaving the score.

Rule 19. Position of Gun. The shooter may hold his gun in any position, except against the shoulder, until he calls "pull." If the position of the gun is challenged, and sustained, the result of the shot, if a dead bird, shall be declared "no bird," if a miss, "lost bird."

Rule 20. Allowing Another Bird.—The shooter shall be allowed another bird for either of the following reasons: For any defect in the gun or the load, causing a miss-fire. For unintentional neglect to load his gun. For unintentional neglect to cock a hammer gun. For unintentional neglect to properly adjust the safety slide on a hammerless gun. Provided, that in single-bird shooting, if the shooting is at traps set in the segment of a circle, the bird shall be thrown from an unknown trap to be decided by the indicator; if from traps set in a straight line, the bird shall be thrown from the same trap, at a different angle, and unknown to the shooter.

Note.—The object of this rule is that a shooter shall not incur a chance for defeat by the unfortunate circumstance of losing his shot.

Rule 21. Single Bird Shooting.—Each contestant shall shoot at three or more birds before leaving the score. If two birds are sprung at the same time it shall be declared "no bird."

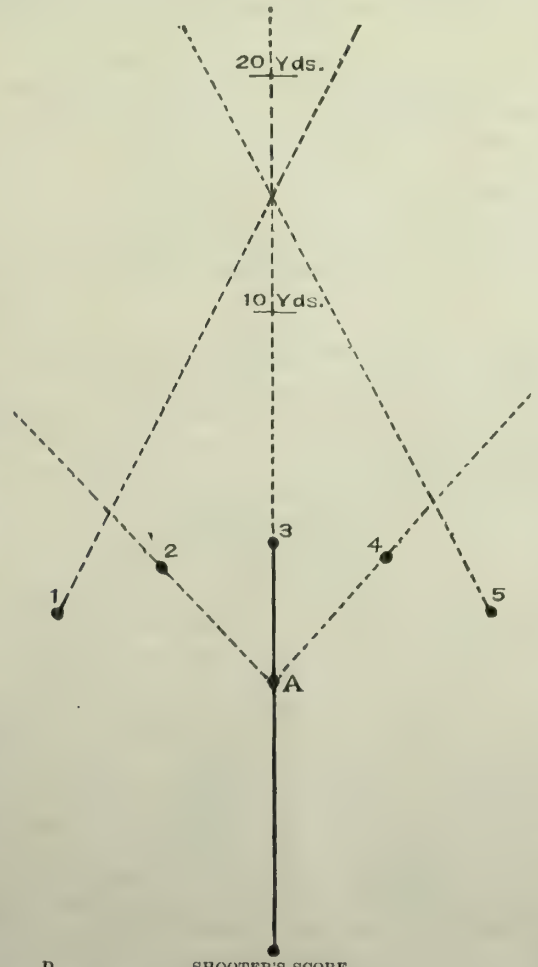
Rule 22. Double Bird Shooting.—Both traps must be pulled simultaneously, and each contestant shall shoot at three pairs consecutively, thrown as follows: If three traps are used the first pair shall be thrown from Nos. 1 and 2 traps, the second from 2 and 3, and the third pair from 1 and 3. If five traps are used the first pair shall be thrown from Nos. 2 and 3 traps, the second pair from 3 and 4, and the third pair from 2 and 4. If only one bird is thrown it shall be declared "no birds." If a bird is lost for reasons stated in Rule 20, it shall be declared "no birds." If one be a fair and the other an imperfect bird, it shall be declared "no birds." If both are broken by one barrel it shall be declared "no birds." If a shooter fire both barrels at one bird it shall be scored "lost birds."

Rule 23. Tie Shooting.—Sec. 1. All ties shall be shot off at the original distance, and as soon after the match as practicable, at the following number of birds:—

Ties on single birds: In single bird matches of 25 birds or less, on 3 traps 3 birds, 5 traps 5 birds. In matches of 26 birds to 50 inclusive, on 3 traps 6 birds, 5 traps 10 birds. In matches of over 50, on 3 traps 15 birds, 5 traps, 25 birds.

Ties on double birds: In double bird matches 10 pairs or less on 3 traps, 3 pairs, in matches of more than 10 pairs, 5 pairs, thrown from traps Nos. 1 and 2. If 5 traps are used, the same number shall be thrown, in each case, from traps 2 and 3.

Sec. 2. Ties, if not shot off at the close of any day, will be continued the next morning, at a specified hour. Any contestant not present when called to the score, after the hour named, or within three minutes thereafter, shall forfeit his rights in the match.



Rule 24. Challenges.—Sec. 1. No challenge shall be considered unless the party challenging is a contestant, and the challenge must be made before the next shooter goes to the score.

Sec. 2.—In the shooting, no one shall be considered a contestant except those in their respective ties.

Rule 25. Forbidden Shooting.—No shooting will be permitted within the enclosure other than at the score, and in case there is no inclosure, no shooting within 200 yards of the score, except by those at the score.

Rule 27. Conduct,—No person whose conduct is ungentlemanly upon the grounds, or who shall persistently violate any rule, after his attention has been called to the fact, shall be permitted to participate in a contest; and the referee shall so decide. The management giving a tournament under the rules of the American Shooting Association may suspend the offender and report the suspension to the Association for final action; and the Association shall have the power to suspend the offender for such a period of time as the gravity of the offense may warrant, and during the period of such suspension the individual suspended shall not be allowed to participate in any contest held under the rules of this Association.

D SHOOTER'S SCORE.

Classification.—Sec. 1. Any shooter to become eligible to the tournaments given under the rules and management of the American Shooting Association must qualify by sending to the headquarters of the Association a certificate from the president or secretary of a regularly organized gun club, of which he is a member, giving, to the best of his knowledge and belief, what he considers the shooter's average on inanimate targets. There certificates will be used in making up a proper classification of the contestants. Blank forms will be sent to any one on application. If the scores made by any shooter give sufficient grounds for changing a shooter's classification, the Association reserves the right to make the change.

Sec. 2. The classification of shooters will be as follows:

Class A—To consist of all those whose average is 86 and over.

Class B—To consist of all those whose average is from 70 to 85 in clusive

Class C—To consist of all those whose average is under 70.

Notes From Washington Territory.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—Mr. Gard. Kellogg having been challenged by Mr. Dodge of Tacoma to shoot for the medal which Mr. Kellogg holds, and has won from Tacoma men several times, said medal having been put up for competition between Tacoma and Seattle, and which if won by present owner twice more, it will be his private property, Mr. Kellogg named Seattle as the place, and April 20th as date of match, at 20 live pigeons, English rules, which event took place on said date and was won handily by Mr. Kellogg by a score of 17 to Mr. Dodges score of 10.

After the above event sweepstakes were indulged in by the Seattle and Tacoma shooters and sportsmen present, scores of which I enclose. Trap shooting promises to be lively the coming summer. In the recent team shoots between Tacoma and this place, Seattle won both matches for $60 a side, 5 men to team.

Mr. H. McMurchy is expected here in a few days, also Mr. S. A. Tucker.

Mr. W. S. Perry paid us a few days visit, and his now visiting points along the Sound, and I think he intends locating permanently. Mr. Perry is a famous trap shot from Braintree, Mass., and his scores some years ago were second to none, but he has been shooting very little of late.

SEATTLE, April 25, 1899. JAY SES EN.

California Wing Shooting Club.

The May meeting, held at San Bruno on Sunday last, was a test of the spirit of the members of the fine old club. A heavy rain poured down as the train time neared, but despite the fact seven members and a few guests appeared and braved the elements. When San Bruno was reached, the day was fairly good, although the ground was sloppy. As good birds as are often seen were on hand and took lots of killing.

The feature of the day was Mr. Ed Fay's remarkably good work with the first barrel. He killed twelve straight in the main match without using the second barrel once. His birds were as hard as any that were pulled, but he fairly smothered them before they were ten feet from the traps, and yet he did not snap-shoot.

Doctor Knowles had some teazer and his score of ten was very creditable, as was the like number credited to Uncle Robert Liddle, who seemed in his old time form and made some rarely clever kills.

Mr. Norton was using a heavy new L. C. Smith, recently built to his order and was not quite as quick as he usually is. The gun is a splendid performer.

Mr. Will De Vaull, the Secretary of the club, was a bit too full of fun, and became so interested in his joking that he did not shoot as well as usual.

Mr. Lewis also had an "off day," many of his birds were darting tailers, always hard to hit, and the shooter did not center them.

Mr. Day's score would have been eleven, but for a bit of bad luck in losing three birds, dead out of bounds. He was using the Greener Hammerless formerly used by Dr. Carver, a very fine gun. The scores were:

At 12 birds, Hurlingham. For Club trophies.

Fay	12	28	1	1	1	1	1	1	1	1	1	1	1	1—12
Knowles	16	28	1	1	1	0	1	1	1	1	0	1	1	1—10
Norton	10	30	0	1	0	1	1	1	1	1	0	1	1	0—8
Liddle	12	28	1	1	1	1	0	1	1	1	1	1	1	0—10

At 6 birds, Hurlingham. 250 entrance. First was by Dr. Knowles second and third dented by Messrs. Fay, Liddle and Norton.

Day	1	0	1	1	0	1—4
Knowles	1	1	1	1	1	1—6
Norton	1	1	1	1	1	0—5

The Selby Smelting and Lead Company advertises it willingness to send to all who may apply for them, the shooting rules recently formulated by the American Shooting Association. The rules should be generally tried, so that errors and weaknesses can be pointed out and revisions made, until all trap shooting can be done under the same rules and conditions.

The Chico Fair.

The officers of the Chico Fair Association are determined not to let grass grow under their feet, as will be seen by their advertisement in another column, and they announce to the world that their annual races will commence on August 27th, and continue five days. We have seen many hardly fought contests between both trotters and thoroughbreds on the track in Chapmantown, probably the most memorable one being that between Goldsmith Maid and Rarus in 1877, when the Maid reduced the record in a race to 2:14¼. That was the day John Splan said, "the gelding could have gone in 11 sure," and he was correct in saying so, for if horse was ever fit, Rarus was on that hot summer's day. The old grey pacer Sweetzer 2:15, the little trotting wonder Adelaide 2:19¾, and the now renouned Beautiful Bells, have all faced large audiences on that very fast track, and it is to be hoped that many more will assemble at the tap of the bell to get the word in August next. The residents of Chico are noted for their hospitality and those who make entries, may rest assured they will receive a welcome which cannot be surpassed in the State. The purses are liberal and should be well patronized, which they undoubtedly will be, for there are many of the old time horsemen who have a warm spot in their hearts for the garden city of the Sacramento Valley.

The Al Farrow Case.

As we mentioned last week, Fred Carillo and James Brown have been ruled off by the Blood Horse Association for the pulling of the horse Al Farrow in the first race. At the recent meeting, but in the original decision, the Directors exonerated the leasee of the horse, C. V. Tupper, from all blame in the matter. At once steps were taken to have a rehearing for Brown, but the witness produced only gave him a good character, and there was no evidence offered to refute the charges made at the prior meeting, when the trainer was found guilty. So Brown's case still stands as it was, with the exception that the Directors have promised to meet at any time when asked to do so, to hear any rebutting testimony which may be gathered in his behalf.

After the exoneration of Tupper, the Directors held another meeting to listen to the evidence of M. T. Walters, the owner of Al Farrow, who was desirous of stating what he knew about the case. The examination was held with closed doors, and the Directors refuse to reveal what the character of the testimony was, but enough has been gleaned from the witnesses themselves to warrant the belief that the charges were sustained, at any rate the fiat has gone forth, "Tupper and the horse Al Farrow are suspended."

Under ordinary ruling it would seem that the sentence was a light one, because if the evidence was of a conclusive nature the verdict would have been expulsion, so therefore it may be presumed that the testimony is more of a circumstantial character than otherwise. Mr. Tupper has many friends who feel extremely sorry for the plight he is now in, but the great majority say, that if guilty it served him right. The association have so far performed their part in the drama, and it now only remains for them to try and bring the equally guilty bookmaker to justice.

A $10,500 Purse.

The following announcement is much in the nature of a free advertisement, yet the breeders of California are, or should be, so much interested, that we give this space to the projectors. It may be as well to state before giving the scheme in detail, whenever horses are sold with engagements, that the value is considerably enhanced, consequently it behoves the breeders of California to read the proposition very carefully, for in a year or two from now, a horse entered in this stake will be eagerly sought after, and large prices will be obtained for those still perfect and able to show a turn of speed. Mr. E. A. Buck of the New York Spirit of the Times is the originator of the idea, and he has named it

THE SPIRIT PURSE

Of $10,500 for trotting foals of 1889; $5,000 to first, $2,500 to second, $1,500 to third, $2,000 to fourth, and $500 in plate or money to the breeder of the winner.

Entrance, payable as follows: $10 with nomination July 1, 1889; $10 Jan. 1, 1890, $10 July 1, 1890: $10 Jan. 1, 1891; $10 July 1, 1891· $10 January 1, 1892; $20 July 1, 1892; $20 Jan. 1, 1893, and $100 for starters, payable July 1, 1893.

Race to be mile heats, best three in five, in harness, and to be trotted between July 20th and Oct. 15, 1893, over a first class mile track, not west of St. Louis, to be selected by the Editor of The Spirit. Date and track to be governed by the Rules of the Association of which the selected Track is a member

Should more than fifteen horses make final payment and appear at the track on the day before the one fixed for the race, a majority of the nominators or owners shall meet at the office of the Secretary or Manager of the track at 8 o'clock P. M., and divide the probable starters into two or more classes, each of which shall trot a preliminary race of the same conditions as herein named, and only the best four of each class (distanced horses excluded) shall compete in the final race for the purse, which shall be trotted within three days after the termination of the preliminary races, subject to the customary postponements, though the same may extend into another week. Should the scores of two or more horses be equal for fourth place in either of the preliminary races, a heat between them shall be ordered by the judges, to decide which shall be entitled to start in the final race. It is further provided that in case more than thirty horses appear at the track on the day before the one fixed for the race they shall be divided into three classes, each of which shall trot a preliminary race on above conditions, and The Spirit will add $1,000 to each preliminary race, to be divided between the first, second, third and fourth horses in the same proportion as main purses.

Nominations to be made on or before July 1, 1889, and addressed to Spirit of the Times, 101 Chambers Street, New York City.

A National Game Law.

Harper's Monthly of May contains an interesting post humous paper from Franklin Satterthwaite on "The Western Outlook for Sportsmen," in which he treats of the great diminution of large game—buffalo, bear, mountain-sheep, elk, deer and antelope—within the last thirty years. Not only have these disappeared from their native habitats and haunts, but almost entirely through the reckless destruction by skin-hunters and the classes who do not hunt but kill and slaughter on every opportunity, regardless of the game itself, and utterly unmindful of its preservation, and of the benefit and delight it would occasion to the generations of food-needing inhabitants and true sportsmen who are to come. The killers for peltry are numerous and very distinctive, yet in comparison with the many who slaughter merely because they can do so, without want or benefit to themselves, they are of small account in the indiscriminate aggregate slaughter of these wild animals.

Of the millions of buffalo which roamed the broad plains less than forty years ago, there remain less than one thousand, and these are under protection in the National Park of the Yellowstone, and in the keeping of parties who wish to save the species from total extermination. A few small bands are preserved in secluded localities by the Indians, to whom they still furnish the means of subsistence, as cattle are bred for the uses of mankind. The transcontinental railroads and the spread of settlements throughout the vast regions, formerly the roaming grounds of the buffalo, have caused the separation of the great herds and created the multiplied means to their decimation, but with all these encroachments of enlightenment to be considered, the prodigious slaughter of the splendid game must still rest to the account of the thousands who wantonly kill and destroy leaving the wounded to the ravenous feasting of wolves, and the carcasses to the carrion feeders of the field and air. It is the same in degree with the other species of wild game, beasts and birds.

For the protection of this game Mr. Satterthwaite proposes legislation by Congress, besides the game laws of States and Territories, the enactment of laws which will remedy the evil and preserve the game in future. The attempt to procure this order of legislation from Congress, has been made in past years, time and again, but always unsuccessfully. The prospect is small that it will receive due consideration now. Every year the necessity becomes more apparent, as every year the outrage of extermination goes on. The more feasible method to its prevention appears to be in local legislation. The Territories are growing into States. Already the probability is clear that before another Congress shall conclude its session, Washington, Montana and the two Dakotas, will be admitted as States. Idaho, Wyoming, Utah, Arizona and New Mexico will soon follow, and the rapidity with which Oklahoma is accumulating population, justifies the prediction that early in the next decade the only Territories of the United States will be Alaska and those allotted to the Indians. As Territories or States, the people of each have power to enact suitable laws for the protection of game-flesh, fowl and fish. But this ought not to cause Congress to withhold its supreme authority. Assuming that Washington and Montana will be admitted into the Union as States during the ensuing session of Congress, the proposition comes with better reason therefore that, inasmuch as the States of the Pacific contain the greater proportion of this game and nearly all of the most valued species, it is from those States the direct movement should be made in Congress for the adoption of an adequate law upon the subject. As California is the oldest of the Pacific States and has the largest representation in Congress, it would be appropriate that the bill for the purpose should be introduced by a representative of California, who would unquestionably have the backing of the whole Pacific Coast representation to his support, and with this great geographical and important numerical strength to urge the measure it could not fail to be successful.

The general government has already adopted a cognate measure in regard to the fin seal and fish in the Behring sea and Alaska islands and waters. Surely the Government will not discriminate in favor of its seas and islands, and seal and sea fish, and against its coast and inland possessions, for the protection of the valuable wild game which exists therein. This wild game is besides more prized for the food and use of mankind, and is more abundant, than that of which any other country in the world is endowed.

There is a majesty and authority in the laws of Congress which does not commonly appertain to the laws of the State, and still less to the laws of a Territory. The law governing timber lands and the forests they contain can be cited as a pertinent example. The enforcement of the law against trespassers and offenders upon this Coast is familiar demonstration. It might not be so, still it is a fact that the offender who recklessly defies, or is unreasonably indifferent to the authority of the local courts, is possessed of a mysterious awe when summoned before a Federal Court, to plead to an indictment of a United States grand jury, and stand trial by a jury empaneled accordingly. A national game law would at least work in harmony with the similar laws of the State and assure the better protection of game.

Every good citizen ought to feel himself a constituted guardian of the game and enter complaint against the transgressor. A few examples will impress upon offenders the consequence of their disregard of the law, and serve as good warning to all. Already this month the local newspapers have reported the slaughter of fish by dynamite in Cache creek by Chinese, and the unlawful killing of deer in the upper portion of Sonoma Co. No arrests have been made. Therein rests the fault. Failure to arrest offenders encourages the commission of the offence. Prompt punishment is needed. Wherein the State law is defective or proves inadequate, the fear of national law might avail. It can do no harm and may work good effects. The proposition is worthy of the attention of the representatives in Congress from California. Good citizens will give praise and feel grateful to the Congressman who will introduce the bill and applaud the Congress that shall make it a law.

Pacific Coast Trotting Horse Breeders' Association.

The following circular has been sent to all breeders whose post office address was obtainable by Secretary Page of the above association. Any of our readers who desire to join, can send in their names to the Secretary, whose address is given below.

APRIL 23, 1889

DEAR SIR:—At the meeting held April 19, 1889, the following Board of Directors was elected:

J. H. White,	P. O., Lakeville, Cal.,		President.
N. T. Smith,	" San Francisco, Cal.,		Treasurer.
W. S. Hobart,	" " "	"	Director.
R. T. Carroll'	" " "	"	"
L. J. Rose,	" Los Angeles,	"	"
L. U. Shippee,	" Stockton,	"	"
M. Salisbury,	" Pleasanton,	"	"
H. M. Larue,	" Sacramento,	"	"
F. L. Coombs,	" Napa,	"	"
D. J. Murphy,	" San Jose,	"	"
L. H. McIntosh,	" Chico,	"	"

As soon as breeders owners, etc., from other States or Territories on the Pacific Coast join the Association, they will be given representation on the Board.

The membership fee has been fixed at twenty-five dollars; the annual dues at-five dollars.

The Board of Directors have been authorizeed to hold a meeting at such time and place as they may select during the Fall, and to give such stallion and colt stakes and purses as they may deem expedient.

It has also been authorized to grant any member who may donate the sum of three hundred dollars or over, toward making up said purses or stakes, the privilege of naming one of the same, provided, that the name selected meet with the approval of the said Board.

No horses or colts, bred or owned on the Pacific Coast shall be eligible to stakes or purses given by the Association, unless the owners thereof be members of the P. C. T. H. B. A.

Colts bred and owned outside of the limits named, shall be eligible thereto, without the requirement of membership on the part of their owners.

The Pacific Coast shall be interpreted to include all such States and Territories as lie in whole, or in part, West of the Rocky Mountains.

You are earnestly invited to become a member of the Association, and thereby to further the interests of trotting-horse breeders and owners, of the trotting turf of this coast.

It is not necessary, in order to be entitled to membership that the applicant be a breeder or owner; admirers and lovers of the trotting horse, and patrons of the trotting turf who are desirous of its encouragement, perpetuation and elevation, will be made welcome to membership in the P. C. T. H. B. A.

The membership fee, $25, is now due and should be remitted to the Secretary, either by draft, payable at San Francisco, or by Post Office or Wells-Fargo money order, payable at Petaluma, Cal.

Your attention is called to purses and stakes offered by the Pacific Coast Trotting Horse Breeders' Association, to be trotted Oct. 12, 16, and 19, 1889, as per advertisement in columns of BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN.

Entries close June 1, 1889. WILFRED PAGE, Sec'y.

Ventura.

What is the age and pedigree of Wilkes Moor? Also the pedigree of Patchen Vernon and Trifle?

Answer.—Wilkes Moor, formerly Crusader, three years old, by Guy Wilkes; first dam Rosalind by Del Sur; second dam by The Moor; third dam Lulu Jackson by Jack Malone; fourth dam Leda by imp. Epsilon.

Patchen Vernon is by George M. Patchen Jr., dam Lady Vernon. We do not know the pedigree of Trifle.

W. F. K.

Has the horse "Billy Lyle" ever had any other name than this?

Answer.—He was named that as a colt.

R. W. Donaca.

Please let me know the record of the running horse J. M. R. for the year 1888? Also select for me a set of racing colors for future use?

Answer.—J. M. R. started six times last year but failed to earn brackets. He came in third to Al Farrow and Geraldine for the Record Stakes, Saturday, November 10th. Tuesday, December 4th, he was second to Grisette in a purse race in a good race; the track was heavy, the mile being done in 1:46½. We have selected the Duke of Westminster's colors for you, as there are none worn like them in this country. See colors claimed.

J. A. Linscott.

Please give the color of the dam of Adrian in your next issue?

Answer.—Chestnut.

E. D. Morse, Chicago.

You unquestionably know the breeder and full breeding of the trotting wonder, Arab, 2:15. Kindly furnish the information in Questions and Replies.

Answer.—Mr. Malone, who owned the mare when she was bred, writes as follows: "His dam is Lady Hercules, by imported Hercules, 2d dam Nettie George, by Norfolk, his sire, Gen. Benton, now the property of Senator Stanford."

F. S. MALONE.

Mr. Corbitt contends that Arab was out of Lady Hamilton by Arthurton, and not out of Lady Hercules.

There are still others who claim that Gen. Benton is not the sire, but that Lady Hercules was served that season by Electioneer.

A subscriber, Petaluma.

Can you give me the pedigree of Boston Boy who was the sire of Alicia Mandeville out of Peggy Magee, owned by Mr. C. Shears, Sacramento. I would also like to find out the beeeding of a mare called Jenny Walker. Kindly reply in your next issue and oblige.

Answer.—Boston Boy was brought to this State by a man named Raymond in either 1854 or 5. Mr. J. B. Hinkle, of Petaluma, can give you the pedigree if any one can. Jenny Walker, originally called Alegar, was by Boston, dam by Medoc, 2nd dam by Haxall's Moses, 3rd dam by Sumpter, 4th dam by Top Gallant. She was owned by G. W. Hoag, of Red Bluff.

H. H.

The following letter has been received concerning the breeding of Gilpatrick. At the same time we wish to thank Wilfred Page, of Penns Grove, and Thomas Clark, of Springville, for the same information.

PETALUMA, CAL., May 6, 1889.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—I bought Gilpatrick of Mr. John O'Brien, and owned him for three years, and afterwards sold him to Mr. E. Poe, of Healdsburgh. I conclude that he is the horse Mr. H. H. is trying to learn the pedigree of, and as I still have it in manuscript form, just as I got it with the horse, I send it to you. I was told at the time I got it, that it was in Mr. John Welsh's handwriting, and that he brought his dam, then carrying Gilpatrick, to Oregon, in company with Rifleman. If you do not print the pedigree as I send it, please return it to me, as I wish to keep the breeding of Gilpatrick; but if you do print it, I can cut it from your valuable paper, as I am a regular subscriber.

Yours, J. R. RODEHAVER.

L. S.

If a man buys a pool on a trotting race, best two in three or three in five, and the horse wins the first heat and no other does he win the pool?

Answer.—No.

Chico.

Can you give me Budd Doble's address? Was Rarus twice on this coast? I claim he was, once when he came with Goldsmith Maid, and a second time with Sweetzer.

Answer.—Mr. Doble's address is Washington Park, Chicago. Rarus was only brought once to this coast. Sweetzer was with Goldsmith Maid and Rarus when they were brought to California in 1877.

W. F. Smith.

Would you please give me the pedigree of Comet, the celebrated Knox Stallion, as he went by that name. He was last owned by one Mr. McCloud, of Livermore. I do not know his initials. McCloud sent him up to Oregon early in 1879, under the charge of Mr. Pratt, and he handled him two seasons in Linn Co., Oregon, and was afterward sold to some party of that county. I was informed he was a son of Gen. Knox, and was also told he was brought to California in 1859, from the State of Maine. I think he trotted at San Jose and at Oakland, sometime during his stay in Cal. If you could give me his pedigree and some of his history, I would be thankful for the favor or any insight, that I might procure the same.

Answer—We cannot find any record of the horse you allude to, but probably some of our Oregon readers can supply the information.

F. N. Scofield.

(1.) What is the record of sorrel stallion Mark, five years old, said to have trotted in Texas last year. (2.) Is Uncle Gip, whose pedigree you will find enclosed, standard bred? (3.) Do you consider him a well bred stallion?

Answer.—(1) We have no record of the horse. (2.) Yes. (3) Y

R. A. Redman.

(1) Please let me know if Goldsmith Maid ever trotted over the Los Angeles track. (2.) Did she fall dead in a race on the Oakland track?

Answer.—(1.) Yes. (2.) No.

W. Thompson.

Can you furnish in full, pedigree of Capt. Sligart and his record. Pedigree as I have it reads: Captain Sligart b h foaled 1854, in Ohio, by Sir Thomas, Jr., dam by Fannie's Delight; Sir Thomas Jr., by Woodyear's Sir Thomas, he by Diomed Jr., and he by Imp. Diomed. Record in Ohio, 2:42. Capt. Sligert is half brother to Capt. Fisher of California; Moll Brook of Cincinnati; Lady Lightfoot of Chicago; Polly White of San Francisco; Wild Bill of Buffalo. Capt. Fairchild premium 1886, Ohio State Fair. Capt. Sligart was owned in Oregon. Who is Fannie's Delight, and what are the records of these half brothers and sisters?

Answer.—We do not know whether the pedigree you give is correct or not. Can any one give the desired information? Capt. Fisher's record, 2:45; Molly Brook's, 2:38; Lady Lightfoot, 2:58½; Wild Bill, 2:38; Capt. Fairchild and Polly White records not known. We can not find any authority that refers to Fannie's Delight.

The club shot at Adam's Point on April 27th, ten members entering, and the scores averaging high, that of Dr. S. E Knowles being especially brilliant, his second barrel being used but twice in making his clean twelve on hard birds. The Doctor persists in using a 16-bore, and his work is therefore of very high order. The score was:

At 12 birds, Hurlingham. For club prizes.

A Great Trap-Shooting Project.

Trap shooters who were in the field seven or eight years ago must remember the occasions of rare sport when the great inter-club team matches were the vogue. The matches between the Cosmopolitan and the California Clubs attracted hundreds of spectators, and were most exciting.

The event at Folsom, to which teams from a dozen or more clubs were sent, was the greatest trap meeting ever held in California. The contests between the Alameda County and the Gun Club, at Bird's Point, were very fine in all respects, and others will be recalled of equal interest. For several years such matches between clubs from different sections have been suffered to lapse, and it is about time they were renewed.

Teams of five from the clubs of San Francisco, San Diego, Los Angeles, San Jose, Vacaville, Stockton, Sacramento, Riverside and other centers of shooting interest, could easily be induced to meet at some central point, such as Stockton, Sacramento, this city or San Jose, to shoot for a valuable trophy.

The trophy might be purchased by contributions from the competing clubs, or it might possibly be offered by the Selby Company or some other great business house indirectly interested in shooting. The targets, whether live birds or inanimate, could be selected, together with the rules to govern the shooting by an advisory committee of one from each of the clubs, which committee could also arrange the details about place of meeting, time, etc.

Several leaders in trap shooting, such as Mr. J. H. Jellett, President of the Gun Club, Dr. S. E. Knowles of the California Club, Mr. Chas. Flohr of the Pacific Gun Club at Sacramento, Mr. Ed. Fay, Mr. Frank Coykendall of the San Jose Club, Mr. Chas. Haas of Stockton, and others, to whom the matter has been mentioned, unite in favoring it strongly, and with such backing it could not fail.

A noted trap shot of Sacramento makes the following suggestions relative to the matter, and we shall be glad to receive the views of others. The correspondent writes:

I can truthfully state the project of a grand shooting contest is becoming popular remarkably fast here. I think every member of the Pacific Gun Club is in favor of some kind of contest similar in most respects to the one under discussion. The Forester Gun Club, a splendid body of experts, is enthusing fast also. I have spread the report that almost without doubt some kind of a contest would be the outcome of your timely suggestion, hoping by so doing to open sleepy, dormant eyes that something out of the general order of things can only open and develop a "boom" I think I have been successful. I think the less preliminary skirmishing we have and the sooner we can get down to business, the better it will be, because sometimes booms are self-consuming and don't last. The blacksmith hits the iron while it is hot, so let us, if we hope to develop our exemplary idea, do something without very much delay. How are the shooters of S. F? I mean, are they taking a goodly amount of interest in the scheme?

In answer to your questions. 1st, I am inclined to think our boys prefer the contest to be an inter-club contest. They seem to think if there be any glory in it they want the club to which they belong to capture some of it, if possible. We could probably put a better team in the field were it otherwise. 2d. If Stockton and other localities come in, I cannot see how we can arrange shooting dates satisfactory to each town represented. A complication arises here, that is, if this series-of-matches system be accepted. My idea is, if more than San Francisco and Sacramento come in, the best way to do would be to get a trophy and shoot at some central point (all the clubs) for the trophy, and have it stipulated the club which captures the cup must defend it from all comers belonging to the league, so to speak, for, say six months or a year. This system, I think, would work with less friction than the other. Of course the challenging club would have to shoot on the grounds of the club challenged. The shooting fraternity of quite a large scope of country might thus witness the shooting of each team before the final disposition of the trophy. If San Francisco and Sacramento only shoot, I say, let the two clubs shoot a series of three matches, and the club winning two take the trophy home and glorify it.

3d. I think that the question of a trophy is of least moment. After the match is further developed, a way, no doubt, will appear. My idea is, if we cannot get outside help in this matter, which the shooters have no trouble whatever East in doing, then the only alternative left would be for the clubs to draw warrants on their respective treasurers for the wherewithal to purchase such a trophy that would be worth shooting for. I think it would be well if three or four clubs come in to have the representatives of the several clubs meet personally at the most convenient point and discuss all questions.

In conclusion I assure you the boys here are desirous of a quiet, pleasant, friendly, gentlemanly shoot, principally to get on better terms of acquaintance with the gentlemanly shooters of San Francisco, and although the probabilities are we will be "downed," yet most of us are of the material which is usually found in good trap-shooters, and consequently we won't sulk and be mean and contemptible.

The Blue Rock Club at its last meeting adopted the rule of the American Shooting Association, and will shoot under them hereafter.

The reunion shoot at San Bruno tomorrow seems to have neither head, body, nor tail. We have made strenuous efforts to get accurate information, but at present writing (Thursday) cannot learn whether there is to be a shoot or not.

The Blue Rock Club shoots this afternoon at the Lincoln Club grounds on Shell Point, Alameda Mole. The grounds are reached via the South Pacific Coast Railway, taking the 12:45 P. M. boat. The match will be a "walking match" at 5 singles and 5 pairs.

THE KENNEL.

Dog owners are requested to send for publication the earliest possible notices of whelps, sales, names claimed, presentations and deaths in their kennels, in all instances writing plainly names of sire and dam and of grandparents, colors, dates and breed.

Southern California Kennel Club.

A large number of the dog fanciers of Los Angeles and vicinity assembled at the Tufts-Lyons gun store on May 1st for the purpose of organizing a Kennel Club. The meeting was called to order by the election of H. T. Payne as chairman, and H. W. Walton as secretary. After some discussion of the objects and purposes of the club. It was decided to effect a permanent organization, and the following gentlemen were elected officers: H. T. Payne, President; J. F. Holbrook, First vice-President; J. E Preston of Daurte, Second vice-President; J. J. Hanford Secretary, and E. B. Tufts, Treasurer. A committee consisting of J. J. Hanford, H. W. Walton and E. B. Tufts was appointed to confer with the Los Angeles county Poultry Association and offer them the hearty co-operation of the club in the association's coming poultry and bench show. The secretary was instructed to communicate with the secretary of the American Kennel Club, with a view of becoming a member of the National Association. The name selected was the Southern California Kennel Club, and an invitation was extended to all fanciers of the counties comprising Southern California to become members, either by application in person or through the mail.

The club starts out with a good membership, embracing many of the most prominent dog man of the country, who own animals of great excellence, the setter, pointer and mastiff interests being particularly well represented. The club should receive generous support from all sections of the Coast.

The Southern California Kennel Club should have the co-operation of all doggy men. Its president, Mr. H. T. Payne, is a royal good man and makes every thing "go" that he interests himself in. A circuit of clubs and shows, embracing Victoria, Seattle, Portland, this city and Los Angeles ought to pay their way beside being delightful events.

Pacific Kennel Club.

The Pacific Kennel Club advertises elsewhere the attractions to be offered at its bench show, which begins on May 22d and closes on May 25th in Mechanics Pavilion. The inducements to visit the show will be such as to attract pretty much all fanciers, as well as all of those who can admire quality in domestic animals and feathered bipeds, even though they do not go in for ownership. A premium list covering all classes of dogs, poultry and pigeons, as well as the usual line of pets, such as singing birds, rabbits, squirrels, Guinea pigs, ferrets and cats has been sent out to all possible exhibitors, and the responses indicate that the show will be a great one in size. Special prizes of great value, and to the number of 150, have been offered, among them a splendid list secured in Los Angeles by Mr. H. T. Payne, President of the Southern California Kennel Club. Los Angeles, as represented by Mr. Payne, his colleague "Dagworth" and other citizens is never behind in promoting interest in sport. The Pacific Kennel Club has also a splendid, energetic, far-sighted and popular president in Mr. Ramon E. Wilson, and an Executive Committee of business men of commanding position in the persons of Mr. John M. Adams, Mr. Wm. Schreiber, Mr. Thos. J. O'Keeffe, Mr. John H. Wise, Mr Clarence A. Haight, Mr. H. R. Brown and Mr. H. W. M. Sandbach. Secretary Watson is prompt and tireless in performing his duty, and all of the sub-committees connected with the show are working faithfully. The benching will be of the best quality, roomy, and well kept, and will be in readiness May 21st, the day before the show opens. Mechanics Pavilion is as good a place for a dog and poultry show as there is in the world, being warm, dry, airy, light, roomy and central. It will be kept during the show as unexceptionably clean and free from odors as it was last year, and will be the popular craze among society people. If a list of visitors to the show last year had been kept, the names of about all of the notables of the city, both ladies and gentlemen, would have appeared. Entries close next Tuesday night at 12 o'clock at the club office, 624 Market Street, and the list up to the present writing is a grand one.

Mr. William Graham who will judge the dogs at the P. K. C. show this month, leaves two fashionably bred Irish terriers in the public stud at Belfast, Ireland, his home. They are Breda Star, whelped June, 1887, and winner of first in London and Edinburgh, and Benedict, whelped in April, 1885.

Speaking of an English fancier who has recently left Huddersfield, Eng., to locate in America, the Stock-Keeper and Fanciers' Chronicle, a little disposed toward acerbity, says:

"So George Wilson leaves the old country with a clear record. None of the Englishmen who have emigrated in search of a wider field for the employment of their abilities can lay claim to a tithe of the canine knowledge possessed by Wilson. Some of them were specialists of one or two breeds, and others have managed to wheedle the American press into giving them credit for doggy reputations they never enjoyed in this country; in fact, the English kennel world is periodically amused to learn from our American friends of the important positions supposed to have been held by persons in this country who, when at home, were nobodies outside their own breed and their own set."

Mr. Bernard Waters' Book.

"Modern Training, Handling and Management, by B. Waters (Kingrail)," Chicago, 1889, price $2.50, in cloth, is the best investment that can be made by any sportsman who ever shoots over dogs, or expects to do so. More practical wisdom, thorough knowledge, shrewd reasoning, skilled application of training methods, keen analysis of faulty practices, and general good sense in relation to pointing dogs, their breeding, raising, training and handling, can be found in Mr. Water's handsome octavo than in all other books on the subject together. The author is first, a sportsman by birth and training; second, a man of classical education and disciplined mind; third, for many years a trainer, handler and reporter of field trials; fourth, a writer of vigorous, unmistakable English. His opportunities for seeing, under the most favorable conditions, the crack pointing dogs of America, have been unequalled. While a trainer he was popular, and his string was always full, so that he does not lack actual experience. As a field trial handler he was not a brilliant success, simply because of his punctilious courtesy and desire to be perfectly fair, which disinclined him to that exceeding alertness and willingness to push his own dogs, even at the expense of an opponent's, which can be noted in the most successful handlers of the day.

In such space as can be commanded this week, it is impossible to enter upon a close critique of the book. Indeed its contents can only be barely outlined.

The volume begins with some discussion of the origin of the setter, and the conclusion is reached that there is no authentic history of the breed. The comparative excellence of the various setter breeds is touched upon and illustrations given of what the author considers typical dogs, those of Elcho Jr. and Paul Gladstone being positively beastly and as unlike the dogs as can be. There is no character to Elcho Jr. as shown, and Paul Gladstone's lines are on the lighest field trial type, not those of a dog of great substance, as he appears in the illustrations. The picture of famous Roderigo is very accurate and a likeness

Dr. Rowe's Pegjim, a dog of good form is well pictured, but Mr. Waters would have done better if he had shown a sister to Pegjim, named Pegfly, and to our notion in coat, and all else but neck, head and markings, a brother of Pegjim, named Pegmatite, a dog by the way in which we hold an interest gained by appropriation, is better. Mr. Waters is guilty of a glaring sin of omission in his English setter illustrations. He should have had a perfect portrait of Gladstone.

Barring his short and thick head, Gladstone is the perfect English setter in every respect, and should have appeared to furnish a proper type to students and breeders.

In succeeding chapters, Mr. Waters skilfully shows the errors and weaknesses common to amateur trainers, and in a caustic way impresses his opinions. Beginning the subject of training, he illustrates, describes and teaches, the application of the best training appliances the spike collar, the whip, the check cord and the whistle, and while not invariably flouting that uncertain and generally ineffective method known as the "suasive," he clearly favors the "force" system. Upon yard breaking and retrieving the author is explicit, clear and especially instructive. Bad retrievers are common; in fact good ones are rare, and the chapter if closely studied and followed will go near to remedying the evil. Pointing is exhaustively discussed and most happily, and a like remark might be made about the chapters on ranging, drawing and roading, backing, quartering and brace work.

Shyness the author does not believe to be hereditary, and in that belief he will be supported by most men; only those who are reckless with puppies being in opposition. The author properly regards blinking as the worst fault in a field dog, and he patiently suggests means of overcoming the vice, without, however, mentioning that sovereign cure which should be administered to every persistent blinker, viz., an ounce of shot, applied by means of a shot-gun, and three drachms of powder to the occipital protuberance of the blinking beast. The skin of a blinker makes a good mat if the dog is flayed soon after blinking a dozen times. Writing of unsteadiness, Mr. Waters shows that superb grasp of all training knowledge which has made him the soundest authority of the day. As in his other chapters, he impresses the necessity of quick perception of constitutional and temperamental differences in dogs, and the wisdom of preserving all natural good qualities unimpaired; the theory being that the natural energies shall be firmly guided into useful channels, not perverted or suppressed by any cast-iron, rigid system of arbitrary rules for breaking.

Mr. Waters' ideal dog is naturally of an order of merit rarely seen, but the author, in his suggestions, covers not only the training of those marvellous animals sometimes seen, which have grand form, superior stamina, high courage, excellent nose, sensible, impressionable mind, strong hunting instinct, and peculiar susceptibility to firm, kind, invariable control, but also the mediocre dogs, vastly in the majority, some of which must be tenderly guided, some sharply coerced, some left to develop almost without interference, and some sent back to owners as worthless. Thoroughly assimilated, put in practice until manual dexterity and instant applicability are attained, then strictly adhered to, Mr. Waters' directions for conditioning, training and handling pointers and setters may safely be adopted as the sole and best attainable guide by all trainers, amateur and professional. Mr. Waters has seen fit to add some directions for training house and guard dogs. The suggestions are good, but might better have been amplified and issued in a little volume separately. Several chapters on kennel management, raising puppies, feeding, breeding, etc., form a most valuable appendix to the book proper. The advice is all good, and in such form as to meet the needs of the average unprofessional owner. Typographically, the book is a credit to the firm which printed it, but the proof reading was carelessly done, and should be placed in more careful hands when a future edition is issued.

The book is the one modern authority upon the subjects treated, and must reach the hands of every sportsman and dog owner. The author may be addressed at Box 166, Chicago, Ill, or orders may be handed to Messrs. Clabrough & Golcher, 630 Montgomery Street, city.

Mr. J. K. Newton visited San Rafael on Sunday last and saw the litter of fox terriers recently presented to Mr. Vincent Neil by his Daisy. The puppies are by Mr. Newton's Teddy, and are pronounced very fine by all judges. It is a singular omission by the Pacific Kennel Club, that no prizes are offered for fox terrier bitches with litters.

In the London Shooting Times, Editor Clement makes the amende honorable to Jas. E. Watson, whom he recently scored because he thought him to be Mr. James Watson of Philadelphia,

The Electioneer Stallion LANCELOT,

SEAL BROWN STALLION, 15½ HANDS, FOALED APRIL 15, 1881.

Bred by C. C. BEMIS, San Francisco, Cal.

Sire Gov. Stanford's ELECTIONEER; first dam Lizzie Harris by Comus; second dam by Arnold Harris. Comus by Gree..'s Bashaw, dam Topsey by Prophet, son of Hill's Black Hawk. Young Bashaw by Grand Bashaw (Arabian) (182), dam Pearl by First Consul (913); g d Fancy by imp. Rockingham. Arnold Harris by Whalebone, dam Sportsmistress by American Eclipse.

All the sons of Electioneer in the Eastern States have their books filled for the season. This is a rare opportunity to breed to Lancelot at a very low price. Lancelot has shown quarters better than a 2:30 gait, and had it not been for an accident would have had a record as low as the fastest of the sons of Electioneer.

The Nutwood Stallion SALADIN.

Bred by C. C. BEMIS, San Francisco.

SALADIN, chestnut stallion, 16 hands 1 inch high; foaled April 9, 1880. By Nutwood; first dam Lady Utley Jr. by Speculation, son of Rysdyk's Hambletonian; second dam Lady Utley. Grandam of Western Girl. Record 2:27½.

NUTWOOD (record 2:18¾), half brother to Maud S., 2:08¾, by Belmont, son of Alexander's Abdallah; first dam Miss Russell by Pilot Jr.; second dam Sally Russell by Boston; third dam Maria Russell by Thornton's Rattler; fourth dam Miss Shepard by Stockholder; fifth dam Miranda by Topgallant; sixth dam by imported Diomed; seventh dam by imported Medley; eighth dam by imported Juniper. Nutwood is the sire of Felix, 2:18¾; Dawn 2:19½; Manon 2:21; Menlo 2:21¾; Nutbreaker, two years old, 2:29½; Nutwood Jr. 2:26; Mount Vernon 2:21; Woodnut 2:16¾, and several others that have trotted under 2:30.

The above stallions will make the season of 1889 at the Hoag Stables, corner 1st and B Streets, Santa Rosa.

TERMS: $40 for the season for either of the above stallions.

MEMO.

The Fast Trotting Stallion, the Best Son of Sidney.

Will make the Season of 1889 at the Oakland Trotting Park.

He was bred by G. Valens n at the Arno Stock Farm, Sacramento County, California; foaled spring of 1885.

PEDIGREE.

By Sidney.
First dam Flirt by Buccaneer.
Second dam Mohaska Belle by Flaxtail.
Third dam by John the Baptist.

Sidney by Santa Claus, 2:17½, his dam Sweetness, 2:21¼. Strathmore, the son of Santa Claus, has 22 of his get which have trotted in 2:30 or better, up to close of 1887, several having entered since, and Volunteer the sire of Sweetness, has 26 in the same list. Buccaneer is the sire of Shamrock, two-year-old record 2:25, and of Flight, 2:29, and in him are combined the strains of Long Island Blackhawk, Vermont Blackhawk, and the dam of Rysdyk's Hambletonian. Flaxtail figures prominently in both pacing and trotting descendants, and is the sire of the dam of Apex, 2:26, Flight, 2:29, J. H. McCormack, 2:29, and Shamrock, 2:25.

PERFORMANCES.

Memo only trotted in public in his two-year-old form, obtaining a record of 2:19, though he was close to Grandee in a race on the Bay District Track, the second heat of which was made in 2:31½, the first in 2:32. He exhibited phenomenal speed when three years old, and had it not been for a slight strain of his fore fetlock there is little question that he would have shown in public very close to the best record. On the Oakland track he was timed a mile in 2:20½, and frequently trotted quarters in from 32½ to 31 seconds.

DESCRIPTION.

He is nearly if not quite sixteen hands high, and of powerful build th oughout. His color is a glossy black, with both fore-feet white and a touch of white on his off hind quarters. His disposition is all that could be desired, and his actio superb

TERMS: One hundred dollars the season, which will commence on the 5th of February and close on the 1st of July. Due c re will be taken of mares, but no responsibility for accidents or escapes.

Mares taken and kept as desired by the owners, and at reasonable rates.

Pasturage at $5 per month within the track enclosure; feed first rate, and a living stream of water in the field. There is a double protection against escape, as in addition to a strong fence on the i side of the track, the gates of the outer fence are enclosed at night, which gives almost positive assurance of safety. GROVER CLAY,

Bay Stallion, bred by Hon. W. W. Traylor, San Francisco. Foaled 1883. By ELECTIONEER.

First dam MAGGIE NORFOLK by NORFOLK, son of Lexington.
Second dam by BILLY CHEATHAM.
Third dam by DORSEY'S GOLDDUST.

GROVER C. is a very handsome shade of bay, 15¾ hands high, and showing as much quality as a majority of thoroughbreds. He is as square-gaited a trotter as can be, and has shown a great deal of speed for the amount of handling. Has been worked very little, though he can show a thirty gait or better whenever called upon.

TERMS.

Fifty dollars the season, payable at time of service. Proper care will be taken, but no responsibility incurred for accidents or escapes. Mares will be pastured inside of the Oakland Trotting Park, which is especially safe, having two fences which give ample security against escape. There is a never-failing stream of water which runs through the field, and the food is good.

Season commencing first of January and ending the first of July.

This is the only son of Electioneer standing in Alameda County, and the high breeding on the side of his dam is a guarantee that his colts will inherit qualities already made famous through the mixture of Electioneer and Lexington blood. Ansel, 2:20, is from a Lexington mare, and Sunol's granddam, two-year-old record 2:18, was by Lexington, both Sunol and Ansel by Electioneer, Lexington the sire of Norfolk.

ATHLETICS.

Olympic Club Tournament.

The amateur boxing tournament for all weights, which has attracted very large numbers of members and visitors to the Olympic Club during the week, was concluded on Wednesday evening last. President William Greer Harrison, himself one of the manliest of men, has insisted throughout his most successful administration now in its third year, that boxing should be encouraged both for its beneficent effects in physical culture, and its immeasurable development of that patience, tolerance and self control so necessary to gentlemen. President Harrison is a finished boxer, and has been unremitting in efforts to foster interest in the sport, and furnish the best attainable instructors. The late tournament proved both the practical wisdom of the grand president, and the fact that the Olympic Club, together with kindred organizations, have come to an appreciation of the unselfish man who has done so much for amateur athletics in California. The prizes offered were tasty and creditable to the club, and the entry list was the largest and best ever made in the State. Details of all the bouts would be wearying, but some general notes may be worth making. The average merit of the competitors were higher than ever before in all the weights. The club sent invitations to Eastern organizations and two gentle responded, Mr. Dan O'Brien at bantam weight, from the Pastime Athletic Club of New York, and Mr. Dan Kelly, a light weight of the Chicago Athletic Association. The visitors provided to be modest, pleasant men, and finished boxers. Their clubs may well be proud of them, and they leave here as many warm friends as they have acquaintances. Mr. O'Brien takes away second prize in his class, and Mr. Kelly first prize at light weight, but neither is a "mug hunter," and both find their pleasure in having fairly overcome competitors so skilfull,

The Olympic Club entries scored but one win, that by Mr. W. J. Zelner, at middle weight, and that win was due less to clean, straight hitting and stopping, than to blind, wild, swinging blows. Mr. Zelner is powerful, has good wind and is game, but he should learn the art of boxing. His opponent in the final bout, Mr. Hagan, had much the better of it in points and style, until compelled by weakness to stop in the fourth round.

At feather weight Mr. F. L. Cooley and Mr. A. Rahwyler of the California Athletic Club won first and second respectively. They were as unlike in every respect as possible. Mr. Rahwyler is a compact, powerful and quick man who trusts to rushing and landing with the right on the chin or neck of an opponent. His guard is bad, and he leaves himself very open to a jabber like Cooley, who is clever and cool headed. Cooley cut his fierce competitor down smoothly and prettily, and won a hard race with something to spare.

In heavy weights no one of the weight went up against Mr. Kitchen of the Acme Club, but Mr. W. Gallagher of the same club a middle weight opposed him, first prize going to Kitchen and second to Gallagher. Mr. Kitchen has filled out into a hundred and ninety pound man, has long reach, is a good boxer, and in every way a formidable opponent.

The prize-winners in the tournament were as follows: Bantam, Fred Cook of the Golden Gates, first, and Daniel O'Brien, of the Pastime Club, New York, second; feather-weights, F. L. Cooley, of the California Club, first, and A. Rahwyler of the same club, second; light-weights, Daniel Kelly of the Chicago Athletic Association, first, and George Maloney second; middle-weights, W. J. Zelner of the Olympic Club, first, and Ed Hagan second; heavy-weights, J. Kitchen of the Acme Club, first, and W. Gallagher of the same club, second. It will thus be seen that the Olympic Club took but one prize, the Golden Gate Club one, the California Club two, the Acme Club two, the two Eastern clubs one each. The rest of the winners were unattached. The first prizes are Diamond medals, or jewelry of the value of $100, and the second prizes gold medals or jewelry of the value of $50.

During the evening President Harrison presented trophies to the winners in the recent catch-as-catch-can tournament: Middle-weight, E. A. Kolb; light-weight, W. A. Field; feather-weight, R. C. Jones first, E. J. Ryan second.

Leader Walter A. Scott acted as master of ceremonies, and was a brilliant success, there being no delays at any time. The referee was Mr. Hiram B. Cook, and his decisions were all sustained.

It has been intimated that Mr. Ed. A. Kolb, a leading amateur of the Olympic Club, had lost amatuer standing by accepting from the California Athletic Club free membership and remission of dues, in return for his presence and active participation during exercising hours at the last named club. Those who know Kolb need not be told that he would not do such a thing, nor is it likely that the California Club would desire the membership of any one under such conditions. At all events, Mr. Kolb paid his entrance fee to the California, pays his dues, and is as much an amateur as he ever was, or as any one else is.

The Olympic Club's instructor in boxing, Mr. J. J. Corbett, has been given a needed vacation, and is spending it at Tamalpais Villa, Marin County, under the care of a competent trainer, who will fit him perfectly for a bout with Mr. J. Chozoski some time in June. Mr. Corbett has youth, great strength, perfect knowledge of the art of self defense, the highest courage, and great confidence in his ability to make a good showing against his clever opponent. He has the best wishes of a whole city full of admirers.

Entrance 10 per cent, payable 2½ per cent. on June 1st; 2½ per cent. on July 1st; 2½ per cent. on August 1st, and 2½ per cent. on day set for the race.

STAKES.

TWO-YEAR-OLD TROTTING STAKE—$100 entrance, $300 added. Mile and repeat.

THREE-YEAR-OLD TROTTING STAKE—$100 entrance, $400 added. Best 3 in 5.

ENTRIES CLOSE JUNE 1, 1889.

First payment, whether for purses or for stakes MUST ACCOMPANY NOMINATIONS or they will not be considered.

Neglect to provide payments at the time stipulated will incur forfeiture of all previous payments.

All States and Territories lying in whole or in part west of the Rocky Mountains are held to be part of the Pacific Coast.

The Board of Directors reserves the right to declare any purse or stake filled or not filled without binding itself to any specified number of entries.

Purses and stakes will be divided into four moneys, of which 50 per cent. will be paid to the winner; 25 per cent. to the second horse, $15 per cent. to the third, and 10 per cent. to the fourth horse.

No added money will be paid for a walk-over. If only three horses start in a stake race, only first, second and third money shall be paid; if but two start, first and second money will be paid; if but one starts only first money and one-half of the entrance money received from the other entries for said stake will be paid. In purse races three horses will be required to start.

A horse distancing the field shall only be entitled to first and third moneys.

Otherwise than the above, National Trotting Association Rules will govern the stake and purse races offered.

Entries close June 1, 1889, with

P. O. Penn's Grove, Sonoma Co.

N. B.—Persons desirous of making entries in the above purses and stakes, and those who have not as yet joined the P. C. T. H. B. A., are given the privilege of joining the same by remitting together with the payment due June 1, 1889, the sum of $25 to cover the membership fee.

LONGWORTH.

High Bred Trotting Stallion.

WILL BE FOUR YEARS OLD IN MARCH.

Dark Bay, Black Points, by Sidney.

OWNED BY A. C. DIETZ, OAKLAND.

Also the owner of Bay Stallion Ringwood, four years old, by Sidney, half brother to Longworth, which has showed trials over the Oakland Track, 2:30; quarters, in 34 seconds—2:16 gait —as a three-year old.

LONGWORTH, for finish, style and form cannot be excelled by any four-year-old horse in the State. His gait is perfect; going low to the ground, with smooth, easy motion, and has shown wonderful speed with but two month's work. As a two-year-old, he showed a 2:40 gait; as a three-year-old showed—trial—full mile over the Oakland track, 2:26; half mile, 1:10; quarters, 34 seconds; eighths, 16 seconds—a 2:08 gait.

Longworth is the result of a long line of distinguished ancestors, endowed with speed on the sire and dams' side that follows back for generations—consequently he cannot help but produce great speed.

He is half brother to the great three-year-old Adonis, record 2:14¾.

Gold Leaf, three-year-old record, 2:15.
Memo, three-year-old trial, 2:20¾.
Sister V., two-year-old trial, 2:32.
St. Nicholas, three-year-old trial, 2:27¾.
Ringwood, three-year-old trial, 2:30.
Miss Sidney, one-year-old trial, half mile, 1:38.
Brown colt, three-year-old trial, 2:40.
Black colt, three-year-old trial, 2:39.
Linda, one-year-old trial, one quarter, 40 seconds.
Sorrel colt, two-year-old trial, quarter, 34 seconds, and a number more that have shown remarkable speed. One yearling that has shown one-eighth of a mile in 16 1-5 seconds—a 2:10 gait.

Sidney, the sire of Longworth, has a record of 2:19¾; Santa Claus, the grand sire, has a record of 2:17½; Sweetness, the grandam, record 2:21¾; Strathmore, the sire of Santa Claus, has twenty-two that have trotted below 2:30; Volunteer, the sire of Sweetness, has twenty-six that have trotted below 2:30. Volunteer is the sire of St. Julian, record 2:11¾.

Longworth's first dam Grey Dale, the dam of Daisy C., Silver Threads, and grandam of Phaeeola; Grey Dale by American Boy, Jr.; he by American Boy, the sire of Belmont. Second dam Grey Poll by Winfield Scott, by Edward Everett; third dam Sorrel Poll by Sir Henry; fourth dam Daughter of Printer.

All letters pertaining to the service of this horse should be addressed to R. H. FARMER, Oakland. Alameda County, Cal.

TERMS: Fifty dollars, payable at the end of the season or sooner if the mares are taken away. Season will close June 15th, 1889. The number of mares limited to twenty-five. The best of care will be taken to insure mares with foal. Pasture $5 per month, which can be procured at the Oakland Race Track. Mares at the owners' risk, as to escapes or accidents.

The stallion will be kept at the stables of the undersigned, at the junction of San Pablo Avenue and Park Street.

VINELAND BREEDING FARM.

Whippleton, 1883,

STANDARD UNDER RULE 4 & 6.

The most successful stock horse in California for his opportunities. WHIPPLETON has no equal as a producer of carriage and general purpose horses. Sire of Lily Stanley, record 2:17¾, dam's breeding unknown; Homestakes pacer, 2:16¾, dam's breeding unknown; Flora B., 2:30, dam's breeding unknown; Cora C., three-year-old pacer, 2:33¼, dam by Naubuc, Rachel, 2:38, dam's breeding unknown.

DESCRITPION.

WHIPPLETON is a beautiful black, tan muzzle and flanks and exceptionally strongly made all over. He stands 17 hands high and weighs 1400 pounds. He is beyond doubt the most uniform breeder on the Coast for size, color and finish. Most of his colts are 16 hands or over, and all bay, brown or black in color. He has never sired a sorrel or white faced colt; if he does I agree to refund service money.

PEDIGREE.

WHIPPLETON, sired by Hambletonian Jr. (sire of Hancock 2:20), by Whipple's Hambletonian; dam Lady Livingston; (dam of Lady Blanchard 2:28¾, Bloomfield Maid, trial 2:22); by General Taylor (sire of dam of Wells Fargo 2:18¾, Nearea 2:24¾, Bickford 2:29¾, Lady Blanchard 2:26¼) and Stella 2:30, son of the Morse horse.

TERMS.

Fifty dollars, with usual return privilege.

ALCONA, 730.

By the great Almont (sire of Westmont, 2:15¾, Puritan, 2:16, Fannie Witherspoon, 2:16¾, Piedmont, 2:17¾, and 31 others with records better than 2:30, and grandsire of Bell Hamlin, 2:13¾) by Alexander's Abdallah (sire of Goldsmith Maid, 2:14), he by Rysdyk's Hambletonian. Alcona's dam, Queen Mary by Mambrino Chief, sire of Lady Thorn, 2:18¾, Woodford Mambrino, 2:21¾ and 4 others in 2:30 list, and sire of the dams of Piedmont, 2:17¾. Director, 2:17, Onward, 2:25¼, and many others; 23 of his sons have produced 2:30 trotters.

Almont has 38 sons that have produced 2:30 trotters, which number is only equaled by his grandsire, Rysdyk's Hambletonian.

DESCRIPTION.

Alcona is a beautiful chestnut, 16¾ hands high, and weighs 1,300 pounds. His colts possess speed, style, finish and beauty, and if they don't trot fast they command the highest price for carriage and general purpose horses. Eleven of Alcona's colts that have been sold UNTRAINED brought $7,810, an average of $710 per head.

TERMS: $35. Usual return privilege.

Grandissimo,

Full Brother to GRANDEE. 3-year-old record 2:23 1-2.

Sired by La Grande (son of Almont, and out of Jessie Pepper, by Mambrino Chief; Jessie Pepper is the dam of Iona 2:22, Alpha 2:23½, Sterling Wilkes 2:33¾, and others) dam Norma, by Arthurton (sire of Arab 2:15, Joe Arthurton 2:20½, etc).

Grandam Nourmahal, (full sister to A. W. Richmond, sire of Arrow 2:13¾, Romero 2:19, and sire of Columbine, dam of Anteeo 2:16¼, and Antevolo 2:19¾ at 4 years old).

DESCRIPTION.

Grandissimo is 3 years old, will make a sixteen hand horse; he is a rich mahogany bay in color and perfection in style and action. Limited to ten mares, at $50 for the season. Usual return privileges.

In case any of my horses are sold before the next season, parties breeding mares have the privilege to return them to any other stallion I have making the season at the same price. Mares kept in any manner desired. Best of pasture the year round, at $4 per month. Some choice young stallions, colts and fillies by Whippleton, for sale reasonable. Correspondence solicited.

FRED W. LOEBER, Proprietor.

ELECTION,

BY ELECTIONEER.

DESCRIPTION.

ELECTION is a beautiful bay, with small star in forehead. Near forefoot and pastern white; both hind feet white above ankles. He was foaled April 10, 1884, at Palo Alto. Stands 15½ hands high and weighs 1075 pounds. Election was sold in his yearling form to B. R. Crocker of Sacramento, who kept him for two years and then sold him to Mr. H. J. Palmer, who placed him in charge of Wilbur F. Smith to develop. From an ordinary road gait he was made, after three months training, to trot a mile in 2:30.

PEDIGREE.

THE WILKES STALLION

Mambrino Wilkes, 6083

(Half Brother to Harry Wilkes, 2:13 1-2.)

Sire of Gus Wilkes, 2:22; Alpheus, 2:27; Balkan 2:29½, three-year-old; John O'Brien, lapped out the winner in 2:36 as a three-year-old; H. A. W.'s Black Colt, trial 2:29 with very little work as a four-year-old.

Will remain in the future at San Miguel Stock Farm, Walnut Creek, Contra Costa County.

DESCRIPTION.

MAMBRINO WILKES is a black horse, 16 hands high, and considerably longer than his height; has immense muscular development and weighs 1,200 pounds. He has the utmost symmetry of proportion and elegance of finish. No competent judge who has seen this horse has failed to pronounce him a perfect individual, and his breeding is certainly fashionable enough to satisfy the most fastidious. His colts are large, stylish and handsome, and Balkan has been pronounced by many the most stylish trotter on the turf.

PEDIGREE.

Sired by George Wilkes, dam Lady Chrisman by Todhunter's Mambrino; second dam by Pilot Jr.

Todhunter's Mambrino by Mambrino Chief, dam Ripton's dam by Hunt's Commodore, son of Mambrino by imp. Messenger; second dam by Potomac, son of imp. Messenger.

George Wilkes sired 65 colts that have beaten 2:30. Of these 39 have average records of 2:24, 14 of 2:19 and 12 of 2:18.

TERMS.

Mares from a distance will be received at the Dexter Stables, Oakland, or Livery Stable, Martinez, the owner notifying Smith Hill, Superintendent at the farm. Good pasture and plenty of water. For the purpose of placing the service of a Wilkes within reach of breeders, the same rate will be maintained as last year, to wit, $75 for the season. Although it is not admitted thereby that this horse is inferior as a producer to the horses whose fees are placed at from $150 to $500.

BALKAN,

Three-year-old Record 2:29 1-2; trotting many heats faster, when he did not obtain a record.

PEDIGREE.

Sired by Mambrino Wilkes, dam Fanny Fern by Jack Hawkins, son of Boston; second dam S. 1. B. by Jim Crow.

It will be readily seen that this colt is from strong producing lines on both sides Fanny Fern having produced Mollie Drew, May Queen, Onyx and Fred Arnold, all noted trotters and all by different sires.

This colt will be kept at the Oakland Trotting Park, and will be stinted to ten approved mares at $100 for the season.

AMBERINE.

$25. $25.

PEDIGREE.

Sired by PROMPTER No. 2405, with six weeks training at the close of a stud season, he won a stallion race of five heats, winning the last three heat and getting a record of 2:33¾; he has never been trained since.

His sire, Wilson's BLUE BULL, No. 75, has more of his progeny in the 2:30 list than any horse that ever lived, except it may be George Wilkes, and it is a disputed point between the two which has most.

PROMPTERS' dam, PRAIRIE BIRD, 2:28¾ is in the GREAT BROOD MARE TABLE, a proved producer, and of a family of wonderful producers, as an examination of the produce of Flaxtail mares will prove.

AMBERINE'S dam, "BONNIE," owned by G. W. Hancock, of Sacramento, is one of the best road-mares in the State; she has many times covered 50 miles on the road in five hours, and 125 miles in 17 hours. She is the dam of Daisy, yearling record, 2:38½; her sire is John Nelson, sire of the dams of Albert W., 2.20, and Valensin, 2:24.

AMBERINE is a beautiful bay, three years old, very powerfully built, 16 hands, and trotted a mile in his yearling form in 3:20, and has never been trained.

Will serve 15 outside mares at the low price of $25 the season. Should the mare not prove in foal, the money refunded or mare bred following season. Service fee payable, when I pass ure the mare, at the time of her removal; but if served outside, payable at time of service.

He is full brother to DAISY; yearling record, 2:38¾. THE BEST IN THE WORLD FOR PACING. Two-year-old trial, two miles, 5:07; last mile in 2:28.

Good pasturage for a limited number of mares only, at $5 per month. Ranch 18 miles from the City, San Pedro Valley. Horses taken down at owner's risk.

This horse will stand in San Francisco, San Mateo, or Alameda Counties. Owned by

THREE CHEERS

Will make the Season of 1889 at Oakland Race Track, Oakland, Alameda County.

Pedigree.

Hurrah by Newminster (winner St. Leger 1851), dam Jovial by Bay Middleton (winner Derby 1836.)

Newminster by Touchstone (winner St. Leger 1831), dam Beeswing (winner of 54 races out of 64 starts) by Dr. Syntax (winner Doncaster Cup 1837, 40, 41, 42, the only horse that ever accomplished that feat.)

THREE CHEERS is bred in the speediest and stoutest lines. His dam, Young Fashion was the dam of Surprise, Scotland (the only horse that ever beat Asteroid a heat), Liverpool, Columbia and Bonnie Kate, the dam of Little Buttercup and the flying Bonnie Lizzie. His grandam, Fashion, was the greatest race mare of her era, defeating Boston in that historical match at four-mile heats, that is recorded as one of the greatest events in the annals of the turf. He is thoroughly sound in wind and limb, his family on both sides being noted for their exemption from curbs, spavins, roaring, or any other hereditary unsoundness. Horsemen, who can appreciate the highest type of the thoroughbred, are specially invited to inspect Three Cheers.

THREE CHEERS is the sire of Almont, Applause and Why Not, the only three of his get ever trained, and all are stake winners.

TERMS: $75 for the season. Mares not proving with foal can be returned the next season free of charge Good pasturage at $5 per month. Mares cared for in any manner owners may desire, and fed on hay and grain, either or both, at reasonable rates. None but competent grooms employed, but no responsibility assumed for accidents or escapes.

N. B.—Mares sent from a distance in care of J. W. Morshead City Front Stables, San Francisco, will be forwarded without delay.

WILKES PASHA.

STANDARD 2618.

Dark bay with white hind feet, 16½ hands high, bred by R. P. Pepper, of South Elk Horn Farm, Frankfort, Kentucky. Sired by Onward, 1411, record 2:25¼, trial 2:17. He by George Wilkes, 2:22, sire of sixty-five horses in the 2:30 list, ten of them with records below 2:20. First dam Fisher (dam of Clara Wilkes, 2:29¾, trial 2:25) by American Clay, 34, sire of Granville, 2:26; Maggie Briggs, 2:27; Ella Clay, 2:27½; and the dams of Executor, 2:24½, Ranchero, 2:23½; Judge Hawser, 2:21¾; Ambassador, 2:25, and nine others in 2:30; second dam by Wilson's Snow Storm, sire of Jim Irving, 2:24; third dam by Paddie Burns, thoroughbred.

Onward, 1411, is one of the noted sires of to-day. In 1887 he placed seven performers in the 2:30 list, including Hourl, three-year-old record 2:19¾; while in 1888 he still further sustains his reputation by adding nine of his sons and daughters to the list. Onward combines the blood of the two great trotting families, Hambletonian 10 and Mambrino Chief 11, and derives his speed inheritance direct through the greatest son of the one family, and the greatest daughter of the other.

Onward's dam was Dolly (the dam of Director, 2:17, and Thorndale, 2:22½), by Mambrino Chief. Dolly was one of the greatest speed-producing brood mares that ever lived. George Wilkes stands at the head of the list of sires of fast trotters with 65 performers with records of 2:30 or better, and the combination of these two great producers will breed on with absolute certainty.

WILKES PASHA will make the season of 1889 at the stables of the undersigned, at the Trancas Bridge, two miles north of Napa, on the Soda Spring Road.

TERMS,

For the season ending July 1, 1889, $35 in U. S. gold coin.

Alfalfa pasturage $4 per month; natural grass $2.50 per month.

Every attention and care will be given to mares, but no liabilities assumed for accidents or escapes.

SIRE OF YOLO MAID, 2:14.

Alexander Button.

Alexander's Record, 3:31 1-4!

DESCRIPTION.

Alexander Button is a dark bay with fine flowing mane and tail; stands 15-3¾ hands high; weighs 1,200 pounds, and is of excellent disposition. When three years old he made a record of 2:28½, and when four years old, in his first race, he obtained a record of 2:26¾. Has been driven a mile in 2:16 in his four-year-old form, and has been driven a last half in 1:0. Alexander Button is a natural trotter, inherited through the speed-lines of his ancestors, and imparts his speed to his offspring with uniform certainty. Yolo Maid, as a three-year-old, paced 18 heats, never leaving her feet—carrying the world's record of 2:14. Rosie Mc, as a five-year-old, rarely ever breaks; has a record of 2:20¾. R. H. Newton's colt, with very little handling, paced a 2:16 gait, and there are several other colts that show gaits from 2:16 to 2:20. Considering that Alexander Button has never been mated with a standard-bred mare—his colts show him to be a wonderful producer—and with his breeding, and terms of service, he is the cheapest and most wonderful horse in the State.

PEDIGREE.

Alex. Button was sired by Alexander, he by Geo. M. Patchen, Jr., his dam Lady Button by Napa Rattler by Biggett's Rattler, he by Sir Henry, and he by imported Henry, dam of Biggett's Rattler by Rysdyk's Hambletonian, dam of Napa Rattler, thoroughbred.

TERMS: $75, payable at end of season. Mares not proving with foal may be returned next season free of charge. Good pasturage will be furnished at $2 per month, and due care taken to prevent accidents or escapes, but no liability whatever assumed.

Will stand at City Stable, Woodland, on Thursday, Friday and Saturday of each week. The remainder of the time he will stand at my ranch, which is situated about 1½ miles west of Yolo station.

All mares sent to Fashion Stable, Woodland, Yolo County, will be forwarded free of charge.

Judge McKinstry,

Will make the Season of 1889, from March 1 to July 1, at San Felipe Rancho, near Gilroy.

PEDIGREE.

Foaled 1879, by Grinstead or Thad Stevens, dam Katy Pease; second dam Minnie Mansfield by imp. Glencoe; third dam Allegrante by imp. Young Truffle.

DESCRIPTION.

JUDGE McKINSTRY is a bright bay with black points, 15¾ hands in height, of a conformation combining power and speed. His breeding is one that cannot be excelled. The families on both sides being noted for their gameness and fleetness. Speakin of JUDGE McKINSTRY, Matt Storn, the well-known trainer, says: "He is the fastest race-horse I ever saw on the Sacramento track. He has shown me trials that were marvelous, one especially of a mile and a quarter that was ahead of the present record." He was started in several races when not in condition to win, and even then developed an amount of speed that is characteristic of the noted families from which he descends. His performances are too well known to need repetition here. Good judges of horses state positively that there can be no doubt of his sire, as he is a perfect picture of Grinstead, but rule compels us to name both sires.

Prince Imperial.

DESCRIPTION.—PRINCE IMPERIAL is a black horse, 15-3 hands high; weighs 1 150 pounds, and is a model of beauty, action and power.

PEDIGREE.—Sired by Black Prince, he by Dictator, own brother to Dexter, dam Daisy by Witherell Messenger, he by Winthrop Messenger, son of imp. Messenger.

Mr. Peter Brandow's statement in regard to Prince Imperial: "I met A. Weske in the Park in 1887 driving the above horse, both strangers to me. I was driving a good horse, but the above horse, hitched to a phaeton, beat me easily. I followed him to find out what horse it was, and he finally allowed me to hitch him to a sulky, which I did, and drove him easily in 2:42½. I think him one amongst the best horses in California, and firmly believe that in six months I can drive him in 220."

PETER BRANDOW.
Trainer of trotters for 25 years.

In 1881, while visiting Salt Lake City, I saw the colt Prince Imperial, and bought him for my own use, and have used him for family purposes ever since. In offering him for public service last year, not knowing anything about horses' pedigrees I made a mistake in his. I wrote to the owner of the mare in Salt Lake, Dr. S. B. Young, and he says she was by Henry Clay, brought from Kentucky by him.

Will make the season of 1889 at the farm of A. Weske, 2½ miles from Santa Rosa, on the Healdsburg road. Season commencing March 1st.

For further particulars apply at the farm or address

A. WESKE, Santa Rosa.

ELECTIONEER STALLION

EROS,

Standard No. 5326.

Electioneer, his sire, has more 2:30 trotters than any living horse, and more 2:30 trotters than any stallion LIVING OR DEAD.

Eros has a record of 2:29¾, made in the fifth and deciding heat against a field of eight horses in his maiden race, and with only four weeks preparation after coming out of the stud.

Dam Sontag Mohawk, dam of Sallie Benton (four-year-old record 2:17¼). Sontag Mohawk by Mohawk Chief, by Rysdyk's Hambletonian.

Progeny.

Eros had last fall but three colts trained; the oldest a three-year-old trotter, an exhibition mile during the San Jose Fair in 2:34, last quarter in 36½ seconds. A two-year-old (timed by the judges) made a mile in 2:46½, and the other two-year-old in 2:47. All of these trials being made without a single skip, and none of these colts had then been handled three months from the bitting harness.

Thoroughbred Stallion

Prince of Norfolk,

Will Make the Season of 1889, from Feb. 15th to July 1st, at Sacramento.

PEDIGREE.

PRINCE OF NORFOLK, ch c, foaled 1881, by Norfolk; 1st dam Marion by Malcolm; 2nd dam Maggie Mitchell by imp. Yorkshire; third dam Charmer by imp. Glencoe; 4th dam Betsy Malone by Stockholder; 5th dam by Potomac; 6th dam by imp. Diomed; 7th dam by Pegasus, etc. Norfolk, the unbeaten son of Lexington, is the sire of Winters, Twilight, Connor, Ballot Box, Trade Dollar, Flood, Duchess of Norfolk, Lou Spencer, the Great Emperor of Norfolk, and many others. Marion's sire, Malcolm, was one of the first horses to bring Bonnie Scotland into notice. Through the Maggie Mitchell cross comes the blood of two of the most celebrated race mares of their day, Charmer and Betsy Malone. The combined speed of these great families seem to be concentrated in the get of Norfolk and Marion, as is instanced in the case of the Emperor of Norfolk, who is a full brother to the Prince of Norfolk.

The blood lines here displayed cannot be surpassed in the world, there not being a single cross that has not been celebrated for speed and endurance, and it is fair to assume that the get of this stallion will show equally well with those of past generations.

TERMS, $50 for the season. We offer first class pasturage on our own ranch, at $4 per month, and the best of care will be taken of mares sent to us, but no responsibility can be incurred. For further particulars address

OSSIDINE

KALAMAZOO, Mich., Sept. 15, 1888.

GENTLEMEN:—We have used Ossidine for the past two years and consider it invaluable for Sprung Tendons, Curbs, Ringbone and Spavins; there is nothing equals it; and for us it effected a permanent cure where firing failed, although performed by one of the most successful veterinarians on the continent. We have recommended it to others with like success, and believe it has more merit than any blister ever used.

Very respectfully yours, S. A. BROWNE & Co., Prop's.

This scientific preparation is an absolute cure for all bony or callous lumps on horses, and is a more powerful absorbent than "firing," without creating the slightest blemish. After a few applications the excrescence is so palpably reduced that even the skeptical frankly acknowledge that it is by far the most valuable outward remedy for horses ever invented.

The ONLY preparation in the world that will remove a Bone Spavin after it has become ossified.

Price $3.00 per Large Bottle.

A. P. BUSH & CO., 149 Pearl Street, Boston, Mass.

Sole Agents for United States and Canada.

Owner of Eole, St. Saviour, Eolist, etc, says: I have long used it in my stables, and find it to be all that is claimed for it in removing callous and unnatural bony growths, without leaving the slightest blemish. From my experience, I most strongly recommend the use of Ossidine, and feel that it is a necessary adjunct to every stable. Yours respectfully,

The "L. C. Smith" Guns.

As PRIZE WINNERS we challenge any other make of Gun to make a showing like the following:

All Previous Records Broken.

Never before were 100 live pigeons killed straightly in a similar match under same conditions, until the L. C. SMITH GUN was made and did it. In the hands of Mr. Al Bandle, of the firm of Bandle Arms Co., Cincinnati, Ohio, this wonderful score was made. Capt. A. H. Bogardus scoring with a 12-gauge L. C. Smith in the match against Bandle, the very high score of 95. A remarkable score with a 12-guage.

——OFFICIAL SCORE——

Made in the match at 100 live pigeons, Hurlingham rules, barring gauge of gun, between Capt. A. H. Bogardus' of Elkhart, Ill., and Al Bandle, of Cincinnati, Ohio, on Independent Gun Club grounds, Cincinnati, Ohio' Christmas Day, December 25, 1888:

AL FARROW,

By Conner, dam Della Walker. The property of M. T. Walters, Lake County, Oregon.

We present to our readers this week an exceedingly good picture of Al Farrow, about whom there has been so much contention in the Pacific Coast Blood Horse Association, and for the possession of which the courts in Sacramento have been appealed to this week. There is no need of giving an elaborate description of the horse, as the artist has turned out such an exact likeness of Al Farrow that the reader can see for himself what a large, finely-built fellow he is. While massive in appearance, there is nothing that indicates coarseness in his make-up, being the perfect type of a race horse from muzzle to tail. He has a fine, large, intelligent head, grand neck, well set in a good pair of shoulders; to the eye he is coupled rather long, but gives one the appearance of being able to carry any amount of weight. He is a very muscular looking horse; in fact, his gaskins, upper thigh, quarters and loin are a study. There is only one fault with him and that is his forelegs. They do not seem heavy enough to carry the large body which Al Farrow has. He is noted for his gameness, being one of the best finishers ever seen on a track, but there seems to be a dispute as to whether he can go over a mile or not. It is true he has won at a mile and an eighth, but only in moderate company. He started last year, according to the Guide, in seventeen races, of which he won eight, being second in six and unplaced three times. Al Farrow was brought into great prominence by his San Jose performance, where, although he was an open two lengths to the bad when the flag fell, still managed to win from Geraldine by a nose in 1:40. The daily papers at once notified the public that $20,000 had been offered for the horse by the Dwyer Bros., but no such offer was ever made, the item being the creation of some visionary reporter.

On the first day of the late Blood Horse meeting, Al Farrow was entered in the initial race, but came in fourth, Brutus being the victor. Carillo, the jockey, afterwards said he had been paid to pull the horse, whereupon the Directors of the Association held several meetings, and ultimately ruled off Carillo, Brown, the trainer, and suspended Tupper and the horse. Mr. Walters, who owns Al Farrow, brought suit in the Sacramento courts to regain possession of his property, but up to the time this sketch was written, the decision was not known. Al Farrow is a beautiful bay, one fore foot and one hind foot white, with a star in forehead; stands almost 16 hands, and will weigh about 1,075 pounds.

Notable Horses of Sonoma.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—The turf meetings of the season in Sonoma district promise to be of unusual interest, judging from the entries, the character of owners, and the classes of the stables. This year Mr. W. B. Sanborn has the lease of the fine track and handsome grounds of the Sonoma County Agricultural Association. He is a good manager, an enthusiastic turfman, and is experienced in the business. The deeper interest taken in breeding and turf sports in the district are every year better developing. As I have remarked in previous correspondence, the advent here of Anteeo caused increased attention to stock improvement in thoroughbred line and that of high grades, and this has been augmented by the bringing of Dawn and other noted sires of superior blood. Now that Anteeo is gone from the State his line is more prized, and many regret that they did not take advantage of the opportunity to breed from him and procure fine mares for the purpose. But he has to succeed him many worthy sons of excellent dams, devoted by their owners to the stud, and the product of these already seen are earnest that the blood is not deteriorating, and is becoming more valued. In former letters I have named some of these, and since care and inquiry have enabled me to make mention of many more, without omission of any, to the extent of present opportunities:

George E. Guerne and Rufus Murphy, large lumber mill owners of Guerneville, have in partnership nineteen sons and daughters of Anteeo, ranging from sucking colts to four-year-olds Two of these are from fine Nutwood dams, and show promise of great speed, endurance and leading qualities in every respect. All are very satisfactory colts.

Mr. Guerne has besides Alfred G., a bay stallion four years old, by Anteeo, dam Speculation, with record at three years of 2:31.

A. McFadyen, another large lumber mill owner of Guerneville, has Redwood, stallion, four years old, record at threee years of 2:30¼, dam by Occident. His full sister, Ethel Mc, two years old, which showed a quarter in 45 seconds, Mr. McFadyens sold to Mr. Knox of Kentucky, for $2,000. He has also a sucking colt, Alleen, dam Lou Milton by Milton Medium, a dark bay, very pretty.

Wyman Murphy of Santa Rosa, lumber mill in Eureka, has Maud M., four years old, dam by McCracken's Blackhawk. She has never been worked, but shows speed and mettle; also, a sucking colt, dam Addie, by Antelop and Nutwood.

John M. Baillache of Healdsbug, Anteupe, yearling, dam by A. W. Richmond, half sister to dam of Anteeo. The colt is gray, after dam.

T. J. Ludwig, Santa Rosa, filly, four years, dam Rosy Mac, now in training, and shows well; also a colt, three years, dam by Jupiter.

A. W. Riley, Santa Rosa, a filly, Black Bess, three years, dam Messenger, and a two-year-old filly, neither yet worked.

E. A. Seegelkin, Santa Rosa, Mamie J., four years, and a sucking colt.

Harvey Peck, Healdsburg, two-year-old colt, dam by John Nelson.

Robert Crouse, Santa Rosa, a suckling colt, dam by Alexander.

Wilfred Page, Penn's Grove, a filly, dam by Gray McClellan.

Judge Hudson, Lakeport, two fillies, two years old.

——. Armington, Lakeport, a colt, two years old.

M. Star, Lakeport, yearling colt, dam Countess by Don, and three sucking colts.

John M. Laughlin, Mark West, Dolly, 4 years, Carrie and Lida, 3 years, dams by McClellan and Rattler; and Ben Franklin, 2 years, dam Morgan.

James H. Laughlin, Mark West, two fillies, Rocksie and May Day, 4 years, dams thoroughbred mares by Leviathan and McClellan; stallion Beware, 3 years, dam by McClellan, thoroughbred granddam; Mark L, 3 years, thoroughbred dam by Leviathan; Amfino, 1 year, thoroughbred dams by Leviathan; all bays.

Isaac DeTurk, Santa Rosa, Anti-Coolie, 4 years, record at 3 years, 2:43, dam by Rattler, a dark bay; also twenty-one colts and fillies, from foals to 4 years old; all bays except one, a gray.

Riley of Petaluma, 4-year-old filly and 3-year-old colt, dam by Alexander.

Allen Box, Glen Ellen, and George E. Ladd, San Francisco, each have fine Anteeo colts.

Dr. Wm. Finlaw, Santa Rosa, at Rosedale breeding farm, Kingcraft, 4 years, dam Nancy by McClellan; Laurel Dale, 3 years, dam Danville Maid by Don Juan.

Matt Roney, Santa Rosa, sucking colt of fine promise, dam a Norfolk mare.

Guy E. Grosse, Santa Rosa, Sunset, stallion, 4 years, trial mile in 2:36 at 3 years in the stud, dam Bessie S. of Whipple's Hambletonian and George M. Patchen strain, 16½ hands, splendid action, high speed, thorough form and good disposition; stallion Anteeof, 2 years, dam Taylor mare; Anteeop, 2 years, dam Bessie S., is entered in the District stake for colts at Petaluma and Santa Rosa; filly Midget, 3 years, dam Bessie S.; Sunsetter, 1 year, first grand child of Anteeo, dam Taylor mare, also entered in District Colt Stakes. Sunol is a successful breeder. Of 15 mares for the season only one failed. Anteeop and Anteeof will be placed in the stud next season.

There are others of Anteeo's progeny, but special mention is not made of these, simply for lack of information. They all resemble the sire or bear distinguishing marks; mostly of his color, a dark bay, but few are lighter, brown, black and gray. In height they are from 15 to 16½, of good weight, and show spirit, tempered with gentleness, in handling and working.

The most favored of the sons already in the stud are Redwood and Sunset. The two are certainly of splendid appearance and action. For Sunset an offer of $6,000 has been refused, and Redwood is held in high estimation by his owner, who has no thought of parting with him. The great value set upon the line of Anteeo in Sonoma is justified by his sons and daughters.

Of other breeders in Sonoma, Pat Carroll, of Bloomfield, one of the oldest and best experienced in the State, Wm. Bihler, of Petaluma, Whitney, of Petaluma, Sylvester Scott, of Cloverdale, Waddell, Phillips and Faugh, are more or less prominent. Pat Carroll devotes attention mainly to runners. Major James Hudsfeth, well known in early days, has retired on account of ripe old age. He bred winners in his time. Sonoma is admirably adapted for breeding fine horses in soil, climate, typography and conditions. The Buttons still hold good place in turf performances and the stud. The Hambletonians, Bentons, Sultans, Norfolks and other choice lines develop to high merit. Every year better attention is devoted to thoroughbreds of fine quality by the well-to-do farmers and prideful turf patrons. Improvement is constantly studied in arranging for the annual meetings at Petaluma and Santa Rosa in the stabling, the track, the stands and all else attract good attendance and assure meritorious sport. The coming meetings will be made notable. J. O'M.

San Miguel Stock Farm, Contra Costa County, Cal.

Among the producing sons of George Wilkes, the one on the Pacific Coast that leads in numbers in the 2:30 list is not as well known in the East as he deserves to be. I refer to Mambrino Wilkes, son of George Wilkes and Lady Chrisman, by Todhunter's Mambrino, who is fast making a good reputation as a sire of trotters that can go the route, and who has laid the foundations of that reputation under hard conditions.

I was pleased to be able to accept the invitation of Mr. Irvin Ayers to be his guest one evening at his beautiful home in Oakland, and make an early start in the morning with him for the Farm up in Contra Costa County. A rubber at whist and the conversation of Mr. Ayers and Mr. Hines, his trainer, an old-time horseman, whiled away a charming evening, and by the time the sun had found his way into clear blue in the morning we were on the road behind a handsome pair of black Mambrino Wilkeses and striking for the mountains. The Farm is about seventeen miles from Oakland, and quite near the village of Walnut Creek, where a railway will soon reach; but at present the most direct route is over the mountain roads from Oakland. Contra Costa County lies to the north and east of the city of Oakland, and is bounded on the west and north by San Pablo Bay (and its headwaters), the northern arm of the bay of San Francisco. The drive from Oakland up into this county is not over quite as fast a way as St. Nicholas Avenue, as it is good work to make five miles an hour, but it furnished one of the most pleasant diversions of my Pacific Coast journeyings. The way winds for more than half the distance upward through a mountain canyon, then down the opposite slope of this ridge of the foothills of the Coast Range, emerging into the series of sharply rolling hills where the Farm is situated, almost under the shadow of stately Mount Diablo. The drive through the hills under the clear morning sun, where cozy little green valleys open up between wooded heights, and mountain streams tumble down through curved and tortuous ravines, furnished one of those hours in life where we are brought very close to Nature.

Mr. Ayers has long been in business in San Francisco, and did not begin breeding horses with serious intentions. He bought Mambrino Wilkes because he liked him, and thought he should be tried with some decently-bred mares. The Farm in Contra Costa County is not large, and the buildings were not designed for a stock-farm. Mr. Ayers has just begun, and will gradually, if he remains in the breeding-ranks, put them in shape. With the exception of a couple of rocky ridges that run through it the Farm is very fertile, and good grass is afforded readily.

Mambrino Wilkes was bred by Mr. B. J. Treacy, of Lexington, was foaled in 1874, and was got by George Wilkes out of Lady Chrisman, by Todhunter's Mambrino, son of Mambrino Chief; and the dam of Lady Chrisman was a daughter of Pilot Jr. He is, therefore, one of the stoutly-bred sons of George Wilkes, and has the blood-right to be a sire of trotters. The blood most frequently found in Wilkes' performers is that of the Mambrinos, and a Pilot Jr. strain is always in order, and always enriches any kind of a combination. The further I push the study of trotting blood the more and more does my respect increase for the line of Pilot Jr. The ability to control action is now more readily acknowledged the great test of power in the sire than in the olden time, when breeders supposed that running blood assisted trotting action instead of being an element that had to be controlled and subjected by the trotting current. Pilot Jr. was the first horse of the trotting breed that evinced great action controlling power. Of course he failed on the majority of thoroughbred mares that were bred to him, but from several he got trotters, and sires and dams of trotters; and that is what no horse before him had the power to do. Next to him came the deeply-trotting-bred Almont, more potent in action-controlling than Pilot Jr., because more strongly bred; and next we have Electioneer, whose power in wiping out the running inclination exceeds that of Almont. In a little while horses with the power to control action in thoroughbred mares will be common; there are, I know, some such now in service. The reason is that we are getting deeper and deeper into trotting blood. The action-controlling horse is the closely, intensely-bred one who inherits trotting power and trotting instinct from many interwoven generations of trotting blood. This proposition is not doubted by any logical breeder or any student of natural laws.

Mambrino Wilkes' history has little of interest in it. His lines have not been cast in pleasant places, and his light has been hidden under a bushel till recently. When young he injured an ankle so that training was out of the question. He was taken to Oregon, driven at times on the road, I believe, and did service there, it is stated, turned loose with a band of common ranch mares. Finally his stock drew attention to him, and so in time by his own merit he earned his way up from ranch-horse duties to the position of head of a trotting stud and an acknowledged sire of race-horses.

Mambrino Wilkes is a 16-hand black horse, rangy and stylish in general conformation. His head and neck are quite first class, and shoulders and chest excellent. Indeed, he is one of the best "fore-handed" horses one will see. His barrel is good and deep through the heart region, is long and shapely, and the back and loin quite good. The quarters are long and sweeping, running down to splendid gaskins and strong, good legs. The point wherein I would change him would be to slightly increase the spread of the stifle, the width and massiveness of the quarter, and the closeness of the coupling. However, he is of that tall type that are somewhat deceptive, and a measurement of the lower thighs in comparison with those of a shorter legged, more closely built horse will show that he has no mean development of muscular substance. I am not sure that all horsemen will agree with the criticism here made, for all have not the same ideals of type, and I am free to admit that my ideal has mightier quarters than has the average good horse of our day. With the exception of the injured fore pastern the legs of Mambrino Wilkes are good, and that injury is no detriment to him as a stock horse. The knees and hocks are low set and strongly made, the cannons short and good, and the feet quite fair. In carriage Mambrino Wilkes is a very magnificent, commanding and finished horse, with the highest sort of proud style, and his natural action is good. I like him well enough to wish he had a better chance than he ever has had or is even now getting; for, although Mr. Ayers is giving him some good mares, he is not getting access to the number and quality of matrons that I believe his merits as a sire of good campaigning trotters entitle him. His most renowned son is the gelding Gus Wilkes, 2:22, now in Mr. James Dustin's string. He is out of Fancy, by Bonner, son of Whipple's Hambletonian, and made his record at Bay District Track, San Francisco, October 8, 1887, beating Wells Fargo and Lister in the second, third and fourth heats in 2:22¼, 2:23¾, 2:24. On the 21st of the same month he won a cracking race against Wells Fargo, Lister and Maid of Oaks. This was an eight-heat battle, and Gus Wilkes proved himself game and lasting, winning the second, sixth and eighth heats in 2:25, 2:25½, 2:28½. Last season he went through a hard campaign, generally trotting against company a trifle too fast for him. However, at Stockton he forced Tempest out in 2:19, and won two heats in the race in 2:22 and 2:23. At San Jose he again trotted second to the fast mare Lilly Stanley, winning second and third heats in 2:23¼, 2:23. I saw him a day or two before leaving California, and he looks as though he might be a good horse this year. He is in the hands of Dustin, a popular and gentlemanly horseman; and though "Jim" does not think he likes the Pacific Coast, I hope his luck this year will change his impression.

The next of Mambrino Wilkes' 2:30 list is the bay horse Alpheus, who made a record in successive heats of 2:28, 2:28½ and 2:27, and went through the campaigning ordeal creditably.

But the horse from which greater things are expected is the four-year-old colt Balkan, that trotted to a record of 2:29½ in his three-year-old form. He is a big, slashing horse that might be taken for a son of Sultan on shape. He has a clean, gamey head, long, well-shaped neck, excellent shoulders, lengthy, cylindrical barrel, hardly capricious enough in the dinner-place in his present form, and sweeping, well-turned quarters. He stands good and straight on his legs, and they are of fine quality. He has been a sick horse, practically, for nearly a year, and this has, of course, deterred his thicking development somewhat. He is sixteen hands high, and if he gains sufficient general stoutness should make a horse of the first class. He is now beginning to round-to and feed well, and his last year's campaign, trotted when weak from disease, gives evidence that with normal strength and stoutness he will be a warm member of his class. His general conformation is of high type; in color he is a fine mahogany bay, of exhuberant style and lofty, commanding carriage. His campaign, when we remember he suffered all through it from epizooty, is worthy of note. He started in at Marysville, Cal., on August 29th, distancing all his field in the first heat but Gossiper, and ultimately defeating him for the stake. On the 31st he started in the 2:50 class, and was second in the first heat, but from sheer weakness fell in the second heat and was distanced. It was thought that this would finish his career on the turf for that season; but on September 11th he turned up in the three-year-old stake at Sacramento, where he started with the expectation of making a desperate finish with the flag, but drove Grandee, the crack three-year-old of the coast, out three times in 2:30 and better, and beat the little Director horse Direct and Moses S, son of Mr. Shippee's Hawthorn. On the 19th, at Reno, Nev., he won a stake in straight heats; and again won at Carson, Nev., on the 27th. On November 9th, at Oakland, he walked over for the stakes in a match race in 2:29½, and a few days later beat Princemont, by Altamont, in straight heats. He started in nine races, getting first money in five and second in three—finishing with a record of 2:29½. A very creditable campaign for a sick three-year-old.

One fine morning I saw Balkan move on the Oakland track. He is a long-striding, excellently-actioned horse, direct in his stroke, and very fast. Balkan is a smooth, graceful mover, and I liked him better after I saw him move than before. He is a sure trotter, and all he will need is sufficient stoutness to make him a good one to take to the races.

Among the brood mares we ran across in the paddocks was Contra, by Electioneer, out of a mare by Billy Cheatam (son of Cracker, of Boston), and except that her hind legs are not well shaped she is a well made mare. Her progeny have all good legs, good in form and of good quality. Her 1885 colt by Le Grande sold at two years for $1,000, and her Antevolo colt of 1887 sold as a yearling at the same figure. About the best mare in the lot is Annie Laurie, three-year-old record 2:30, by Echo. She is strongly made and substantial, and was a good, resolute performer. Old Fanny Fern is the most noted one of the collection. She is the dam of Molly Drew, 2:27, Balkan, 2:29½, and Fred Arnold, 2:22½. She has fairly earned her rank among the great brood mares. She was got by Jack Hawkins, son of Boston, and her dam was said to be an overland mare that came from Tennessee. She is not bred in the fashion, but is one of the lucky exceptions. Sometimes it will happen that the best-bred are of no account, while those of no pride of birth grasp the laurel crown. Fanny is a large mare, of good form and quality, and with the exception of being a little rough over the coupling is finely put up. Nana and Narka, daughters of Nephew, are good specimens of that horse's get, and are shapely mares. Fancy, the dam of Gus Wilkes, 2:22, is a well-shaped mare. She is a granddaughter of Whipple's Hambletonian, whose blood is fast rising to its true place in the appreciation of breeders. She has two other colts by Mambrino Wilkes, and will likely find her way into the table of great brood mares. Another good mare is Piracy, by Buccaneer, out of Louise, by George M. Patchen Jr. She is bred well enough to produce a trotter, and is a first-rate individual. Molly Fern, by Capt. Cole, (son of Whipple's Hambletonian), is a grandly-put-up animal, strongly and well finished, with clean, cordy legs. Satsuma is a compact, smooth, muscular mare. She is by The Grand Moor, and her dam is given as by Wissahickon, son of William Welch. I am not familiar with the history of The Grand Moor, but he was bred to be a great sire of broodmares. The blood of The Moor and of Mambrino Patchen—two of the richest maternal currents—blended in him, he being by the sire of Beautiful Bells, and out of Vashti, by the sire of Alma Mater. The form of Clara P. pleased me greatly. She is by Mambrino Wilkes, out of a mare by Corsican, and is a handsomely built dark bay, with good shoulders and barrel quarters of the first class, and first rate legs. She is in training, and developing very respectable speed. We inspected a number of other mares, and found the average of individuality good.

The first youngster shown was Kaulber, by Mambrino Wilkes, out of a daughter of Gen. McClellan, a very well made three-year-old that promises to pay well for the trouble of training. Kodiac, full brother to Gus Wilkes, 2:22, is a smooth yearling, promising in gait, and a very stylish fellow. He is entered in the Occident Stakes, and it is hoped he will be as good as his brother, to whom he is superior in some details of structure. Chaldean, by Mambrino Wilkes, out of Fredolia, by Fred Arnold, grandam by Mambrino Wilkes, is inbred, and I looked carefully and critically over him. I have always held that the prejudice against inbreeding is not supported by evidence; but if wrong in this I want to be undeceived, and therefore always look exactingly upon closely inbred animals, to see if what nearly everybody says is true. All observations so far, has tended to confirm the conviction that nine-tenths of the popular teaching concerning the evil effects of inbreeding is a Mrs. Grundy tale. Men are too prone to accept popular prejudices, especially old ones, without question of investigation, and in the cold light of facts the fearless practice of intelligent inbreeding cannot be successfully assailed. As a matter of fact, to return to the cause of this digression, Chaldean, the closely inbred son of Mambrino Wilkes, is just about the best shaped colt of his age among all the get of his sire. He has a clean, resolute-looking, bony head, bright, prominent eye, long, shapely neck, closely laid oblique shoulders, and excellent barrel, quarters, legs and feet.

A beautifully shaped filly is Myletta, yearling, by Mambrino Wilkes, out of Molly Fern, referred to above—a stylish, blood-like youngster, that is smooth and good all through. Another stout yearling that in my estimation will develop into a good one is the bay filly Anato, by Clovis, out of Annie Laurie, 2:30, by Echo. Her shape and general style is excellent, and she should prove a good brood-mare after meeting the test of development. Her sire, Clovis, is one of the best bred sons of Sultan, and I am informed is a horse with a good future dawning. His dam is Sweetbriar by Thorndale, and his grandam was Ulster Queen (the dam of Volmer, 2:29½) by Hambletonian. He is bred for an impressive trotting-sire. All the colts looked healthy, but of course rough at this season. The eye that cannot see form under a rough coat is not very discerning, and if the colt is stout and healthy at shedding-time there is no need of apology for a little roughness.

I was pleased with the get of Mambrino Wilkes, and in meeting his owner formed an acquaintance, or rather a friendship, that will not be forgotten. In this day, when all kinds of Wilkes horses are being tried, and when many chase the phantom for the name, one that is as good in form as Mambrino Wilkes, and has shown his power to produce reliable performers, should have greater opportunities than can just yet be found in the rich hill lands of Contra Costa County. Mr. Ayers has been a successful man of business, and went to California in the early days when the long roads overland were marked by the footprints of the thousands of pilgrims who crossed desert and mountain to shear the golden fleece. He is a reader and a thinker, and whether in horse-breeding or any other line of business does not fail to mix his work with brains, uprightness and energy. Though the owner of Mambrino Wilkes has not the time to embark on a seriously extensive scale in breeding trotters, he will be pretty certain to make his pastime profitable and instructive.—Wallace's Monthly.

Exile Wins.

What rejoicing there must have been at Brighton Beach on last Wednesday night, for it is a noted fact that every one, irrespective of color and sex, invariably bet on a Brighton Beach horse when he appears at any of the big tracks. There were a large number of persons present in the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN office when the race was run, knowing that the earliest information would be received here. Almost every one was interested in Hanover or Terra Cotta, the latest telegraphic tips giving Terra Cotta as a probable winner. The winter books would have suffered if either of the three leading favorites had won, but with the son of Mortimer to pass the wire first, Mr. Alf Lakeland, brother of the owner of the winner, is the only one that will receive dividends to a large amount. The first message received at this office simply said "Exile wins," while a second dispatch only gave the positions of the horses as they passed the stand. The following account of the race is taken from the Morning Call:

NEW YORK, May 15th.—Thirty thousand people yelled themselves hoarse at the Brooklyn track to-day, when the Brooklyn handicap was decided over a fast track, and 29,000 were disappointed because the wrong horse won. To Exile, the Brighton-Beacher, and seven-year-old son of Mortimer, the $10,000 prize went, he having tried in vain to win it at two previous runnings of this race. To Californians the race will have a special interest, because Exile, when his racing days are ended, will go to Haggin's breeding farm, where the copper king expects him to become the sire of a lot of famous racers before he dies.

ONE OF THE BEST AT THE DISTANCE.

Though a disappointing race to the speculating public, Exile's race was one of the best ever run at the distance, as with 116 pounds he covered it in 2:07½, within half a second of Dry Monopole's record made at the first running of the race in 1886—the colt then carrying but 106. The fractional time emphasizes this fact, the first quarter having been run in 0:25, the half in 0:50, the three-quarters in 1:16, the mile in 1:41¼.

Hearst's filly Gorgo did not appear among the starters, which was a great disappointment to thousands who expected to see her in the first flight at the finish, if not a winner. The field for various reasons was reduced, therefore, to Prince Royal, Terra Cotta, Hanover, Exile, Elkwood, Richmond and Juggler, who were fancied in the betting in the order named, it being but little better than even money against the first three named, though 2 to 1 could be had against Hanover at post odds.

THE RACE.

The lot had a splendid start, Hanover and Juggler being the first to show in front, they cutting out the running, being head and head three lengths in front of the rest, well bunched, at the end of the first quarter. So they ran to the half, when Juggler got his chestnut nose to the front. In an other quarter Hanover began to fall back, it is thought rather for lack of courage than want of speed. Certainly it was not because of his foot, for he showed no signs of lameness at any time in or after the race. When Hanover quit he fell back rapidly to fifth place. Prince Royal and Exile moved up from the rear, passing Elkwood and Juggler before the head of the stretch was reached. Exile there took the lead. The race from that on was entirely between him and Prince Royal. The latter could never reach Exile in spite of Garrison's vigorous riding, so Exile won with Prince Royal's nose at his tail, Terra Cotta ten lengths away, with Elkwood and Juggler close up, and ten lengths further back Hanover two lengths before Richmond.

How McLaughlin Lost the Race.

The St. Louis Republic gives the following account of the race in which Jockey McLaughlin was ruled off at Nashville, and afterwards reinstated.

The Chicago pair were favorites at 3 to 5 against, and nearly every man at the track backed the great son of Harry O'Fallon and his stable companion to win. W. L. Cassidy's Clara C., a 6 to 1 shot, got second and before reaching the stand had taken the lead by a length and this lead she held clear around and well into the stretch. Hamlet was second at the stand and Endurer at the quarter, but then Santalene came up from third and Terra Cotta ran along easily in fourth or fifth place. Santalene never lost second place, but McLaughlin brought Terra Cotta up in the stretch to Santalene's flanks. In the stretch there was a fight for place and Santalene succeeded in passing Clara C., with Terra Cotta running even in the lead. Half a dozen rods from home Leavy called to McLaughlin: "Pull him up; I have him beaten," and McLaughlin pulled Terra Cotta and checked his pace. Clara C. had been running in the bunch, but had drawn out at the last and was coming fast on the inside. Santalene was brought to a hotter pace and Terra Cotta, suddenly checked, could not recover the lead. Gerhardy outspeeded them and won by a nose, Santalene second, Terra Cotta third. There was a mighty uproar and the multitude rushed to the judge's stand calling: "Unfair riding!" "Foul!" "Rule him off!" The judges motioned for quiet and after considering the case gave the money to Clara C., and declared all bets off. McLaughlin and Terra Cotta were ruled off. The ruling off part of the decision was not approved by the crowd, but the judges will probably rescind it to-morrow. McLaughlin cried like a child, saying he never had any such thing happen to him before.

Sacramento News and Races.

[By our Special Commissioner.]

The racing which should have taken place on Monday last at Sacramento was postponed until Tuesday. The day opened out well, but about 9:30 it began to rain, and continued all day. The track was in fair order, and could have been raced on, as the surface only was damp, but at two o'clock the postponement was announced, and the few spectators received their money back at the gate. It seemed a mistake of the Directors to again postpone, for the public will not as a rule turn out in any numbers to a postponed meeting, and this was a twice retarded meeting, and it also is manifestly unfair to keep racing men and horses waiting and waiting for a chance to earn oats.

In the afternoon Flood Tide was brought out, and with his weight up (Hart in the saddle) given the full mile and an eighth at nearly full speed, creating a favorable impression, and bringing him into general favor again, quite eradicating the impression Dennison's colt (G. W.) had made earlier when he was brushed down the stretch in 24½ seconds. White Cloud was sent seven furlongs, the long-tailed pinto moving easily in 1:30, and Holloway sharpened Kildare up, giving him five furlongs in 1:06.

On Monday night the Golden Eagle was given up to the speculators, and owing to the doubts existing about Guido starting, pools were sold slowly, with him barred, Whisban selling a big favorite over the other two, who sold for seven dollars each to her twenty-five. In the repeat Geraldine brought $25, the rest about $27, only a few pools being sold, as Geraldine probably would not start. She was not entitled to start, as she had been scratched once, and the race ought not to have been reopened. In the three-year-old race, pool-selling was brisk, in fact, Sam Whithead says he never saw it better there. Flood Tide, Songstress and G. W. sold nearly even up for a few pools, and then the weight of money gradually made the former a decided favorite at $60 to $35, G. W. $25, Songstress, Louis P. and Wild Oats $5 each, Lurline $3 and Duke Spencer $2.

Percy Williams, of Union Island, was in Sacramento this week for the races, and though he rather favors trotters and pacers, he still has a slight love for the thoroughbred. He says he has several promising young trotters; one an Antevolo of which he is rather proud and a young pacer that will make things lively for some one on either track or road. He has started to move old Bryant W. slowly in anticipation of a rumored match against Rathbone. Half mile, owners up.

Henry Walsh is said to have refused $10,000 for Racine, and would not even put a price on him, although he has another youngster who is said to be better. If it is so, he has a world beater, but the bay would be thereabouts if they were tried together.

Mr. Laird, a well known eastern driver, now has charge of the trotting horses at Palo Alto, while Charley Marvin is away in the East. The two he brought up to Sacramento looked well and were very docile, tractable, a good square, even gaited trotters; one of them is by Electioneer out of a thoroughbred mare, while the other is by Piedmont, dam Lady Morgan by Rysdyk's Hambletonian. Mr. Laird last year made quite a reputation with Newton who was driven by him to a record of 2:17½. Newton is now in Budd Doble's string.

Owing to the prevalence of quarter-cracks and bad feet in general among the horses in training at Sacramento, quite a discussion took place as to which was the best place for horses feet, California or the Eastern States. It was generally conceded that unless a low-lying place was selected, the Eastern States had the best of it, owing to the moist humid atmosphere and the dews there which all help to keep the colt's hoof damp and soft; and while growing, allows the heel to expand. In several places in the State, notably the Haggin and Baldwin ranches, there is plenty of moisture, but when a horse is raised up in the hills, his feet are hard and brittle, smashing to pieces like matchwood, whenever he strikes a hard track. The veteran, Albert Cooper, said he did not want any horses raised up in the high lands, for they would break a man in copper plates alone, while if colts were raised in a nice, low lying warm place, with plenty of water, their feet would keep growing and expanding, and when schooling began, they could be worked barefoot and not pinched up with a shoe. He, himself, used to always exercise the colts at Santa Anita inside the track, among the damp alfalfa, and have their legs well dried after, while when they were shod or plated he always had their feet washed out every day and used hoof ointment to soften the foot.

Harry Howard has started to work Phantom. He was purchased from Mr. Haggin last year, and the then three-year-old was added to the list and turned out and ought to show soon some signs of the speed he had when he came down to the Blood Horse last spring.

What is the difference between a three-quarter and a mile track in working a mile? The boys all say Big Jim got fooled through trying his horses on the three-quarter track at the Bottoms, but many a good horse has been tried there and a second and a half is a good allowance to make in a mile.

The Capital Turf Club eventually started their meeting on Tuesday last in moderate weather, rather showery, though about three it cleared up and quite a respectable crowd turned out, but not nearly so many as would have been there had the postponements not have occurred. Messrs. Chris Green, J. W. Wilson and H. T. Barton were in the judges box, while C. H. Todd officiated as clerk of the course, in his well known genial way, while Worth Ober as starter gave every satisfaction, each start being a good one, and though the delay was rather tedious in one instance, the beautiful send off repaid every one for the long interval, especially the pool sellers who sold right up to the fall of the flag.

The days's programme gave much more sport than was expected, for although the first race was soon over, Whisban winning hands down, Guido not being allowed to start, although Narvice weighed out for him, as his owner hoped they would let him start. In the repeat race White Cloud was put out of the hunt by the merry pace in the first heat, he going the first three furlongs in 36½ seconds, and although only just beaten in the heat he never looked like a winner in the second which was 3½ seconds slower, and Hello in the run off won cleverly from Longshot.

The judges gave White Cloud second place in the heat, although Hello was palpably three-quarters of a length in advance of him, and in the Golden Eagle Stakes they also erroneously placed Wild Oats third, overlooking Matt Storn's filly who was on the rails (inside), and a clear length in iront of him. In neither instance did either horse gain any money as there was no third money, but it would have been better to have place them correctly as some few had outside bets, one of them being an even thirty dollars that Wild Oats finished in front of Lurline, which had to be paid on the judges decision.

The Golden Eagle Stakes brought out seven horses, and was one of the best betting races seen in Sacramento for years, Flood Tide selling first choice for $60, G. W. bringing $55, Songstress $38, the field $20, and Louis P. $17. The money came in as fast as Whitehead could sell, there being nearly $8,000 in the box when the flag dropped, and Albert Coooper's White Wings (Louis P.) getting well away, never grew weary and won handily by a length from the favorite, the Sacramento wonder G. W. never once showing prominently, while Songstress shut up at the three-quarter pole.

R. P. Ashe's ch f Mirope by Joe Hooker, dam Consolation, 107	Hart	3

Time, 1:04.

Auction pools: Whisban $35, Alice $8 and Mirope $7.

Mutuals paid $8.10 on the winner.

Mirope, after a couple of false starts, jumped off first in advance of Whisban, with Alice two lengths behind. Before the first eighth was run, Whisban was in front, and keeping there, turned into the straight with a two lengths lead, and striding on, won by six lengths in a big gallop. Alice, ridden from start to finish, collared Mirope half way down the straight, and after a short struggle shook her off and took second place, a good length in front of Ashe's filly.

Time, 1:14½, 1:18, 1:19.

Kildare also ran, fourth each heat.

Auction pools: Whitecloud $25, field $10. After first heat—Field $25, Whitecloud $10. After second heat—Hello $20, Longshot $25.

Mutuals paid, $18.40 on first heat. $8.60 on the field in second, and $10.90 on the final.

There was a slight delay caused by Longshot, who was rather headstrong, but on the flag dropping, Whitecloud started out a length in front of Hello, Kildare and Longshot half a length behind him; when three furlongs had been run in 36½, Whitecloud was a length and three-quarters in front of Hello, with Kildare and Longshot three lengths behind. Hello gradually closed, and after rounding the turn for home moved up to the favorite, and both were ridden out, Hello just gaining the verdict by a short head. Longshot and Kildare were three open lengths behind the leaders.

After a twenty-minutes interval they once more faced the starter, who readily sent them off, with Hello just in front of White Cloud. Longshot, on the outside and hard ridden, held his own into the straight, where White Cloud momentarily showed in front, only to be displaced by Hello, who looked an easy winner until Longshot, catching both whalebone and steel, outstayed him through sheer gameness, and beat him out a length, Hello, not being severely punished, second, a short length in front of Whitecloud (though the judges placed Whitecloud second). Kildare was ridded from start to finish, but seemed to have no pace at all, and eventually finished three lengths behind Whitecloud.

After the usual interval Longshot and Hello came out, and the former cut out the pace a neck in front of Hello, past the five-eighths pole and half mile. Hello showed in front when the stretch was reached, but running wide, let Longshot on the rails get up to him. On being straightened out he drew away, and won handily by three-quarters of a length.

Mutuals—Flood Tide, G. W., Songstress and the Field were sold, Field paying $19.35.

Time, 1:58½.

When the seven starters went to the post, G. W. wasted half an hour by his mean behavior, and having then sorely tried the patience of the rest, Lurline and Songstress assisted him in delaying the send off for another half hour. In the end they got off pretty evenly, Songstress on the inside with Louis P. and Wild Oats leading past the stand. Louis P's head just showing, he front with G. W., Flood Tide and Lurline a length and a half behind. Passing the first quarter Louis P. was leading Songstress and Wild Oats by about a length, while Flood Tide who had run out at the turn was being hard ridden to regain his place, Lurline running well about three lengths behind the leaders. G. W. and Duke Spencer were early out of the race.

When the half was reached, Songstress had shot her bolt and Louis P. and Wild Oats went on closely followed by Flood Tide who had made up most of the lost ground, and was just clear of Lurline. Rounding the turn for home, Louis P. was still in front and with the other three all whipping a nice finish, was run out to the wire, the chestnut colt winning cleverly by a length from Flood Tide who was three-quarters of a length in front of Lurline, with Wild Oats a length behind her, G. W. three lengths off fifth, Duke Spencer a bad sixth, Songstress pulling up last. Cook on Lurline finished right under the judges' box, and was overlooked Wild Oats getting the place. She would probably have been second had the boy not lost his whip in the stretch, and having no spurs he could not ride her out.

Quite a large assemblage (all things consided) turned out on Wednesday to witness the days sport. The weather up until two o'clock was all that could be desired, but afterwards was changeable and showery. The programme consisted of a Ladies Tournament, a special, and a pacing race.

In the Ladies Riding Tournament, judged by Hiram Cook, Chris. Green, W. A. Hedenberg, W. M. Petrie and Capt. Hobbs, seven competitors turned out, two of them being only children about 14 years old. After cantering past the stand several times and jumping the bar which was placed about two and a half feet from the ground, the ladies retired until after the first heat, when they were paraded before the judges, who after careful and deliberate consideration awarded the first prize to Mrs. Paquin, a pretty little blonde tastefully dressed in a green habit with a jockey's cap of the same color. She rode and managed a model park hack in excellent style, and certainly deserved the award for her good and all round turn out and womanlike style. Miss Laura Cooper, one of the younger competitors was given second place, and for so young a girl showed really nice quiet style and good form, the other young girl, neither of them looking more than fifteen, was placed fifth, although she ought to have been certainty higher in the list, for she rode her gray mare in firm, easy style, and seemed to have a very light hand on her mare's mouth. Sheriff McMullen had the pleasant duty of escorting the fair equestrines, while the ubiquitous C. H. Todd decorated their arms with the numbers.

For the special race, two trotters and one pacer came out, and it was plain from the start that Madura was a sure winner. The second heat was given as 2:39½, nearly all the outside watches gave it 2:38½, but possibly the fact that there is such a thing as a forty class may account for the discrepancy. The pacing race looked rather tricky all round and created a good deal of feeling. A complaint was made against the driver of Creole after the second heat and he was taken out of the sulky, and Laird, a Palo Alto driver, put in. Creole won the heat handily in 2:25, by far the best heat of the day. In the fourth heat he broke at the quarter pole and never settled down again, the veteran John Williams driving the grey in an easy winner. James Linden was distanced in the third heat, and then was ruled off the track for using insulting language to the judges. His mare was well outside the flag when it was dropped, and of course the judges could do nothing else but distance him, and after the language he used to them President Green was certainly right in ruling him off.

FIRST HEAT.

Auction pools: Madura $40, Tump $15 and P. K. $25.

The first heat was called up at a quarter past two, in a slight shower of rain. Wilbur Smith had the pole with his pacer P. K., while Madura was next and Tump outside. Tump, who was very headstrong, scored up for a long while with P. K., Madura always behind. When they got off, P. K. settled down, and pacing nicely, led two lengths at the quarter, both the others breaking at the eighth pole, and at the half in 1:20 was a length and a half in front of Tump, with Madura, who had again been off his feet, six lengths behind, When five furlongs had been gone, Tump and P. K. were level, and Tump, trotting steadily, carried P. K. off his feet, and going on, won cleverly by a length from Madura, P. K. four lengths behind. Time, 2:40.

Mutuals paid $15.05 on the heat.

SECOND HEAT.

Auction pools: Madura $40, Tump $17, P. K. $12.

The pools sold slowly, very little money going in the box.

After scoring twice Madura was sent off at length in front of P. K., with Tump half a length further behind, and all going evenly. Madura led two lengths at the quarter, and at the half three, with Tump, trotting steadily a length ahead of P. K. The favorite increased his lead past the five furlongs, and at the three-quarters was five lengths to the good, Tump half a length in front of P. K. Coming down the homestretch Madura, trotting grandly, drew further away, and passed under the wire seven lengths ahead of P. K. and Tump. P. K. broke badly twice in the homestretch or would have been closer. Time, 2:39½. Mutuals paid, $8 80.

THIRD HEAT.

Auction pools—Madura, 25; Field, 7. Hardly any money went in the box and none in the last heat. Jones was fined $25, and Worth over $10 for not being out in time. The trio were quickly despatched and Madura getting down to work was a length to the good at the first eighth, Tump last a length behind P. K. at the quarter in order was the same slightly elongated. At the three furlongs Madura was leading P. K. two lengths, Tump one length to the rear. When the half was reached, Madura was three lengths to the good, but P. K. straightened out and pacing in better style gradually closed up and at the three-quarters was only a length off and at the seven furlongs half a length, but Madura was driven hard and trotted with Tump six lengths off last. Time, 2:39½. Mutuals paid $7.10.

The special was finished after the first heat of the pacing race. In the final of the special, no pools were sold. Pete Tietjens got up behind the pacer and after slight scoring got well away. Tump broke badly before the eighth pole was reached and was pulled almost to the standstill. At the quarter, Madura led three lengths and with P. K. off his legs, went on and trotting easily won in a jog pulled up. Tump gradually overhauled P. K. who seemed unable to catch and finally beat him out for second by two lengths. Time, 2:43.

The four starters scored up very lively for a long while; and then Creole and Solitaire got a length the best of the start. At the eighth Solitaire went up, and the black horse led past the quarter and half by one length, Ned, close up with Solitaire, breaking up badly at the five furlongs. Skelton was just in front, Ned a length behind third at the three-quarters. Creole and Skelton were level, but Creole broke at the seven furlongs, and Skelton, sticking to work, won by a length, Ned third three lengths behind Creole, Solitaire just saving distance. Time, 2:29½. Mutuals paid, $17.10.

SECOND HEAT.

Auction pools.—Creole 25; Skelton 12; Solitaire 2.

At the second attempt the bell was tapped, and Skelton breaking, the black horse went to the front, and pacing squarely led past the quarter, and at the three furlongs was two lengths in front of Ned, who in turn was two in front of the grey, with the black mare, broken all up, last. Just before the half was reached Creole broke badly, and Ned went to the front only to be passed by Skelton, who paced in in steady style, winning easily by three lengths. The other three were running, and skiving all over the track. Time, 2:37½. Mutuals paid, $14.25.

THIRD HEAT.

A complaint was made to the judges by the backers of Creole and Snider was taken out and Laird put in the sulky. No pools were sold.

After a lot of tedious serving, Creole and Ned went out together and pacing well and steadily, soon had Solitaire settled. At the quarter they were level and at the half Creole was a length ahead of Ned who broke badly. The grey now came up and at the three-quarters was level, but Creole carried him so fast that he broke and Creole won by three lengths, Ned just saving his distance while Solitaire was well outside. Mutuals paid $10.75. Time, 2:25.

FOURTH HEAT.

A few pools were sold on the strength of Creole's improvement. Skelton, 25; Creole, 17; Ned, 2.

There was very little time wasted in scoring, and Creole and Ned went out three lengths in front of the grey. At the quarter both black and grey broke and Ned had a two length lead which he increased to seven, at the half mile with the grey just clear of Creole. The veteran now drove the grey hard and rapidly overhauling Ned passed him at the three-quarters and both the others breaking badly, won easily by four lengths, Creole running under the wire a length in front of Ned.

Mutuals paid $10.90. Time, 2:34.

Trotting at Oakland.

Some weeks ago, it was mentioned in the Breeder and Sportsman that a sweepstakes ran was contemplated by several of the citizens of San Leandro who were eager to determine which had the fastest trotter. On the 12th inst., a number of the San Leandro folks came down to Oakland to test the relative merits of their horses, accompanied by a large contingent who had special favorites among the starters. The fun of the day began with a match race for $100 a side between Richard Havey's Bonanza and M. H. McManus' Perchelion. The race was sharply contested and created considerable excitement owing to the evenness of the contest. The following is the

In between the heats of the former race the green horses from San Leandro were given a chance, and quite a deal of money was wagered on the result. The favorite was Little Wonder, and he showed himself a slightly better horse than the winner, but Josey, the driver of the latter, had an advantage in skill which saved him the race. The third heat was declared off by the judges, owing to an error made by the driver of Lorenzo Maid. The result of the race was as follows:

A Day at Santa Rosa Track.

Editor Breeder and Sportsman:—A favorable day was lately embraced to visit the Agricultural Park at Santa Rosa, a mile from the Court House Square. W. B. Sanborn is the lessee. He has two fine colts, stallions, both sired by Ironclad, the dam of one a Lodi mare, the other Alice by Whitney's Dawn. Stables are already occupied by strings in training, mainly colts and fillies, preparing for the approaching meetings throughout the circuit. Capt. Guy E. Grosse's stable is in charge of John Lawrence, and he has five of Anteeo's line—the stallion Sunset, used in the stud, the colts Anteeo—Anteeop, Sunsetta and Midget. Two of these colts are entered for the District Colt Stakes, at Santa Rosa and Petaluma.

George Jones has charge of the stables of James H. and John M. Laughlin, in which are eight fine Anteeo colts and fillies, all showing good action and high speed.

Lilburn Marsh is in charge of the stables of Guerne & Murphy, E. A. Seegelkin and C. C. Bemis. The first named have six Anteeos; the latter a handsome brown stallion by Sultan, dam Lady Zinns; by Utly Jr., and a sorrel mare, 4 years old by Nutwood, Launcelot, by Electioneer, now in the stud, and a few others of good form and merit.

T. J. Ludwig has several fine colts of much promise, one a four-year-old Nutwood, dam by Antelope; another an Anteeo colt, three-year-old, and an Anteeo filly, four years.

I. De Turk, the noted wine man, is putting his long string of Anteeo's get in training. McGraw, the accomplished trainer of Lillie Stanley, has charge of his stables.

McFadyen's Anteeo stallion Redwood, 4 years old, is in training, and he has also a gray pacer, of which much is expected.

Engagements for other stables are filling every week, and additions to these will be made during the year.

Adjacent to the park are the pasturing grounds of the Sonoma Breeding Stock Association, sixty acres in extent, meadow and wooded hill land, with fine flowing water.

Santa Rosa street cars run to the park grounds, and the drive is very fine over macadamized road. The track is not excelled in the State, and with the exception of the State Agricultural grounds in Sacramento, the track accommodations are unequalled. J. O'M.

Judges.

Racing judges are not like poets and musicians. They are made, not born. It takes years of experience to make a judge thoroughly competent. He must be a man who lives only by seconds, and able to split that short division of time if necessary, without any trammels of memory as to the past, and free from all shades of anticipation as to the future. He must ignore all favorites among horses, and be dead to every impulse of friendship for drivers or jockeys. He should never harbor a foregone conclusion as to which horse should win, or anticipate by breathing the possibility of any horse's defeat.

His work begins the instant a race starts, and from that second until the finish he should have but one sense in active service—sight. He should be all eyes, and take in like a camera every movement of horse and rider, or driver, in the struggle from the first step or stride to the last. His duty is to see that the noble horse is not worsted by the ignoble man on his back, or behind him.

It is no child's play, but rather the task of a Hercules. Such men are hard to find, but when they come to the front they should have the most absolute recognition. The office is a noble one, and when nobly filled should be rewarded by the highest pay. If the judging of racing were left to one man, and he paid amply for his services, there would soon be a restoration of confidence and interest in trotting and pacing races. His pay should be high enough to keep him independent of any business entanglements, for a man who is under any obligation to a horse owner or expects a favor from some one interested in the race will certainly have some bias toward both.

With one judge absolutely competent and with an independent income to make the circuit of the fairs of the State and decide the results of every race, a new era would dawn upon the sport that would be hailed with acclamation by every lover of the noble horse and supporter of the legitimate speculation and the results of the race.—Wallace's Monthly.

Diomede's Deductions.

In this connection I might properly state that the first horse-trot I ever witnessed was between Goldsmith Maid, Lucy and American Girl. I ran away from home to see it. In the cold gray light of the morning I descended on tip-toe from my room and took the train. I remember I thought it wasn't much of a show after all, as it was hippodrome, and the time was slow, and my opinion of Doble and the others was by no means complimentary. It has changed now; time and the inevitable effect of the great educator, experience, works wondrous changes. I expected the rod would not be spared to spoil the child when I returned to the paternal roof, but I went scott free, for did not the good father want to know all about it himself?

The next time I saw her was at Cleveland, O., in her ever memorable fight with the mighty Smuggler. She had won two heats, and the third was all over but the shouting, when Marvin, seeing himself in a pocket on the stretch, and knowing it was do or die right there, pulled to the outside, and calling on his noble stud, swept grandly to the wire, a winner by a neck. The grand old mare was taken to the infield to cool out. Budd realized that her day was almost over, and his sorrow was plainly depicted on his expressive eyes. The old mare stood wearily and with dejected look, seeming herself to realize that her day was done.

I felt as sorry for her as though she were some noble women; some queen about to be dethroned. It was a battle royal, and after two more heats, in which the reigning queen displayed all her oldtime determination and pluck, the race was won by Smuggler. At the conclusion the old mare was lead away trembling from supreme exertion and nervous strain. Budd put his arm affectionately aroundd the old mare's neck, and there was a decided suspicion of moisture in his eyes. She had fought a good fight; she had exerted every effort, and her palpitating heart, her shaking muscles and quivering nerves told the story of supreme but unavailing effort. If I had been a gallant battle, and judges, horsemen and spectators were wearied with the strain of long-continued anxiety. The day was almost done; the night was coming on; the deepening shadows had already enveloped half the track in gloom as the superb stallion swept under the wire a winner. A silence as of death fell on that great audience. The battle was fought, the victory won; the queen dethroned, the king had been crowned, and as with the suddenness of an electric spark the importance and significance of the event was apprehended by that vast audience. The ever-fickle crowd with mighty voice and boisterous shout rent the air with loud acclaim: "Long live the king!" It is only once in a season that an audience is treated to such a sensational performance as the one I have described. It was an incident never to be forgotten.

Very soon the bell will ring, and once more the grand procession will take up its line of march to the sea. Already the sulkies have been taken down, and the new paint is almost dry. The jogging carts are in daily use. The working shoes have been tacked on, and preparations for the grand campaign are already in progress. There is a promise of a rich harvest for the first-class campaigner, as, to use a turf expression, there is more money in sight than ever before.

The auction sale of Galloway, Aberdeen, Polled Angus, Durham and Devon cattle was fairly well attended, and the prices realized were on the whole fair, although in several instances genuine bargains were obtained. E. W. Newhall bought six head of Galloway, at an average of $97.50 per head. D. B. Kelly, a fine bull, Arthur of Danville, for $70. Korbell Bros. two head for $174.50. Creed Haymond several at an average of $100 each. J. H. Wise five head for $480. A. Smith three for $465. S. Wangenheim paid $62.50 for a bull. C. Derby three head for $365. Twenty-seven in all of this class being sold as above. In the Polled Angus class 20 head were sold, mostly to same buyers for $1,887 50. Only 8 head of Devons were sold at an average of $82.50.

Grim's Gossip.

Many of our local horsemen are in Sacramento this week attending the races there.

The advertisement of Dr. C. Masoero, veterinary surgeon, appears in our columns this week.

It is currently believed that Dick Havey will drive Bonnaza to a 2:20 record this year.

E. J. Baldwin has bet $100 to $5 that he will not go back East this year to see his horses run.

Geo. A. Doherty has returned to Indian Valley, Plumas County, from Chico with his stallion Victor.

If the party who took an overcoat out of this office will return the papers he may keep the garment.

Sammy Cooper is once more able to be around after the Susie S. accident, but his arm is still stiff and sore.

It looks as though the bookmakers had received a black eye in trying to dictate to the track owners of the East.

The Brighton Beachers painted that town red last Wednesday night. All the boys were on Tea Tray and Exile.

The first Turf Guide of the season was issued on May 14th. It has not arrived here yet, but will probably in a few days.

Mr. R. Porter Ashe, of the Maltese Villa Stable, expects to sail to-day for Japan. He is undecided as to when he will return.

Belvidere hit himself in his work last week, and was laid up temporarily. Feakes reports him as taking to his work very kindly.

Stamboul is daily admired by visitors at the Bay District track. He is high in flesh, but is the very picture of the typical trotter.

Mr. A. C. Nicholls, of Chico, one of Butte County's intelli-breeders, was in attendance at the combination sale on Tuesday last.

Messrs. Lowe & Sissenvine, of Woodland, have sold their stallion Oofty Goofty to Mr. W. Gibson. $835 is the reputed price paid for the horse.

Senator Hearst has been very ill at Durango, Mexico, but at last accounts is improving. He will return to the Pacific Coast before starting East.

J. B. Haggin was offered a trade last year, Spokane for Jubilee. Mr. Haggin would have to fetch his best now to get a trade for the Derby winner.

Louis P. and Flood Tide will probably be tried together after the Sacramento races, over a mile and a half, and the better of the pair will go for the Chicago Derby.

Dave Gideon has declared French Park out of the Volunteer Handicap, and says he can win it with Sam Wood. The colt must have improved wonderfully since last season.

There are over sixty head of horses quartered at the Santa Rosa track, and more are coming every day. Santa Rosa will have more than her usual quota of trotters this season.

The Fresno people are bound not to be outdone in racing matters. They have announced a $2,000 purse for 2:20 trotters, which will take place at the fall meeting.

Mr. James Guest's three-year-old, Heron, was badly injured in a railroad accident a few days ago. The colt was valued at $20,000. He is now valueless for racing purposes.

Thomas Francis Meagher cannot understand why it is that he did not back the Brooklyn handicap winner, the name being enough to cause an exile of Erin to put money on him.

The large drawing of Al Farrow, made by Mr. Boyd, and from which the exceedingly good picture on our first page is taken, now hangs in the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN'S picture gallery.

The judges would not let Guido start in the two-year-old race at Sacramento, probably acting under the idea that the sale of the colt to Cy Mulkhy by Tupper, was not a genuine affair.

J. B. Haggin has returned from Europe and has been watching the flyers at Gravesend. There is no truth in the rumor that all of his horses have been sick, only one, Yum Yum being under the weather.

Every darkey on the track had money on Tuesday after Louis P. won. Albert seemed to own a controlling interest in the track for a while, and it was quite refreshing to see him ask the boys to smile with White Wings.

All touts at Louisville agree in saying that Notidle is by far and away the raciest looking mare on the track. Robin Hood has made a few friends, but as the entire string has been off, they have not been seen at their best.

It is now arranged that Albert Cooper will go to Chicago and specially prepare Sorrento for the American Derby. D. H. McCarty, who is now in the East, has arranged to have Hamilton, the colored jockey, ride the sorrel colt in that race.

Kenilworth has arrived safe and sound at Buenos Ayres.
Kenilworth died on the journey to South America.
You pay your money and take your choice. Every paper that reaches this office has either the first or second paragraph.

One of the San Francisco papers had an account of the Brooklyn Handicap as being run at Ivy City. Another tells how Exile sold 15 to 1 in the Mutual pools. Some of the reports say that Lakeland's horse won by six lengths, while others say a short length was all that seperated the first and second.

Dennison's sister to Blue Bonnet is now the Sacramento pet. She worked a half last Tuesday in :50¼, but those Sacramento horses all seem to be able to work faster than they can when in a race. G. W., for instance, never once had a chance in the race on Tuesday, yet he could work as well as anything on the track.

The day after Spokane won his first race against Proctor Knott I was at the Arcade taking a look round when John Mackey drove up and promptly called out to know whether that Mortimer mare had been bred to Tyrant. Being answered in the negative, he at once gave orders to breed her to Hyder Ali.

Frank Baldwin, of Fresno, will start East in a few days to get entries for the $20,000 running race. I wonder if he can get Mr. Lakeland to enter Exile? The horse is at present under promise to Mr. Haggin, and it may just be possible that arrangements can be made to have him make his last appearance at Fresno.

The truth about Spokane is that he was sired on the farm of Gen. Rowett at Carlinville, Ill., in 1885. Mr. Armstrong owned his brother, Gray Clouds, and when Gen. Rowett's stock was sold in 1885 Armstrong purchased the mare Interpose in foal to Hyder Ali. He took the mare to his Montana ranch, where Spokane was foaled in 1889.

The races announced for yesterday and to-day at Napa have been declared off on account of the rain. The purses have been re-opened, and fresh entries can be made. The advertisement appears in another column, and will repay perusal. The dates now set for the races are June 7th and 8th.

Mr. S. N. Stranbe, of Fresno, has been in San Francisco several days this week attending the sales. He reports that he has had to refuse eighty mares this year for his stallions, and already there are many breeders booking their mares for next season. Mr. Stranbe has advertised his horses extensively, and has reaped a just reward.

"It is no longer a problem who can win the Derby. Spokane of course. If asked what State he hails from, our sole reply shall be, he's a lively steed of the western breed, with muscles strong and free. Verily Montana has a right to "rejoice and be exceedingly glad." This is clipped from the Montana Farming and Stock Journal.

Last Tuesday Mr. Garrity bought the well known stallion Valensin, at the combination sale, with the understanding that a well endorsed note should be taken if he made any purchases. When it became necessary to put up the note, the endorser was not at hand, so after waiting two days, the sale was declared off. The stallion will be sent to the stable of James Dustin at Oakland, where he will be prepared for the fall campaign.

The famous thoroughbred brood mare Nevada is dead, the effects of dropping a foal to George Kinney. She was twenty years old, was a daughter of Lexington, her dam being Lightstone, a daughter of Glencoe, and her grandam was the famous brood mare Levity. The most famous of Nevada's colts were Luke Blackburn and Joe Blackburn, sons of Bonnie Scotland; Greenland by Glengarry; Ecuador by Enquirer, and Bradford by Glengarry or Bramble.

W. A. Wilson, of Abdallah Park, Cynthiana, Ky., has sold to A. S. Ashbrook, same place, his bay yearling filly Moonstone by Sultan, 2:24; dam Montana Maid by Geo. Wilkes; second dam Annie Wa (dam of Tempest 2:30¼), by Almont 33; third dam Ellen by Ericsson 130. This filly is a full sister to Ottoman, Mr. Wilson's fine two-year-old stallion, that he refused $7,500 for as a yearling. She is entered in several stakes. Price paid $2,500 cash.

Kelley offered to match Flood Tide same weight and distance, for a thousand a side, against Louis P. after the race on Tuesday, and finally offered $1,500 to a $1,000, but Cooper's head was level, and he declined all offers, saying he had had to get up early to get a little stuff, and he meant keeping it. How early was it when Louis P. turned out in the morning? The boys say hardly light enough to see his white stockings.

Notwithstanding all the nice reports that have been received from the south, about how nicely the horses have wintered, now that they are mostly back, sad complaints are heard from the owners, about the poor condition of the horses. Captain S. S. Brown, of Pittsburg, who had his stable all winter at Mobile, vows and declares he will not take another horse south. There is only one place to winter them, and that is in California, gentleman, bring out your stock this fall and see how they will improve.

The sale of the Palo Alto stock in New York last week, has called out much comment about the prices obtained, and while there are some who think the prices very low, there are others who fancy the stock brought good prices. The Electioneer colts brought an average of $1,535; Woolsey, $1,100; Piedmont, $974; Electricity, $901; Fallis, $825; Whips, $700; Alban, $640; General Benton, $633; Ansel, $610; Nephew, $610; Clay, $578; while Mr. Frank M. Burke's stallion Eros, led the entire lot, his get selling for an average of $2,200.

Scott Quintin will leave Trenton, N. J., June 1st with his string of trotters for Montana. He has the following, which he will take to the Bitter Root Ranch: Favonia, 2:15, b m by Wedgewood, dam Fadette by Alexander's Abdallah. Sudie D., 2:35¾, by Sherman's Hambletonian, dam Fanny Clay by American Clay. Piesto, 2:41¾, b c by Gen. Washington, dam Gilda by Jay Gould. Mascot, b c by Stamboul, dam Minnehaha by Steven's Bald Chief. Prodigal, b c by Pancoast, dam Beatrice by Cuyler. St. Patrick, 2:24¼, b g by Volunteer, dam Young Selene by Guy Miller.

Sporting Times: Don't be in too much of a hurry to get down a bet on Terra Cotta for the Suburban. The bookies make him a favorite themselves, but would not have you believe that the weight of Hankin's money placed him in that position. Don't you believe it, dear boy. Not a cent of stable money has gone on the chestnut for that event. It is not certain that he will start. Every horse in Hankin's stable, but Terra Cotta, has been under the weather for some time, and the latest rumor would lead one to imagine that he is not near so good as the bookies and their newspaper "cappers" would have us believe.

A correspondent writes: Spokane pulled up more distressed than Procter Knott, but both were very tired. During the race Sam Bryant was standing on the track under the judges' stand. When the numbers went up he walked to where his horse was, in a mute and dazed sort of way, as though he could not understand it. Mr. Armstrong took his success in a very quiet manner, and simply said he knew he had a great horse, and now the public know it. Spokane was trained by John Rodegap, late with Ed Corrigan. He is by Hyder Ali, out of Interpose. The sires of both were imported, Hyder Ali being by Leamington, out of Lady Duke, by Lexington. Interpose is by the horse imported by Mr. Withers called Intruder, out of Lilac, by Lightning, Intruder being by Crater, out of Lady Bountiful, by Ratailan. Spokane is in the Clark stables here, but has no engagements at Latonia or St. Louis. He is in the American Derby and Sheridan Stakes at Washington Park, Chicago, and none in the East excepting the Beckenridge and Dixie Stakes at Baltimore.

John Mackay will take one hundred thoroughbred yearlings and two carloads of trotters when he starts East early next spring (eight cars in all). He is at present the recipient of numerous congratulations for his judgment in purchasing Hyder Ali, who has now in Spokane, proved that he can get a racehorse. Every one ran the horse down when he was purchased for the Rancho Del Paso, but now they all unite in praising him. This ought to have a tendency to improve the sale of his yearlings.

The Mt. Shasta agricultural society met on Saturday of last week, says the Jackville Times. James Vance was elected president for the current year; Clarance S. Smith secretary; Maurice Renner treasurer. It was decided to hold a fair in Yreka on October 2d, and to last four days. S. D. Prather, L. Swan and W. S. Stone were appointed to prepare a speed programme. A contract has been entered into with G. W. Cooper to build a residence and barn at the racetrack at a cost of seventeen hundred dollars. It is proposed to build new stables and make other improvements at a future date, and to so improve the course and grounds as to make them A No. 1. There are several fine horses in training at the track now and more expected to be there soon.

New York Sportsman: Some people are inclined to grow a little facetious over Al Farrow's time for a mile at San Jose. Devious bits of airy persiflage anent kitchen clocks as "fly-backs," and yard-sticks as units of measurement scintillate in the columns of various exchanges. The laughers find reason for their mirth in the fact that Geraldine finished at Farrow's neck in the race in question. They should not build too much on this. Geraldine may be able to show quite a mile in "the glorious climate of California." The damp air of our season effected her very seriously last summer, and yet she showed in private the best half-mile run over the Mommouth Park track last year.

There is one funny effect in the high license law in Philadelphia; the horses are suffering for drink. There have been no less than 418 horse troughs which formerly stood full of water in front of saloons so that the horse could drink there while his master went inside and did the same, removed, because the keepers of the houses were refused, or themselves refused license under the new law. The police director says this "causes suffering to horses, which could and should be remedied by the location of water troughs either by the city or by the socities organized for the public fountains, or for the protection of animals."

Last week I mentioned that Mr. Nevins of Farmington wanted to match his Stamboul filly, but the following from the Horseman shows that he has withdrawn his offer.

David Nevins, of Boston, offers to match his two-year-old filly Mary Stamboul, by Stamboul, against any filly of the same age in the world, by any other sire, for $5,000 aside. He proposes a three in five race in harness, the race to take place three years hence on one of the Boston tracks. He will also match a yearling against any other of the same age, under the same conditions, the race to take place at the same time as the first race. After the above was in type, and as soon as the foregoing proposition met the eye of H. S. Henry, proprietor of Penn Valley Stud Farm, Morrisville, Pa., he immediately forwarded his acceptance of both propositions to the Philadelpbia paper which published the challenge. The suddenness with which the Pennsylvanian responded to the call of the gentleman at "The Hub" seems to have nearly taken his breath away, and caused a faintness, as is evidenced by the following telegram sent by Mr. Nevins: "Please announce withdrawal of offer. Fillies have returned sick from exhibition held in Boston."

In 1827, the earliest year for which Ruff's Guide provides the figures, 1,166 horses ran in England, and of this number only 12 per cent. (142) were two-year-olds, and no less than 39 per cent. (453) were five years old or more. As a horse may be considered at his best for racing at four years old, these figures show a good and healthy arrangement of a horse's career. The change brought about by 1888 is truly astonishing. In that year two-year-olds were 45 per cent. of the whole (962 out of 2,147) and five-year-olds and upwards were only 15 per cent (231 out of 2,147). Now just look carefully into the meaning of these figures in the following way: In 1887, 913 two-year-olds ran. What became of them? They would be three years old in 1888; but in 1888 only 580 three-olds ran, and 60 of these had never run at all in 1887; from which it is to be deducted that of the 913 two-year-olds in 1887, 393 never ran again. In other words, 43 per cent. of the horses taking part in two-year-old races were rendered useless, and there and then finished their careers At four years old another 30 per cent. disappear, and barely one-quarter of them remain at five years old to take part chiefly in steeplechase or hurdle races.

Broadchurch, writing after the Two Thousand, says: Semi-occasionally a horse is restrained to let a stable companion win, but in the Two Thousand it was a case of violent pulling, semi-strangulation from beginning to end, with the jockey fagged out and exhausted from his task. Ordinarily the best horse is supposed to be ridden to win, but in this case he was ridden to lose, and the feat was such a difficult and remarkable one that it gives the Futurity winner greater prestige than if he had won by a dozen lengths. With all that, the exhibition was a parody on legitimate racing, albeit it is countenanced and encouraged by turf laws and usages. But people go to see races from "eend to eend," and when they are run otherwise, although technically proper and allowable, it still smacks of a burlesque, or worse, on straightforward sport. It certainly was not a pleasant exhibition for the hundreds who backed Knott to see him pulled and half strangled before their eyes.

But leaving the equities of the case aside, the race was of such a kind as one would hardly see twice in a lifetime. And yet it is a bit difficult to guage what Knott could actually have done had he been allowed to go on about his business, with reference to lowering the record. The prevailing opinion here is that he could have beaten anything and everything in the race by fully one hundred yards, and numbers are free to say that he could have lowered the mile and quarter record, if not covered the distance in 2:06. I saw his sire, Luke Blackburn, win the Stallion stakes at Louisville when he ran away from his company, and I have seen other wonderful feats by other wonderful animals, but I doubt if I ever saw the equal of Proctor Knott as he appeared in the Two Thousand. Can he go a distance? Well, he was pulled to a standstill in a mile and a quarter, and it did look as if he could have gone a mile and a half, yes, two miles at a pretty fast clip. But the practical test is the things, and the first Derby he tackles will afford the opportunity. My opinion is he can show his heels to every three-year-old in America over the Derby course.

THE GUN.

Tucker, McMurchy, Et Al.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—He has been here and gone. We mean he of Parker Gun fame, the jolly and wholesouled sportsman, Mr. S. A. Tucker, whose friends here are legion, and many new ones has he added on his late trip.

Mr. Harvey McMurchy is now with us in the interests of the Smith gun, and the boys hope to have him out to exhibit his skill at the traps. McDuff is well known from the Atlantic to the Pacific as one of the best shots in the country, being an exceedingly popular sportsman, whom success never spoils. We wish him luck wherever he goes.

Mr. Dick Swiveller, the well known sportsman and writer, is also in town in the interests of the Baker gun. Mr. Colby is a thorough sportsman, and many are his friends.

Three better men for the positions it would be impossible to find, and the respective manufacturers are exceedingly well represented. J. C. NATTRASS.

Blue Rock Club.

The Blue Rock Club has completed arrangements under which it will hereafter shoot at the grounds of the Lincoln Gun Club at Alameda Point. The place is easily reached via the South Pacific Coast Narrow Gauge Railway, and is well arranged for artificial target shooting.

Last Saturday's match of the Blue Rock Club was what is styled a "walking mateh," the shooter starting from a point about twenty-five yards from the center trap and walking toward the traps, being compelled to shoot whenever the trapper pulls a target. The scheme was productive of much fun, and the shooting was very good, considering the conditions that at the doubles being remarkably fine. Mr. F. B. Norton leading with 18 breaks, Major Kellogg being second with 17, and Doctor Knowles third with 16.

Slaughter of Fish and Game.

Despite the laws in force relating to all game, and establishing open and close seasons, the infraction of these laws is frequent, and in some instances appears the spirit of manifest, purposeful and wicked defiance. Such, for instance, is the use of giant powder or other explosives. This is wanton and devilish murder of fish. It deserves the imposition of severe penalty, to the extent of the law. In similar category should be included the classes of offenders who take and kill fish apparently for the mere gratification of doing so, to boast their piscatorial prowess after the manner of the savage who exhibits his trophy of scalps and shrieks the details of the massacre. The only delinquents to be let off with reprimand or light penalty are those who transgress from actual and pardonable ignorance of the law, or who are impelled by hunger, or who take from the superabundance of the streams.

Fish are not fit or wholesome food in the close season. The law is wisely framed, not only for the protection and preservation of the fish, but in the interest of the people, many of whom are not aware of the effect of fish food in improper condition upon the system—sometimes to the extent of poisoning, This detrimental quality is more apparent in the finer species of shell fish, as in oysters, and the hapless sufferer from the surfeit of crabs and lobsters not in season needs neither the authority of books nor the advice of physicians to cause restraint from repetition of the torturing indulgence. The more choice the species the more acute and dangerous the consequences. In intestinal arrangement and digestive processes the dog nearer approximates man than any of the brute animal creation. And the greedy dog which devours suckers and equally common fish with only temporary derangement, dies from the feast of salmon. Mankind can draw their own inferences, and form their own conclusions. The evil of transgression carries its own penalty so far as concerns the individual, but there remains the more important matter to the community—the effect upon the supply of food fish in the open season through years to come.

The destruction of fish by explosives is of kind with the wanton destruction of noble forests by the criminally reckless campers who start a fire "just for fun" and give neither thought nor care to the incalculable consequences of their devilish freak, sometimes involving life in addition to the lamentable waste of valuable property, homes and farmes. The plea of ignorance of the law against such acts is no more worthy of consideration than would be the excuse of an offender of ignorance that powder will kill or fire burn. Cunning palliators have gone to the extremity of inventing the plea that inasmuch as Cain had never witnessed death he was ignorant of the effect of the murderous blow which killed Abel. The same quality of sophistry is interposed to screen from just penalty the reckless slaughterer of fish and other game, the wanton incendiary of the forest. The brand of the courts, ordered by the law, is the efficacious remedy and corrective example.

One of the State Fish Commissioners has expressed his belief that saw dust in the streams is the prime cause of impoverishment and abandonment of fish in California waters. It remained for a former representative of one of the mountain mining and milling counties to protest in the Legislature that, in his district the trout actually fattened and acquired better flavor from the saw dust upon which they fed; that from further up the river epicurean anglers came to take these saw dust trout, preferring them to the speckled, glistening, gold and silver hued beauties which feed upon their natural food. From his extraordinary argument he omitted mention of the peculiar kind of saw dust used for bait. To his copyists might be committed the defense of the fish slaughterers who use explosives in their deadly diabolical "sport."

Against all manner of food fish destruction in sheer wantonness the law ought to be rigidly enforced, and if the law as it stands is inadequate, new and thorough laws ought to be adopted. Every community and every inhabitant of the State is in greater or less degree interested, to urge and require this. Particularly are the residents of counties and districts noted for streams in which the choice species of the dainty finny tribe abound much concerned in the matter. Besides the valuable trade in game fish for the ready market, the delight of the genuine angler in the contemplative and exciting sport, and the gratification of the epicurean hosts, the gladness and profit of country landscapes, the celebrity which accrues to the favored town or rural resorts, and the aggregate of money it brings to these communities every season, there comes the pride and value of the broadcast advertising that is the certain consequence. From the cities rush the hundreds of enthusiasts in the sport, not mindful of their coin, to lavish it in these seasons of hilarious recreation in the finny hunt; the ardent and experienced angler, with outfit prized as the soldier prizes his accoutrements, selects his locality with deliberation, with complete method pursues the wary game, and in it is absorbed to the exclusion of all thought or care of time and money. The trout stream is his Mecca of annual pilgrimage, the woods his Kaba, and the choicest of these blest habitats are to him as the Mohammedan's dream of houris.

King James I, of England, was wise and appreciative in his estimation of the devout Puritans of primitive New England. "They ask the grant," quoth he, "to praise God and catch fish. Fore, God, it is an honest trade—the apostles own calling. The country shall be theirs, as it is mine to bestow." California is greatly favored in her abundance and species of fish. Salmon, trout, pike, pompano, cod, and other choice varieties inhabit her bays, her rivers and lakes, her mountain streams. Their affluence of food fish should be guarded by the State to the conservation and wholesome enjoyment of her people, with wise provision that this plenty shall increase and further multiply. The law should be enforced against the wanton and wicked extinction of game of every kind, against the miscreants who kill by the savagery of explosives, against the reckless who slaughter and waste without want or reason, against the Chinese who dredge the harbors and the coast line and take by millions the tiny dwellers which are as so many food fish and shipped to their own swarming land. As Shylock saith, "there be land rats and water rats, water thieves and land thieves. I mean pirates," and of these are the robbers and slaughterers of game, of fish, flesh and fowl in California. The penalty should also be theirs.

We commend the article entitled "Slaughter of Fish and Game" to the thoughtful reading of all who are in anywise interested in field sports. It comes from an old resident of California, a sportsman of the old-time courtly school, an observer of scientific exactness and a writer of the rarest clearness and force. What he says is always worth listening to, and should exert a widespread influence.

"Jay See En" Goes Shooting.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—The engineer having suggested a trip to the flats where duck, geese, brant and snipe are reported plentiful, we find ourselves there early one morn, accompanied by Roy, Fanny, Mamie and Judy, the three last Irish and the first an English setter, all good ones to find quail, chicken or snipe, and all but Fanny good on duck, she not being a retriever.

The tide being still rather high, flats are partly submerged yet, and being full of sloughs we need to be very careful in picking our way, being yet quite dark, it is only by close watching and feeling for footing that we escape an early morning bath.

Just as the darkness begins to light up to the East, we hear a whistle over head and for a second becoming more intent on piercing the gloom above in search of the widgeons hastily winging their way through the foggy morning air, when about to raise my gun, forgetting my footing, there is a sudden and violent splash, a smothered and half-winded "wow," and I disappear from the idle gaze of the engineer, sinking to my arm pits in the cold and brimy drink, the breath being entirely driven out of my body. In going down my gun happened to be hastily brought to a trail and muzzle resting on terra firma in front of me and butt behind, forming a sort of bridge, which soon helped me out again to mother earth, or else I might have been traveling toward China yet, I am out again before the engineer can spring to my assistance.

My wet and draggled appearance is entirely too much for his mirth; log and loud were the yells he gave, as he sat on a fallen log, holding his sides, and for a few moments a severe spasm seemed to threaten his life.

At that moment, strange as it may seem, I didn't feel a bit like laughing. The wet salt water causing chill after chill to chase one another up and down my back, till the natural warmth of my body began to warm up the unwelcome element.

A fresh outbreak from the engineer is precipated by my standing on my head, legs stuck up in the air, feet resting against the log, the splashing of the liberated water is heard flowing down onto the ground from out of my wading boots. When I threaten to pour a bootful of the blame stuff down the engineer's throat does he subside, and after things get somewhat warmer in my vicinity I even relax my features into a grin myself, which my companion afterwards described as simply diabolical, and pulling ourselves together we make a fresh break for our blind, accompanied by the swish, swash of the element on the wrong side of my rubbers, being churned into froth at every step.

Reaching blind and seating ourselves upon the soft side of fallen tree, we await the flight of duck which now can be seen in the distance.

The dogs waited expectantly at our feet for the fun which they know will soon begin, our callers ever and anon sending five kah, kah, kah's out on the heavy morning air. A small band of pilgrim widgeon are soon observed winging their way towards us; as soon as directly over us, two guns are seen to emerge above the growth of rushes, and four flames of fire belch forth as many loads of No. 6 shot. Three widgeon's feathers fly and come circling down, soon followed by another, which winged tries to hide itself among the rushes and water, but at a word to the dogs, the victims are soon lying at the bottom of our coat-pockets.

Now a long shot is offered at some mallards which, though suspicious, with heads stretched out and senses alert, hope to escape danger by the swiftness of their gait. But, no! one of them is wanted, and stays behind to join his cousins in our capacious pockets, still leaving room for more.

Some swift winged teal now appear in sight, fly near, but scared go back. Turning, they now pass overhead, and in answer to our four barrels, only one escapes to carry the tale of woe to his chums in the slough. A slight lull in hostilities now occuring, we each discover the other with a huge sandwich in his fist, our jaws working vigorously, reminding one of some of the distant sawmills at work already in the distance. The dogs, too, come in for their share. The engineer's dog always feeds when his owner feeds.

Some widgeon passing within shot are thus addressed by the engineer, while we still continue to masticate our unusually tasty sandwiches, who, when I tell you, is none other than Silalicum, the veteran of flood and field, mountain and moor, you maybe will doubt if such rhyme ever issued from his poetical brain. He himself will doubtless repudiate the lines, but nevertheless if not the words, they express the meaning of his address:

Move on, my dears, you're safe from harm;
From us, our guns or dogs.
Our grub is sweet and toothsome, too;
We need you not, we'll soon find more
Fatter and larger birds than thee;
So tarry not, else we change our mind.
Wing on your merry, whistling way,
Some other sportsman's heart to cheer
Who has not found his grub so sweet.

Having finished our repast and brushed the fragments from our broad and massive bosoms, the engineer adds by way of encouragement to the many wildfowl passing about:

Come on, Mac Duff, we're ready now,
You'll find your welcome loud.
We've broke our fast, our mouths are wiped,
Our guns are shotted with No. 8;
Nor will ye pass as your brethren did:
We intend to wipe our comrade's eye.

As if in answer to his soliloquy, five lordly canvas-backs come our way, but three of their number are called down from the clouds, and prettily retrieved by the dogs.

A stray brant also taking an early jaunt, is suddenly struck by some number 4s propelled by 5 drams of Quick Shot from the engineer's closely choked Parker, comes ricocheting to the mud and water beneath, and is soon gathered to his fathers, where the spring shooter ceases from troubling, and the pot hunter is unknown.

The fun now waxes warm, widgeon teal, butter balls, a few mallards, an occasional brant and goose, till we have got all we want for our own and neighbors' use.

And lighting my pipe much to the engineer's disgust, who does the weed despise, we meander forth into the boggy, slippery flats, in search of some snipe, whose scalp, scalp, has more than once challenged our attention.

Ordering the dogs on, Fanny and Nannie with their fast and speedy pace, with Judy and Roy older, and having more experience cutting across lots, direct to game in most instances, they make a pretty sight, first Fan then Nannie may be Roy or Judy have their turn at finding, pointing and backing, nor does it take any longer to get a good bag of the zizgagging, scaiping birds, which very seldom get away from the crack of gun, and if dropped, never escape the search of one or more of our four footed, keen nosed friends.

Homeward again we went our way,
Across bay and slough, nor mind the wet,
For our rubber boots are now dry and warm;
Looking back, with pleasure at the past
Which has gone, never to return again,
We think of tramps both hard and long,
In field or by stream, with our dogs and gun
Of beauties brown, which have tumbled down
To the crack of our choke bored gun;
Splendid work of dogs well trained,
With their range so swift, and nose so sure
Tip Top style, and retrieving fine
Make our pulses to beat.

Or maybe 'tis of an evening's sport.
With dog and gun in some good blind
Ducks flying fast, and tumbling down
With here and there a goose; we think
And pondering o'er such scenes now past,
Our hearts do beat with plea ure and joy;
Nor do we forget returning home,
With well filled bag and healthy glow,
On cheek and appetites within
The welcome there, the loving face
And shining eyes of loved ones dear,
The well cooked meal which cheers
And fills the inner man,
As never before was he filled.

Perhaps it is of forest wild,
Trees mammoth small and dead;
Of brake and undergrowth
His trusty rifle in his grasp,
Watching for deer the cover to break;
With rush and crash, and head erect,
Of the sight along the shining tube,
The crack and jump of buck
Or doe, as it comes stumbling down,
With broken neck or pierced heart;
Never more that proud head to rear aloft
He dreams, and dreaming longs for more,
Such visions and scenes of pleasure sweet.

Again it is of plains so wide
Devoid of tree, or house or man
Himself and faithful comrade prove
Unto the earth as with stealthy crawls
They reach a knoll which on the other side
Contains some antelope so shy
Climbing slowly to the top
And peering o'er, there stands our game
With head erect all ready to decamp
Our sight we take and trigger pull
And may be fire again to make sure
What sight is there so entrancing quite
I'd like to know, no doubt would you

SEATTLE, May 6, 1889. JAY SEE EN.

A Change of Name.

Mr. F. E. Pond's delightful publication, "Wildwood's Magazine," issued from Chicago, has been changed in title, now being called "Recreation." The magazine, now entering upon its second year of exuberant, breezy, balsamic, sportsmanly life, has not been changed in character, but has been strengthened, editorially, by the addition of Mr. Charles Hallock to the staff. Mr. Hallock will have head-quarters in Washington, D. C. Of the scope of the publication, Editor Pond says:

"A magazine professedly devoted to the higher literature of manly sport, must be fed and thrive in the open air, and it must be imbued with the spirit of al fresco life. But it must also draw some proportion of pabulum and inspiration from the alcoves of intellectual philosophy and applied science. It should have a semi-scientific cast of feature, and its aim should be to embody the thoughtful observations of intelligent sportsmen and collectors who are able to discover, in the course of their outings and field days, something more valuable and instructive than mere incidents of hunting and fishing, and have the genius to impart it to others in an entertaining manner. It is not all of fishing to fish, nor all of hunting to hunt. The robust and athletic reading public is becoming cloyed with mere sketches of vacation incidents and the vicissitudes of the back woods camp; of simple photographs of attractive localities and thin superficial enumeration. These old 'chestnuts' are becoming mouldy, and even new devices and new pastimes are not always worth the mention. Not that the limit of ingenuity in diversion has been reached, but in this growing intellectual age men require something more than mere perfunctory amusement. Toys may do for children, but men would know the philosophy of sport. We wish to study the outcome of what we have accomplished during the past two decades toward creating a healthy interest in out-door sports, and we would begin to inquire for what economic purpose (cui bono) the biceps has been developed and the bloom of the rose implanted on the healthy cheek of woman."

I, th' Gun, and th' Irish Setter.

We together, over the hill;
I, th' gun, and th' Irish setter.
Cross'd the cornfield, jumped the rill;
I, th' gun, and the Irish sett r.
When to myself, how the quail will suffer,
No. 9 shot, and a 10-guage gun;
Four dram o' powder double wadded,
Carry that shot like, well, like fun.

Hear them call, in the buckwheat sag;
I, th' gun, and th' Irish setter.
Certain are we of a bumper bag;
I, th' gun, and the Irish setter.
Broke for the bush on the side hill yonder;
Hie on Prince, hunt 'em out, good boy!
Steady, now, steady, missed it by thunder!
Wide of the mark, to my great annoy

Promised a brace to neighbor Brown;
I, th' gun, and th' Irish setter.
There goes another. Down! Prince, down!
I, th' gun, and th' Irish setter
Can eat a dozen, at leas', at home:
A brace to Jennie, and Fred, and Em—
And that's a total of only twenty;
I'm certain sure of getting them.

Jumped a covey under the hedge;
I, th' gun, and th' Irish setter.
Lit in the brush on top of the ledge;
I, th' gun, and th' Irish setter.
Double birds, and I missed them easy.
I getting doubtful. Dog looks sad.
Hie on again, Prince! Better luck coming—
What! still another! Dog looks mad.

So it goes, and the day is done,
I, the gun, and the Irish setter
Over the hill return alone,
I, th' gun and th' Irish setter.
Quail on the hill, and quail in the valley,
Quail in the bag, well, no, er, no.
That is, you see, it was just this way, sir,
Or, rather, that is, er-r-well, you know.

Hints on Bullet Making.

I wonder if you have ever thought to inquire into the component parts of what is sold under the heading of pig-lead, and if you have ever attempted to make bullets of it. Before you do, have a care and see what it is made of, says J. P. B., in Shooting and Fishing. A friend of mine, an expert bullet maker, tells me that half of the so-called pure lead for sale in the hardware stores contains more or less zinc. The lead-sheeting which is found between the tea and the side of a tea-chest will be found to be excellent for the manufacture of rifle bullets. I do not know why it should be especially good, whether the process of rolling the lead into such thin sheets has any effect upon the density of the lead, but I have always found that this tea-chest lead, when melted in a pot and the refuse or dross thrown out, makes a more dense or solid looking bullet than any of the ordinary pig or bar lead found in the stores, and from which the majority of home-made bullets are made.

Except for localities where ammunition is very difficult to obtain, I do not think that with the standard rifles it pays (for hunting especially) to make your own bullets. The cartridges made by, or recommended by manufacturers of the standard rifles will be found to do much better shooting than the majority of "home mades." And even if a man (through motives or notions) of economy, desires to load his own cartridges, if his rifle is a standard arm, I should strongly advise him to buy the ready-swaged bullets from the factory. A few hundred of these do not cost much, and for use in big bores at least (I mean .40–45 or .50 calibres) if taken to the woods, will spare a man endless trouble.

Bullet making is slow, tedious and very warm work, and generally it is not really worth the trouble, especially to the man who wishes to get the very best results, which can only be got by the most perfect of bullets, and the factory made bullet is near enough to perfection to suit most people. Some gunmakers who load cartridges are very particular. Measuring the powder is not good enough for them. So extremely accurate are they that each charge is weighed out in a set of scales which detects the very slightest fraction of a grain too much or little.

That Seattle correspondent "Jay See En" is fairly exuberant this week, and one cannot but enter into the rollicking spirit in which he describes the pleasure had with famous "Silalicum." But his poesy—what of that? The poem is not a gasteropod, nor is it either a biped or a quadruped. A permanent reward hangs in this office, to be given to the sportsman who will scan that verse at sight. But it's good.

Mr. E. T. Allen, of 416 Market Street, San Francisco, advertises this week that he keeps the best assortment of guns, fishing tackle and sportsmen's goods on the Pacific Coast. Mr. Allen's name has long been synonymous with courtesy and fair dealing among all who knew him, and we are pleased to learn that his energy and alertness are causing his trade to extend widely and in most desirable connections.

Messrs. Clabrough, Golcher & Co., 630—932 Montgomery street, San Francisco, appear in the advertising columns with an announcement that is of particular interest when read in connection with the bench show to be given next week at Mechanics' Pavilion. The firm is always fully abreast of the times on all lines falling within the province of the sporting goods trade, and on some lines makes it a point to be ahead of all competitors here or elsewhere. Just now we are informed, the Golcher store is full to overflowing with Glover's Dog Remedies, the finest pug harnesses, leading straps, kennel chains, collars, whips, blankets, cleaning brushes and polishing leathers, muzzles, and everything else requisite to the toilet of the most fashionable dog. The kennel chains offered, are of the pattern adopted by the Pacific Kennel Club, the Westminster Kennel Club, the English Kennel Club and other leading doggy organizations.

Mr. Robert Liddle sends us word that the firm of Liddle & Kaeding, for twenty five years a landmark in the gun trade of the Pacific Coast, has dissolved. Uncle Robert continunes the business under the style, R. Liddle & Co., which was the firm's name thirty five years ago. The retiring partner, Mr. C. V. B. Kaeding, is not at all well, and is taking rest which he has denied himself for many years. Mr. Liddle has been popular among sportsmen, and will retain his place in their respect. He will keep full lines of staples in the gun trade, and as new goods come out from time to time they will be displayed on the well known counters at 538 Washington street, City.

A curious but wise ordinance has recently been passed to print by the commisioners of the town of Calcutta, Bengal, forbidding the bringing within corporate limits any game bird or animal during the close seasons. The ordinance might well be copied by the Board of Supervisors of the large cities, and if enforced would practically solve the question of protection for game and fish. The Calcutta laws reads:

The "breeding season" for the purpose of these rules shall extend from the 1st May to the 30th September.

Whoever during the breeding season brings into the town of Calcutta any wild bird, deer, or hare recently killed or taken, shall be liable to fine not exceeding Rs. 5 for each bird or animal.

Whoever during the breeding season imports into the town the plumage of any kind of wild bird recently killed or taken, or the fur or skin of any hare or deer recently killed or taken, shall be liable to a fine not exceeding Rs. 5 for each bird or animal.

In the case of a second conviction, the fine may extend to Rs. 10 each bird or animal.

THE KENNEL.

Dog owners are requested to send for publication the earliest possible notices of whelps, sales, names claimed, presentations and deaths in their kennels, in all instances writing plainly names of sire and dam and of grandparents, colors, dates and breed.

Sales.

Mr. John B. Martin, San Francisco, Cal., has sold Dashred Irish setter dog pup by Mike T., out of Lady Elcho T., to Mr. A. B. Truman, San Francisco, Cal.

Whelps.

California Kennel's Llewellin setter bitch Janet (Count Noble—Dashing Novice), whelped May 7, 1889, seven, five dogs, to owners, Loadstone (Gladstone—Flounce.)

Llewellin setter bitch Enid (Gleam—Doe), whelped May 8, 1889, seven, four dogs, to owners, Loadstone.

H. T. Payne's (Los Angeles, Cal.,) English setter Los Angeles (Grouse II—Princess Claude), whelped May 12th, seven (five dogs), white, and white and black, by his Jolly Planter (Plantagenet—Countess Flirt).

Visits.

California Kennel's Llewellin setter bitch Miss Druid (Druid—May B.), to owners Harold (Gath—Gem), May 7, 1889.

A Correction.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—I wish to make a correction in regard to the whelping of my cocker Spaniel bitch Vic. Mr. Cohoon, of Franklin, N Y., writes me he made a mistake in the date, and gave me November instead of December 27th, 1887. Mr. McKoon is interested, as he has a litter brother to my Vic, which he raised for a stud dog and called Black Bob. A. C. DAVENPORT.

Stockton, May 13th, 1889.

Pacific Kennel Club.

The Executive Committee of the club has been meeting every evening of the week, to make sure that no detail of the show has been overlooked. The Managing Committee for Wednesday will be Messrs. William Schreiber, Clarence A. Haight and H. H. Briggs. The committee has requested Mr. H. R. Brown to act as steward for the first day and he has consented. Judging will begin on Wednesday at 9 o'clock, and it is important that all owners should be present at that time, to handle their dogs when called into the ring. A rule of the club is that no dog will be admitted unless supplied with suitable collar and chain. The meaning of the rule is that owners of dogs sent with flimsy collars or chains that are manifestly not strong enough to insure the retention of the animals will be compelled to purchase proper chains and collars before their entries are accepted. One of the greatest nuisance of a dog show has been found to be the breaking loose of dogs at night, especially the larger dogs. Especially ordered kennel chains, with three swivels, and of ample strength will beat hand near the entrance door of the Pavilion, together with an assortment of collars.

Mr. McKoon Replies to Dr. Davenport.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—I notice in April 27th issue of your admirable journal that Dr. Davenport replies to my letter in April 20th issue, and I will in this try and set him all straight upon those pedigrees as far as is in my power.

At first, however, I would call your attention to a few typographical errors which crept in my letter of April 20th. In fourth line from top, instead of "Franklin, N. R., it should read Franklin, N. Y., and in the tenth line the name "Nellie" should be Nellie C., and in same line the word "on" should read due, and in the twelfth line the name "Kate" should be Kute. With attention called to these unavoidable errors, the reader will be less liable to go astray.

I am very certain that Dr. Davenport showed an uncomplimentary spirit, and did wrong, to say the least, in exhibiting the spirit manifested in his reply to me, also in accusing me of being jealous, while I was working for his best interest in trying to get his pedigrees in correct form, for were they permitted to remain as published, they would have been very difficult to have rectified in years to come when a flaw appeared in them, and would have worked injury to all future records, breeders and owners as well. I have now further proof before me that I am correct in the matter by a letter just received from the proprietor of Handsome Brook Kennel," in which he writes as follows: "I find upon reference to my old record book that Dr. Davenport's 'Vic,' was whelped December 27, 1887. In drawing off onto my new book I had entered it as October 27, 1887, and so in giving it to Dr. Davenport had followed that as a guide." Now it would naturally seem as if Dr. Davenport had me to thank instead of showing the spirit manifested, for this help in correcting the pedigree at this early and best time, and I cannot discover upon what grounds he accuses me of jealousy, as such would be very unnatural for me who has helped so liberally both himself and the Handsome Brook Kennel. All breeders should look closely to the minutest particulars in their pedigrees of stock as it is very unpleasant for other kennels to be publicly called jealous when endeavoring to rectify their errors.

He makes the statement that I "have very little faith in Cohoon to think he would give a wrong date or to breed a bitch out of proper season." Now the amount of faith I may have does not alter the fact that he, Cohoon, did both. The wrong date of birth presumedly unintentionally given, which I have proven and as to breeding the bitches out of proper season, I have Mr. Cohoon's letter before me wherein he states that the bitches Vic and Cherry were bred at first heat and before he expected to sell them. Now I have been intimately acquainted with Mr. E. Cohoon, proprietor of "Handsome Brook Kennel" for many years, and bred several bitches for several years in partnership with him, and helped him in many ways, and as often explained to him clearly the injustice to purchasers, to the offspring, to himself and the damage to the bitch bred by so doing, and yet he confesses to having done it in these cases al least. So this also is not Dr. Davenport's fault. I admit having sold Dr. Davenport several puppies, and of receiving very complimentary letters from him in regard to them except one fine one which had contracted lice from sleeping upon an old previously used blanket which had contracted them unbeknown to myself and the doctor did not fail to let me know of the fact in such strong terms that I made quick work of destroying the blanket and renovating the sleeping stall. I always thought that he might have informed me in a little milder manner, if he had stopped and considered. It is also a fact that I reluctantly consented to board a puppy for him for a few weeks as an accommodation to him, and that the puppy killed himself from eating gravel (fine broken granite). I had rather the pup had not died, and so consented to make no charge for board and trouble, as my share of the unfortunate circumstances, but I refused to pay for the puppy, for I had previously lost too much money trying to accomodate.

His statement that I am aware that he has three of the finest cocker bitches in America, and that is what makes one feel bad certainly "breaks me all up." It is a great mystery to me now that should have come to pass, as I have never seen them nor heard about them until I discovered the errors as published in regard to them; but we will concede that he is blessed with the same affection that all good dog owners rejoice under.

If his Pet H. is by Col. Stubbs out of Beauty, why did he not have it published thus in the first place instead of claiming her to be out of Flirt and so save me making another correction and being called jealous. And if Vic is liver with white on breast, why did he publish her as liver and white; and the bitch Little Butterfly in Vic's pedigree should be Little Buttercup. These things make us old "God fathers," tired to say the least, as well as often very perplexing, which our frfend, the Dr., calls jealous, but as I have done the best I can to get our good friend's pedigrees in better form, I trust he will see fit to change his opinion. M. P. MCKOON.

From Mr. Horace Green.

Mr. Horace Green of New York city writes to the Secretary of the Pacific Coast Field Trial Club to reserve accommodations for himself and wife during the field trials next January. Mr. Green is widely known among the leading merchants of Gotham, having passed more than a half century in active business life there, and now in the Indian summer of his days be wisely elects to spend some time at Bakersfield, and may bring with him some friend of equally pronounced sympathy with reasonable recreations, such as shooting over dogs, the ownership of trotters, or the like. Mr. Green writes: "The constitution and running rules of the Pacific Coast Field Trial Club came a week or more ago, but it was not until to-day that it occured to me that dog culture, dog science, dog development, or whatever the word should be, is something in which the average citizen is supposed to take an interest. As an average citizen, as perhaps more than the average citizen, since I have more or less of an appreciation of trotters, I proceed to indicate my sympathy with the canine race, if the race will accept the application of the word, by signifying my intention to be present next January at the Derby contest, without perhaps a dog companion, all the same, I shall try to get there and shall bet my money on breed, color and sex, on my own natural dog instinct, without the recognition of "nod or wink" by the experienced professional. Look out for me, and see to it that I shall not want for a cot. Our centennial of last week has stirred up in the masses a certain indefinable, though appreciable, impulse, which, "taken at its flood," and the flood cannot begin to ebb until after the Christopher Columbus quadriennial centennial in 1892, may send to California next winter a multitude too great for the Pacific Coast Field Trial Club hotel accommodations, so I repeat, reserve a cot for your subscriber and Mrs. Subscriber."

The National Field Trials.

The National Pointer and Setter Field Trials (England) were held on April 16th, 17th and 18th, the running taking place on Sir Thomas Boughey's estate, near Newport, Salop. The estate, Aqualate, contains about 10,900 acres and is suitable for the purposes of the trials. Owing to the bad, rainy weather which prevailed on the first two days, there was a slim attendance. Hares were very plentiful yet they did not interfere much with the running. The birds were in sufficient numbers to afford the necessary opportunities for a trial. Capt. Molyneaux, Mr. Thomas Pilkington and Lord Waterpark were the judges; the two latter leaving on Thursday afternoon, Rev. W. Searjeantson officiating instead. The Setter Puppy Stokes had twenty starters, the prizes being, first £40 and £10 added money; second, £30; third, £15; fourth, £10. The work was of a very inferior quality. The winners are as follows: First, G. Shaw's Pride of Salop (Little Billey—Bess); second, A. P. Haywood-Lonsdale's Rosa (Ross—Petti Sing); third, A. P. Haywood-Lonsdale's Ranger (Dick Wind'em—Peep Bo); fourth, F. C. Lowe's Trip of Kippen) Tutsham Trip—Dido). The Pointer Puppy Stakes had thirteen starters. The prizes were £30 and £10 added money to first; £20 to second; £10 to third. Lorna Doon of Kippen) was first; F. C. Lowe's Gem of Kippen (Kent Cob—Magpie), second; and T. Statter's Toil (Naso of Upton—Titia) third. In the final to determine the absolute winner, the pointer, Banco, easily defeated the setter, Pride of Salop.

The Acton Reynald Stakes, for aged pointers and setters, had eleven starters, seven setters and four pointers. In setters James Bishop's Bonny Daisy (Sailor—Flora) was first, and F. Bibby's Randolph (Torry II.—Border Nell) was second. In pointers, G. Pilkington's Woolton Game (Gough—Larkspur) was first, P. Caillard's Belle des Bordes (Young Bang—Pollie) second. In the final heat, to determine absolute winner between Woolton Game and Bonny Daisy, the pointer was victorious; the same two ran the final heat for the puppy prize last year, the setter also being then defeated. The prizes for each were £30 to first; second best of either breed £15; £10 extra to the absolute winner.

Napa Turf Club.

The above mentioned club were to have had a two days meetings this week, but the rainfall was so great that it was deemed expedient to postpone until a future date. President Loeber has telegraph us to change the advertisement, and announce that the races will take place on June 7th and 8th. The purses are very liberal and the entry list will undoubtedly be large, for there are a number of our horsemen who want to school their youngsters preparatory to the heavy campaign work of the fall. Take a look at the new announcement and make up your mind to enter at once.

Death of the Czar.

The telegraph brings the news, that at Council Bluffs on Monday last, the Czar died from the effects of pluro pneumonia. This altogether unexpected event, was a sad blow to the followers of the Winters' stable, as many were convinced, that this son of old Norfolk, was the greatest three-year-old that ever drew breath. That he was a great horse no one can doubt who has seen him run, his bursts of speed, being of the phenomenal order. As a two-year-old he ranked very high, showing at an early stage, that he was equally as good, if not better, than his illustrious brother. Mr. Winters will feel the loss keenly, for we know that he had builded on what he would do in the three-year-old events, in which he was entered in the East, and it is an open secret that he could have got $25,000 for the colt if he would have sold. We heartily sympathize with Mr. Winters in his great loss, and sincerely trust that with the others he may do so well, that the memory of the great unbeaten may not be of long duration.

Progressive Value of Horses.

With the progressive increase in the valuation of broad lands throughout the country and real property in towns, and cities, the value of live stock is keeping commensurate pace. This is true, especially of the noblest of animal creation domesticated to the uses of mankind, the horse. Every year the measure of encouragement in the breeding and sale of horses is greater, the results more gratifying. With the progress of Time and the mutations incident thereto, there is a very apparent manifestation of advancement in the appreciation of horses, particularly in quality, and this carries with it improvement of every kind and degree.

This great and almost universal development of advanced enlightment has been opened to the world since the discovery of the gold mines of unparalleled richness in California, and all along the Northern Pacific Coast, and in Australia. As good seed sown broadcast over the earth, the gold and silver dug from the mines have fertilized the globe, given impetus to invention and enterprise, roused people to greater efforts in every field of lucrative industry and skill, enhanced values of possessions of permanent nature, cheapened the means of communication, facilitated commerce and travel, eased and better rewarded toil, inspired man to prodigies of undertaking before deemed impossible, added fresh encouragement to every beneficent pursuit, and excited mankind to the utmost which knowledge, science and art, and labor can perform.

The horse is the most valuable of all the animal kingdom to the human family. Consequently, the greater attention is devoted to the breeding and care of horses. The unexampled progress made in all the pursuits of enlightened life embraces this study and purpose. Prior to this Age of Gold, the topmost value of the most celebrated horse did not exceed a sum that could be written low in the scale of five figures, the tens-of-thousands, and from the ordinary horse of common use upward—the crack roadster, the safe hunter, the spanking pair for light wagon or carriage—to the speedy trotter and thoroughbred racer, the price ranged from $75 to $5,000. There was much pride and little profit in breeding the best of these, but there was not "big money" in it. Note now the change which has come in respect to horses, all the way from $500 to $50,000, and even the extraordinary sums of $75,000 and $100,000 figure in the statement of offers which have been refused for the most famous of the monarchs of the turf. This is the consequence of careful and intelligent breeding, in which the selection of the fittest is the chief and determinative rule.

The United States is the land of famous trotters, as England is the country most renowned for thoroughbreds and racers. Nobody now believes the stories of Flying Childers running one mile in one minute, nor the prodigies related of his sire, Darley Arabian, and of the celebrated barb Godolphin. Exact timing watches had not been invented at that period, and other close details of racing, as conducted at this time, were not practised for the sufficient reason that they were not known. It may be nearly accurate that Flying Childers ran 4 miles 1 furlong and 138 yards in 7:50—equal to four miles in 7:8.2—but not strictly accurate, because of the imperfection of timing and track measurement, and other essential conditions in turf performances for record. The 7:19¾ of Lexington, the 7:19½ of Fellowcraft, and the subsequent 7:15¼ of Ten Broeck, fully authenticated, are as supports to the probability that the performance of Flying Childers was marvellous, and that his time approximated the figures related. Flying Childers was the sire of the first great Eclipse, whose famous descendant in America, of the same name, defeated Sir Henry in 1823, making the four miles in 7:37½. It is in trotters that the gradual improvement of horses is more apparent; that the development of speed is better noted. From the "less than three minutes" reported of Boston Blue, in 1818, and the 2:40 of Albany Pony, in 1824, followed the 2:26½, saddle, of Lady Suffolk, in 1847, the 2:19¾ of Flora Temple, in 1859, the 2.17¼ of Dexter, in 1867, and the 2:16¾ of Occident, in 1873. Since then the extraordinary "flyers" have astonished the world with their marvels of record-breaking—Rarus, Lulu, Smuggler, Gloster, Ethan Allen, Great Eastern, down to 2·15; Goldsmith Maid 2:14, Jay-Eye-See still lower, St. Julian 2:11½, and at last the amazing feat of Maud S. 2:08¾. All these show regular progression of speed from the "less than three minutes" of 1824 to 2:08¾ in this period, a total gain of more than fifty seconds in the mile, of which nearly eight seconds have been gained within the last forty years; and from 2:08¾ many believe that the mile will yet be trotted in two minutes.

In running the record bears no parallel to that of trotting. From Darley Arabian to Bend d'Or and Ormonde and Ayrshire, from Flying Childers and Godolphin to American Eclipse and Lexington and Ten Broeck, the development of endurance has been inconsiderable, and of speed not at all to be compared with that of trotters, which is readily to be accounted for, in this: During these one hundred and fifty years or more, the best care and intelligent training have been devoted to the racer and his improvement by judicious breeding through finest thoroughbred blood, sire and dam; while with the trotter it is within the last thirty years that equal attention and study have been exercised in the breeding and training, with high order of intelligence to direct the development.

Speed, reckoned by minutes and seconds and fractions of seconds, as it is computed in America, is not observed in England. The speed that wins in the field of contest, with the endurance and mettle to sustain it, are the qualities sought for. With us, the minutest fraction of time is of importance in estimating the value of the horse alike in the runner and the trotter. Only the rich can afford to indulge the pride and cater to the enjoyment of the turf.

In England the nobility and aristocracy are its chief patrons. In this country those of large wealth are becoming the chief breeders. The gold and silver dug from the mines of the Pacific Coast and Australia have in effect revolutionized the enlightened world. Among the fruits are the colossal enterprises which mark the period since their discovery—the transcontinental railways, the peopling of countries before barely known, the enormous ocean traffic by steam, the cutting through of Suez to facilitate the expanding commence, the wonders in every field of art, in the realm of science. Without abundant money these vast exterprises were not possible. The prodigious outflow aroused men to their practicability. They already exist, are accomplished, and still the outlook and march are onward to accomplish greater marvels.

Attendent fruits of this rapidly accumulating wealth—the perennial harvests of the broadcast seed—are enjoyed in the pleasures and comforts of life, in substantial forms and in luxuries, in magnificence of architecture, in lavish ornamentation of grounds, in sumptuous surroundings, in habits, in dress, in equipages, in everything. The natural pride in horses this expanding wealth aids to gratify. There are a thousand possessed of milllions now who in their youth never dreamed of so much wealth. From Girard and Astor, the roll of millions has increased to tens of thousands in the United States, and all over the world are multiplying examples. Many more tens of thousands approximate their wealth or copy their methods of sumptuous living. The possession of the finest horses is conspicuous among these indulgences. Price is less a consideration than blood and speed, and from this comes the rich profit of the careful breeder.

The large sum paid for Dexter by Bonner was the beginning of the flood tide in the value of trotters. It gave new and great encouragement to the owners of breeding farms throughout the country, in every State and county. Breeders had handsomely prospered, but great wealth was not anticipated. Sales aggregating tens of thousands were expected, but the most hopeful did not look forward to an increase to hundreds of thousands, and that more Bonners were to compete as purchasers was not imagined.

"Money makes the mare go." Aye, and money makes the horse to grow in quality and worth. It is the breeders golden harvest. Since Bonner paid the high price for Dexter, other famous trotters have been bought and sold for much higher prices, up to $50,000. High bred colts have sold for thousands, yearlings for above $10,000, two-year-olds for $30,000, and $75,000 has been offered and refused for Guy Wilkes. The blood of Hambletonian, of Mambrino, of Glenco, Belmont, Leamington, Lexington, Almont, Electioneer, Sultan, Benton, Nutwood, Abdallah, Messenger, Clay, and other great sires, flows as Pactolian streams to enrich the breeders and delight the turf with fresh wonders in performance. California holds a prominent place among the famous breeding farms of the Union. The product of these farms go out to the benefit, profit and enrichment of the farmer as well as the turfman, to the improvement of his stock and the enhancement of his property, to the gratification of his pride and his higher standing in community. A fine colt is equivalent to an abundant harvest in a year of high prices for products.

The demand for high-bred and speedy horses is increasing, and the market is illimitable, in other parts of the world the same as in America. Last year sales of twenty-six yearlings were made in England at from 1,500 to 2,800 guineas, and for the yearling Maxamilian 4,100 guineas was paid—over $25,500. Even higher prices have been paid in our country. But with the examples ready for all to note, there can be no question as to the great profit there is in breeding superior horses.

To the Public.

The stock advertised by me in last issue of Breeder and Sportsman, were held and accumulated by me through the assistance of friends, for the last ten years. The mare, young Miami, I bought from the late Bill Hall, of Santa Clara, in 1875, then a yearling past, for a good round figure. I have clung to her through might and main, but now she has to go with five of her fillies and one stud colt. The colts I have bred with an eye single to their retaining the trotting instinct, with sufficient backing up to enable them to stay in a contest until the service was over. Trotters are born, not made; and I am satisfied if these colts fall into the hands of an artist, they will add to his fame, and bring fortune to their owner. The two black fillies offered in this lot I did not raise, but have the breeders' sworn certificate as to their breeding. Atlamont who sired one, and the dam of the other all horsemen know, as he trotted at Bay District, two years ago, to wagon in 2:26¾, which was not the measure of his speed. Kisber, the sire of the dam of one and sire of the sire of the other, was considered by horsemen to be one of the greatest stallions living He trotted in a race, a half in 16½ with heavy track, showed a mile in 2:16 private, and came to San Francisco with a record of 2:27½, willing to meet all comers for the championship; got pneumonia on the steamer coming down from Oregon, and died in this city about two years ago, a great loss to this country.

The brown horse offered is out of Lady Hercules, the dam of Arab, is 12 years old; was foaled on Corbett's Place, San Mateo, (Howard Ranch). The first colt she ever had the bill shows bred to Irvington Straight but whether he or the teaser served the mare I refer the public to Corbett. I have held on to him, hoping I would be able to have him worked, as he has gait and breeding enough to trot as fast as any horse living. He has not had harness on for ten years. This sale is absolute on account of exhausted credits and cracked friendship. 3t* F. S. Malone.

The Combination Sale.

Messrs. Killip & Co. had not their usual success on Tuesday last, when the well advertised combination sale took place at the Bay District track. The attendance was not near as large as the sale warranted, and the bidding was very slow and tedious, except in one instance, when Grace B. was offered, the bidding jumping from $250 to $900 in a few seconds, but she was bought in for $1350, as it was understood she must bring at least $1500. Among those present who made purchases were James Dustin, F. M. Burke, L. C. Clawson, Ira Ramadell, B. C. Holly, T. Wait, H. Wieland, F. W. Loeber and M. A. Sparks. CORRESPONDENCE.

Editor Breeder and Sportsman:—I have received in the last week, about a dozen letters from gentleman of different parts of the State, asking me if I would allow "Noonday" any more mares. In reply, I would like to answer through your paper, so that all will know that it would be impossible for me to accommodate the gentlemen as I have allowed Noonday to serve now more mares than I intended, and my accommodation, for pasturage and feeding hay is very poor. Noonday will be here in this State next season, 1890, and then my accommodation for a good pasture will be much better than now, and can have the services of Noonday who desire. Sam'l Gamble.

Fresno, Cal., May 14, 1889.

Editor Breeder and Sportsman:—From time to time a desire by many is expressed to form an association of our own, one which will have jurisdiction over all trotting and pacings contests that take place on the Pacific Coast, in the same manner as is now exercised by the National and the American Trotting Horse Association. That instead of paying away money to distant organizations and have often long delayed justice, that we govern our affairs for ourselves at much less cost, thus keeping the money among ourselves for the benefit of our home horse interest, and with certainly an equal probability of obtaining justice.

It has been suggested that the new association of the Pacific Coast Trotting Horse Breeders undertake this duty, but no one seems willing to formulate a plan how to do it. With the view of starting the ball in motion, I will suggest "That each trotting track should join this Breeders' Association; that it pay the same admission fee of $25 each that members now pay; that each race track association appoint one of their number to represent their association; that such appointees be the directors, who may appoint a small board from their own number, or act as a whole. Of course the President and Secretary governed by rules and regulations formulated by all the members, would dispose of nearly all cases that would arise, and if any complications would arise then at quarterly meetings such cases could come up on appeal before the members.

This fund of $25 paid by each race track would be a separate fund devoted to pay the recurring expenses of this branch of the business, and nothing more would be required to be paid by any race track for that year. Yearly payments of perhaps $25 would have to be made. Assuming that substantially all trotting associations on this Coast joined, and together with such fines as would be collected, would pay all expenses, for the expense would be confined to the pay of a competent secretary, for that is the only paid officer that would be required, and he could attend to all the duties required to be performed by both branches of the Breeders' Association. This would enable us to pay a competent man to give his entire time to the business.

There may be those who fear that such a local association confined to the Pacific Coast would not give sufficient protection to horse owners. I have no such fear. There is in the first place a probability that both the national and American associations in the East would be willing to co-operate with us. If, however, otherwise, the penalty of being debarred from driving or starting a horse on any track of the Pacific Coast would be sufficient power to hold over ninety-nine cases out of a hundred to induce the willingness to settle, and if there was one out of very many who refused, it would be a good evidence of a hard case, which is simple, and this plan of forming this association is free from complications, and by unity of action and putting details into proper shape, this plan seems to me feasible, and that it will bring benefits can be easily seen. To govern ourselves, to pay the smallest amount of money for good service and government, and to have all matters speedily adjusted at the place where they occur must commend itself to all.

Answers to Correspondents.

Answers for this department must be accompanied by the name and address of the sender, not necessarily for publication, but as proof of good faith. Write the questions distinctly, and on one side of the paper only. Positively no questions will be answered by mail or elegraph.

A subscriber, Calistoga.

We cannot give the correct weights carried by the starters in the Peabody Handicap, as three different papers give different weights. When the first Turf Guide comes to hand, will then be able to give the official weights. In reference to the over weights in Handicaps to which you allude, an excess of five pounds is allowed, but no more.

We have received information that Mr. A. Gonzales has suffered a severe loss by the death of Belmont Bay. The pacer was quartered at the Valensin Stock Farm, under the charge of Lee Shaner. He is said to have died from pluropneumonia, and was valued at $6,000.

The Cloverly Stakes, for braces, dogs and bitches, pointers and setters, any ages, have five braces. First was won by Mr. Purcell-Llewellin's setters, Coquet B. (Dashing Bondhu—Duchess Primrose) and Belle Bondhu (Dashing Bondhu—Duchess Placid); second by R. Ll. Price's pointers, Sir Watkin (Jasper—Mink) and Miss Sixpence (Lucky Sixpence—Golden Slippers). A testimonial, valued at £100, was presented to Mr. Brailsford by numerous field trial supporters.

The International Field Trial Club's first meeting was held near Cologne, Germany, on April 15 and 16. There were forty-seven dogs nominated, of which twenty-nine were starters, sixteen of which were in the stake for pointers, setters and griffons, and thirteen in that for the German breed. The drawing for the stake for the former took place at the Hotel du Nord, on the evening of April 14, and for the German dogs, on April 15. The prizes in the All-Age Stake, open to pointers, setters and Griffons, were £30 to first, £15 to second, £5 to third, a total of £50, which was divided equally between Mr. C. J. Cockerill's Flock (Borax—Merry), Blanche of Bussengen (Gunner—Blanche of Devon), Scamp (Borax—Madame), and A. J. Kreuser's Damo i (Faust—Leda), the judges rating them about equal in merit. Owing to the convenience in reaching Cologne from England, France and Belgium, it is said that these trials will be permanently fixed to occur near that city. Some of the running was exceptionally high in quality, but the griffons did not compare at all favorably with the English breeds.

Mr. Wm. Graham, or as he is better known, the Irish Ambassador, does not often get a rise taken out of him in the line of dogs, says Forest and Stream, but the following little tale, if true, shows that complications may arise that are not contemplated even in the best laid plans: It appears, so the story goes, that in some unexplained manner the Ambassador became the owner of a dog that in common parlance was a "bad un," and how to get rid of him without any strain upon his conscience became an absorbing question. Finally the dog was given to a person who was about to exhibit at a distant show with instructions to enter him for sale at £20, and to accept the best offer obtainable, one-half the proceeds to be retained for the service. Now it happens that the Ambassador had a friend to whom he had given a roving commission to purchase any dog that was good and cheap, and the friend happened to attend this show, and seeing the dog—a veritable "flat-catcher"—was so pleased with it that he at once secured it, paid the price and shipped it forthwith to the Ambassador, who is still trying to figure up the profit and loss in the transaction.

Mr. William Graham, who is to judge all classes at the bench show which begins on Wednesday next at Mechanic's Pavilion, left New York for San Francisco on May 9th, but is coming by easy stages, so as to reach here just before the show opens. He comes, with the endorsement of good men, as a competent "all round" judge, as good as any in England, and consequently better than any to be had elsewhere. Local exhibitors are not so fatuous as to expect omniscience in any man, and some awards made by the Judge may be open to criticism, but the expectation is justified that Mr. Graham will judge without fear or favor, and that his awards will go as near to being such as would be made by specialists as the awards of any man can be who is called upon to judge breeds so many and so diverse. He is particularly at home in the non-sporting classes, and will have a large and good exhibit before him. He has judged the sporting breeds on many occasions, particularly spaniels, and has had ample opportunity to familiarize himself with the best types benched during the past decade.

Personally, Mr. Graham is a thoroughly sound, sensible, modest and pleasant man, and it is certain that, whatever his judgments may be, he will form many lasting friendships. He has come five thousand miles to judge, the longest trip of the sort ever made, and should be so cordially received and so well entertained that he will feel at once that dog men are dog men, whether chancing to live in Belfast, New York, or San Francisco. We wish him welcome, and the best success in his arduous task.

It is quite on the cards that Mr. Oldham, the spaniel man, will take a team of four cracks out to the San Francisco Bench Show, held the latter part of this month, says a New York contemporary. So if he goes the East will be represented by at least one worthy team. We also hear that he will astonish the 'Frisconians with an entirely new repertoire of songs. By the way, the fire which we briefly alluded to last week was more serious to this gentleman's goods and chattels than we supposed, some $1,500 damage being incurred. Among other things lost were all his kennel records, certificates, etc. Several dog pictures were also burnt. Glencairn, Newton Abbot Laddie and Kirkella, the Skye, were in a room just off the dining room, where most of the damage was done; and Mr. Oldham, with a wet blanket wrapped round him, had to grope his way in, and securing a hold on the almost suffocated dogs, fired them out of the window onto the lawn. A narrow escape and no mistake.

About the Jolly Planter litter, noted elsewhere, the breeder writes: "I enclose you notice of my latest in the dog line. Just came to-day. There are five black and white, and two clear white, with indications of profuse ticks. These are the first I have had by my Jolly, and unless I am mistaken they will prove fine ones. The mother is an extra keen hunter, with a movement like a race horse, displaying a very fine nose. Jolly has the best nose I ever saw and as keen as can be. I am afraid I cannot get up to the show. I am awfully sorry. Neither can I send my dogs. Angie has just whelped, Claude is coming in heat, and Jolly has not yet got coat enough to show. I shall try hard to get to the show, for I am anxious to see Graham's judging. I enclose you pedigree of the youngsters. H. T. Payne.

When the next issue goes out, the second show under auspices of the Pacific Kennel will have passed into the doggy annals of the city. The club has been faithful to its trust, and more than fulfilled all its promises in the past. Its first show was by odds the neatest, best arranged, and best conducted dog show ever given in America. The coming event, has been arranged on the most liberal basis. Every precaution in the way of feeding, medical oversight, safety and comfort of the dogs has been taken.

Not a case of sickness could be traced to the last show and we hope like good fortune will attend the coming venture. The entry list is a splendid one, all things considered. It is bonafide. No padding and no entries except for competition. The dogs averaged better than last year, and there is beside, a fine entry of poultry and pigeons. Everybody should go to the dog show at the Mechanic's Pavilion, every night during its continuance. Children should be taken during the day time and often. The show is a grand educator.

ROD.

Trouting at Glen Ellen.

Minding the good word of the best of books, I made exemplary devotion last week in going a-fishing. Trout was in my fancy, and Glen Ellen my destination. Of the Apostles, Peter was foremost; at Glen Ellen is mine host Peters, of the Mervyn House, thoroughest of fishermen, expert with rod, quick to drop the instant line and cast the fly just where it will do the most good to ensnare the shiner and provide the feast. There was touting and trouting. For two hundred yards up and down Sonoma creek, as it courses by the hotel, smooth running and boisterously breaking, now gliding and murmuring along over pebbly bottom, and anon breaking and roaring over graduated cataracts and pouring down the rocky obstructions with delighting sport, Host Peters did the earnest fishing, and I looked on to enjoy. You see, the trout are acquainted with him and know the foolishness of fighting off. They just hook on, and pass from the ripple and the pool to the pan and the table. Guests of the Mervyn must be treated. It is fruit and fish, and Peters' wills as he fills every stuffer to his quantum, ad libitum. Speckled beauties in the silver, from a half pound to a pound and a half—and the scales allow another fish to make weight on every plate at every meal, and it is agreed, with good Qzaak Walton, that "this dish is too good for any but anglers or very honest men." Like sagacious drawers at poker, you fill to satisfaction—but right away you don't feel like play, for the rule of Peters is: abide ye here and enjoy the chase. Outside on his capacious shady porch are the usual "cheers" of post-prandial comfortableness. Take a rest, or go weigh.

In the chosen phrase of the Private Secretary, "do you know" that in Sonoma creek, at Glen Ellen, right near Peters' Hotel Mervyn, is a delightful trouting place? Let me notify you of the kind who go there. It is yet early in the season, but the early bug catches the crocodile, or words to that effect. The keen anglers of San Francisco are among them. Names would be invidious—distinctions of rank; ranklers not among the rankers. Sensible men, they are accompanied by their wives; they who hope to be accounted sensible pray their sweethearts to accompany them. Mothers and mothers-in-law, in fond and hopeful humor, congregate and roam in the fields and in their conversation. Children catch trout and catch on. Every age is pleased, every condition suited. The sportive trout leap to the fly, and there is bait for all.

Glen Ellen is prettily named. Ellen, the fair born of the resident house of Stuart, suggested the surname, and the topography of the place a prenomen. It is a region of high hills and declivitous ravines, of gentle slopes and lovely meads, forest and lowland, through which Sonoma creek courses in graceful flow with occasional sharp turnings. The creek, with head waters in the divides, tortuously pursues its way to the greater waters of the bay, and there discharges its never ceasing volume. It is the resort of salmon, the chosen stream of trout, the breeding place of many species which multiply in waters.

Protection is now much needed to the saving of the fish. The State has Fish Commissioners. The prayer in Sonoma is, O, that they were even as the visits of angels—only a few, if far between. They come never or to no effect. One who has dwelt for ten years on Sonoma creek, has never seen a Fish Commissioner, save that he came a fishing for the sport alone. He commissioned not at all. Fish are killed or slaughtered out of season. The dynamiters are at work; explosives do the injury. Unlawful fishing is ruthlessly carried on. The Fish Commissioners takes no heed. There is a most faulty ladder at the La Motte dam. An able bodied fish cannot ascend it. The dam itself is worse than useless—provocative of a continental of the similar sounding adjective. The Commissions appear ditto in the scale. It is scaly all around.

Now is the time for good trout fishing. The late rains have swelled the streams, the more recent dry weather has clarified them, and the fish are sportful, quick at the fly, nimble to the angler, ready for the rod. Give all a chance. Comfort the soul of the city man by the expectation, warranted sure, of a good basket, and his prayers will go up. Recoil upon the spoiler with explosives the consequences of his murderous acts by penitential measures, and he will desist. Let the punishment fit the offense. The true angler will catch trout; the transgressor will catch his exemplary fill. There is a God in Israel. There should be proof of it in Sonoma creek, at Glen Ellen, and everywhere else in California, by the fish Commissioners. The way to do a given thing is to do it J. O'M.

But two acts relating to fish and game passed by the last legislature have become laws. That relating to game is as follows:

"Section 1. The State Board of Fish Commissioners is hereby authorized to purchase for the purposes of propagation, import into this State, and distribute to such places within this State, as may in their judgment be best suitable for the same, such game birds as they may be able to secure, including wild turkeys, prairie chickens, bob-white quail, pheasants, grouse, skylarks, and others valuable as game birds.

Sec. 2. For the purposes of this Act the sum of two thousand dollars is hereby appropriated out of any money in the State Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to be used in the discretion of the State Board of Fish Commissioners, who are hereby authorized to draw the whole or any portion of said money; but after expenditure, itemized bills of expense shall be submitted for the money expended.

Sec. 3. The Controller shall draw his warrant on the requisition of said Board of Fish Commissioners for the whole or any portion of said appropriation, and the Treasurer shall pay the same.

Sec. 4. Any person who shall, within this State, prior to the first day of January, eighteen hundred and ninety-five, shoot, trap, kill, or otherwise destroy any bird mentioned in section one of this Act, is guilty of a misdemeanor, and the shooting, trapping, killing, or otherwise destroying of each of said birds shall be a separate offense.

Sec. 5. This Act shall take effect and be in force on and after its passage."

The new law as to fish is as follows:

"Section 1. Section six hundred and thirty-five of said Penal Code is hereby amended to read as follows:

635. Every person who places or allows to pass into any of the waters of this State any lime, gas, tar, cocculus indicus, sawdust, or any substance deleterious to fish, is guilty of a misdemeanor. And every person who uses any poisonous or explosive substances for the purpose of taking or destroying fish is guilty of misdemeanor. Any person who shall catch, take or carry away any trout or other fish from any stream, pond or reservoir, belonging to any person or corporation, without the consent of the owner thereof, which hatching therein, is guilty of a misdemeanor.

Sec. 2. This Act shall take effect on and after the first day of September, eighteen hundred and eighty-nine."

The Fish Commission was authorized to sell the steam launch Gov. Stoneman, but has been unable to do so.

ATHLETICS.

Official Weights.

Leader Walter A. Scott, of the Olympic Club kindly sends the exact weights of the winners in the recent boxing tournament:

"Bantam—Fred Cook, 111 pounds, first prize, Golden Gate Club; Daniel Kelly, 106 pounds, second prize, Pastime Athletic Club, New York.

Heavy—J. Kitchen, Jr., 168 pounds, first prize, Acme Athletic Club; W. Gallagher, 143 pounds, second prize, Acme Athletic Club.

A curiously characteristic publication drifted to our table the other day, entitled "San Francisco Sporting Life," a weekly chronicle of things athletic in and about this city, by Geo. A. Dall & Co. A neatly gotten up, breezily written, carefully edited, and in every way attractive little newspaper. Its projectors, writers, editors, type-setters and pressmen are Messrs. George A. Dall and Joe M. Mansfield, the former a "strong man" and the latter the best tumbler on the Coast, and Mr. Jim Stack, also a prominent athlete. Both are old-time athletes, have innumerable friends, and we hope will reach the highest success with their bantling the "Sporting Life."

LONGWORTH.

High Bred Trotting Stallion.

WILL BE FOUR YEARS OLD IN MARCH.

Dark Bay, Black Points, by Sidney.

OWNED BY A. C. DIETZ, OAKLAND.

Also the owner of Bay Stallion Ringwood, four years old, by Sidney, half brother to Longworth, which has showed trials over the Oakland Track, 2:30; quarters, in 34 seconds—2:16 gait —as a three-year old.

LONGWORTH, for finish, style and form cannot be excelled by any four-year-old horse in the State. His gait is perfect; going low to the ground, with smooth, easy motion, and has shown wonderful speed with but two month's work. As a two-year-old, he showed a 2:40 gait; as a three-year-old showed—trial—full mile over the Oakland track, 2:26; half mile, 1:10; quarters, 34 seconds; eighths, 16 seconds—a 2:08 gait.

Longworth is the result of a long line of distinguished ancestors, endowed with speed on the sire and dams' side that follows back for generations—consequently he cannot help but produce great speed.

He is half brother to the great three-year-old Adonis, record 2:14¾.

Gold Leaf, three-year-old record, 2:15.
Memo, three-year-old trial, 2:20¾.
Sister V., two-year-old trial, 2:32.
St. Nicholas, three-year-old trial, 2:27¾.
Ringwood, three-year-old trial, 2:30.
Miss Sidney, one-year-old trial, half mile, 1:38.
Brown colt, three-year-old trial, 2:40.
Black colt, three-year-old trial, 2:30.
Linda, one-year-old trial, one quarter, 40 seconds.
Sorrel colt, two-year-old trial, quarter, 34 seconds, and a number more that have shown remarkable speed. One yearling that has shown one-eighth of a mile in 16 1-5 seconds—a 2:10 gait.

Sidney, the sire of Longworth, has a record of 2:19¾; Santa Claus, the grand sire, has a record of 2:17½; Sweetness, the grandam, record 2:21½; Strathmore, the sire of Santa Claus, has twenty-two that have trotted below 2:30; Volunteer, the sire of Sweetness, has twenty-six that have trotted below 2:30. Volunteer is the sire of St. Julian, record 2:11¾.

Longworth's first dam Grey Dale, the dam of Daisy C., Silver Threads, and grandam of Phaeeola; Grey Dale by American Boy, Jr.; he by American Boy, the sire of Belmont. Second dam Grey Poll by Winfield Scott, by Edward Everett; third dam Sorrel Poll by Sir Henry; fourth dam Daughter of Printer.

Grey Dale, the dam of Longworth, has shown herself a great producer of speed through Daisy C. and Silver Threads, the sire of Phaeeola.

All letters pertaining to the service of this horse should be addressed to R. H. FARMER, Oakland, Alameda County, Cal.

Terms: Fifty dollars, payable at the end of the season or sooner if the mares are taken away. Season will close June 15th, 1889. The number of mares limited to twenty-five. The best of care will be taken to insure mares with foal. Pasture $5 per month, which can be procured at the Oakland Race Track. Mares at the owners' risk, as to escapes or accidents.

The stallion will be kept at the stables of the undersigned, at the junction of San Pablo Avenue and Park Street.

OSSIDINE

KALAMAZOO, Mich., Sept. 15, 1888.

GENTLEMEN:—We have used Ossidine for the past two years and consider it invaluable for Sprung Tendons, Curbs, Ringbone and Spavins; there is nothing equals it; and for us it effected a permanent cure where firing failed, although performed by one of the most successful veterinarians on the continent. We have recommended it to others with like success, and believe it has more merit than any blister ever used.
Very respectfully yours, S. A. BROWNE & Co., Prop's.

This scientific preparation is an absolute cure for all bony or callous lumps on horses, and is a more powerful absorbent than "firing," without creating the slightest blemish. After a few applications the excrescence is so palpably reduced that even the skeptical frankly acknowledge that it is by far the most valuable outward remedy for horses ever invented.

The ONLY preparation in the world that will remove a Bone Spavin after it has become ossified.

Price $3.00 per Large Bottle,

A. P. BUSH & CO., 149 Pearl Street, Boston, Mass.

Sole Agents for United States and Canada.

Owner of Eole, St Saviour, Eolist, etc., says: I have long used it in my stables, and find it to be all that is claimed for it in removing callous and unnatural bony growths, without leaving the slightest blemish. From my experience, I most strongly recommend the use of Ossidine, and feel that it is a necessary adjunct to every stable. Yours respectfully,
LONG BRANCH, July 28, 1888. F. GEBHARD.

By GROSVENOR, he by ADMINISTRATOR, he by RYSDYK'S HAMILTONIAN.

First dam Lady Nutwood by Nutwood 600; second dam Lady Mac, standard, by American Boy; third dam a thoroughbred mare imported from Australia.

NUTGROVE is a beautiful bay, 15¼ hands, and is one of the finest appearing young horses in the State. He took the first prize for best two-year-old standard-bred horses at Oakland in 1888, also first prize at the State fairs in the same class. He has been worked for speed but a little, but showed quarters in 38 to 40 seconds. His dam took first prize for standard mare at the Oakland Fair, and also took first prize at the State Fair, 1888, for best mare of any age or breed. For further particulars apply to Danville.

THE WILKES STALLION

Mambrino Wilkes, 6083

(Half Brother to Harry Wilkes, 2:13 1-2.)

Sire of Gus Wilkes, 2:22; Alpheus, 2:27; Balkan 2:29¾, three-year-old; John O'Brien, lapped out the winner in 2:36 as a three-year-old; H. A. W.'s Black Colt, trial 2:29 with very little work as a four-year-old.

Will remain in the future at San Miguel Stock Farm, Walnut Creek, Contra Costa County.

DESCRIPTION.

MAMBRINO WILKES is a black horse, 16 hands high, and considerably longer than his height; has immense muscular development and weighs 1,200 pounds. He has the utmost symmetry of proportion and elegance of finish. No competent judge who has seen this horse has failed to pronounce him a perfect individual, and his breeding is certainly fashionable enough to satisfy the most fastidious. His colts are large, stylish and handsome, and Balkan has been pronounced by many the most stylish trotter on the turf.

PEDIGREE.

Sired by George Wilkes, dam Lady Chrisman by Todhunter's Mambrino; second dam by Pilot Jr.

Todhunter's Mambrino by Mambrino Chief, dam Ripton's dam by Hunt's Commodore, son of Mambrino, by imp. Messenger; second dam by Potomac, son of imp. Messenger.

Mambrino Chief by Mambrino Paymaster, by Mambrino, by imp. Messenger.

George Wilkes sired 65 colts that have beaten 2:30. Of these 39 have average records of 2:25, 14 of 2:19 and 12 of 2:18.

TERMS.

Mares from a distance will be received at the Dexter Stables, Oakland, or Livery Stable, Martinez, the owner notifying Smith Hill, Superintendent at the farm. Good pasture and plenty of water. For the purpose of placing the service of a Wilkes within reach of breeders, the same rate will be maintained as last year, to wit, $75 for the season. Although it is not admitted thereby that this horse is inferior as a producer to the horses whose fees are placed at from $150 to $500.

BALKAN,

Three-year-old Record 2:29 1-2; trotting many heats faster, when he did not obtain a record.

PEDIGREE.

Sired by Mambrino Wilkes, dam Fanny Fern by Jack Hawkins, son of Boston; second dam S. J. B. by Jim Crow.

It will be readily seen that this colt is from strong producing lines on both sides Fanny Fern having produced Mollie Drew, May Queen, Onyx and Fred Arnold, all noted trotters and all by different sires.

This colt will be kept at the Oakland Trotting Park, and will be stinted to ten approved mares at $100 for the season.

STALLIONS.

DIRECTOR 2:17.

DIRECTOR will stand at Pleasanton from March 1st to August 1st, 1889, for fifteen good mares more than are now booked, at $200 for the season. Mares not proving with foal may be returned next season free of charge of service to same stallion, or money will be refunded, at option of the Stock Farm Co.

Pasturage $4 per month, hay and grain extra. Accidents and escapes at owner's risk. Service fees due at time of service and must be paid, together with pasturage, etc., before mares are taken away, or a good approved note given, payable August 1st, 1889, at which date all bills must be settled

THISTLE,

Full brother to Gold Leaf, pacing record 2:15 at three years old. By Sidney, dam Fernleaf, she the dam of stallion Shamrock, trotting record at two years old, 2:25. Thistle is a large, speedy pacing colt, showing more speed than Gold Leaf at the same age, and double the speed of his sire; so if anyone wants to breed pacers, here is a chance.

Thistle will stand for seven approved mares at $100 for the season, with same conditions and return privileges as Director.

AMBERINE.

$25. $25.

PEDIGREE.

Sired by PROMPTER No. 2305, with six weeks training at the close of a stud season, he won a stallion race of five heats, winning the last three heats and getting a record of 2:33¾; he has never been trained since.

His sire, Wilson's BLUE BULL, No. 75, has more of his progeny in the 2:30 list than any horse that ever lived, except it may be George Wilkes, and it is a disputed point between the two which has most.

PROMPTERS' dam, PRAIRIE BIRD, 2:28¼, is in the GREAT BROOD MARE TABLE, a proved producer, and of a family of wonderful producers, as an examination of the produce of Flaxtail mares will prove.

AMBERINE'S dam, "BONNIE," owned by G. W. Hancock, of Sacramento, is one of the best road-mares in the State; she has many times covered 50 miles on the road in five hours, and 125 miles in 17 hours. She is the dam of Daisy, yearling record, 2:38¼; her sire is John Nelson, sire of the dams of Albert W., 2.20, and Valensin, 2:24.

AMBERINE is a beautiful bay, three years old, very powerfully built, 16 hands, and trotted a mile in his yearling form in 3:20, and has never been trained.

Will serve 15 outside mares at the low price of $25 the season. Should the mare not prove in foal, the money refunded or mare bred following season. Service fee payable, when I pasture the mare, at the time of her removal; but if served outside, payable at time of service.

He is full brother to DAISY; yearling record, 2:38¼. THE BEST IN THE WORLD FOR PACING. Two-year-old trial, two miles, 5:07; last mile in 2:28.

Good pasturage for a limited number of mares only, at $5 per month. Ranch 18 miles from the City, San Pedro Valley. Horses taken down at owner's risk.

This horse will stand in San Francisco, San Mateo, or Alameda Counties. Owned by

THREE CHEERS

Will make the Season of 1889 at Oakland Race Track, Oakland, Alameda County.

Pedigree.

Hurrah by Newminster (winner St. Leger 1851), dam Jovial by Bay Middleton (winner Derby 1836.)

Newminster by Touchstone (winner St. Leger 1831), dam Beeswing (winner of 54 races out of 64 starts) by Dr. Syntax (winner Doncaster Cup 1837, 40, 41, 42, the only horse that ever accomplished that feat.)

THREE CHEERS is bred in the speediest and stoutest lines. His dam, Young Fashion was the dam of Surprise, Scotland (the only horse that ever beat Asteroid a heat), Liverpool, Columbia and Bonnie Kate, the dam of Little Buttercup and the flying Bonnie Lizzie. His grandam, Fashion, was the greatest race mare of her era, defeating Boston in that historical match at four-mile heats, that is recorded as one of the greatest events in the annals of the turf. He is thoroughly sound in wind and limb, his family on both sides being noted for their exemption from curbs, spavins, roaring, or any other hereditary unsoundness. Horsemen, who can appreciate the highest type of the thoroughbred, are specially invited to inspect Three Cheers.

THREE CHEERS is the sire of Almont, Applause and Why Not, the only three of his get ever trained, and all are stake winners.

TERMS: $75 for the season. Mares not proving with foal can be returned the next season free of charge. Good pasturage at $5 per month. Mares cared for in any manner owners may desire, and fed on hay and grain, either or both, at reasonable rates. None but competent grooms employed, but no responsibility assumed for accidents or escapes.

N. B.—Mares sent from a distance in care of J. W. Morshead City Front Stables, San Francisco, will be forwarded without delay.

WILKES PASHA.

STANDARD 2618.

Dark bay with white hind feet, 16½ hands high, bred by R. P. Pepper, of South Elk Horn Farm, Frankfort, Kentucky. Sired by Onward, 1411, record 2:25¾, trial 2:17. He by George Wilkes, 2:22, sire of sixty-five horses in the 2:30 list, ten of them with records below 2:20. First dam Fisher (dam of Clara Wilkes, 2:29¾, trial 2:25) by American Clay, 34, sire of Granville, 2:28; Maggie Briggs, 2:27; Ella Clay, 2:27½; and the dams of Executor, 2:24½, Ranchero, 2:23½; Judge Hawser, 2:24¾; Ambassador, 2:25, and nine others in 2:30; second dam by Wilson's Snow Storm, sire of Jim Irving, 2:24; third dam by Paddie Burns, thoroughbred.

Onward, 1411, is one of the noted sires of to-day. In 1887 he placed seven performers in the 2:30 list, including Houri, three-year-old record 2:19¾; while in 1888 he still further sustains his reputation by adding nine of his sons and daughters to the list. Onward combines the blood of the two great trotting families, Hambletonian 10 and Mambrino Chief 11, and derives his speed inheritance direct through the greatest son of the one family, and the greatest daughter of the other.

Onward's dam was Dolly (the dam of Director, 2:17, and Thorndale, 2:22½), by Mambrino Chief. Dolly was one of the greatest speed-producing brood mares that ever lived. George Wilkes stands at the head of the list of sires of fast trotters with 65 performers with records of 2:30 or better, and the combination of these two great producers will breed on with absolute certainty.

WILKES PASHA will make the season of 1889 at the stables of the undersigned, at the Trancas Bridge, two miles north of Napa, on the Soda Spring Road.

TERMS,

For the season ending July 1, 1889, $35 in U. S. gold coin.

Alfalfa pasturage $4 per month; natural grass $2.50 per month.

Every attention and care will be given to mares, but no liabilities assumed for accidents or escapes.

SIRE OF YOLO MAID, 2:14.

Alexander Button.

Alexander's Record, 2:31 1-4:

DESCRIPTION.

Alexander Button is a dark bay with fine flowing mane and tail; stands 15-3¾ hands high; weighs 1,200 pounds, and is of excellent disposition. When three years old he made a record of 2:28½, and when four years old, in his first race, he obtained a record of 2:26¾. Has been driven a mile in 2:16 in his four-year-old form, and has been driven a last half in 1:07. Alexander Button is a natural trotter, inherited through the speed-lines of his ancestors, and imparts his speed to his offspring with uniform certainty. Yolo Maid, as a three-year-old, paced 18 heats, never leaving her feet—carrying the world's record of 2:14. Rosie Mc, as a five-year-old, rarely ever breaks; has a record of 2:20¾. R. H. Newton's colt, with very little handling, paced a 2:16 gait, and there are several other colts that show gaits from 2:16 to 2:20. Considering that Alexander Button has never been mated with a standard-bred mare—his colts show him to be a wonderful producer—and with his breeding, and terms of service, he is the cheapest and most wonderful horse in the State.

PEDIGREE.

Alex. Button was sired by Alexander, he by Geo. M. Patchen, Jr., his dam Lady Button by Napa Rattler by Biggett's Rattler, he by Sir Henry, and he by imported Henry, dam of Biggett's Rattler by Rysdyk's Hambletonian, dam of Napa Rattler, thoroughbred.

TERMS: $75, payable at end of season. Mares not proving with foal may be returned next season free of charge. Good pasturage will be furnished at $2 per month, and due care taken to prevent accidents or escapes, but no liability whatever assumed.

Will stand at City Stable, Woodland, on Thursday, Friday and Saturday of each week. The remainder of the time he will stand at my ranch, which is situated about 1½ miles west of Yolo station.

All mares sent to Pashon Stable, Woodland, Yolo County, will be forwarded free of charge.

The Electioneer Stallion

LANCELOT,

SEAL BROWN STALLION, 15½ HANDS, FOALED APRIL 15, 1881.

Bred by C. C. BEMIS, San Francisco, Cal.

Sire Gov. Stanford's ELECTIONEER; first dam Lizzie Harris by Comus; second dam by Arnold Harris. Comus by Green's Bashaw, dam Topsey by Prophet, son of Hill's Black Hawk. Young Bashaw by Grand Bashaw (Arabian) (182), dam Pearl by First Consul (913); g d Fancy by imp. Rockingham. Arnold Harris by Whalebone, dam Sportsmistress by American Eclipse.

All the sons of Electioneer in the Eastern States have their books filled for the season. This is a rare opportunity to breed to Lancelot at a very low price. Lancelot has shown quarters better than a 2:30 gait, and had it not been for an accident would have had a record as low as the fastest of the sons of Electioneer.

The Nutwood Stallion

SALADIN.

Bred by C. C. BEMIS, San Francisco.

SALADIN, chestnut stallion, 16 hands 1 inch high; foaled April 9, 1880. By Nutwood; first dam Lady Utley Jr. by Speculation, son of Rysdyk's Hambletonian; second dam Lady Utley. Grandam of Western Girl. Record 2:27½.

NUTWOOD (record 2:18¾), half brother to Maud S., 2:08¾, by Belmont, son of Alexander's Abdallah; first dam Miss Russell by Pilot Jr.; second dam Sally Russell by Boston; third dam Maria Russell by Thornton's Rattler; fourth dam Miss Shepard by Stockholder; fifth dam Miranda by Topgallant; sixth dam by imported Diomed; seventh dam by imported Medley; eighth dam by imported Juniper. Nutwood is the sire of Felix, 2:18¾; Dawn 2:19½; Munon 2:21; Menlo 2:21¼; Nutbreaker, two years old, 2:20½; Nutwood Jr. 2:26; Mount Vernon 2:21; Woodnut 2:16¾, and several others that have trotted under 2:30.

The above stallions will make the season of 1889 at the Hoag stables, corner 1st and B Streets, Santa Rosa.

TERMS: $40 for the season for either of the above stallions.

Pasturage $3 per month. All mares at the owners risk. Apply or address,

GEO. W. BROOKS, Agent.

At Main St., between 2d and D Sts. Santa Rosa.

GROVER CLAY,

Bay Stallion, bred by Hon. W. W. Traylor, San Francisco. Foaled 1883. By ELECTIONEER.

First dam MAGGIE NORFOLK by NORFOLK, son of Lexington.

Second dam by BILLY CHEATHAM.

Third dam by DORSEY'S GOLDDUST.

GROVER C is a very handsome shade of bay, 15¾ hands high, and showing as much quality as a majority of thoroughbreds. He is as square-gaited a trotter as can be, and has shown a great deal of speed for the amount of handling. Has been worked very little, though he can show a thirty gait or better whenever called upon.

TERMS.

Fifty dollars the season, payable at time of service. Proper care will be taken, but no responsibility incurred for accidents or escapes. Mares will be pastured inside of the Oakland Trotting Park, which is especially safe, having two fences which give ample security against escape. There is a never-failing stream of water which runs through the field, and the food is good.

Season commencing first of January and ending the first of July.

This is the only son of Electioneer standing in Alameda County, and the high breeding on the side of his dam is a guarantee that his colts will inherit qualities already made famous through the mixture of Electioneer and Lexington blood. Ansel, 2:20, is from a Lexington mare, and Sunol's granddam, two-year-old record 2:18, was by Lexington, both Sunol and Ansel by Electioneer, Lexington the sire of Norfolk.

EROS,

Standard No. 5326.

Electioneer, his sire, has more 2:20 trotters than any living horse, and more 2:30 trotters than any stallion LIVING OR DEAD.

Eros has a record of 2:29½, made in the fifth and deciding heat against a field of eight horses in his maiden race, and with only four weeks preparation after coming out of the stud.

Dam Sontag Mohawk, dam of Sallie Benton (four-year-old record 2:17¾). Sontag Mohawk by Mohawk Chief, by Rysdyk's Hambletonian.

Progeny.

Eros had last fall but three colts trained; the oldest a three-year-old trotter, an exhibition mile during the San Jose Fair in 2:34, last quarter in 36½ seconds. A two-year-old (timed by the judges) made a mile in 2:46½, and the other two-year-old in 2:47. All of these trials being made without a single skip, and none of these colts had then been handled three months from the bitting harness.

VINELAND BREEDING FARM.

Whippleton, 1883,

STANDARD UNDER RULE 4 & 6.

The most successful stock horse in California for his opportunities. WHIPPLETON has no equal as a producer of carriage and general purpose horses. Sire of Lily Stanley, record 2:17½, dam's breeding unknown; Homestakes pacer, 2:16½, dam's breeding unknown; Flora B., 2:30, dam's breeding unknown; Cora C., three-year-old pacer, 2:33¼, dam by Nauduc, Rachel, 2:38, dam's breeding unknown.

DESCRIPTION.

WHIPPLETON is a beautiful black, tan muzzle and flanks, and exceptionally strongly made all over. He stands 17 hands high and weighs 1400 pounds. He is beyond doubt the most uniform breeder on the Coast for size, color and finish. Most of his colts are 16 hands or over, and all bay, brown or black in color. He has never sired a sorrel or white faced colt; if he does I agree to refund service money.

PEDIGREE.

WHIPPLETON, sired by Hambletonian Jr. (sire of Hancock 2:20), by Whipple's Hambletonian; dam Lady Livingston; (dam of Lady Blanchard 2:2¼, Bloomfield Maid, trial 2:22); by General Taylor (sire of dam of Wells Fargo 2:18¾, Nearea 2 2¾, Bickford 2:29¼, Lady Blanchard 2:26¾) and Stella 2:30, son of the Morse horse.

TERMS.

Fifty dollars, with usual return privilege.

ALCONA, 730.

By the great Almont (sire of Westmont, 2:15¾, Puritan, 2:16, Fannie Witherspoon, 2:16¼, Piedmont, 2:17¼, and 31 others with records better than 2:30, and grandsire of Bell Hamlin, 2:13½) by Alexander's Abdallah (sire of Goldsmith Maid, 2:14), he by Rysdyk's Hambletonian. Alcona's dam, Queen Mary by Mambrino Chief, sire of Lady Thorn, 2:18¼, Woodford Mambrino, 2:21½ and 4 others in 2:30 list, and sire of the dams of Piedmont, 2:17¼. Director, 2:17, Onward, 2:2¼, and many others; 23 of his sons have produced 2:30 trotters.

Almont has 38 sons that have produced 2:30 trotters, which number is only equaled by his grandsire, Rysdyk's Hambletonian.

DESCRIPTION.

Alcona is a beautiful chestnut, 16¾ hands high, and weighs 1,300 pounds. His colts possess speed, style, finish and beauty, and if they don't trot fast they command the highest price for carriage and general purpose horses. Eleven of Alcona's colts that have been sold UNTRAINED brought $7,810, an average of $710 per head.

TERMS: $35. Usual return privilege.

Grandissimo,

Full Brother to GRANDEE. 3-year-old record 2:23 1-2.

Sired by La Grande (son of Almont and out of Jessie Pepper, by Mambrino Chief; Jessie Pepper is the dam of Iona 2:22, Alpha 2:23½, Sterling Wilkes 2:33¾, and others) dam Norma, by Arthurton (sire of Arab 2:15, Joe Arthurton 2:20½, etc).

Grandam Nourmahal, (full sister to A. W. Richmond, sire of Arrow 2:13¾, Romero 2:19, and sire of Columbine, dam of Anteeo 2:16¾, and Anevolo 2:19¾ at 4 years old),

DESCRIPTION.

Grandissimo is 3 years old, will make a sixteen hand horse; he is a rich mahogany bay in color and perfect in style and action. Limited to ten mares, at $50 for the season. Usual return privileges.

In case any of my horses are sold before the next season, parties breeding mares have the privilege to return them to any other stallion I have making the season at the same price. Mares kept in any manner desired. Best of pasture the year round, at $1 per month. Some choice young stallions, colts and fillies by Whippleton, for sale reasonable. Correspondence solicited.

MEMO.

The Fast Trotting Stallion, the Best Son of Sidney.

Will make the Season of 1889 at the Oakland Trotting Park.

He was bred by G. Valensin at the Arno Stock Farm, Sacramento County, California; foaled spring of 1885.

PEDIGREE.

By Sidney.
First dam Flirt by Buccaneer.
Second dam Mohaska Belle by Flaxtail.
Third dam by John the Baptist.

Sidney by Santa Claus, 2:17¾, his dam Sweetness, 2:21¼. Strathmore, the son of Santa Claus, has 22 of his get which have trotted in 2:30 or better, up to close of 1887, several having entered since, and Volunteer the sire of Sweetness, has 26 in the same list. Buccaneer is the sire of Shamrock, two-year-old record 2:25, and of Flight, 2:29, and in him are combined the strains of Long Island Blackhawk, Vermont Blackhawk, and the dam of Rysdyk's Hambletonian. Flaxtail figures prominently in both pacing and trotting descendants, and is the sire of the dam of Apex, 2:26, Flight, 2:29, J. H. McCormack, 2:29, and Shamrock, 2:25.

PERFORMANCES.

Memo only trotted in public in his two-year-old form, obtaining a record of 2:49, though he was close to Grandee in a race on the Bay District Track, the second heat of which was made in 2:31½, the first in 2:32. He exhibited phenomenal speed when three years old, and had it not been for a slight strain of his fore fetlock there is little question that he would have shown in public very close to the best record. On the Oakland track he was timed a mile in 2:20½, and frequently trotted quarters in from 32½ to 31 seconds.

DESCRIPTION.

He is nearly if not quite sixteen hands high, and of powerful build throughout. His color is a glossy black, with both fore-feet white and a touch of white on his off hind quarters. His disposition is all that could be desired, and his action superb.

TERMS: One hundred dollars the season, which will commence on the 5th of February and close on the 1st of July. Due care will be taken of mares, but no responsibility for accidents or escapes.

Mares taken and kept as desired by the owners, and at reasonable rates.

Pasturage at $5 per month within the track enclosure; feed first rate, and a living stream of water in the field. There is a double protection against escape, as in addition to a strong fence on the inside of the track, the gates of the outer fence are enclosed at night, which gives almost positive assurance of safety. Address

The Thoroughbred Stallion

Judge McKinstry,

Will make the Season of 1889, from March 1 to July 1, at San Felipe Rancho, near Gilroy.

PEDIGREE.

Foaled 1879, by Grinstead or Thad Stevens, dam Katy Pease; second dam Minnie Mansfield by imp. Glencoe; third dam Allegrante by imp. Young Truffle.

DESCRIPTION.

JUDGE McKINSTRY is a bright bay with black points, 15¾ hands in height, of a conformation combining power and speed. His breeding is one that cannot be excelled. The families on both sides being noted for their gameness and fleetness. Speaking of JUDGE McKINSTRY, Matt Storn, the well-known trainer, says: "He is the fastest race-horse I ever saw on the Sacramento track. He has shown me trials that were marvelous, one especially of a mile and a quarter that was ahead of the present record." He was started in several races when not in condition to run, and even then developed an amount of speed that is characteristic of the noted families from which he descends. His performances are too well known to need repetition here. Good judges of horses state positively that there can be no doubt of his sire, as he is a perfect picture of Grinstead, but rule compels us to name both sires.

TERMS: $75 payable when the mare is moved from ranch, or, $100, with the usual privilege. Good pasturage, $3 per month. Mares at owners risk. All communications must be addressed to

Thoroughbred Stallion

Prince of Norfolk,

Will Make the Season of 1889, from Feb. 15th to July 1st, at Sacramento.

PEDIGREE.

PRINCE OF NORFOLK, ch c, foaled 1881, by Norfolk; 1st dam Marion by Malcolm; 2nd dam Maggie Mitchell by imp. Yorkshire; third dam Charmer by imp. Glencoe; 4th dam Betsy Malone by Stockholder; 5th dam by Potomac; 6th dam by imp. Diomed; 7th dam by Pegasus, etc. Norfolk, the unbeaten son of Lexington, is the sire of Winters, Twilight, Connor, Ballot Box, Trade Dollar, Flood, Duchess of Norfolk, Lou Spencer, the Great Emperor of Norfolk, and many others. Marion's sire, Malcolm, was one of the first horses to bring Bonnie Scotland into notice. Through the Maggie Mitchell cross comes the blood of two of the most celebrated race mares of their day, Charmer and Betsy Malone. The combined speed of these great families seem to be concentrated in the get of Norfolk and Marion, as is instanced in the case of the Emperor of Norfolk, who is a full brother to the Prince of Norfolk.

The blood lines here displayed cannot be surpassed in the world, there not being a single cross that has not been celebrated for speed and endurance, and it is fair to assume that the get of this stallion will show equally well with those of past generations.

TERMS, $30 for the season. We offer first class pasturage on our own ranch, at $1 per month, and the best of care will be taken of mares sent to us, but no responsibility can be incurred. For further particulars address

W. P. TODHUNTER, Sacramento.

SAN FRANCISCO, SATURDAY, MAY 25, 1889.

SUBSCRIPTION
FIVE DOLLARS A YEAR.

CLOVIS, 4909.

The property of S. N. Straube, Esq., Poplar Grove Breeding Farm, Fresno, Cal.

How fast can he trot? is a question that is frequently asked by the owners of brood mares when they make inquiries about stallions, and because he has a low record, that, in the minds of many, is all sufficient. There are other considerations to be thought of, however, as Electioneer has no record, and there are many prominent stallions who are great sires and yet have no mark to their names. In this catagory can be place, Clovis, of whom an excellent representation is given above. When only three years of age he could show better than 2:30, but an accident caused him to be thrown out of training, and he has never had a chance since. Last year, after the season was over, he showed a quarter in 35 seconds, and if properly prepared should be able to trot out a full mile in 2:20. Clovis is seven years old, a beautiful black, 16½ hands high, and weighs 1260 pounds. His sire is the celebrated Sultan, 2:24, who is also the sire of Stamboul, 2:14¼. Ruby 2:19¼, and fifteen others with records better than 2:30. The dam of Clovis is Sweetbriar by Thorndale 2.22¼, sire of Edwin Thorne 2:16½, Daisy Dale 2:19, May Thorne 2:22; second dam Ulster Queen, dam of Volmer 2:22, she being by Rysdyk's Hambletonian. Sultan was by The Moor, sire of Beautiful Bells, the greatest brood mare of the age. The dam of Sultan was Sultana by Delmonico, etc. Mr. Straube has a magnificent place near Frosno, and has entered into the business with the vim of an enthusiast. In addition to Clovis, he owns Pasha and Apex, pictures of whom will appear in the next two issues of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN. On the farm are seventy-five brood mares, all of them first-class, and of the very best blood in America. A full description of the farm and the brood mares will be given week after next.

Sacramento Races.

By our Special Commissioner.

THURSDAY.

Officers of the day: Judges, J. W. Wilson, E. S. Petrie and Chris Green; starter, Worth Ober.

Thursday afternoon, with a splendid programme and beautiful weather ought to have enticed a large crowd, but the pleasure-seeking population did not turn out, and though there was a marked increase in the attendance, they were all racing people, not mere sight seers. Possibly the detrimental reports flying around about Wednesday's races may have been the cause, but anyway the general public stayed away.

The races were productive of some of the best finishes ever seen on a track, Ed McGinnis winning by the shortest of heads, while in the repeat the first two heats were only won on the post. The pool selling was very good and had there only been a couple of books some heavy betting would have been done, as it was the pool sellers were worked to death. The starting was good when they did get off, but really it was too trying for every one's patience, an hour and three-quarters being devoted to the start in the Lessee's stakes.

Five horses faced the starter in the first race of one and one-quarter miles, and were delayed for half an hour at the post, principally by Moses B. who seemed anxious to bolt. Eventually Moses B. got well away and at once took the rails with Wild Oats at his girth and Joe Hoge close up. Passing the stand Moses, Hoge and Wild Oats were head and head with the stable companions a length behind, going round the turn Moses was steadied, and at the first quarter was a length behind the leaders Wild Oats and Hoge, the stable still last a length further in the rear, Hoge showed the way round the upper turn and at the half mile pole in 1:17 was a neck in front of Wild Oats with McGinnis closing up on Moses who was only a length behind the leaders, Welcome two and a half lengths behind; they turned into the straight passing the three-quarter pole in 1:45⅝ in the same order with Welcome five lengths behind, and the four leaders closing up they made a pretty race home. A furlong from home it looked like Moses B.'s race, but Munroe used the whip and the white-faced chestnut swerved across the track injuring Wild Oats' chance, and letting McGinnis up, who ran Moses a severe punishing race to the wire, just winning in the last stride by the shortest of heads, mainly owing to Cook's masterly finish. Moses who finished none too gamely was a length and a half in front of Wild Oats, with Joe Hoge close up fourth and Welcome only half a length behind fifth coming fast.

In the Lessee Stakes for three-year-olds, there were eight starters, and Flood Tide readily sold first choice all through. Lucknow who ran in Albert's colors was second choice probably on the strength of Louis P's running. Whatever chance he might have had was ruined by the long delay at the post in which he was worked to death, while Flood Tide was as steady as a rock. First one and then another spoilt the start while Lurline whenever she did get off, of course refused to return. After an hour and three-quarters had been wasted, they were all sent off nearly even. Lucknow and Spencer at once went to the front and led round the turn, where Songstress ran into Glen Ellen cutting her down, and Glen Ellen in turn knocked Reward against the rails. When the quarter was reached Lucknow was two lengths in front of Duke Spencer with Flood Tide closing up third just in front of Songstress and Glen Ellen, Lurline a bad last. Going round the turn Flood Tide worked his way up and at the half in 52¾ was just in front of Lucknow with Spencer third, Songstress fourth and Glen Ellen fifth. Turning into the straight Flood Tide drew a little away while Lucknow dropped back beaten and Songstress and Glen Ellen were two lengths and a half in front of Reward. The race was now over as Flood Tide increased his lead and romped home four lengths in front of Songstress who beat Reward who had come fast down the stretch by a length, Glen Ellen fourth a length behind, Duke Spencer and Bessie Shannon fifth and Lurline last all the way.

The seven furlongs repeat brought four starters and pools sold briskly, with Hello first choice at $80 and Lady Helen second at $35, while G. W. brought $15 and Longshot $11. There was very little delay and the four horses were sent off with Longshot and G. W. a length in front of Lady Helen. G. W. was steadied going round the turn and Lady Helen and Longshot led by a length past the half mile pole, Hello two lengths in the rear. Turning into the straight G. W. passed Lady Helen and Hello close up and at the furlong pole Longshot was just clear of Hello and G. W. both coming fast Lady Helen close up. Hello then went to the front looking all over a winner until G. W. hard ridden challenged him at the enclosure after a desperate finish beat him by a short head, Longshot two lengths behind, third, just in front of Lady Helen. Time, 1:30.

Mutuals paid $61.15.

Pool-selling was very lively on the second heat, Lady Helen settling down into a big favorite at $40, with G. W. bringing $26 and the field $14.

G. W., who was very fractious at the post, being a headstrong, ill-mannered brute, delayed the start until a quarter past six, and when the flag fell was two lengths behind the leaders. At the quarter pole, Lady Helen running easy, was leading Hello and Longshot two lengths, G. W. two lengths further in the rear. Hello closed the gap to half a length at the half mile, with G. W. coming fast, and as they turned into the straight, Lady Helen was half a length in front of Hello, and G. W. and Longshot a length and a half behind. Half way down the straight G. W. joined the leaders, and they raced away from Longshot, all three riding hard, and after a severe punishing race all round, Narvice finishing brilliantly on Lady Helen, won by half a head; same between second and third (Hello third), Longshot, four lengths back, last. Time, 1:29½. Mutuals paid $9.55.

G. W. now sold favorite, fetching $23 to $20 for Lady Helen, and finally at $25 to Lady H. $15.

At the second attempt the pair were sent off, with Lady Helen a length in front until the quarter pole was reached, when they were head and head; Lady Helen, on the inside, just kept her head in front round the turn and into the straight, where Dennison sat down and rode G. W., but to no purpose, for the filly gradually drew away and won easily by five lengths. Time, 1:31. Mutuals paid, $13.50.

FOURTH DAY.

Officers of the day: J. W. Wilson, Chris Green and Ben Simmons. Timers: Eli Dennison and Al Leach.

Friday was by far the best day of the meeting as far as the weather was concerned, for it was just warm enough without being hot and very little wind to blow the dust. The programme consisted of three trotting and pacing races, which owing to the vexatious delays were not got through until half past seven. Backers of the favorites were successful in every instance, but as usual there was a big kick in two out of the three events. In the two-year-old race Magister won the first heat, and in the second the bell was tapped with Magister all tangled up, pulled almost into a walk. When he did settle down to work the rest were 100 yards in front and although he came very fast down the home stretch he was shut out and the judges distanced him. It would have been much more satisfactory to all if they had not done so, as it was their fault entirely, the start being a very bad one. In the special a complaint was made after the third heat that John Williams was not trying to win with Skelton, and it had that kind of a look, for the gray always came very fast at the finish and could certainly have made a better fight. The Judges warned Williams but allowed him to drive, and Thapsin again won, although the grey caught him at the half and then seemed to be steadied. Palo Alto's Emeline easily obtained a record of 2:27½, which could have been lowered a couple of seconds had there been anything to push her. Distance was waived as the rest declined to start unless it were so. The winner, a nice bright bay, dam by a thoroughbred horse, with a smooth, easy way of going, was well handled by Laird, who drove Marion another Palo Alto mare in the last race, and though she was close up in the last heat was unfortunately a shade too slow for the class. Mr. Chas. Lathrop was in the stand and was highly pleased at the way the mares trotted, although rather disappointed of course that Marion did not get a record.

Time, 2:29, 2:37½, 2:27½.

Auction pools—Emeline, 50; Maduro, 12; Field, 7. Very few pools sold.

Maduro had the pole and after scoring up for about fifteen minutes they were got off with Maduro slightly in front, but breaking immediately they all passed him and Ouida S. trotting well led Emeline three lengths at the quarter, with Maduro last four lengths behind. Going up the back stretch Emeline trotting steadily closed on Ouida S. and carried her off her feet going round the turn a length in front which was increased to two at the half in 1:19 with Blaine three lengths behind Ouida. Emeline now warmed to her work and trotting grandly down the home stretch won by 90 yds., going the last half in 1:12, Blaine caught Ouida a furlong from home but breaking again was beaten two lengths for second place with Maduro twenty lengths in the rear. Time, 2:29.

Mutuals on the heat paid 6 65.

SECOND HEAT.

Auction pools—Emeline, 25; Field, 5; with Emeline barred Maduro, 26; Field, 16.

Ouida was too slow for the rest in scoring up and kept them at the post a long time. When they were sent off Jim Blaine was a length and a half in front. All but Maduro broke before the first turn was reached and at the eighth pole Maduro led Emeline (who had caught quickly) by a length, the other pair three lengths behind.

The same order was maintained past the quarter. At the three furlongs Emeline drew up to Maduro and trotting in fine style opened a gap of three lengths at the half, Maduro being ten lengths in front of the other two. Emeline now trotted away from the rest and going wide to escape the heavy going led ten lengths when fairly in the straight jogging home an easy winner by five lengths. Maduro broke badly at the five furlongs, the others gradually closing up, and the black broke again at the head of the stretch. The three were about level and kept even until a furlong from home where Jim Blaine went to pieces but catching at once joined the other two all breaking again at the drawgate. Blaine catching first beat Maduro a length for second place, Ouida S. two lengths behind was last. Time, 2:37½.

Mutuals—Emeline barred, paid $16.60.

THIRD HEAT.

After very little scoring Maduro started out in front, breaking at once. Emeline, going in her best form, trotted clean away from the field, leading Blaine five lengths at the quarter, Ouida S. a length behind. At the half in 1:15, Emeline was leading seven lengths. Ouida S. having passed Blaine at the turn was second, two lengths in front of him at the half, Maduro beaten off.

Emeline was driven right out for a record, and trotted in magnificent style to the draw-gate, where she skipped, but caught at once and won by 120 yards. Blaine, despite two breaks, caught Ouida at the seven furlongs but went up again, and Ouida finished second a length and a half in front of Blaine, Maduro a bad last. Time, 2:27½.

Mutuals, Emeline barred, paid $7 10. Field vs. Madura.

Time, 2:50½, 2:49, 2:50.

FIRST HEAT.

Auction pools: Linnett $30, King $11, Magister $6, Cameo $5.

Linnett, a hot favorite, a nice looking racy bay mare wearing a hood and hobbles to prevent her from running, was first out, the others following shortly after. Magister had the pole, with Linnett on the extreme outside, they were sent off after about twenty minutes delay, with Magister and Linnett in front. At the furlong pole Magister, and Linnet trotting evenly, were a length in front of the King, who, in turn, was two lengths in front of Cameo, who had broken badly. Magister showed down a little, and Linnet led Silver King a length at the quarter, Magister two lengths behind. Silver King broke just before the turn and was passed by Magister, who, at the half, was five lengths behind Linnet; King a length behind, and Cameo beaten off.

Linnet retained her advantage past the five furlong pole, where Magister and King were level. King, breaking going round the turn, caught handily and closed up on Linnet, and at the seven furlong pole there was only three lengths between first and third, but King breaking again, spoilt his chance, while Magister, taking the whip like an old timer, caught Linnett inside the draw-gate and won by a length, Silver King three lengths further back, and Cameo, who had been running for the last quarter, just saved his distance. Time, 2:50½. Mutuals paid, $24.20.

SECOND HEAT.

Auction pools: Field $30, Linnett $12, King $8. Later—field $30, Linnett $16.

The colts scored several times and the bell was tapped with Magister breaking badly, pulled almost to a walk. Linnett going steadily led at the furlong six lengths, and at the quarter was seven in front of Silver King, who in turn was seven in front of Cameo, with Magister a long way in the rear. They kept the same positions to the finish, Linnet sent right on until eased, winning by thirty yards from Silver King, with Cameo who had been hitching and breaking all the way just inside, and Magister trotting very fast just outside the distance. Time, 2:49.

Mutuels paid $13.30.

Linnett vs. Field.

THIRD HEAT.

No pools sold.

They were soon sent away for the heat. Duke Cameo broke before the furlong pole was reached, and Linnet led the grey two lengths at the quarter, and trotting steadily kept her advantage to the half mile, King breaking up on the back stretch and Cameo plainly out of the race. The grey caught Linnet at the five furlong, but skipped, the mare leading into the homestretch with the grey coming fast, but going up at the seven furlongs the favorite won by four lengths, Cameo just saving his distance. Time, 2:50.

Time, 2:27, 2:27, 2:27, 2:30.

Auction pools—Thapsin 45, Doc 16, Marion 8, Skelton 7.

It was evident that Thapsin was not out for the heat as Doc was a hot favorite in the mutuels. Doc had the pole, Thapsin next and Marion outside. After twenty minutes scoring Doc and Marion were sent off a length in front. The mare broke before the turn was reached, Doc pacing on two lengths in front of Thapsin who was a length in front of Skelton. Before the quarter was reached Marion has passed Skelton and taken third place, but breaking again was a length behind Thapsin and Skelton, with Doc leading two lengths at the half. They turned into the home stretch with Doc going very steadily two lengths in front, Marion on the inside just level with Skelton a length in front of Thapsin who was going easily. Skelton pacing fast closed on Doc, Ober and Williams both driving hard, were level a furlong from home, and kept close together to the distance where Doc went went up, but catching at once just beat the grey out by half a length, the other pair slowing up fifty yards behind. Time 2:27. Mutuels paid $10.10.

SECOND HEAT.

Auction pools—Thapsin 50, Doc 32½, Skelton 11, Marion 9.

With very little time wasted in scoring, Marion went off half a length in front of Thapsin who broke her before the turn and led past the furlong by one length, Marion second a length in front of Doc with Skelton three lengths behind. Marvin again broke and at the first quarter was three lengths Thapsin and Doc who were level, Skelton six lengths behind Marion. The same order was maintained round the upper turn and past the half mile post when Thapsin was half a length in front of Doc, and going fast led two lengths into the straight, Doc second and the grey third, coming at a good gait. Half way down the stretch, Skelton passed Doc and followed Thapsin home a length in the rear, with Doc five lengths off, just clear off Marion. Time, 2:27.

Mutuals paid 6.60.

THIRD HEAT.

Auction pools—Thapsin, 30; Doc, 20; Field, 10.

A tremendous time was wasted scoring for the heat and it was half past six when they were despatched with Marion slightly in front of Thapsin, who passed her going round the first turn and led past the quarter by a length, Marion second a length in front of Doc with Skelton four lengths behind the latter. Marion broke twice before the half was reached with Thapsin two lengths in front of her, Doc two lengths behind, third, and Skelton four lengths further back. Thapsin increased his lead to three lengths at the three-quarters, the others all together, Skelton coming like a whirlwind. Doc was eased and Marion and Skelton followed Thapsin to the furlong pole where Skelton passed Marion and followed Thapsin under the wire a length behind, and half a length in front of Marion, Doc forty yards away. Time 2:27.

Mutuals paid 8 55.

FOURTH HEAT.

Williams was called to the stand and warned. They again scored for a long time, it being half past seven when they were given the word with Marion and Thapsin in front, Skelton last. Marion and Thapsin went round the turn and past the quarter level, with Skelton six lengths behind and Doc six further back. Marion trotting beautifully led past the three furlongs a neck in front of Thapsin, with Skelton gaining slowly and Doc dropping back. They went round the turn in the same order, and Skelton coming fast caught Thapsin at the half, where Marion led the pair a short half length and all three kept together for a furlong, when the mare broke and Skelton stopped with her, Thapsin drawing away won by two lengths. Skelton beating Marion (who broke twice in the stretch) by a head, with Doc a bad last. Time 2:30.

FIFTH DAY.

The last day of the Capital Turf Club meeting was a brilliant one in every respect, the public turning out better than they had on any previous day during the meeting. The programme, an excellent one in every respect, being run on time, while the judging gave every satisfaction, Messrs. Wilson and Green being assisted by Dr. Aby, the well known manager of the Langtry Farm in Lake Co. Worth Ober, too, seemed to rise to the occasion, and sent his charges off without any of the vexatious delays that he had on the preceding days.

The first race was a moral certainty for Rettie B., who, on the strength of her fast work earlier in the week, was backed as though the race was over. The second was a very good betting race, there being a pile of money behind each, though Moses B., Jackson and Welcome had the strongest following. White Cloud and Bessie Shannon, selling as a field, proved third and first, Bessie winning easily. In the beaten three-year-old race, Hoge, who sold second choice to G. W., won cleverly, G. W., the favorite, dying away after six furlongs.

In the other race McGinnis was made a strong first choice in the pools until the last few, when Mozart threatened to usurp the position of favorite, while Moses B., who was started for the second time, sold very low. McGinnis made all the running, winning handily by two lengths a dead heat for second, though it seemed as though Moses B. just got it by a nose.

The authorities declined to have anything to do with the match rach, and it seemed wise of them, considering that the two-year-old was brought up by Stover.

The first race on the card (for two-year-olds) only had two starters, and Rettie B., having worked very well a few days previous, was made a hot favorite. They were sent off at the second attempt, with Alice in front, and Casey sending her right along soon had a two lengths lead, which was reduced to one at the half-mile post, and to half a length in the next furlong, and then Rettie B , running easily, passed Alice, and, Casey after a vigorous effort, gave up the struggle, the favorite winning in a big gallop by six lengths.

The Park Handicap brought out five starters and Moses B. was made a strong favorite, while the rest were all well backed. When the flag dropped Jackson on the rail got well away with Welcome and Jou Jou, Bessie Shannon having the worst of the start. At the first quarter Jackson was half a length in front with Moses B. and Jou Jou running head and head second, Whitecloud just clear of Welcome and Bessie Shannon two lengths off, last. Jackson just held his own round the turn, and past the half mile pole while Welcome dropped back and was passed by Bessie Shannon. Coming round the turn for home, Jackson still led but hugging the rails had all the heavy going while Bessie Shannon with great judgment was brought round on the outside and running easily, had the race won a furlong from home eventually passing the post two lengths in front of Jackson, who was ridden out to beat Whitecloud, a head for the place, Jou Jou close up fourth Welcome fifth and Moses B. pulling up, last.

The Owners Handicap, one and one-sixteenth miles brought three horses out, of whom Moses B. had already one race in him. McGinnis was made a strong favorite until the last few proofs when Mozart ran him a close race for choice.

Directly the flag dropped, McGinnis went to the front and led past the stand, three-quarters of a length in front of Mozart with Moses a length in the rear. The favorite led at the quarter pole by two lengths, with Moses B. three-quarters of a length behind Mozart. The same order was kept around the turn and past the half mile two lengths separating first and second and second and third. Moses B. under persuasion joined Mozart going round the last turn, and at the head of the stretch, McGinnis running wide to escape the heavy going was two lengths in front, with the others in the deep ground close to the rails. McGinnis kept his advantage winning cleverly by two and a half lengths a dead heat for second place.

The fourth race was a handicap for beaten three-year-olds. G. W. was made a hot favorite with Joe Hoge a good second choice. Ober sent them off in short order with Reward slightly in the lead. At the quarter Reward was leading a length, Lucknow second and G. W. close up last.

Hoge closed up on Reward going round the turn and was a neck in front at the half, G. W. third and Glen Ellen last. At the head of the stretch Hoge and G. W. were level, a length in front of Reward who was on the rails. G. W. was soon beaten and Hoge striding on won readily by three lengths, Reward second, a length in front of Glen Ellen, with G. To the Public.

The stock advertised by me in last issue of BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN, were held and accumulated by me through the assistance of friends, for the last ten years. The mare, young Miami, I bought from the late Bill Hall, of Santa Clara, in 1875, then a yearling past, for a good round figure. I have clung to her through might and main, but now she has to go with five of her fillies and one stud colt. The colts I have bred with an eye single to their retaining the trotting instinct, with sufficient backing up to enable them to stay in a contest until the service was over. Trotters are born, not made; and I am satisfied if those colts fall into the hands of an artist, they will add to his fame, and bring fortune to their owner. The two black fillies offered in this lot I did not raise, but have the breeders' sworn certificate as to their breeding. Atlamont who sired one, and the dam of the other all horsemen know, as he trotted at Bay District, two years ago, to wagon in 2:26¾, which was not the measure of his speed. Kisber, the sire of the dam of one and sire of the sire of the other, was considered by horsemen to be one of the greatest stallions living He trotted in a race, a half in 16½ with heavy track, showed a mile in 2:16 private, and came to San Francisco with a record of 2:27½, willing to meet all comers for the championship; got pneumonia on the steamer coming down from Oregon, and died in this city about two years ago, a great loss to this country.

The brown horse offered is out of Lady Hercules, the dam of Arab, is 12 years old; was foaled on Corbett's Place, San Mateo, (Howard Ranch). The first colt she ever had the bill shows bred to Irvington Straight but whether he or the teaser served the mare I refer the public to Corbett. I have held on to him, hoping I would be able to have him worked, as he has gait and breeding enough to trot as fast as any horse living. He has not had harness on for ten years. This sale is absolute on account of exhausted credits and cracked friendship. 3t* F. S. MALONE.

La Siesta.

The Home of the Holstein.

Taking advantage of the auction held last Saturday by Mr. Frank H. Burke at his Menlo Park farm, about three and a half miles from the station, we attended the sale, and at the same time inspected his farm and stock. Eros and his harem were absent at the San Jose track, so that we were unable to see his Nutwood brood mares or spring crop of Eros and Woodnut colts, the premier stallion now on the ranch being the imported Cleveland bay, Ben Hur, winner of the medal at the San Jose exhibition last year. The ranch proper consists of three hundred and sixty acres of rolling land sloping gently toward the East, and fronting on the Santa Cruz turnpike and the San Francisco creek for about a mile. The soil is rather light, friable loam, and quite deep, with a few streaks of adobe. The front of the ranch is sown to rye and vetches, the rye being cropped three times by his Holsteins and cut twice for green feed this year, a heavy crop being now on the ground. At the same time was sown what is seldom used in this country, vetches, which, upon the last crop being taken off for bonnet-straw, will give good feed until the winter rains come again. The entire front of the ranch close to the road is fringed with shade trees, alternate mountain maple and poplar. Back from the flat the ground is laid off into prune, apricot and peach trees, the oldest being two years. His preference seems to be for French prunes, of which he has put out four thousand, and expects to double the amount next spring.

The ranch is laid out into fields of about sixty acres each, and this year is entirely sown to black oats, though at the same time burr-clover and mesquite were sown with Italian rye-grass for summer feed in addition to the stubble after the hay is taken off. Where there are no streams, water is piped to every field from springs giving about six thousand gallons a day, and as they are situated on the highest portion of the ranch the water is brought to the house, barns and corrals under sufficient force to throw water over the tops of all the buildings. The position of the ranch for view of the bay and accessibility to San Francisco could not be improved, though the fruit will hardly command the price that it would in earlier localities. The horse and work barns are large, and commodious, and fitted up with overhead hay-carriers and platform scales. The granary reminds us very much of Eastern barns from being built into the side of a hill, giving access for teams to the upper stories, and also the extremely heavy timbers used in its construction, so different from the ordinary make shifts of the California farmer. The cattle barn is justly considered one of the finest on the coast, and anyone going into the dairy business on a large scale would be well repaid by a visit to it before building. It is one of the largest, roomiest and most commodious affairs of the kind we have ever seen, with accommodation for eighty head of cattle and five hundred tons of hay. All the improvements show that Mr. Burke is in the cattle and horse business to stay. Among the notable prize-winning cattle we noticed the Sweepstake bulls at the last State Fair, the Gold Medal herd of Fresno last year, the winning herd at the Nevada State Fair the same season, besides individuals from the herds shown at Stockton and San Jose.

The auction was fairly attended, but prices realized by no means high; everything offered was sold, the stock consisting mostly of large draught mares and their produce and Polled Angus cattle, Mr. Burke deciding not to breed any more of this class of stock, considering that the profits were not sufficient to pay the interest on such high-priced land. Hereafter he will devote the ranch entirely to the raising of trotting horses, Holstein cattle and fruit, not forgetting his pets, the Berkshire swine.

Before leaving we paid a visit to his recently erected house, which would compare favorably with any of the Pacific Heights residences, but seemingly supplied with every convenience and luxury, and he evidently has great faith in future possibilities, as the house, besides being supplied with heaters, has already gas-pipes and wires for electric lighting.

As we were swiftly carried homeward on the cars we could not help thinking that Mr. Burke, having in the Electioneer stallion Eros (out of the dam of the great four-year-old Sally Benton), the stallion whose produce at the last Stanford sale held in New York sold for $2,200 a head—a higher average than was obtained for the produce of Electioneer himself—in his grand Holstein bulls, winners of sweepstakes and first prizes in two States last season, California and Nevada, his large number of Nutwood brood-mares, and his beautiful and valuable ranch, has as much as any one man could wish for in this world.

THE KENNEL.

Dog owners are requested to send for publication the earliest possible notices of whelps, sales, names claimed, presentations and deaths in their kennels, in all instances writing plainly names of sire and dam and of grandparents, colors, dates and breed.

Second Bench Show, Pacific Kennel Club.

This evening the second show given by the Pacific Kennel Club closes at the Mechanics' Pavilion. The show has been unexceptionable in every respect, both in the dog department and in those set apart for poultry and pigeons. President Ramon E. Wilson has been constant in attendance, and his thorough understanding of all the needs and details of the show has enabled him to meet all emergencies and decide all questions at once, and so justly as to prevent friction and bickerings. The committees for each day were faithful and skilful in securing the careful performance of duties by all attendants. The judge, Mr. William Graham, proved himself not only a keen judge of the non-sporting breeds, but also a thoroughly sound and good judge of the sporting classes. His work was done carefully, without ostentation, and very quickly. Some of his judgments surprised local quid nuncs, particularly in the pointer and English setter classes, in which he put back some dogs which were given high place by Mr. Davidson, who judged last year. Not one of Mr. Graham's awards in the classes mentioned can be excepted to by any but prejudiced or incompetent persons. In the non-sporting classes no one in America can presume so much as to set up an opinion adverse to that enunciated by the keen little Irishman. His awards will remain the standard in all of the breeds shown before him for many a year, and rightly. His coming to San Francisco was the best thing that has ever occurred in a doggy way. He is so evidently a close judge, and is so free from any tricks and unfairness, as to establish confidence at once.

Superintendent E. H. Williams did very well in his irksome office. He had some difficulty in getting good attendants, but after the first day kept everything running smoothly. Every dog presented for admittance was examined by the veterinarian, Dr. Bowhill, a perfectly competent man, to who also may be credited the freedom from foulness and ordors. There was some delay in opening the show because the contractor for the benching was dilatory in his part of the work. Judging of the dogs did not begin until 1 o'clock on Wednesday, but after it did begin, was done expeditiously, being finished by 7 P. M.

Mr. H. R. Brown acted as steward, and had the classes promptly on hand, being effectively assisted by Mr. Clarence A. Haight, President Wilson, Mr. William Schreiber and Secretary Watson, the latter remaining in attendance all day and during the evening.

The attendance on the first day was not satisfactory, but improved on the other days.

In the poultry annex the show is said to have been the best ever made in the State. The judges, Messrs. H. F. Whitman for pigeons and Chas. R. Harker for poultry, were both accomplished fanciers, and their awards were received without dissent. The hour of going to press prevents more than a cursory notice, and the publication of the awards in the dog classes. The winners of specials and the Poultry and Pigeon awards will be published next week.

Typical Dogs.

It is with especial pleasure that the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN presents to its readers this week a few portraits of dogs of more than local note. The fact that it is bench show week has naturally aroused general interest in dogs, and everything incident to them. The Mechanics Pavilion has presented specimens in about ninety classes, the breeds on exhibition numbering nearly forty.

None but those who have resided for ten or more years in San Francisco and studied the six bench shows given here can appreciate the wonderful growth in knowledge and appreciation of dogs evidenced by the show of this week. Not a weed in the show, and a great many fair dogs, with a good many very good ones, must be the opinion of those who have attended. The specimens of which portraits are presented have been selected arbitrarily, but all of them are on exhibition in the dog show but one, and that one if shown would go near to sweeping the bench. The dogs pictured have been chosen because they are quite as good in their various breeds as any in the State. All of them are unexceptionably bred, and the pictures well attest the skill of that veteran limner of dogs, Mr. E. Wyttenbach, whose drawings in various issues of this paper during the six years last passed have attracted general attention and universal praise. No invidious distinction is intended in placing certain of the pictures before others, but the place of honor may fairly be given to the Irish red setter Lady Elcho T.

LADY ELCHO T.

Lady Elcho T., registered at No. 6,451, American Kennel Club Stud Book, and benched at stall No. 130 in the present show, has been pronounced by all judges who have examined her to be of the very highest quality and form as an Irish setter. She has all the strength of character which distinguishes the breed, and is so finely finished as to entitle her to record as the best specimen of the breed in America. Her color is right, and if the dog as she appears is firmly fixed in the memory, those who see her will have a standard by which to judge other specimens of like blood. Lady Elcho T. was bred by a noted fancier of Irish setters, Dr. Wm. Jarvis, of Claremont, N. H., was whelped on April 3d, 1885, and owns as sire the most famous Irish setter alive, Champion Elcho. Her dam also of great note as a prize winner, was Champion Noreen. The owner of Lady is Mr. A. B. Truman of San Francisco, an enthusiastic fancier of red setters and a most successful breeder. Lady has invariably been successful on the bench, having won 1st, in the open class for Irish setter bitches, and two special prizes at the San Francisco show of 1887; 1st and special for best setter of any breed or sex, special for best Irish setter, and three other specials at the Pacific Kennel Club Show, in 1888. She is a fine field performer and a gentle, pleasant animal to have about.

As much opposed to the first dog picture in all but love for its owner, is the second dog shown, Mrs. J. K. Newton's fox terrier dog

TEDDY.

Teddy, benched in the present show at No. 188, is a most likely specimen of a breed that is fast pushing its way into recognition and popularity. Bright, alert, handsome, game and loveable, the fox terrier is of all dogs to be owned by a city resident the one best suited. No better house-guard can be found, and no cleaner pet. Teddy was imported from Australia by Mrs. Newton, and was bred by Mr. Hamilton, a chemist of Sydney, N. S. W., out of a fine bitch imported by him from England. Mr. Hamilton's fancy runs to fox terriers, of which he breeds very many, using only the best attainable stud dogs, and nowhere in the world are fox terriers more carefully bred than in Australia. Mr. Hamilton is well known as an exhibitor, but does not course his terriers. The sire of Teddy belongs to Ben Freeman, a noted Boniface of Sydyey, who never owns less than eight or ten good terriers with which he makes life burdensome to rabbits and other vermin about Sydney. Teddy weighs sixteen pounds, is white, with black and tan points, is cleanly built on punishing lines, is a fine ratter and a most promising sire. Teddy is by no means ridiculous, indeed it is probable that in a fair contest he would rout the next animal portrayed. Mrs. E. F. Preston's fine mastiff

ACTRESS.

Actress, No. 3915 in the Stud Book and No. 6 on the bench of the current show. Actress was bred by Mr. Haldeman, of Philadelphia, and whelped on June 8, 1886. Her sire was Hero III., a dog of good lineage and her dam Nell was also of distinguished ancestry. Actress, or Queen as her mistress fondly calls her, was a likely puppy, and was carried through the ills of puppyhood, with all the solicitude warranted by her merit. She developed slowly and is only now reaching her full, massive, begnignant character as an adult. In the show of 1888, Actress was by much the best mastiff shown and easily won 1st., and three specials. She is a peculiarly kind dog, but yet has the race characteristic which is to guard jealously all property of the owner. Anyone can enter Mr. Preston's premises without molestation from Queen, but if the visitors begins to prowl about, or to leave without calling some inmate, Queen asserts herself and proves an insurmountable obstacle to egress.

The non sporting breeds have not reached full appreciation in California yet, and it was much easier to secure a good portrait of the good English setter,

SIRIUS.

Sirius than of Actress. Sirius is owned by Mr. Thomas Bennet, a distinguished business man of San Francisco in Life Insurance circles, who, nevertheless, is fond of having a splendidly bred and finely broken setter about his home. Sirius was bred by the California Kennel, Sacramento; is three and a half years old; sired by Sportsman, a famous winner at field trials. His dam was Sweetheart by Count Noble--Dashing Novice. Sweetheart, in pace, nose and staunchness, is much the best setter ever seen in California. Her son, Sirius, a very large orange and white dog, inherits all her staunchness, much of her nose, and would have had more than average pace but for long continued sickness while a puppy. Sirius was broken by a noted trainer in Tennessee, and ran at the Eastern and American Field Trials in 1887, not being placed because he was out of condition. In January last at the field trials held near Bakersfield, Kern County, Sirius won second place in the all-aged stake against a good field. He is a fine, upstanding, level headed and in every way superior animal.

Not unlike Sirius in possession of desirable qualities is the fifth of the dogs selected for present portrayal, CLIMAX.

Climax, owned by Mr. E. W. Briggs of this city. Climax is to be seen at stall 73 in the show now open, his stud book number being 10,021. He is a white and lemon pointer of the rarest excellence in all but head, which is somewhat thick and short. He was whelped on April 14, 1885, and was bred by the great pointer breeding club, the Westminister Kennel Club of New York, his sire being Bang Bang and his dam Bellona. The sire is a grandly bred animal for field use, and has proved his worth in many a hard day's contest. The dam was a choice specimen likewise, so that Climax, unlike the mule, can be proud of his ancestry and may even be more proud of his posterity, having established his prepotency. He was thoroughly field broken and won second at the Pacific Coast Field Trial held in 1886, being beaten by a setter named Shot. On the bench Climax has won first and specials, San Francisco, 1886; first, San Francisco, 1888, for light weight pointers. He is of going form, has fine nose, is a biddable nice dog, and is the inseparable companion of his owner. Last, but to many eyes probably handsomest of the dogs shown is JOLLY PLANTE ".

Jolly Planter, owned by Mr. H. T. Payne, of Los Angeles, President of the Southern California Kennel Club, to whom he is the finest of dogs. Jolly, not shown in the show because out of coat, is numbered 8,219 in the stud book, and is by Champion Plantagenet, out of Countess Flirt, both animals of interminable pedigree and many wins upon the bench. Jolly planter has been trained by his owner, and is not only a good looker but a good one to shoot over, His puppies are very fine in every respect, and take to hunting with all the style and vim of their sire. The dog, when in good coat and condition, is a hard one to beat.

Whelps.

California Kennel's Sunlit (Sportsman—Sweetheart), whelped May 15, 1889, eight, four dogs, to owners Loadstone (Gladstone—Flounce).

Mr. M. P. McKoon, El Cajon, Cal., cocker spaniel Daffy (No. 10414 A. K. C. S. B.), whelped five puppies May 12, 1889, by his cocker spaniel Black Bob (No. 10388 A. K. C. S. B.)

Visits.

California Kennel's Llewellin setter bitch Sweetheart (Count Noble—Dashing Novice) to owners Loadstone (Gladstone—Flounce) May 13, 1889.

That impressionable and irrepressible scribe of the Kern County Californian, Mr. C. E. Sherman, intimates that the recent visit of Mr. W. E. Houghton, of Bakersfield, to this city left an attache of this office ill. The report is a "campaign error," and is now nailed to Mr. Sherman's anatomy to remain until personal vengeance can be wreaked.

Dogs and Creation.

There is only one C. J. Peshall, and after him none other can assume the mantle. A curious student, an omnivorous reader, and possessed of rare fancy and unlimited vocabulary, his doggy items and squibs are easily the best things in current kennel publications. His last outbreak is in these words:

"From the book of Genesis and the legends taken from the Apocryphal writings we get a history of the creation, and learn that the dog was created before man. According to one of the Russian fables, God placed the dog on guard at the gates of the Garden of Eden, with the command to keep out and away the Evil One. Evidently the dog at that early day, or in the beginning, possessed the same traits of watchfulness and domestic habits which are now bred in the dog of the present day.

According to Genesis, on the sixth day, God created the dog. The dog, as well as all other animals, were created by the Divine command, and after the creation of the animal world he then said, let us make man in our own image. He did not say let the land bring forth man, or let there be man, but he did say let us make man. Now the query in my mind is this, who and what was God talking to when he said let us make man? Surely not to himself and surely not to a human being, as one had not been created. Now was it not to one of the animals that he had before this time created? He was evidently counseling with some of his former creation, and of or from all animals, is it not fair to assert that he would and did choose the dog, and is it not to this fact that we can account for the ever continuing love and affection of the dog for mankind?

According to Genesis the dog was created out of or by the Divine Command; man was made out of the earth which had previously been created by the Divine Command, while woman was made from the rib of the first man. Now is there not some evidence for believing that old Jimmie's ancestors not only saw but counseled with God in regard to the making of man? If old Jimmie's ancestors were as artistic as he is, in a measure this, perhaps, would account for the beautiful form possessed by the human race. Jimmie loves everything that is beautiful, and this is the reason he loves me. He likes everything that is good, and that is the reason he eats beefsteak. PESHALL.

JERSEY CITY.

Grim's Gossip.

Isaac Murphy is reported to have signed again with E. J. Baldwin.

Have you noticed the advertisement of the Eureka Jockey Club?

James Golden is handling Arab at Boston. He will try to lower his record.

Remember, entries for the two day's trotting meeting at Napa close to-day.

The well known stallion Memo, trial 2:20½, has his book full for this season.

Joe Narvice came down a few days ago to work under Jim Brown at Oakland.

Dan Hennessey will take Welcome and McGinnis to Chicago in about three week's time.

Clerk Lovecraft sends me official notice that The Bard has been declared out of the Suburban.

One week from to-day there will be trotting and running races at the Bay District Track.

H. L. Samuels says he has purchased Pliny from the Palo Alto Stock Farm. Reported price $800.

Poor old Milner is being used as a teaser at the Rancho Del Paso. Surely, he deserves a better fate.

Theo. Winters left Reno last Thursday to join his stable in the East, and purposes staying there until the fall.

Louis P. has been on the shelf since his win at Sacramento, having been blistered for lameness in the shoulder.

Arthur H., three years old, was sold—not given away by any means—for $105 to S. Tryon on the last day at Sacramento.

Chas. Boots was at Sacramento for the races, and had it not been for the postponement would have brought up some of his horses.

When in Sacramento last week, Jim Brown, the trainer, informed me that he was engaged to train some youngsters for Mr. Simpson of Oakland.

At the late Elmendorf sale of yearlings a full brother of Firenzi sold for $7,000. R. W. Walden was the purchaser, presumedly for J. A. & A. H Morris.

The racing associations in and around New York have combined, and will refuse to allow bookmakers on their grounds at less than $100 per day each.

W. L. Appleby left Sacramento for San Jose early on Sunday with the string. Bill will take up several colts and start in work on them for the fall.

Emeline, on Friday of last week, made the 15th horse that W. Laird had given a record better than thirty. Probably before long it will be still larger.

Cy Mulkey's stable came through the city on their way to Portland, Oregon, last Tuesday. Guido, Rosa Lewis, Quebec, Bogus and Tom Daly were among the contingent.

The general opinion in Sacramento is that Geraldine can beat Cyclone, shoes to plates. Probably that was why the Cyclone money did not materialize in that match.

Mike McManus, who is stabling at the Oakland Trotting Park, has had placed in his hands for training two full sisters to Sister, a half sister to Sister and a full brother to Sister.

Last Saturday at Oakland, Mr. Dustin drove Maggie E. a quarter in 35 seconds. On the same day Mr. Rowan drove the well known stallion Memo, the same distance in 32½ seconds.

Jockey Hazlitt informs me that he has severed all connection with Stover and A. Davis. The stable has been divided and Tom will go his own way. He should have done this long ago.

J. C. Simpson's Antee colt, and A. L. Hinds, Clara P., were worked out together last Saturday, three heats, each of which the colt won in 2:45, 2:42, 2:37. Each heat was won by a throat latch only.

The citizens of Spokane Falls, W. T., have directed the editor of the Horseman to purchase the finest suit of clothes procurable for Spokane, who was named after that beautiful Northwestern city.

Wanderer 2d was put up at auction on Saturday at Sacramento and bought in for a thousand dollars. Big Jim's colt certainly ought to be worth more, for when only half fit he made a dead heat with the Czar.

On last Tuesday Stamboul was shod for the first time this season. Since he was placed in Mr. Hickok's hands he has done his slow work barefooted. It was deemed advisable to shoe him to save the foot.

An effort was made to purchase White Cloud to take East, but Appleby put an exhorbitant price on him. If the long-tailed Pinto went East, the books would give liberal odds against him on his appearance alone.

Mike Kelly and Albert Cooper will probably start out together for Chicago in about ten day's time with Flood Tide, Geraldine and Abdiel in the one stable, Louis P., Gladstone, and possibly another in Albert's string.

The Capital Turf Club managed to pull out without losing money on their venture. It is almost certain now that next year the directors of the State Fair Association will hold a spring racing meeting without any trotting.

The Cyclone crowd fairly badgered Kelly into a match at Sacramento, Geraldine vs. Cyclone, $1000 a side, 600 yards, and then when they met to sign the agreement and put up forfeit in Whitehead's hands, backed down.

Well, what about the Australian stock now? A Sir Modred wins at Baltimore, a Sir Modred wins at Gravesend, and Cheviot, a full brother to Sir Modred, is the sire of Little Bernie, who won the Nursery Handicap lately in Australia. J. R. Haggin and Dr. Ross are to be congratulated in owning two such grand producers. It is a great pity that both these sires are held for private use.

Tyrant is turned out in a corral at the Arcade (Rancho Del Paso) with seven barren mares, including old Sleight-of-Hand, who, considering her age, looks remarkably well. The lord of the harem looks as well and handsome as ever.

Trotting at the late Sacramento meeting was in almost every instance unsatisfactory, a kick, and a pretty vigorous one too, being made in the Thapsin—Skelton race. Why is it that trotting men do not seem to be able to have a day without unseemly rows?

Chas. Lathrop journied up to the State Capital specially to see Emeline and Marion trot. The former easily obtained a record of 2:27½. She is bred in the right way being by Electioneer, dam Emma Robson by Woodburn; second dam by Lady Bell by Belmont.

On Thursday of last week, a match race took place at Oakland for $100 a side between G. Valensin's b m Santa Reta, and C. Willoughby's b g Sid Julien. The race was best two in three and the Valensin mare won easy in 2:59 and 2:39. Sid Julien was distanced in the last heat.

The English papers say that the various turf scandals that occured there have procured a wonderful re-action among racing men, and that now such a thing as pulling or roping is never heard of. A re-action of that kind might do good here.

Marion, six-year-old bay mare by Piedmont, dam Lady Morgan by Rysdyk's Hambletonian, ought to soon have a record but at present she is rather erractic and too much given to running, possibly though that was owing to the class being too fast for her.

The cute secretary of the Capital Turf Club, F. A. Jones, has, after his success in the trotting line, decided to give up the grocery business and go in for trotting horses. Last week he sold out his interest in the business, and bought a share in a large livery stable.

Dr. Aby was at Sacramento last Saturday looking stouter than ever. California air evidently agrees with him. R. P. Ashe who came up the evening before returned with the Doctor on Sunday to Middleton, Lake County, intending to stay a few day and see the beauties of that section.

The Breeder and Sportsman, in its last two numbers, gave the engravings of two noted local horses, Racine and Al Farrow. The pictures are remarkably good and true to life and reflect credit on the Breeder. They are well enough done to frame, especially the Racine cut.—Racing World.

Percy Williams showed good generalship in laying Lady Helen up the first heat, as Hello and G. W. ran themselves out, and the mare coming out first won cleverly in the next two heats. The owner of the mare, Tom Williams, was not present, but his plucky, pleasant brother attended to the pool-box in great shape.

Matt Storn will make a trip to Eureka with three or four horses in July for the racing there, and I hope he will have better luck than he had at Sacramento. Our correspondent there wishes to express his appreciation of the many delicate attentions paid him there by the genial, courteous Matt.

On Saturday last Dr. Cutler dotted Flood Tide's off fore-leg to remove a small splint, and on the same day Dr. McCollum used the irons on both Larghetta's hocks. Dr. Aby's Jils Johnson colt, who is in Matt Storn's charge, ought to be improved by the operation, which may not be the last he will undergo ere long.

Samuel Stewart refused $3,000 for his brown mare Betsey M. yesterday from Captain Kohl, of California. Jimmy Green has developed Betsey M.'s speed. He drove her in her race recently, when she went a last half in 1:12.—Philadelphia Record.

I have received from friend Brewster, of the Washington Park Club, Chicago, a most elegant hand book containing all the entries for the stake races, and also the various programmes for each day. The entries compose the best horses in the country, and the meeting gives promise of being the best ever held at the Lake City.

Murray, the trainer, and Van Gorden, the manager of the Hearst stable will find things pretty hot for them when they return. Under rule 122, they cannot be fined less than $100 for knowingly infringing the rule, which they did, when they enticed Hanger Jones' boy away and took him East. This fall on their return, the Directors will investigate the case which is held in abeyance until then.

The Gilroy Advocate says: "The Sargent Bros. have sold one of their Nutwood stallions for $5,000, also a driving team of the Hawkins and Nutwood blood for $2,000. Gov. Waterman offered $1,800 for the team, but another Sacramento man met the price asked. The Sargent Bros. are noted for breeding good stock. One of the Jim Mulvena colts sold at $500 is about to be shipped to Australia."

Cy Mulkey says that he wishes to have the statement contradicted "that Guido was not started on account of the genuineness of the sale." I saw Mr. Wilson, the President, immediately afterwards, and he informed me that first of all it was claimed that Mrs. Tupper owned the horse, but as that did not work, Mulkey appeared with a bill of sale and the directors concluded not to let him start in any case.

In addition to the get of Anteeo mentioned in last week's Breeder and Sportsman, Mr. G. A. Tupper of Santa Rosa, has a fine one of which he writes to say that "She is the finest of the Anteeo stock in Sonoma county The filly has been named Santa Rosa, and is now in training, and can beat any Anteeo colt that has no record."

The starting at Sacramento was good in one way for they were all sent off pretty evenly, but the delays at the post were too wearying for anything. Why on earth do not all the associations unite on one man and pay him a yearly salary; then we might possibly have good starting. At present a starter is like a swallow, here to-day, and gone to-morrow.

There will be a grand chance on Tuesday next at the Bay District track to bid on some of the best bred horses in the State. On that day F. S. Malone, Esq., will offer at public auction a choice collection of brood-mares, colts and fillies, and it will be well for all breeders in the State to be on hand and see what is offered for sale. The entire lot will be sold without reserve, and if there are not some rare bargains I shall be much mistaken.

Explosion and Maud Hampton are the queens of the Rancho del Paso matrons, being placed in a paddock specially prepared for them. None of the other illustrious mares are allowed in the vicinity of John Mackey's pets.

St. Carlo, the winner of the Great American stakes for two-year-olds, is by imported St. Blaise, dam Carnia by imported Ill-Used. No wonder he won, for St. Blaise (a Derby winner in 83) is a son of Hermit and Fusee, and St. Carlo's dam is one of August Belmont's best mares.

The Dwyer Bros. have refused to permit telegraphic descriptions of races to be sent from the Brooklyn track. They assert that many would-be spectators drift into the pool rooms instead of patronizing the race track. This probably explains the fact that our local pool rooms no longer describe races at Brooklyn.

Billy Appleby had White Cloud and Lady Helen left in the repeat race at Sacramento, and the general impression was that he could not start both. Had he wished he most certainly could, as the Blood Horse Association decided some few years ago that a public trainer could start more than one, provided that he did not manage them in the race, and, also, that they were run in separate interests.

The celebrated stable of Theodore Winters arrived at the Fair Grounds, at St. Louis on the 15 inst. The loss of The Czar en route was a great misfortune, as he was valued at $25,000 and showed that he would rival the fame of his great brother, the Emperor of Norfolk. The two cracks of the stable now are the three-year-old Don Jose and the two-year-old El Rio Rey, also a brother to The Czar and Emperor.

The McAfee & Baldwin sale of lots in Bakersfield and lands in Kern County last week was an unprecedented success. The town lots went off readily at good prices to buyers who intend to establish homes in this most attractive town. The farm lands were sold in small tracts to intending residents, and at rates that were fair to both sides. Bakersfield is well on its way to a growth that must make it a leading city of California.

There is a rumor current that Lord Marcus Beresford, who does the starting at all the principal race meetings in England, has sent to Thomas Francis Meagher, the starter of the Pacific Coast Blood Horse Association, a present of a suit of the new style of clothes worn by his lordship in the discharge of his duties. The suit consists of a green cutaway coat with four silver buttons, red waistcoat, and green knee breeches. This rather striking attire, coupled with the heavy blackthorn cane which the wearer will undoubtedly carry, should strike terror to the hearts of the jockeys, and insure good starting.

How is this for cuteness? At Sacramento, some few years ago, three horses were left in the repeat race. The trainer of one refused to start, and in order to induce him to start one of the others offered to pay his entrance, and the other agreed to give him half first money if he won; the easily persuaded trainer ran second in both heats, got half first money, the whole of the second, and had his entrance paid by the loser, and thus made more money than the winner. Mike was only young then, but certainly his cripple paid well that day.

From a letter received here I glean that Mr. Winters' great colt was taken ill immediately on leaving Reno, giving Mr. Estill, who was in charge of the horses, much concern for the safety of the colt, in whom he had so much pride. By chance a veterinary surgeon was on the train who recommended that The Czar be taken on to Omaha. Following the instructions of the doctor, the ailing horse continued the journey and was taken to the Trotting Park at Council Bluffs, where he arrived on Sunday, May 12th. The suffering animal had every attention paid him possible, but he was beyond human aid and succumbed on the following day.

Once more we wish to call attention to the great sale of imported and home-bred shetland ponies, standard and thoroughbred trotters, saddle horses and yearlings, which will be sold on Monday, June 3d, at the Missouri Horse Exchange, St. Louis, Mo. A large portion of this consignment was bred by Thos. T. Turner, Normandy, Mo, and are fully guaranteed to be as represented. From the fact that Mr. Turner has made the matter of the proper selection of his stock a study for years, and no expense or trouble spared, this sale offers an opportunity seldom, if ever, to be met with, and every animal will be sold absolutely to the highest bidder, as Mr. Turner, through other business engagements, cannot devote any further time or attention to his stock farm.

The sale of Guy May 14th for $29,750 would have been a surprise if it had not been an open secret that Mr. Gordon did not mean to part with him, and that he, as well as Clingstone, was only placed in the catalogue to draw the buyers. Of course no one is able to say positively that the sale was an advertising dodge, but every horseman believes that such was the case. The purchaser of Guy is not a horseman, and is a merchant in Cleveland. It would have been the natural inference that the purchase was only a cover for Mr. Gordon when such a price was quoted. Guy is unquestionably the fastest gelding on the trotting turf, but the alleged price is excessive for a good actor, which Guy never was, with a 2:12 record. The re-purchase of the horse by Mr. Gordon and the withdrawal of Clingstone is ample proof of the insincerity of the sale, and the comparatively low prices brought by the other animals sold clinches the argument.—Sporting World.

Dr. Ross has brought back from San Simeon the following Palo Alto mares: Imported Fairy Rose (Kisber-Hippolyta), the dam of Racine. Imported Music (bred by the Queen at Hampden Court), by Prince Charlie, dam Mutiny by Adventurer. Imported Amelia, by Lowlander, dam Melissa, by Hurbert. Precious Lever-Frolic, by Thunder, second dam imported Siskin. Precious is the dam of Peel and Philander. Bessie Hooper, a three-year-old filly by Joe Hooker out of imported Queen Bess, by Strathconan, fifth dam, old Alice Hawthorn. The above five mares have been bred to the doctor's imported horse Cheviot, an own brother to Sir Modred, who ought to nick well with them, as, of course, his breeding is exceptional, while his formation is very good, his head and neck being very bloodlike, while a better back and hind quarters were never seen. As a racehorse he was a decided success in New Zealand; in fact, the Doctor at first thought of racing him here, but finally resolved to stand him at Senator Hearst's ranch, and, although never advertised, has had already twenty-one mares.

Editorial Notes.

The California horsemen won a lot of money in Montana last year, and will try to do the same this, but they must remember that the second payment for the stake races are due next Saturday, June 1st. Do not wait until then but send on your money at once. Delays are dangerous, and it is liable to slip your memory.

While alluding to associations, we desire to call attention to the fact that on June 1st the entries close for the first meeting of the Pacific Coast Trotting Horse Breeders Association. Let all make entries who can, and increase the interest in the new organization. The association will be of benefit to every breeder in the State, and consequently the breeders must support it as far as possible. Next Saturday is the last day to make entries and we expect to see a large list. Read over the advertisement carefully and make up your mind to make at least one entry.

No. 1 of Goodwin's Official Turf Guide for the ninth season is at hand, and, as usual, is replete with information, all the old features being retained and several new ones added. Every trainer, jockey and owner in the country should have this convenient work at hand, as no horseman can afford to be without it. It will be issued regularly twice a month, at a cost of fifty cents per number, by the proprietors, Goodwin Bros., 241 Broadway, New York.

The Fresno Fair Grounds Association.

There is no association in the State of California today, that would dare to offer $20,000 in one purse, outside of the one whose name forms the caption of this article. While they have already issued the prospectus of the annual fair, at which there will be two Guaranteed Stakes contested for, in addition to the usual three and four races per day, they announce this week that there will be still another Guaranteed Stake of $2,000 this time for 2:20 trotters, which will also be brought to a decision at the Fair Meeting. This is a stake well worth contending for, and as there are so many horses now in the State, that can come so near touching the mark, there should be no trouble in filling the stake, in fact from promises already made it is almost a foregone conclusion that this event will have an exceedingly large number of nominators. Owners in reading the advertisement must bear in mind that only a small sum is necessary at time of entry, the balance being paid on the installment plan. The stakes already filled for the first meeting comprise the Raisen Stake, the Guarantee Stake and also stakes for one, two and three-year-old trotters. The purses and premiums will amount to over $12,000, which goes to show that the Fresnoites are determined to be second to none in the size of money offered.

But this is not all, there will also be another meeting given in November at which it is determined to give a $20,000 purse for thoroughbreds, the distance to be two miles and repeat. In the advertisement the management says:

"The intention of the Directors of this Association is to make this place a central point for racing in California. They recognize the fact, in order to do so, they have got to give large purses in order to get first-class horses. Knowing they have as well-appointed grounds and as good a track as there is in California, having first-class stabling and the best Club House on any track in California, and plenty of fine grass for horses the whole year, and by dealing justly and fairly with the horsemen we hope to receive their patronage. We are situated about half way between San Francisco and Los Angeles, which makes it an accessible point for the patronage of the whole State.

Being aware that the responsibility, to a great extent, of the association, is not known outside of our own State, we herewith attach a certificate, signed by the Banks of this city, as to the responsibility of the Association.

Annexed to the circulars which are being issued in conjunction with the entry blanks is the following:

"We, the undersigned, do certify that the Fresno Fair Grounds Association is perfectly responsible, and its statements are reliable.

Lewis Leach, President Farmers' Bank.
O. J. Woodward, President First National Bank.
Louis Einstein, President Bank of Central California.
H. D. Colson, President Fresno National Bank.
W. H. McKenzie, Cashier Fresno Loan & Savings Bank.

The conditions of the race are: Entrance fee, ten per cent. of purse, payable as follows: July 15th, $250; August 15th, $250; September 15th, $250; October 15th, $250; November 1st, $1,000; when horses are to be named and color given to riders. Purse divided into four monies—$10,000 to first, $5,000 to second, $3,000 to third, and $2,000 to fourth horse; three to enter and two to start; American Association Rules to govern. Any horse distancing the field, or any part thereof, shall only be entitled to first money. All nominations must be accompanied by amount of first payment, or will not be recognized as an entry, and all payments thereafter must be paid when due, or nominator forfeits all money paid in, but in no case will the nominator be held for more than he has paid in.

The Association reserves the right to postpone the race, on account of bad weather or track, until the first good day and track.

Weights will be as follows:—

2 year old	79 lbs.
3 " "	109 "
4 " "	122 "
5 " "	124 "
6 " "	124 "

With the usual allowance in heat races of 5 lbs., mares three years old and upwards shall be allowed 3 lbs. Colonial-bred horses foaled in Colonial time, i. e., between August 1st and December 1st, allowed as follows: Two and three-year-olds, 8 lbs; four-year-olds, 5 lbs; five-year-olds, 3 lbs. No allowance for Colonial-bred horses over five years, except the usual sex allowance.

There will also be liberal purses offered for four days' racing, to be given the same week as the race takes place. Programme to be issued later on.

To warrant the success of the undertaking, the Directors have sent Mr. Frank Baldwin a sa special commissioner to the Eastern States to get as many entries as possible. He will attend a day or two each at Latonia, St. Louis, and Chicago, and then go to Coney Island and Monmouth to further the interests of the scheme. Entries can be made to Mr. N. I. Baldwin at Fresno. Any persons desirous of procuring entry blanks and conditions can get them at this office.

The Breeding of Trotters.

Every year it is becoming a question more important to the many directly concerned, and in a degree to the greater number who feel interested in the subject, whether there is what may be termed a royal road to breeding of trotters. Authorities differ. Some hold that the infusion of thoroughbred running blood is not beneficial to products. To this is the contention that the highest speed and better qualities are to be obtained only by thorough breeding. And between these are manifold opinions, with clearly defined judgment. Estimated by the only practicable criteria—turf performances—the pursuer to definite results is involved in curious labyrinths, out of which he places himself in the predicament of the traveller who chose between unmarked cross-roads, and is told by the first person he meets at the outcome: "Had you taken the other road you would have been all right," or, "Why, Mister, you are entirely out of your way." And as he pauses and ponders, the next he meets informs him that, to "keep straight on," he will come out right, if he "doesn't take any more turns." It is a condition of new countries, as it is of new theories.

So high an authority as J. H. Wallace maintains that the blood of thoroughbred horses—that is of runners—is not conducive to breeding trotters of high speed. In fact, he holds strong objection to the thoroughbred alliance. He has his followers in belief. In contention are some of the most careful and most successful breeders and accomplished turfmen in the country. Actually, the tentative period to the determination of the subject is still under trial. Scientists are unable to arrive at exact conclusions until years of experiment and profound study have been devoted. Learned physiologists and anatomists yet widely differ as to mankind, notwithstanding the Ages which have rolled since Hippocrates and the astonishing discoveries of the present century in vital science. The question recurs, Who shall decide when doctors disagree?

Hark Comstock contributes an able article upon the subject to the New York Spirit of the Times, May 4th. He believes in thoroughbred blood, for bone and sinew, for flesh and mettle, for endurance and speed. These are the controlling and essential qualities which mark the runner and the trotter alike. A cold strain impairs either in performances. Inbreeding is the true test and task. Attention should be given to this prime essential. Huxley's "survival of the fittest" more nearly illustrates the quality. And his proofs came through experiment and development to demonstration. The exact determination of the question in point must await similar process to conclusion.

It should be borne in mind that racing, with speed and recorded time, is still comparatively modern. Our earliest records are English, and the oldest of these—of Newmarket—only a little more than two hundred years ago, and consisted solely of running. The ancient Olympic races and those of Rome were feats more of skill in management than of speed. But racing calendars and studied breeding and training date no farther back than 1727, when the importation of Arabians and Barbs had caused new rivalry in turf sports. The great races of England are only for runners, and breeding for trotters is still rare in England, while very great attention is devoted to the breeding of runners.

It is only in the United States that the breeding of trotters had been cultivated and trotting races practised and patronized upon the turf—mile dashes and heats and long distances, computed in exact time. Formerly, from 1825 down to 1855, long distances, from 10 miles up to 100 miles, were not infrequent. Kentucky Prince trotted 10 miles in 28:8½; Trustee, 20 miles in 59:35½, and John Stewart in 58:05½; Black Joke, 50 miles in 3 hours, 57 minutes, saddle, and Ariel in 3 hours, 55 minutes, 40½ seconds, harness; Conqueror, 100 miles, harness, in 8 hours, 55 minutes, 53 seconds, with 15 short rests inclusive; and the pair Master Burke and Robin, wagon, including rests of 28 minutes, 34 seconds, in 10 hours, 17 minutes, 22 seconds. Performances of this kind are no longer attempted, except on very rare occasions. They are cruel to the horse and of no ultimate good. Mile heats are the generally accepted rule. The mile has been reduced from three minutes, fifty years ago, to two minutes, eight and three-quarter seconds. This record will be reduced, it is believed, to even two minutes. What has done it? Manifestly breeding and training. And the ultimatum is not yet.

The early American trotter was no more than the fleet roadster. The patrons of the trotting turf were simply sportsmen and fanciers. The great meetings were for thoroughbreds and runners. These attracted the noted turfmen, the rich and the multitude. The care of breeding was directed in that line. The development of trotters was largely accidental. There were no breeding farms for trotters. Lady Suffolk was a phenomenon, without accurate traceable pedigree. There was doubt as to the pedigree of the Morgans; and Blackhawk, Ripton, Confidence, Americus and others of the period were mainly superior roadsters. A trotting stallion was quite unknown. Lady Suffolk, squarest of trotters as she was the speediest, had no son or daughter of her form.

Within the thirty years that breeders have devoted attention to trotters, the character of turf sports has been improved in marked degrees. Breeding farms for trotters have been established with extraordinary results. It is the most lucrative branch of the industry, as it is the best patronized. It produces grand development of the horse. To the Hambletonian line can be traced the greater degree of prized and commanding qualities, but there are other lines famous and nobly worthy. Enumeration is not required here, and an omission might be deemed purposeful. The type is alone essential. In it the results of more intelligent breeding are demonstrated. How much thoroughbred breeding the infusion of thoroughbred sires and dams has had to do with this superior development, may be confidently committed to the judgment of observant and competent breeders and turfmen —for them to say.

The effect is palpable. There must be a reasonable cause. What is it? Common clay remains common clay, however much it is worked and moulded. Delf never becomes porcelain through manipulation. If improvement results from admixture, investigate to what further degree the process can be wrought onward to the utmost perfection attainable. If a cold strain has deleterious effect, it is reasonable to infer that a pure strain will have beneficial effect, and as the most wonderful trotter of no pedigree has never equaled the average of line of high grade or thorough breeding, the fact must be its own interpretation. It requires years to the demonstration, but so long as superior breeding produces superior results, common sense prompts continuance of the system. All the time, since the better methods of breeding trotters of high grade, the speed records have been notably lowered and the value of trotters has greatly advanced.

A Horse Infirmary.

Doctors Bowhill and Eagen have taken a long lease of the premises 2209 Jackson street, and fitted up a very complete horse, cattle and dog infirmary, something sadly needed in San Francisco. The place has a frontage of sixty feet, running back a hundred and thirty-seven feet, to which is an annex or L thirty feet square. Fronting on the street is a good residence with all the modern conveniences, one of the principal rooms of which is fitted up as a business office.

In addition to the usual paraphernalia incidental to an office of the kind, the walls are tastefully arranged with the pictures of celebrated dogs and well-known horses. One of the back rooms is used as a repository for the surgical instruments, there being every thing necessary for an operation from the most minute lancet to the hobbles and firing irons. In the rear of the office is a grass plot about thirty feet square which will be used for operating purposes; this part is fenced in with lattice work, and is not used except for operations. Along the fence there are arranged ten good kennels, all of which are already filled with patients. Passing into the stable yard proper there are found two stables, one on the left and one on the right. The one on the left has accommodations for six horses, four of the compartments being the usual size, while the others are large, roomy box stalls, fit for any turf monarch. The lofts have capacity for fifty tons of hay and several tons of grain, in addition to which are rooms for the use of the stablemen. The other stable is being fitted up into five box stalls, leaving room for ten more kennels if needed for the canine patients. There is plenty of room for buggies and wagons, hot and cold water, laboratory, etc. Dr. W. F. Eagen is the veterinary surgeon to the Board of Health, a position formerly occupied by Dr. Bowhill. The latter has for a long time been connected with the veterinary department of the Breeder and Sportsman, and notwithstanding his increased labors, will cheerfully answer at all times any questions asked relating to the ailments of domestic animals.

Wm. McDonald, Livermore.

The stallion inquired after by W. F. Smith in your last issue was named Metacomet, and his pedigree, as far as remembered by the party having him here, was, Metacomet by the Black Sultan; Black Sultan by General Knox. Metacomet's dam by the Drew horse. He was bred near Newport, Maine, and brought to California by one Geo. Adams, a lumber merchant in San Francisco.

The stallion (Comet) taken to Oregon by Mr. Pratt was a Morgan horse, and was raised by Mr. Pratt, who now resides in Livermore, Cal.

Dr. Cattanach on "Big Head."

Meeting Dr. Cattanach, V. S., the other day at Mt. St. Vincent Hotel, in Central Park, says the N. Y. Spirit, he related some curious particulars of the now celebrated broodmare Jaconet, the dam of Belvidere and Sir Dixon. Beyond the fact that she is a full sister to Iroquois but little is known of the mare. "It was the year Duke of Magenta was a two-year old," explains the doctor, "that Mr. Pierre Lorillard sent me six two-year-olds suffering from 'big head,' which, as you know, is the worst disease known in America, it being a degeneration of the bones of the head. Most of them were of the high-priced lot of Leamingtons he had purchased of Mr. Welch, and among them was Jaconet. I cured the entire lot, but when I was ready to discharge them as cured Mr. Lorillard said he wouldn't have them on his farm, he being afraid of contagion, and made me a present of them. Jaconet was as fast a filly as you ever saw, but could not stay far enough for the races of those days, and, as I kept only steeplechasers, I had no use for her and traded her with Mr. Welch, her breeder, taking in exchange a yearling filly, by Leamington—Elastic, which I called Caller On, after the famous mare with which I'Anson had won the St. Leger in England. I never heard what became of Jaconet until I saw she was the dam of Belvidere and Sir Dixon, and as both are such fine race-horses, it would look as if 'big head' was not inheritable."

Dr. Cattanach's narrative was quite interesting; but to this there is to be added another chapter of even as great interest, in which Jaconet played a part. In the autumn of 1881 Mr. Welch desired to reduce his stud, and as Messrs. Clay & Woodford were building up the now noted Runnymede Stud, Mr. Catesby Woodford came on to New York, and Mr. Welch sold him six mares, among them being Jaconet, Mundane, Lady Motley and Mary Clark. It was a most disastrous "culling out" for Mr. Welch, for Jaconet produced Belvidere and Sir Dixon, Mundane, Blue Wing, and Mary Clark produced Pure Rye.

Mr. Lorillard's Intentions.

Mr. Pierre Lorillard is about to return to the turf; at least, we have reason to believe he contemplates doing so. Every true racing man will rejoice to see the cherry and black of Rancocas once more among our "silks and satins," says the New York Spirit. We are well aware that there are those who could never see any good in Mr. Lorillard, but to those we would reply that he has done more for racing than any man in America, bar Mr. Jerome. The latter conceived grand race-courses, but Mr. Lorillard gave racing the first impetus which made it a great, popul r sport. It was Mr. Lorillard who first conceived the plan of mammoth stakes, now so popular. It was he who first framed the declaration clause which rendered such stakes possible, by gaining vast numbers of nominations. It was he who for eight years added $5,000 in gold cash to the stake which bears his name. (Query: Where is there another owner who has done this?) It was he who imported more great English stallions and mares (Mortemer, Pizarro, Pontiac, Saxon, etc.,) than any one man. It was he who maintained the finest racing stable in the land, regardless of cost. It was he who arranged more sensational match races than any owner of our time. Finally, it was he who made the first successful invasion of England with American horses. Up to that date racing in America had languished. The success of Parole and Iroquois in England was the means of first arousing the interest of the American public in racing. Let us give a man credit for what he deserves.

Two years ago at Monmouth Park, Mr. Lorillard told us that if he ever returned to the turf he would not keep so extensive a stable as he had, nor would he maintain so extensive a stud. When he raced before Mr. Lorillard seemed to have an idea that money would accomplish all things, and that he had only to pay the greatest prices to secure the best race horses or the best stallions and broodmares with which to breed them. We think his experience showed him that it is impossible to "corner" the market in racing, although his last year on the turf (1885) was the most successful he ever had. A great unwieldy establishment, such as he maintained, was so fraught with cares and anxieties that it robbed his sport of all the element of pleasure. With the experience he gained during the eleven years he raced he ought now be able to steer clear of the reefs and enter upon a career which will be both pleasant and profitable. With the advent of Messrs. Lorillard, Morris, Hearst and Kelly, it would look as if racing was on the threshold of an Augustan era.

Mr. Lorillard said the other day that he was purchasing mostly fillies, as he, being unable to sell the Rancocas farm, had determined to restock it. He would build up another stud by purchasing yearling fillies and turning them out until they were old enough for breeding. He gave this color by purchasing fifteen fillies at Tuesday's sale through Dr. Carter, the Rancocas veterinary, but he also purchased some very fine colts and manifested as much interest in the proceedings as he did in the early days of Parole and Faithless.

Mr. W. L. Colville, travelling representative of the new Baker gun, made at Batavia, N. Y., has been in San Francisco for a week or more. He leaves on Tuesday next for Los Angeles, Arizona, New Mexico, Texas and the South. Mr. Colville has long been known to reading sportsmen as "Dick Swiveller," over which non de plume he has contributed a great deal of matter about guns and powders to the various sportsmen's journals. A bright, well-posted and very entertaining man, he will not fail to establish himself in the respect and regard of all with whom he comes in contact. The gun which he travels for possesses many excellences, notably that of costing but little. It is a plain, sound weapon, intended for those who care more for actual shooting than for dainty finish. We commend Mr. Colville to the good graces of sportsmen along his line of travel.

Mr. Ramon Wilson reports that shad in large numbers have been taken in a branch of Napa River, known as Milligan Creek, far above tidal influence. Milligan Creek ordinary is an insignificant brook, but just now is running large because of recent rains. We have not noted a similar proof of the increase of shad and it is good news.

Scientific Facts About Carps.

The carp belongs to the Linnæan genius of abdominal fishes, the family type of cycloid fishes in the system of the great Agassiz. In an examination of one recently, I found it had two bladders instead of one, as is usual with most fish; they communicated with each other through the medium of a narrow neck. With this peculiar apparatus the fish buoys itself to the surface without any apparent exertion. There is a connection between the bladder and the gullet, into which he forces air from the bladder when he desires to increase his specific gravity, and sink to the bottom. The carp can probably secrete air from the blood. This fish has a pair of fins capable of making four motions, two by expanding and shutting the rays, and two by extension and flexion, for which proper muscles are supplied, with distinct muscular apparatus for each motion, so arranged as to regulate the movements of the fins with perfect nicety, expanding and closing them with the same facility that a lady does her fan. These fins are not used for effecting progression, but merely for inclining, stopping or turning the body, and likewise retaining position in the water. The vertical fins prevent rolling when the fish darts forward, and the other fins are auxiliary instruments, mostly used in modifying the direction and adjusting the impulse derived from the tail, which is truly the oar of progression, rudder, and weapon of defense. Its action upon the water is literal, similar to an oar, which in the vertical position it closely resembles, and every part of its wonderful mechanism is perfectly calculated to promote progress, and that it may at all times be free and unimpeded. Nature has placed all the important viscera near the head, not allowing even room for the neck. The bodies of all fish are continuous with the head, as you may have observed, without an intervening thorax, the object being to leave space for the expansion of the coccygeal vertebræ, and the muscles which form nearly two-thirds of the bulk of the carp of other fish; thus all impediments are removed from mobility.

On examining the peculiar manner in which the vertebræ of the carp are connected, was surprised to find that two concave surfaces of adjacent vertebræ were applied one to the other by the junction of the margins by an elastic ligament, which bends by the application of force to one side of the spinal arrangement, and is restored to its former position when the force ceases to act. Though the extent of motion in each separate joint is very small, but by multiplication of the entire series contained in the spinal structure, the effect resulting is great. A gelatinous substance fills each cavity of the cup-shaped hollow in the spinal column, constituting what may be called a spherical pivot for every motion of each joint. It was at first thought that this peculiar articulation would permit the carp to move his tail in every direction, but found that the extension of the spinal arrangement restricted the motions to a movement from side to side, and prevented flexions down or up, thus making it encumbent upon the carp to strike the water laterally, being the only motion necessary. The number of these vertebræ differ much in various fishes, being multiplied to the extent of one hundred and ninety-nine in the shark. The muscles in the carp compose the majority of the bulk of its body, and are arranged in a very simple manner, so as to be oblique to the motion of the fish. There are two sets provided expressly for the movement of the tail, and consist entirely of lateral flexion.

All the vital organs of this fish have been placed in a very small compass, and its body tapers both ways, that it may form the least resistance to its native element as it darts forward, perfectly obvious to its retardation that might naturally arise from the reflex of the water behind. The scales are smooth and somewhat impregnated with an oleaginous preparation to enable the fish to diminish friction, besides protecting its flesh from an injurious penetration of water by constant pressure. The bones are clear and transparent, which shows that they contain a very small proportion of earthly phosphate of lime, which is not so much required as in terrestrial animals, because joints are not needed by fish. Carp live longer out of their native water than any other known fish. In Holland they are kept alive twenty-two days, hung up in a cool cellar in a bag of wet moss, where they are perfectly fattened on bread and milk. As this practice is general in that country there must be an advantage in it. They breed remarkably well, and grow large in ponds remote from cold springs; Aristotle and Pliny both say six times each year, if there is no fish to devour their ova.

There is the skin of one in the British museum that was said to have weighed 26 pounds when alive; still they are rarely caught either in the ponds or rivers of England weighing over 10 or 12 pounds. Buffon mentioned that he had seen them in the fosses or ditches of the Ponchartrain known to be 150 years old; and Sir James Smith says in his "Tour on the Continent, 1793," that at the Prince of Conde's seat at Chantilly, there were enormous shoals of large carp, silvered over with age like silver fish, and that they were destroyed during the French revolution. In 1830 Sir James Smith found carp in the ponds of Versailles which had been placed there in 1690, and were white with age. Those in the long canal in Hampden Court park are supposed to have been there since the canal was made by William the Third, notwithstanding Sir Francis Bacon says that carp live but 10 years. In Italy the ova of carp are made into caviare which is sold to the Jews, who will not eat the caviare of sturgeon, which they consider unclean because they are devoid of scales. The physicians of that country convert the stones and galls found in the head of the carp into medicine.

THE GUN.

Inter-Club Contest.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—The proposed inter-club team contest at live birds is "a go." We have been to Stockton and its team are on deck. At Sacramento, members of Foresters and Pacific Clubs say they are enthusiastic and will enter teams. The California W. I. C., and the Alameda Co. S. Club, have signified intention of shooting. Two Gun Club men say they would like to shoot. In view of these facts I have requested designs from Tiffany of N. Y., and the Gorham Co., for a trophy to be presented by,

Yours,

SELBY SMELTING & LEAD CO.,
per S. I. Kellogg.

Right!

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—Your splendid copy of May 11th, gives the American Shooting Association rules in full, and also states that the Selby Smelting Co. is willing to furnish copies of same to all who may desire them. Now many are afraid that the new association is somewhat of a trust, but on investigation I think it will be discovered that such an idea is erroneous. At present every club has rules of its own, or what is worse, none at all, which is all wrong, and there has long been a need of uniformity and unanimity in trap shooting rules, which the new ones, being as nearly perfect as possible, if adopted and endorsed and the association notified to that effect, will remedy, and a long stride in the right direction taken.

Let all clubs endorse and adopt these rules, and any errors in them can readily be discovered and revisions made. Success to the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN.

Purse divided into four moneys—$10,000 to first, $5,000 to second, $3,000 to third, and $2,000 to fourth horse; three to enter and two to start; American Association Rules to govern. Any horse distancing the field, or any part thereof, shall only be entitled to first money. All nominations must be accompanied by amount of first payment, or will not be recognized as an entry, and all payments thereafter must be paid when due, or nominator forfeits all money paid in, but in no case will the nominator be held for more than he has paid in.

The Association reserves the right to postpone the race, on account of bad weather or track, until the first good day and track.

WEIGHTS WILL BE AS FOLLOWS:

2 year old		79 lbs.
3 "	"	109 "
4 "	"	122 "
5 "	"	124 "
6 "	" and aged	124 "

With the usual allowance in heat races of 5 lbs., mares three years old and upwards shall be allowed 3 lbs. Colonial-bred horses foaled in Colonial time, i. e., between August 1st and December 1st, allowed as follows: Two and three-year-olds, 8 lbs.; four-year-olds, 5 lbs.; five-year-olds, 3 lbs. No allowance for Colonial-bred horses over five years, except the usual sex allowance.

There will also be liberal purses offered for four days' racing, to be given the same week as the race takes place. Programme will be issued later on.

Entries close July 15, 1889, with Secretary, N. I. BALDWIN, P. O. Drawer "U," Fresno, Cal.

REMARKS.

The intention of the Directors of this Association is to make this place a central point for racing in California. They recognize the fact, that in order to do so they have got to give large purses in order to get first-class horses. Knowing they have as well-appointed grounds and as good a track as there is in California, having first-class stabling and the best Club House on any track in California, and plenty of fine grass for horses the whole year, and by dealing justly and fairly with the horsemen, we hope to receive their patronage. We are situated about half way between San Francisco and Los Angeles, which makes it an accessible point for the patronage of the whole State.

Being aware that the responsibility, to a great extent, of the Association, is not known outside of our own State, we herewith at ach a certificate, signed by the Banks of this City, as to the responsibility of the Association.

We, the undersigned, do certify that the Fresno Fair Grounds Association is perfectly responsible, and its statements are reliable:

LEWIS LEACH, President Farmer's Bank.
O. J. WOODWARD, President First National Bank.
LOUIS EINSTEIN, President Bank of Central California.
H. D. COLSON, President Fresno National Bank.
W. H. MCKENZIE, Cashier Fresno Loan & Savings Bank.

GUARANTEE PURSE - - - $2,000.

For horses that never beat 2:20 trotting. $200 entrance. $50 payable July 1, 1889; $50 August 1st; $100 September 1st, when horses are to be named. To be trotted at the Fall Fair, Fresno, Cal., Friday, October 4, 1889. Four moneys—50, 25, 15 and 10 per cent. of purse. American Association Rules to govern. Horses are eligible June 1, 1889.

REMARKS.

This 2:20 CLASS GUARANTEE PURSE gives the party making the entry the privilege of naming any horse he sees fit, the 1st day of September, having no better record than 2:20 the 1st day of June, irrespective of the record he may get after that date. It will be seen by this that the nominator has almost a sure thing of getting his money back.

Any nominator failing to make payments when due forfeits all money paid in, and is held responsible for whole amount of entrance money. First payment must accompany nomination, or will be considered no entry.

The 2:30 Class previously advertised will be trotted the first day of our Fair—Tuesday, October 1, 1889—thus giving nominators a chance to trot the same horse in both races.

Entries close July 1st with the Secretary.

SIRE OF YOLO MAID, 2:14.

Alexander Button.

Alexander's Record, 2:31 1-4:

DESCRIPTION.

Alexander Button is a dark bay with fine flowing mane and tail; stands 15⅔ hands high; weighs 1,200 pounds, and is of excellent disposition. When three years old he made a record of 2:28½, and when four years old, in his first race, he obtained a record of 2:26½. Has been driven a mile in 2:16 in his four-year-old form, and has been drive a last half in 1:0 . Alexander Button is a natural trotter, inherited through the speed-lines of his ancestors, and imparts his speed to his offspring with uniform certainty. Yolo Maid, as a three-year-old, paced 18 heats, never leaving her feet—carrying the world's record of 2:14. Rosie Mc, as a five-year-old rarely ever breaks; has a record of 2:20¾. R. H. Newton's colt, with very little handling, paced a 2:16 gait, and there are several other colts that show gaits from 2:16 to 2:20. Considering that Alexander Button has never been mated with a standard-bred mare—his colts show him to be a wonderful producer—and with his breeding, and terms of service, he is the cheapest and most wonderful horse in the State.

PEDIGREE.

Alex. Button was sired by Alexander, he by Geo. M. Patchen, Jr., his dam Lady Button by Napa Rattler by Biggett's Rattler, he by Sir Henry, and he by imported Henry, dam of Biggett's Rattler by Rysdyk's Hambletonian, dam of Napa Rattler, thoroughbred.

TERMS: $75, payable at end of season. Mares not proving with foal may be returned next season free of charge. Good pasturage will be furnished at $2 per month, and due care taken to prevent accidents or escapes but no liability whatever assumed.

Will stand at City Stable, Woodland, on Thursday, Friday and Saturday of each week. The remainder of the time he will stand at my ranch, which is situated about 1½ miles west of Yolo station.

All mares sent to Fashion Stable, Woodland, Yolo County, will be forwarded free of charge.

G. W. WOODARD, Proprietor.

Woodland, Yolo County, Cal.

STALLIONS.

DIRECTOR 2:17.

DIRECTOR will stand at Pleasanton from March 1st to August 1st, 1889, for fifteen good mares more than are now booked, at $20 for the season. Mares not proving with foal may be returned next season free of charge of service to same stallion, or money will be refunded, at option of the Stock Farm Co.

Pasturage $4 per month, hay and grain extra. Accidents and escapes at owner's risk. Service fees due at time of service and must be paid, together with pasturage, etc., before mares are taken away, or a good approved note given, payable August 1st, 1889, at which date all bills must be settled

THISTLE,

Full brother to Gold Leaf, pacing record 2:15 at three years old. By Sidney, dam Fernleaf, she the dam of stallion Shamrock, trotting record at two years old, 2:25. Thistle is a large, speedy pacing colt, showing more speed than Gold Leaf at the same age, and double the speed of his sire; so if anyone wants to breed pacers, here is a chance.

Thistle will stand for seven approved mares at $100 for the season, with same conditions and return privileges as Director.

THREE CHEERS

Will make the Season of 1889 at Oakland Race Track, Oakland, Alameda County.

Pedigree.

Sired by imported Hurrah, first dam Young Fashion by imported Monarch; second dam Fashion by imported Trustee; third dam Bonnets o' Blue by Sir Charles; fourth dam Reality by Sir Archy; fifth dam by imported Medley; sixth dam by imported Centinel, etc. (See Bruce's American Stud Book, Vol. 1, page 432.)

Hurrah by Newminster (winner St. Leger 1851), dam Jovial by Bay Middleton (winner Derby 1836.)

Newminster by Touchstone (winner St. Leger 1831), dam Beeswing (winner of 54 races out of 64 starts) by Dr. Syntax (winner Doncaster Cup 1837, 40, 41, 42, the only horse that ever accomplished that feat.)

THREE CHEERS is bred in the speediest and stoutest lines. His dam, Young Fashion was the dam of Surprise, Scotland (the only horse that ever beat Asteroid a heat), Liverpool, Columbia and Bonnie Kate, the dam of Little Buttercup and the flying Bonnie Lizzie. His grandam, Fashion, was the greatest race mare of her era, defeating Boston in that historical match at four-mile heats, that is recorded as one of the greatest events in the annals of the turf. He is thoroughly sound in wind and limb, his family on both sides being noted for their exemption from curbs, spavins, roaring, or any other hereditary unsoundness. Horsemen, who can appreciate the highest type of the thoroughbred, are specially invited to inspect Three Cheers.

THREE CHEERS is the sire of Almont, Applause and Why Not, the only three of his get ever trained, and all are stake winners.

TERMS: $75 for the season. Mares not proving with foal can be returned the next season free of charge. Good pasturage at $5 per month. Mares cared for in any manner owners may desire, and fed on hay and grain, either or both, at reasonable rates. WILKES PASHA.

STANDARD 2618.

Dark bay with white hind feet, 16½ hands high, bred by R. P. Pepper, of South Elk Horn Farm, Frankfort, Kentucky. Sired by Onward, 1411, record 2:25¾, trial 2:17. He by George Wilkes, 2:22, sire of sixty-five horses in the 2:30 list, ten of them with records below 2:20. First dam Fisher (dam of Clara Wilkes, 2:29¾, trial 2:25) by American Clay, 34, sire of Granville, 2:26; Maggie Briggs, 2:27; Ella Clay, 2:27½; and the dams of Executor, 2 24½, Ranchero, 2:23½; Judge Hawser, 2:24¾; Ambassador, 2:25, and nine others in 2:30; second dam by Wilson's Snow Storm, sire of Jim Irving, 2:28; third dam by Paddie Burns, thoroughbred.

Onward, 1411, is one of the noted sires of to-day. In 1887 he placed seven performers in the 2:30 list, including Houri, three-year-old record 2:19¾; while in 1888 he still further sustains his reputation by adding nine of his sons and daughters to the list. Onward combines the blood of the two great trotting families, Hambletonian 10 and Mambrino Chief 11, and derives his speed inheritance direct through the greatest son of the one family, and the greatest daughter of the other.

Onward's dam was Dolly (the dam of Director, 2:17, and Thorndale, 2:22½), by Mambrino Chief. Dolly was one of the greatest speed-producing brood mares that ever lived. George Wilkes stands at the head of the list of sires of fast trotters with 65 performers with records of 2:30 or better, and the combination of these two great producers will breed on with absolute certainty.

WILKES PASHA will make the season of 1889 at the stables of the undersigned, at the Trancas Bridge, two miles north of Napa, on the Soda Spring Road.

TERMS,

For the season ending July 1, 1889, $35 in U. S. gold coin.

Alfalfa pasturage $4 per month; natural grass $2.50 per month.

Every attention and care will be given to mares, but no liabilities assumed for accidents or escapes.

LONGWORTH.

High Bred Trotting Stallion.

WILL BE FOUR YEARS OLD IN MARCH.

Dark Bay, Black Points, by Sidney.

OWNED BY A. C. DIETZ, OAKLAND.

Also the owner of Bay Stallion Ringwood, four years old, by Sidney, half brother to Longworth, which has showed trials over the Oakland Track, 2:30; quarters, in ¾ second is—2:16 gait —as a three-year old.

LONGWORTH, for finish, style and form cannot be excelled by any four-year-old horse in the State. His gait is perfect; going low to the ground, with smooth, easy motion, and has shown wonderful speed with but two month's work. As a two-year-old, he showed a 2:40 gait; as a three-year-old showed—trial—full mile over the Oakland track, 2:26; half mile, 1:10; quarters, 34 seconds; eighths, 16 seconds—a 2:08 gait.

Longworth is the result of a long line of distinguished ancestors, endowed with speed on the sire and dams' side that follows back for generations—consequently he cannot help but produce great speed.

He is half brother to the great three-year-old Adonis, record 2 14¼.

Gold Leaf, three-year-old record, 2:15.
Memo, three-year-old trial, 2:20¾.
Sister V., two-year-old trial, 2:32.
St. Nicholas, three-year-old trial, 2:27¼.
Ringwood, three-year-old trial, 2:30.
Miss Sidney, one-year-old trial, half mile, 1:38.
Brown colt, three-year-old trial, 2:40.
Black colt, three-year-old trial, 2:39.
Linda, one-year-old trial, one quarter, 40 seconds.
Sorrel colt, two-year-old trial, quarter, 34 seconds, and a number more that have shown remarkable speed. One yearling that has shown one-eighth of a mile in 16 1-5 seconds—a 2:10 gait.

Sidney, the sire of Longworth, has a record of 2:19¾; Santa Claus, the grand sire, has a record of 2:17½; Sweetness, the grandam, record 2:21½; Strathmore, the sire of Santa Claus, has twenty-two that have trotted below 2:30; Volunteer, the sire of Sweetness, has twenty-six that have trotted below 2:30. Volunteer is the sire of St. Julian, record 2:11¾.

Longworth's first dam Grey Dale, the dam of Daisy C., Silver Threads, and grandam of Phaceola; Grey Dale by American Boy, Jr.; he by American Boy, the sire of Belmont. Second dam Grey Poll by Winfield Scott, by Edward Everett; third dam Sorrel Poll by Sir Henry; fourth dam Daughter of Printer.

Grey Dale, the dam of Longworth, has shown herself a great producer of speed through Daisy C. and Silver Threads, the sire of Phaceola.

All letters pertaining to the service of this horse should be addressed to R. H. FARMER, Oakland. Alameda County, Cal.

TERMS: Fifty dollars, payable at the end of the season or sooner if the mares are taken away. Season will close June 15th 1889. The number of mares limited to twenty-five. The best of care will be taken to insure mares with foal. Pasture $5 per month, which can be procured at the Oakland Race Track. Mares at the owners' risk, as to escapes or accidents.

The stallion will be kept at the stables of the undersigned, at the junction of San Pablo Avenue and Park Street.

The Electioneer Stallion

LANCELOT,

SEAL BROWN STALLION, 15½ HANDS, FOALED APRIL 15, 1881.

Bred by C. C. BEMIS, San Francisco, Cal.

Sire Gov. Stanford's ELECTIONEER; first dam Lizzie Harris by Comus; second dam by Arnold Harris. Comus by Gree.'s Bashaw, dam Topsey by Prophet, son of Hill's Black Hawk. Young Bashaw by Grand Bashaw (Arabian) (182), dam Pearl by First Consul (913); g d Fancy by imp. Rockingham. Arnold Harris by Whalebone, dam Sportsmistress by American Eclipse.

All the sons of Electioneer in the Eastern States have their books filled for the seas.n. This is a rare opportunity to breed to Lancelot at a very low price. Lancelot has shown quarters better than a 2:30 gait, and had it not been for an accident would have had a record as low as the fastest of the sons of Electioneer.

The Nutwood Stallion

SALADIN.

Bred by C. C. BEMIS, San Francisco.

SALADIN, chestnut stallion, 16 hands 1 inch high; foaled April 9, 1880. By Nutwood; first dam Lady Utley Jr. by Speculation, son of Rysdyk's Hambletonian; second dam Lady Utley. Grandam of Western Girl. Record 2:27½.

NUTWOOD (record 2:18¾), half brother to Maud S., 2:08¾, by Belmont, son of Alexander's Abdallah; first dam Miss Russell by Pilot Jr.; second dam Sally Russell by Boston; third dam Maria Russell by Thornton's Rattler; fourth dam Miss Shepard by Stockholder; fifth dam Miranda by Topgallant; sixth dam by imported Diomed; seventh dam by imported Medley; eighth dam by imported Juniper. Nutwood is the sire of Felix, 2:18¾; Dawn 2:19½; Manon 2:21; Menlo 2:21¼; Nutbreaker, two years old, 2:29¼; Nutwood Jr. 2:26; Mount Vernon 2:21; Woodnut 2:16¾, and several others that have trotted under 2:30.

The above stallions will make the season of 1889 at the Hoag stables, corner 1st and B Streets, Santa Rosa.

TERMS: $40 for the season for either of the above stallions.

Pasturage $3 per month. All mares at the owners risk. Apply or address,

GEO. W. BROOKS, Agent.

At Main St., between 2d and D Sts. Santa Rosa.

GROVER CLAY,

Bay Stallion, bred by Hon. W. W. Traylor, San Francisco. Foaled 1883. By ELECTIONEER.

First dam MAGGIE NORFOLK by NORFOLK, son of Lexington.

Second dam by BILLY CHEATHAM.

Third dam by DORSEY'S GOLDDUST.

GROVER C is a very handsome shade of bay, 15¾ hands high, and showing as much quality as a majority of thoroughbreds. He is as square-gaited a trotter as can be, and has shown a great deal of speed for the amount of handling. Has been worked very little, though he can show a thirty gait or better whenever called upon.

TERMS.

Fifty dollars the season, payable at time of service. Proper care will be taken, but no responsibility incurred for accidents or escapes. Mares will be pastured inside of the Oakland Trotting Park, which is especially safe, having two fences which give ample security against escape. There is a never-failing stream of water which runs through the field, and the food is good.

Season commencing first of January and ending the first of July.

This is the only son of Electioneer standing in Alameda County, and the high breeding on the side of his dam is a guarantee that his colts will inherit qualities already made famous through the mixture of Electioneer and Lexington blood. Ansel, 2:20, is from a Lexington mare, and Sunol's granddam, two-year-old record 2:18, was by Lexington, both Sunol and Ansel by Electioneer, Lexington the sire of Norfolk.

Thoroughbred Stallion

Prince of Norfolk,

Will Make the Season of 1889, from Feb 15th to July 1st, at Sacramento.

PEDIGREE.

PRINCE OF NORFOLK, ch c, foaled 1881, by Norfolk; 1st dam Marion by Malcolm; 2nd dam Maggie Mitchell by imp. Yorkshire; third dam Charmer by imp. Glencoe; 4th dam Betsy Malone by Stockbridge; 5th dam by Potomac; 6th dam by imp. Diomed; 7th dam by Pegasus, etc. Norfolk, the unbeaten son of Lexington, is the sire of Winters, Twilight, Connor Ballot Box, Trade Dollar, Flood, Duchess of Norfolk, Lou Spencer, the Great Emperor of Norfolk, an many others. Marion's sire, Malcolm, was one of the first horses to bring Bonnie Scotland into notice. Through the Maggie Mitchell cross comes the blood of two of the most celebrated race mares of their day, Charmer and Betsy Malone. The combined speed of these great families seem to be concentrated in the get of Norfolk and Marion, as is instanced in the case of the Emperor of Norfolk, who is a full brother to the Prince of Norfolk.

The blood lines here displayed cannot be surpassed in the world, there not being a single cross that has not been celebrated for speed and endurance, and it is fair to assume that the get of this stallion will show equally well with those of past generations.

TERMS, $50 for the season. We offer first class pasturage on our own ranch, at $4 per month and the best of care will be taken of mares sent to us, but no responsibility can be incurred. For further particulars address

BALKAN,

Three-year-old Record 2:29 1-2; trotting many heats faster, when he did not obtain a record.

PEDIGREE.

Sired by Mambrino Wilkes, dam Fanny Fern by Jack Hawkins, son of Boston; second dam S. T. B. by Jim Crow.

It will be readily seen that this colt is from strong producing lines on both sides Fanny Fern having produced Mollie Drew, May Queen, Onyx and Fred Arnold, all noted trotters and all by different sires.

This colt will be kept at the Oakland Trotting Park, and will be stinted to ten approved mares at $100 for the season.

VINELAND BREEDING FARM.

Whippleton, 1883,

STANDARD UNDER RULE 4 & 6.

The most successful stock horse in California for his opportunities. WHIPPLETON has no equal as a producer of carriage and general purpose horses. Sire of Lily Stanley, record 2:17½, dam's breeding unknown; Homestakes pacer, 2:16½, dam's breeding unknown; Flora B., 2:30, dam's breeding unknown; Cora C., three-year-old pacer, 2:33¾, dam by Ambuc, Rachel, 2:38, dam's breeding unknown.

DESCRIPTION.

WHIPPLETON is a beautiful black, tan muzzle and flanks, and exceptionally strongly made all over. He stands 17 hands high and weighs 1400 pounds. He is beyond doubt the most uniform breeder on the Coast for size, color and finish. Most of his colts are 16 hands or over, and all bay, brown or black in color. He has never sired a sorrel or white faced colt; if he does I agree to refund service money.

PEDIGREE.

WHIPPLETON, sired by Hambletonian Jr. (sire of Hancock 2:20, by Whipple's Hambletonian; dam Lady Livingston; (dam of Lady Blanchard 2:2¼, Bloomfield Maid, trial 2:22); by General Taylor (sire of dam of Wells Fargo 2:18¾, Nearea 2:24½, Bickford 2:29½, Lady Blanchard 2:26¾) and Stella 2:30, son of the Morse horse.

TERMS.

Fifty dollars, with usual return privilege.

ALCONA, 730.

By the great Almont (sire of Westmont, 2:15¼, Puritan, 2:16, Fannie Witherspoon, 2:16¾, Piedmont, 2:17¾, and 31 others with records better than 2:30, and grandsire of Bell Hamlin, 2:33¾) by Alexander's Abdallah (sire of Goldsmith Maid, 2:14), he by Rysdyk's Hambletonian. Alcona's dam, Queen Mary by Mambrino Chief, sire of Lady Thorn, 2:18¼, Woodford Mambrino, 2:21¾ and 4 others in 2:30 list, and sire of the dams of Piedmont, 2:17¾, Director, 2:17, Onward, 2:28¾, and many others; 23 of his sons have produced 2:30 trotters.

Almont has 38 sons that have produced 2:30 trotters, which number is only equaled by his grandsire, Rysdyk's Hambletonian.

DESCRIPTION.

Alcona is a beautiful chestnut, 16¾ hands high, and weighs 1,300 pounds. His colts possess speed, style, finish and beauty, and if they don't trot fast they command the highest price for carriage and general purpose horses. Eleven of Alcona's colts that have been sold UNTRAINED brought $7,810, an average of $710 per head.

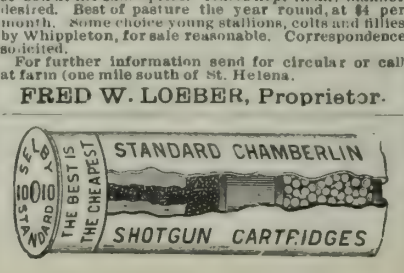
TERMS: $35. Usual return privilege.

Grandissimo,

Full Brother to GRANDEE. 3-year-old record 2:23 1-2.

Sired by La Grande (son of Almont, and out of Jessie Pepper by Mambrino Chief; Jessie Pepper is the dam of Iona 2:22, Alpha 2:24¾, Sterling Wilkes 2:32¾, and others) dam Norma, by Arthurton (sire of Arab 2:15, Joe Arthurton 2:22½, etc).

Grandam Nourmahal, (full sister to A. W. Richmond, sire of Arrow 2:13¾, Romero 2:19, and sire of Columbine, dam of Anteeo 2:16¾, and Antevolo 2:19¾ at 4 years old),



DESCRIPTION.

Grandissimo is 3 years old, will make a sixteen hand horse; he is a rich mahogany bay in color and perfect in style and action. Limited to ten mares, at $50 for the season. Usual return privileges.

In case any of my horses are sold before the next season, parties breeding mares have the privilege to return them to any other stallion I have making the season at the same price. Mares kept in any manner desired. Best of pasture the year round, at $4 per month. Some choice young stallions, colts and fillies by Whippleton, for sale reasonable. Correspondence solicited.

MEMO.

The Fast Trotting Stallion, the Best Son of Sidney.

Will make the Season of 1889 at the Oakland Trotting Park.

He was bred by G. Valensin at the Arno Stock Farm, Sacramento County, California; foaled spring of 1885.

PEDIGREE.

By Sidney.
First dam Flirt by Buccaneer.
Second dam Mohaska Belle by Flaxtail.
Third dam by John the Baptist.

Sidney by Santa Claus, 2:17½, his dam Sweetness, 2:21¼. Strathmore, the son of Santa Claus, has 22 of his get which have trotted in 2:30 or better, up to close of 1887, several having entered since, and Volunteer the sire of Sweetness, has 26 in the same list. Buccaneer is the sire of Shamrock, two-year-old record 2:25, and of Flight, 2:29, and in him are combined the strains of Long Island Blackhawk, Vermont Blackhawk, and the dam of Rysdyk's Hambletonian. Flaxtail figures prominently in both pacing and trotting descendants, and is the sire of the dam of Apex, 2:25, Flight, 2:29, J. H. McCormack, 2:29, and Shamrock, 2:25.

PERFORMANCES.

Memo only trotted in public in his two-year-old form, obtaining a record of 2:49, though he was close to Grandee in a race on the Bay District Track, the second heat of which was made in 2:31½, the first in 2:32. He exhibited phenomenal speed when three years old, and had it not been for a slight strain of his fore fetlock there is little question that he would have shown in public very closely the best record. On the Oakland track he was timed a mile in 2:20½, and frequently trotted quarters in from 32½ to 34 seconds.

DESCRIPTION.

He is nearly if not quite sixteen hands high, and of powerful build throughout. His color is a glossy black, with both fore-feet white and a touch of white on his off hind quarters. His disposition is all that could be desired, and his action superb.

TERMS: One hundred dollars the season.

ELECTIONEER STALLION

EROS,

Standard No. 5326.

Electioneer, his sire, has more 2:20 trotters than any living horse, and more 2:30 trotters than any stallion LIVING OR DEAD.

Eros has a record of 2:29¾, made in the fifth and declining heat against a field of eight horses in his maiden race, and with only four weeks preparation after coming out of the stud.

Dam Sontag Mohawk, dam of Sallie Benton (four-year-old record 2:17¾). Sontag Mohawk by Mohawk Chief, by Rysdyk's Hambletonian.

Progeny.

Eros had last fall but three colts trained; the oldest a three-year-old trotter, an exhibition mile during the San Jose Fair in 2:34, last quarter in 36½ seconds. A two-year-old (timed by the judges) made a mile in 2:46½, and the other two-year-old in 2:47. All of these trials being made without a single skip, and none of these colts had then been handled three months from the bitting harness.

TERMS: $50 for the season, from February 1st to July 1, 1889. Due at time of service.

THE WILKES STALLION

Mambrino Wilkes, 6083

(Half Brother to Harry Wilkes, 2:13 1-2.)

Sire of Gus Wilkes, 2:22; Alpheus, 2:27; Balkan 2:29½, three-year-old; John O'Brien, lapped out the winner in 2:36 as a three-year-old; H. A. W.'s Black Colt, trial 2:29 with very little work as a four-year-old.

Will remain in the future at San Miguel Stock Farm, Walnut Creek, Contra Costa County.

DESCRIPTION.

MAMBRINO WILKES is a black horse, 16 hands high, and considerably longer than his height; has immense muscular development and weighs 1,200 pounds. He has the utmost symmetry of proportion and elegance of finish. No competent judge who has seen this horse has failed to pronounce him a perfect individual, and his breeding is certainly fashionable enough to satisfy the most fastidious. His colts are large, stylish and handsome, and Balkan has been pronounced by many the most stylish trotter on the turf.

PEDIGREE.

Sired by George Wilkes, dam Lady Chrisman by Todhunter's Mambrino; second dam by Pilot Jr.

Todhunter's Mambrino by Mambrino Chief, dam Ripton's dam by Hunt's Commodore, son of Mambrino, by imp. Messenger; second dam by Potomac, son of imp. Messenger.

Mambrino Chief by Mambrino Paymaster, by Mambrino, by imp. Messenger.

George Wilkes sired 65 colts that have beaten 2:30. Of these 39 have average records of 2:25, 14 of 2:19 and 12 of 2:18.

TERMS.

Mares from a distance will be received at the Dexter Stables, Oakland, or Livery Stable, Martinez, the owner notifying Smith Hill, Superintendent at the farm. Good pasture and plenty of water. For the purpose of placing the service of a Wilkes within reach of breeders, the same rate will be maintained as last year, to wit, $75 for the season. Although it is not admitted thereby that this horse is inferior as a producer to the horses whose fees are placed at from $150 to $500.

The Thoroughbred Stallion

Judge McKinstry,

Will make the Season of 1889, from March 1 to July 1, at San Felipe Rancho, near Gilroy.

PEDIGREE.

Foaled 1879, by Grinstead or Thad Stevens, dam Katy Pease; second dam Minnie Mansfield by imp. Glencoe; third dam Allegrante by imp. Young Truffle.

DESCRIPTION.

JUDGE McKINSTRY is a bright bay with black points, 15¾ hands in height, of a conformation combining power and speed. His breeding is one that cannot be excelled. The families on both sides being noted for their gameness and fleetness. Speaking of JUDGE McKINSTRY, Matt Storm, the well-known trainer, says: "He is the fastest race-horse I ever saw on the Sacramento track. He has shown me trials that were marvelous, one especially of a mile and a quarter that was ahead of the present record." He was started in several races when not in condition to run, and even then developed an amount of speed that is characteristic of the noted families from which he descends. His performances are too well known to need repetition here. Good judges of horses state positively that there can be no doubt of his sire, as he is a perfect picture of Grinstead, but rule compels us to name both sires.

TERMS: $75 payable when the mare is moved from ranch, or, $100, with the usual privilege. Good pasturage, $3 per month. Mares at owners risk. All communications must be addressed to

TRADE MARK

OSSIDINE

Results obtained at the well-known Kalamazoo Farm.

KALAMAZOO, Mich., Sept. 15, 1888.

GENTLEMEN:—We have used Ossidine for the past two years and consider it invaluable for Sprung Tendons, Curbs, Ringbone and Spavins; there is nothing equals it; and for us it effected a permanent cure where firing failed, although performed by one of the most successful veterinarians on the continent. We have recommended it to others with like success, and believe it has more merit than any blister ever used.

Very respectfully yours, S. A. BROWNE & Co., Prop's.

This scientific preparation is an absolute cure for all bony or callous lumps on horses, and is a more powerful absorbent than "firing," without creating the slightest blemish. After a few applications the excrescence is so palpably reduced that even the skeptical frankly acknowledge that it is by far the most valuable outward remedy for horses ever invented.

The ONLY preparation in the world that will remove a Bone Spavin after it has become ossified.

Price $3.00 per Large Bottle.

Owner of Eole, St Saviour, Eolist, etc., says; I have long used it in my stables, and find it to be all that is claimed for it in removing callous and unnatural bony growths, without leaving the slightest blemish. From my experience, I most strongly recommend the use of Ossidine, and feel that it is a necessary adjunct to every stable. Yours respectfully,

SAN FRANCISCO, SATURDAY, JUNE 1, 1889.

FIVE DOLLARS A YEAR.

PASHA,

The property of S. N. Straube, Poplar Grove Breeding Farm, Fresno, Cal.

Last week we presented a picture of Mr. Straube's matchless stallion Clovis, and now this week we furnish a likeness of the stable companion, Pasha. Having heard many favorable comments on the stock owned by the proprietor of Poplar Stock Farm, a representative of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN visited Fresno last week to inspect the stallions and brood mares owned by that gentleman. Leaving San Francisco a 9 P. M., we arrived at Fresno, after a good night's rest in the sleeper, at 5.20 next morning, and are cordially received by Mr. Straube, who is in waiting to extend us a hearty greeting. A well-prepared breakfast is done ample justice to, and at six o'clock we are away, behind a spanking team, to the farm, which is situated about seventeen miles southeast from Fresno. It is many years since the writer last visited that section of the San Joaquin Valley, and the great improvement visible everywhere can be attributed to no other reason than irrigation. When the various companies completed their mammoth canals and ditches the future of this portion of the valley was assured, and it is no wonder that the town of Fresno has grown to its present proportions, for prosperity will build up any city and attract the pushing, go-ahead business people who are always on the alert to secure footholds in any neighborhood where there is a reasonable chance to secure good interest on money invested. For the entire distance the drive is through great fields of golden grain just ready for the header, alternated by vineyards and orchards, with every now and again pastures filled with alfalfa. The old desert look which formerly greeted the eye is now changed to green and gold, and all due to the long-headed men who had faith in the irrigation scheme and carried their plans to a successful conclusion. Major Frank McLaughlin, of Oroville, once contemplated irrigating part of the Sacramento Valley with water taken from the Feather river, where the Big Bend Tunnel and Mining Company was at work, and after careful consideration we are satisfied that there would have been much more money for the promoters, in irrigation, than will ever be made out of the mine. It is not too late now to reconsider the matter even at this late day, and if carried out there would be such an era of prosperity for Butte, Yuba and the southern portion of Tehama Counties that the past would in a short time be looked upon as the age of ignorance. But to the subject of the sketch. Mr. Straube purchased Poplar Grove Breeding Farm about eighteen months ago, having sold a large ranch, which he owned, further north, in Fresno County. Immediately on taking possession, he made a tour of the principal stock breeding establishments of the State to select the very best stallion that money could procure. His final selection proves that he was fully awake to the wants of purchasers, for he secured the grandly bred horse Clovis, by whom the largest proportion of his mares were served. Later on, in last season, he also purchased Pasha 2039, who has a record of 2:36, and would have had one much lower but for an accident which compelled his then owner to throw him out of training. Pasha is a full brother to Bay Rose, 2:20½, and is a beautifully proportioned horse, standing 16¼ hands in height and weighs 1,240 pounds. He is a jet black in color, with both hind pasterns white; has a fine, shapely head, strongly marked with lines of intelligence; a perfect neck, sitting beautifully in an immense pair of shoulders; is splendidly coupled; has very powerful quarters; a perfect set of legs, and good feet. He is not deficient in bone, and from a muscular standpoint, looks as near perfection as a horse can be. His off fore-leg shows a trace of the accident which happened to him last year, but on being hitched up, all signs of lameness had disappeared. In action he is an exceedingly pure gaited horse, and moves in what may justly be termed a "skimming" style, moving over the ground with an ease and grace that puts the spectator in mind of Goldsmith Maid.

Pasha is eight years old, and is by Sultan, 2:24, (sire of Stamboul, 2:14½; Ruby, 2:19½, and fifteen others in the 2:30 list), he by The Moor; first dam Lady Baldwin by The Moor; second dam by Ben Lippincott, by Belmont.

When Pasha was led into his stall, Clovis was brought out, and although many notes had been marked down about the former, one word can sum up all that is necessary to say about the later, "perfection." The most critical horseman could not find a spot or blemish to cavil at, as he stood in front of the stall, with the sun shining on his black glossy coat. In conformation he closely resembles Stamboul, but is a heavier boned horse, and if anything, is prettier to the eye. Mr. Straube has had to refuse a large number of mares this year for Clovis, and already eleven are booked for him for next season. Mr. Straube has settled the price at $75, and only a few highly approved mares will be taken, as in all probability he will be trained for a record next year.

The brood mares at the farm are well worthy of mention, as they have been carefully selected and are all first class individuals. The first to attract attention was the bay mare Mattie by Whipple's Hambletonian, for, standing at her side were four of her children, Mattie Consuelo, four years old, by Steinway; Theodosio, three years old, by Steinway; Millie H., two years old by Clovis; and Poplar Boy, a suckling colt by Clovis. The young colt was sold when only seven days old for $1,000, and could not be bought to-day from the new owner for double that amount. The four-year-old has trotted a mile in 2:34 and the next younger in 2:36. Lady Winkley was the dam of Mattie, who is a grand looking mare. She was formerly owned by the late Seth Cook. Ella by A. W. Richmond, is another magnificent mare, whose dam is Grey Dale by American Boy. She has by her side a fine young filly by Strathway, who gives every promise of being able to beat the foal of '87, who trotted last year and got a yearling record of 2:56. Juanita is a young matron, three-years-old, by Nephew, who is happy in the possession of a colt by Archadine, he by Richard's Elector. The colt is a good one, and combining as he does so many prime strains of blood should prove a hard one to beat when he matures. Nettie Sultan by Sultan, dam by Blackhawk, is a beautiful dark brown, of good proportions, and should prove a desirable acquisition to the harem. She is heavy in foal to Apex, 2:26, and will foal shortly. The bay mare Lizzie Bernard is by Mountain Boy, dam by Gen. McClellan. Her filly by Clovis is a fine youngster, and is a credit to both sire and dam. Fannie Irving is a very handsome mare by Gen. McClellan, and has a record of 2:34. She has not foaled yet, but Clovis is the sire of the younster when it does make an appearance. Another mare that would command attention anywhere is Ella by Skenendoah 926, the sire of the dams of Adrian 2:26½, Bonner, 2:23, Slander, 2:28½, Wormwood, 2:25, and many other fast ones. Ella has a yearling by Apex that is very fast, the colt at her side being by Clovis. A seal brown mare by A. T. Stewart, and whose dam was by Belmont, has a colt by Clovis, far above the usual run of young ones, which should turn out well. Lizzie Thorne, a two year old filly has been relegated to the stud, and was standing close to her mother, Fannie, by Romulus. Lizzie Thorn has trotted at better than "a .40 gait," and will undoubtedly stamp her progeny with speed. The dam Fanny was very busy fussing over a beautiful foal by Apex, and seemed particularly anxious that we should notice all the good points of the little one, and she was fully justified in her motherly pride, for the colt is an exceptionally fine one. The very best looking foal on the farm, in the opinion of the writer, is a filly by Clovis, out of Locket, 2:27, by Whipple's Hambletonian. She is a perfect picture of the highest type of the trotting horse, and coming from such grand blood lines, will, barring accident, prove a very fast mare when ready for a race. When asked to set a price on this stylish youngster, Mr. Straube said the filly was not for sale. Locket's dam was by Geo. M. Patchen Jr., so the reader can readily imagine that the new comer should make a mark for himself, as speed and endurance are combined in a remarkable degree. Miss Langford is a pretty chestnut mare by John Nelson, dam by Langford, and has a nice filly by Apex.

In addition to the mares named above, there are also at the farm, Nora, by Geo. M. Patchen Jr.; a three-year-old black filly by Nephew Jr., dam by Romulus; Alice Clay by Alcona Clay; Lida Upright by Upright; Fanny Nelson by John Nelson; Ida Davis by Belnor, dam Danville Maid; Lucy Smith by Abbottsford, dam Aristola by Fred Low; Flora by Echo; Fannie Chapman by Thad Stevens; Miss Cressy by Nephew, and some sixty others. A yearling filly by Clovis named Elise was much admired for her size and conformation, the little lady being tall enough for a two-year-old.

The farm has been well equipped by the proprietor, there being barns and stabling from the most improved models, and every care and attention is paid the worthy matrons. Taken as a whole the new crop of foals at Poplar Grove Breeding Farm are very far above the average seen at the ordinary breeding places, the two sires having stamped the young with their own great muscular power, and it is a treat to see the immense bone and sinew that is characteristic of all the young there. "No legs, no horse," is an old saying, but it is safe to assert that there never was a better lot of legs under young foals than can be seen at Mr. Straube's farm. In next week's issue we will give a picture of Apex, 2:26, also the property of the same gentleman, but as he is making the season at the race track in Fresno, it will be more appropriate to give his history in a separate sketch, at which time will also be given a description of the Fresno race track, over which the $20,000 contest will take place this fall.

Trotting in Russia.

Mr. Walter Winans, an English gentleman who has a regard for the American trotter, has a contribution on trotting in Russia in Illustrations, an English periodical, that is of interest to American readers. Mr. Winans says in his article: "In Moscow and St. Petersburg a horse, to be considered a trotter, must trot three versts (about two miles) not slower than at the rate of twenty miles an hour; in fact, that pace is much too slow to win races, where the time taken for the three versts is often five minutes, or less; that is at the rate of over twenty-four miles an hour.

"In Russia three versts is the minimum distance trotted, and a horse that can trot the two miles in five minutes can do one mile in a good deal less than half the time—say in two minutes twenty-seven or eight seconds.

"The Russian racing drosky is low and four wheeled, and heavier than the American sulky, and the tracks are at least three seconds slower than ours. So, in comparing the trotters of the two nations, a Russian horse which trots two miles in five minutes is about equal to an American one that trots a mile in two minutes and twenty seconds. * * * * As three versts in six minutes is the slowest a horse can go to be called a trotter in Russia, the speed of a horse is spoken of there by the number of seconds less than three minutes he takes to trot the distance in. For instance, if he can trot it in 5:40, his speed is called 'without twenty,' that is, twenty seconds off the six minutes. In the same way, a horse which could trot in five minutes would be spoken of as 'without a minute' horse. The price of a horse keeps increasing more and more as he can trot in 'less seconds,' till each second almost doubles his price."

The Russians have taken to using American sulkies, and are discarding the native harness with the yoke, using instead the "Dutch collar."

The horses in their races, have each a track to themselves, and if there are more than three horses in a race it has to be trotted in heats. If a driver carries a whip he has to carry extra weight. Three officials, besides the judge, watch each race, one for each horse; and if the horse he has to watch breaks more than three times in a race, or gallops more than a certain number of strides in a break, a mounted man is sent to order the driver to leave the track. This feature of the Russian system of racing might be adopted in this country with good effect.

Good Sale of Trotting Stock at Bay District Track.

One of the most successful sales held on the coast was conducted by Killip & Co., at the Bay District Track, last Tuesday, when Frank Malone sold off his trotting stock. All the prominent breeders and trotting men were represented, or were there in person. Amongst the latter were Messrs. Salisbury, Corbett, Valensin, Holly, Wattles and Capt. Griffin. The prices realized were very good on the whole, and no fault could be found with the sale. Possibly the first lot—the Echo mare with foal by Director—would have brought more had she been sold later, as Holly was anxious to buy her, but arrived too late. Messrs. Killip and Chase exhausted all their art and knowledge of human nature in procuring the prices they did, and are to be congratulated on the successful result attained.

Puntually on time, the first lot, a nine-year-old mare by Echo, dam Thoroughbred, with a splendid bay suckling, one month old, by Director at foot, was offered. The youngster who attracted general admiration seemed a natural pacer and certainly influenced the sale a good bit, for they were rapidly bid up to $800, when Mr. Salisbury became the purchaser.

The next lot a brown stallion, 5 years old, by Combination, dam by Lexington, was sold a bargain to P. W. Sturgers, of Oakland, for $385, which he was certainly worth for a buggy horse. The third, a yearling colt by Combination out of the Echo mare, was fairly sold to Mr. Whiteley for he was thinnish and rather rough looking. Mr. Whiteley also bought the next lot; a useful looking brown mare, 13 by John Nelson, dam by Whipple's Hambletonian. Had she been bred to a well known performer instead of lot 2, she would have brought much more than the $195, that Mr. Whiteley gave for her. A yearling black colt was sold for about his value $75, while the brown gelding by Irvington out of Arab's dam, looked dear at $305, for a twelve-year-old gelding, although he has never had much work. Wood Wattles bought him and also the next, a black, three-year-old filly by Young Kisbar, dam by Altamont. She had evidently been in the wire, for her off hind fetlock was very much enlarged, and though it may not injure her it will always be an eyesore. She seemed fairly sold at $300.

Capt. Griffin bought the next, a good-looking four-year-old black mare by Altamont, after a sharp struggle with Sailsbury, who was choked off at $800, at which price the Captain got her. Hiram Cook gave $300 for a nice-looking bay three-year-old stallion by McAttee's Mambrino, dam young Miami. He was cheap as far as looks go, but seemed to go too wide behind. Capt. Griffin gave $200 for a bay mare, full sister to and a year older than the previous entry. He seemed rather dear at the price, for he has a pretty big splint. Mr. Keating gave $180 for a gray mare a year older than the last. She ought to make a useful brood mare. Owing to an accident she was never put into harness, and has, from the accident, a very enlarged hock, which seems to trouble her but little, though. Quite a spirited competition took place for young Miami and a bay suckling colt by Anteeo. Five hundred was the first offer, and Mr. Wood Wattles was enticed into giving $630 for the pair. After a sharp struggle a two-year-old filly by Anteeo, dam young Miami, was sold to Mr. Clay for $340, which seemed about its value, while the last lot, a yearling, full sister to the preceding one, was much stronger and more trotting like all round, creating a wild furore, for Valensin bid up to $450, when Holly and MacMahon raised one another up to $680, when Mr. MacMahon, with a bid of $690, floored his opponents and took the pick of the sale.

Singular Fancies in Horses.

Race-horses have curious fancies sometimes, says an exchange, and they may affect the animals at a time when their best efforts are wanted. Elkwood, who won the Suburban Handicap last year, is one of these equine cranks, his peculiarity being that he will not run on a track that is in the least degree wet, even though a slight shower has fallen. On such occasions Elkwood might as well be left in the barn for all the running he will do, and this is why he was not started for the Brooklyn Handicap last year. Parole, the famous gelding that went to England a dozen years ago and won so many races, was a cranky horse, and his head was simply full of odd notions. He learned, for instance, to know that when the pail containing water was taken from his stall in the morning, instead of being left in the corner, there was a race on hand, and he would fret himself into a lather over the matter. The trotter Goldsmith Maid was exactly like Parole in this respect. She knew, on account of her head being tied up, that the day of a race had arrived, but for all that she would stand quietly enough until afternoon, and then, thinking it about time for the fun to begin, she would plunge about in rather an alarming fashion.

When harnessed for a race the Maid would tremble like a leaf until Budd Doble got into the sulkey, but once she was headed for the gate all her nervousness was gone and she began figuring how to beat her opponents. She was very cunning about this, especially in the matter of scoring, declining to come to the wire unless she was on even terms with the other horses, and many a false score has been caused by her holding back because she thought she was getting the worst of the send-off. That horses, or at least some of them, know when men are drunk is not to be doubted. Gen. Yorke, a thoroughbred that was owned by one of the Lorillards, was such a savage that it was unsafe for even his attendent to go near him unless provided with a stout stick, but let a man whose breath smelled of liquor enter the stall and Gen. Yorke was as quiet as a lamb.

The old-time trotter Gen. Grant, not the one with a record of 2:21, but his prodecessor by many years on the turf, was another respector of people who had been indulging too freely, although at other times he was ready to eat a man. Fisherman, one of the most celebrated thoroughbreds of his day in England, would not run well at the pole, not fancying the fence, and another trick of his was never to run well when the sun was shining, no matter whether he was out for exercise or started in a race. A southerly wind and a cloudy sky were what Fisherman wanted.

The Control of Sex in Breeding.

I read with pleasure the interesting and also curious article of the North British Agriculturist published in your edition of May 11th., and fully agree with the author when he says that the most of the theories propounded on the subject are ridiculous in the highest degree. I will even say that they all, without exception, are very absurd and can pass off easier for stable yarns than for serious theories.

It must be admitted that if there is a law governing the sex in breeding, it must equally apply to all species of animals, and even to those of the lowest class.

Physiologists have admitted many years ago, that there was no law controlling the sex in the offspring, but proved that the sex depends solely upon the actual preponderance of either male or female at the time of copulation; that the preeminence of one nature over another is established by health, age, vigor, energy of constitution and natural development. Any male with such advantage, will always reproduce not only his sex, but also his strength, speed, endurance, form and temper; which fact is well known to all breeders of fast horses throughout the United States.

The real mystery of the generation act has never been fully discovered in spite of the most thorough observation of the physiologists. It is well known that fecundation, in all species of animals, is accomplished by the intimate union of the male spermatozoa to the germ of the female; but it was so far entirely impossible to find out how their union is established, in short how these animalcules copulate. Science could not go further and the final act of fecundation is still a mystery.

This article recalls to my memory a similar discussion which took place in the Accademie des Sciences of Paris, France, about thirty years ago, when an old, venerable gentleman earnestly advised his medical confreres to investigate the mysteries of nature upon themselves and their families, adding, however, that it was a very delicate matter for a man to expose in public the secrets of married life. But as he was advanced in years, he would not refrain from communicating his personal experience on that question. Imbued with the truth of the above physiological law, he expressed to his educated wife his desire to investigate this matter for the benefit of science, and succeeded in obtaining her consent. The result was as he wished—two sons and a daughter.

This same principle was taken up immediately by scientific agriculturists, and a few years later, in 1861 or 1862, I read in French legricultural papers, several reports of successful experiments made by an aristocratic breeder of fine cattle. Wishing to obtain a bull calf from a cow that was a great producer of rich, creamy milk, he tied a common bull with that cow for several days to keep her sexual organs permanently excited, and when he thought her nature sufficiently weakened, he gave her the service of a strong, vigorous bull, and obtained a bull calf. For the following years he succeeded in raising, at will, heifers from the same cow, by putting her to the bull on the very first day she came in heat. Several other breeders confirmed the truth of this principle by proceeding in the same manner with horses as well as cattle and swine.

I have never since that time read any further details upon that question, but can draw from daily life sufficient evidence to prove the same facts.

Many instances are found where a man of old age and weak constitution marries a young, robust wife, and the family will count all daughters, or more daughters than sons. All sheep raisers know well that adult ewes in good health and condition will bring more ewe lambs than bucks, while a vigorous adult ram, turned out with a small number of young ewes or old, weak, sickly sheep, will produce more bucks than females.

I know of an old slut, covered by a young, large St. Bernard dog, that gave birth to six male pups, all resembling their sire in color and size.

In some years we hear that more fillies are born than horse colts, while in others their numbers are about even. A close investigation of the breeding books of our great establishments might give some very interesting information in regard to that matter. Mr. Heplar, of the Laymo Ranch, near Santa Rosa, raised last year, from nine mares, six horse colts; while this year the same nine mares, bred to the same stallion, brought one horse colt to eight fillies, and he never could see any difference in the condition of his horse. Nature always has, and forever will, perform acts that cannot be explained by the most acute human intellect, and whenever the above physiological principle does not find application, all efforts to obtain further light about the mysterious ways of nature will be made in vain.

The article of the N. Br. Agriculturalist speaks very highly of the only reasonable theory so far, promulgated by a German and American physician, namely, that the right testis and the right ovary produce male sperm and male germ, while the organs of the left side produce the female sex, and that the seed of one side would not impregnate that of the other side. The experiments those gentlemen have made to test the accuracy of that theory have given them results that they declare are in accordance with their theory. In evidence they report the following case: There have been for several years among the horses of a Danish regiment, in spite of all endeavors, some pregnant steeds after the time of pasture. It was known that this had been the case several times at the same season, and the watch was particularly active, no strange horse having been admitted to the pasture grounds. At last they found that among the horses of the regiment there was an old stallion whose right testicle had been taken out, and also the foals generated by him were fillies." In all certainty that old horse was a ridgling whose left testicle was located in the abdomen, and consequently was not a potent breeder, and unable to cope in vigor and constitutional strength with healthy mares in full possession of complete sexual organs. These gentlemen were most certainly mistaken; besides, I can refute that theory by several reliable, existing facts. Dr. Sheares, of Santa Rosa, who has served as physician in the War of the Rebellion, knows of a soldier who lost the right testicle by a bullet shot to have raised five children, of which three are boys. I know in Santa Rosa a man of middle age and good, robust health, who lost his right testicle while a young man, married, and with but the left testicle glorifies in the possession of three children, all three boys. Almost any physician throughout the country could report some cases to refute this irrational theory. I can merely wonder how the world could exist thousands of years without making a good, practical use of this theory if it was true.

The owners of large cattle ranches, for instance, who wish to stop the too rapid increase of stock, instead of spaying the heifers in full, would only remove the left ovary from a certain number of cows, in order to obtain only bull calves that would, in time, make steers for the market.

It is besides a very difficult task, or rather an impossibility to support this lateral sex theory by arguments drawn from anatomy and physiology. One can hardly believe that nature, which intended to facilitate the reproduction of every species of animals it has created, would interpose such difficulties to their natural increase, by subjecting the same to a mere hazard. And indeed, the sperm of the male must be carried to either one of the two horns of the womb, left or right, in order to meet the germ coming from the ovary. But suppose that the sperm of the right testis would come in contact with the ovum of the left ovary, there would not be pregnancy according to that theory, and the purposes of nature would be foiled, which is unnatural. The left horn would necessarily be destined to develop only a female foetus, and the right horn the male foetus; but practice shows that bull-calves are found in the left horn of the cow's womb, and filly colts in the right horn of the mare's womb. Nor has anybody ever observed that in multiparas like the swine and canine species, the foetus were separated in the womb according to the sex? The two sexes are always indifferently developed in the same horn of the womb, where fecundation took place. We need only to memtion that sows, bitches, cats, goats and sheep will give birth to several young ones, from 2 to 10 and 12, of various sizes, to demonstrate that there cannot be the least foundation in that lateral sex theory. Even the twins of our human species will bring testimony against its rationality.

It must be again admitted that this theory, if true, would find application to all animals. But in fowls, birds, etc., there is only one ovary and that is the left one, the right ovary becoming atrophied at an early age in nearly all species of fowls. This left ovary constitutes a large organ of the form of a grape, composed of many ovaries in different periods of development, the young ones being small and whitish, while the old ones are large and yellow and constitute the yellow part of the egg which is completed as it progresses towards the clodcum. Then the left ovary in fowls produces our fighting cocks and crowing roosters as a daily evidence against this lateral sex theory.

Another instance is found in the rabbit where the body of the womb is absent, and the two horns open in the vagina. It would be ridiculous to suppose that Mr. Jackrabbit knows how and when to draw on the right testicle and deposit the seed in the right horn so as not to commit error natural to the disadvantage of the rabbit species. But the disastrous increase of rabbits in the Fresno and Kern counties, is a prima facie evidence that the jackrabbit is not guilty of any mistakes of that nature.

The mode of fecundation of fish spawn would be another instance against that theory, for in this case the fecundation is accomplished without the concours of either male or female. For the spawn is floating in the water and there impregnated at hazard by the floating sperm of the male fish. The impregnation is mere accident.

Present Odds.

The result of the Brooklyn Handicap was such a surprise to the talent that they are all trying to pick out the winners of the Suburban and American Derby to recoup the losses incurred by the early event. Californians particularly, are deeply interested in the outcome of the Derby, as several from the Golden State are supposed to have more than a fair chance, with the great three-year-olds that will meet to do battle for this now classic race. A late issue of one of the prominent Chicago daily papers prognosticates that both Salvator and Sorrento will beat Spokane and Proctor Knott, still at the same time a quiet tip has been sent out from the Lake City that Philip D is a dangerous horse and will bear watching. Cutler and Whitney have issued another "odds sheet" for each of the big events, the following being the latest quotations:

Odds to win	Horse.	Odds to win	Horse.	Odds. to win	Horse.

Mart Walters, the owner of Al Farrow, has a three-year-old called Albatros, by Pillbox, dam Della Walker, which is spoken of very highly by those who have seen him. Pillbox is a full brother to Conner, the sire of Al Farrow, so the relationship between the two horses is very close.

Period of Gestation in Mares.

Mr. Parlan thus answers a seeker after knowledge: M. S. asks which is carried the longer period, a colt or filly. It is generally believed that a male foal is carried longer than a female, hence when the period is extended much beyond eleven months a colt is confidently expected. This is not always the case, however. The writer remembers an instance in his own experience, upwards of twenty years ago, where a mare considerably past the prime of life dropped a fine colt in ten and one-half months from the time she was bred. It was her first foal. In treating upon the subject, J. H. Sanders remarks in his excellent work on horse breeding "that the average period in mares is popularly placed at eleven months, but a careful comparison of statistics gathered from the books of several extensive horse breeders of my acquaintance, whom I know to be accurate and painstaking in their methods, places the average period at 340 days." It is a popular belief that males are carried longer than females, but the statistics do not bear out this conclusion.

The observations of Dr. W. H. Winter, of Princeton, Ills., covering seventy-two cases, make the average period for males about 341 days, and for females 338 days, the longest being 370 days and shortest 317. Mr. M. A. Brown, from thirty foals in one year, found the average to be slightly greater for males than females, while on the following year from thirty-two foals the females were carried the longest. He also reports a perfectly well authenticated case where a two-year-old half-blood Percheron filly was bred to an imported Percheron stallion, and produced a strong, healthy horse foal at just 300 days. The English author, quite an extensive breeder of thoroughbreds, states that the normal period of gestation in mares is eleven months, but * * * some variation of the regular period is not infrequent. His experience and observation does not lead him to conclude that the period is longer when the foal is a male than a female.

John Harper.

Sketches of Kentucky's Famous Turfman and Breeder.

The late John Harper commenced racing in early life, and for sport rather than for the money that was in it. And, in order to understand the training of a horse he spent one year as a sort of an apprentice under Captain Sid Burtridge of Scott County, who was one of the pioneer turfmen of Kentucky. "Uncle John," as Mr. Harper was usually called by his neighbors, never married, nor did his brothers, Jacob and Adam, nor his sister, Miss Betsy. (All murdered—Adam by the Jayhawkers during the war, and Jake and Miss Betsy some time afterward by parties unknown to this date.) The three brothers and sister lived together on the homestead, holding the property in common. Adam was the farmer, Jake the financier, Miss Betsy the housekeeper, and John the race horse manager. They were a plain people, honest and close—wealthy for that country and the times—without ostentation of any kind; kind and neighborly, and overflowing with plain, honest hospitality.

The Nantura farm is situated in the richest portion of Woodford County in the heart of the blue-grass region, which was at one time regarded as the exclusive thoroughbred nursery for the whole country. Many of his neighbors were turfmen—the Bufords, Blackburns, Fords, and Alexanders. Mr. Harper was himself a remarkably good trainer, very careful with his horses, and I don't think that he ever had a balky or a bad starter. His horses were generally in good condition, and when they went to the post every one felt confident they would win if it were possible. He never backed his horses for large amounts—rarely if ever more than $25. Mr. Harper owned many good horses in his day. The first of them of which I have any recollection was Harper's Clacker, and, if I am not mistaken, he was one amongst the first horses ever sold in an auction pool—Dr. Underwood being the originator of that system of pooling. Mr. Harper was a close man, and, like a good many before him and many after him, he never started with the best blood, nor until the latter part of his life ever patronized a high-priced stallion, but bred to his own stock. (By-the-by, this is a great error generally among breeders. No one can make a mistake in breeding to an imported horse, as all the speed comes from them). I heard Gen. Buford say that he almost forced Uncle John to breed Nantura and Fanny Holton to Leamington; that if it had not been for him, Buford, Nantura, and Fanny Holton would never have had anything but Endorser colts. But let that go. I know this, and I think a good many will agree with me, that the Leamington production was the best that Nantura ever foaled, or for that matter, better than any that either Lexington or Endorser ever sired. And this puts me in mind of the great cup race at Saratoga between Longfellow and Kingfisher in 1871. I was not there and of course did not see the race, but I heard and read a great deal about it at the time, and among other things I heard this, that the odds were in favor of Longfellow a thousand to six hundred, and a large majority of the New Yorkers were sticking to Fisher at these odds.

Now, Uncle John was a very close-mouthed man as regarded his horses, and there was no possible way to pump him. But the night before the race there was a grand ball, and Uncle John at that time was a famous character at Saratoga. He was invited, of course, and went through mere curiosity. It is needless to say that there were many beautiful women in attendance from all sections of the country, and the young and pretty ones wished to be introduced to the Kentuckian who owned the fleetest and most beautiful horse in the land, and he was soon surrounded by many beauties with their attendant gallants. The old gentleman was modest, but he was both pleased and charmed at the attention paid him. On being asked about his family, he smilingly said that he had none; that he had, in fact, come to Saratoga not so much for the purpose of racing as to get him a wife. In the meantime the gallants commenced to twit the old gentleman about the race. One of them said, "Uncle John, they say that Kingfisher is going to beat Longfellow to-morrow." "Well, I d-o-n-t k-n-o-w about it," said Uncle John, slowly. "Well," replied another, "Everybody says so." "Well," replies Uncle John, "if Fisher beats Longfellow to-morrow he'll have to run from eend to eend." *

These fellows were trying to pump him, and there was nothing to be learned from these answers; so one of them asked him how fast he thought Kingfisher could run a mile, and Uncle John said that he thought that Fisher could run a mile in about 1:41. (The fastest mile at this time was Herzog's 1:43 at Cincinnati.) So you can imagine the consternation in that crowd when they learned that Uncle John himself admitted that Longfellow's opponent could run a mile two seconds faster than had ever yet been run in the world. At this junction one of the bystanders remarked, "Can Longfellow beat that?" "Yes," replied Mr. Harper, quietly, "he can beat it—a little."

In fifteen minutes afterward that ballroom was well-nigh deserted—everybody rushing out to hedge.—Sports Afield.

* Meaning from start to finish.

Grim's Gossip.

Jo. D. Sproul, secretary of the Chico Fair Association, has been in town several days this week.

Frank De Poyster has shipped Moses B. to Portland to take part in the races shortly to be held there.

Fleet, the speedy two-year-old daughter of Sydney, is now at Oakland, being prepared for the campaign.

Mr. Morse, of Lodi, the owner of Dexter Prince, is going to prepare his well-known stallion for a low record this fall.

Dick Havey comes across the Bay early next week with Fleet, Bonanza, Haverley and several of Valensin's youngsters.

Donovan is being strongly backed for the English Derby at 4 to 5. Enthusiast who beat Donovan for the 2,000 guineas is quoted at 12 to 1.

"None so poor as to do him homage," is the condition of Proctor Knott at present, but still look out for him in the American Derby.

Billy Ayers, of Portland, Oregon, has been awarded the pool selling privileges at the June meeting to be held at City View Park.

Despite the statement published in the dailies, Narvice is as I said last week, still in Oakland, and has no intention at present of going East.

The Bard is to be sent to Mr. Cassatt's farm at Chesterbrook, all hopes of his coming into racing form again having been abandoned.

There has been a first-class mile track built at Port Townsend, W. T., and now the citizens of that sea port anticipate good racing in the near future.

Isaac Murphy, as everyone knows, has been re engaged to ride for E. J. Baldwin, but the salary has been heretofore a secret. $7,000 is the price that the dusky jock gets for his season's work.

Kingston, Canada, will enjoy two days' racing shortly. On the programme there is a mile and a quarter and repeat, first money $90, and ten per cent. entrance at that.

Mr. Shields, a well known livery stable proprietor of Fresno, lost a valuable mare last week from paralysis. She was by Rustic out of an American star mare.

The directors of the Twelfth Agricultural Association met lately at Ukiah and decided to hold their annual fair in October, from the 1st to the 5th inclusive.

Matt Storn's LeGrande colt goes up to Sacramento on Tuesday next with several trotting mares. Matt will be seen later in the week behind the aristocratic two-year-old in a Brewster with—?

Hyder Ali, the sire of Spokane, now the property of J. B. Haggin, was formerly owned by a Mr. Lyon of Toronto, and although his services were peddled through three counties at a $10 fee, there was not business enough to pay the expenses.

Sensation, the trotter that won such renown last season, will be taken East when the Haggin horses go early in June. His owner, Mr. Keating, will trot him through the Eastern circuit.

Valuable was going to break a record a few weeks ago, but as soon as she got into Campbell's hands she began "crabbing" like the whole stable.

The fastest time made so far in 1889 at three-quarters of a mile, is 1:14; Ban Cloche being the fleet sprinter to accomplish the feat, two weeks ago to-day at Brooklyn.

Sunol has never been harnessed since Marvin left for the East, having been turned out every fine day to grass in a paddock. How do these canards originate?

The Duke of Portland, gives promise of being the largest winner in the world this year. He has already won more money in stakes this year, than J. B. Haggin won in America all last season.

I have received word from Crab Orchard, Ky., that Heron was not as badly injured as many supposed, in the car accident, and that his owner Mr. Guest, is in hopes that he will be able to race him again before long.

The Bard has a splint on the inside of one of his fore legs. Dr. Sheppard hopes to do something with it. French Park has also developed a splint. Eurus has sprung a curb, and Green Morris' Panama is lame.

C. J. Hamlin of Buffalo, N. Y., offers to trot his Electioneer colt Chimes, against either Bell Boy or St. Bel, for any reasonable amount of money. What a great pity it is that Hamlin never puts up a forfeit when he makes his windy propositions.

"Snapper" Garrison won the Brooklyn cup and $2000 with Marauder, May 25th, at Gravasend, beating Hanover and Elkwood, one mile and a half, in 2:42½. Hanover was a hot favorite. The track was heavy.

Several weeks ago, I mentioned that Joe Narvice had been telegraphed for, to rejoin the Hearst stable at Sheepshead Bay. Narvice gave me the information himself, but the boy told a deliberate lie, as Matt Allen will not have him at any price, and has not sent for him.

The second dam of the famous race colt Proctor Knott was Lightsome by imported Glencoe, out of Levity by imported Trustee. Lightsome, bred to Alexander's Abdallah, produced Fadette, dam of the stout campaigner Favonia (2:15), the fastest of Wedgewood's get.

We learn from Mr. Levi S. Gould that the evidence gathered by him concerning the breeding of Waxy has convinced S. D. Bruce, compiler of the "American Stud Book," that she was by Lexington out of a daughter of Gray Eagle, and she will be so recorded.

Jos. Cairn Simpson will once more enter the turf arena. Work will be commenced on Monday with two mares and Rathbone. The latter has been getting all his work to sulkey. One of the mares is a three-year-old filly by Joe Hooker, dam Lady Viva by Three Cheers, out of Lady Amanda. She has been in Appleby's charge for some time. The other mare, a five-year-old by Double Cross—Eliza by Norfolk, is a big, racy looking chestnut. Charles Sibley (Spanish Charley), will, under Mr. Simpson, prepare the trio for the fall.

Bell Boy's first foal was dropped at Paris, Ky., April 17th. His owner, James E. Clay, writes as follows: "He is a bright bay, with star in forehead, white hind ankles, a very speedy formed colt and of good size."

Albert Cooper will start for Chicago on Monday next with Louis P., Gladstone, and two three-year-old fillies lately purchased from W. H. Boots. In the same car Kelly will take Flood Tide, Geraldine and Abdiel, also having charge of one of B. C. Holly's mare's, probably Nancy.

Killip & Co. have for sale 60 head of short horn cattle from one of the very best herds in the State, which they want to dispose of at private sale. Mr. K. assures me that the price asked for them is lower by far than the same class of cattle can be had for anywhere. Full particulars will be given on application.

Lee Shaner has finally settled down to hard work at Petaluma track and is daily exercising a large string of trotters and pacers. He has an exceeding promising yearling pacer, from which great things are expected. Mr. Whitney has also turned over to Mr. Shaner the well known trotter Dawn 2:19½, and will have him prepared to make a very low record this season.

Porter Ashe who returned from Lake County last week, is wonderfully eulogistic when speaking of the Langtry Farms stud, which he says is very nicely situated with abundance of fresh green feed. He seems unable to decide which of the horses on that or the Guenoc Farm is the best, their breeding being exceptional in each case, while their looks are surpassed by none he has seen.

My old friend Capt. Thos. B. Merry, formerly editor of the Portland Oregonian and Portland Sunday Mercury, has accepted the position of editor of The Helena Daily Journal, and started on his new work. The Montana folks will find Tom well up in horse matters, and at the same time one of the best general newspaper writers in America.

Patrons of the pool-rooms throughout the country will not have the pleasure of listening to a description of races read off to them in the future. They will not lose a great deal by the change, as the descriptions they usually received were about as near correct as an ordinary frequenter of the rooms might guess at if they were familiar with the peculiarities of the competing horses.—Sporting World.

W. J. Fitzpatrick has entered into contract to ride the heavy weight division for D. D. Withers. This is a good engagement. "Fitz" looks well in the all-black and the chances are that he will not lack riding winners, especially during the Monmouth meeting, when Hanrahan will be better able to look after the Brookdale horses. At present they are seriously handicapped by his ill-health.

Visitors to Palo Alto say that Flambeau 2d (Wild Idle—Flirt) is a speedier youngster than Racine, although he is half brother to Gorgo, I doubt it, for he is too leggy, and does not show half the quality the black mare does. Possibly with time he will be a race-horse, but at present he looks too backward. Glenloch (Flood—Glendew) is my favorite; a race-horse all over, and built like a stayer, too. Whenever the sister to Guenn faces the starter look out for her and don't let her run loose.

"Galen, the well-known three-year-old owned by the Chicago Stable, was named for Claudius Galen, the renowned Roman physican. He flourished during the reign of Aurelius, and was the author of more medical works than any writer of ancient times."

The person who wrote the above evidently forgot the fact that the present Galen is running in the days of another "Aurelius" who has contributed more first-class horse articles to sporting journals than any writer of modern times.

The directors of the Plumas, Lassen and Modoc Agricultural Association, have issued a very attractive programme for a five days meeting at Quincy, Plumas Co., commencing Sept. 23d. There are twelve trotting races on the card, and eleven running contests. Wherever the races are for district horses only, animals owned in Washoe Co., Nev, Lake and Grant Counties, Oregon, and Butte Co., Cal., will be eligible to start. The purses amount to $10,000 in all.

In Napa Wilkes, Mr. A. F. Baker, of Fresno, has a very fine stallion and one that was very fast, before he got his ankle hurt. Napa Wilkes has made a good showing in the stud and already has several promising colts. Mr. Baker also has mares by a son of Bashaw, Rustic, Electioneer, Eugene Casserly, Petaluma, McClellan, Navigator, Arthurton and Abbottsford. With this good beginning Mr. Baker should produce in the near future, some good youngsters.

Mr. Armstrong was offered $25,000 for the winner of the Kentucky Derby and the Clark Stakes by ex-Mayor Nolan of Albany, owner of the Beverwick Stables. This Mr. Armstrong declined, and, pressed to fix a price on the horse, he put it at $40,000, at which figure he hopes Mr. Nolan will refuse to buy. Spokane will run at Chicago, Kansas City and St. Paul, and then be taken East for the meetings at Monmouth, Westchester and Coney Island, where he has a number of engagements.

The suit ordered by the citizens of Spokane Falls for the great horse named after their city consists of a blanket and hood of blue silk plush, trimmed with yellow satin, with yellow satin ornaments of exquisite design in the corners. The lettering on the blanket will be raised embroidered letters in gold thread and silk, and will be as follows: "Spokane. Presented by the Citizens of Spokane Falls, W. T." Some idea of the expense of this beautiful momento can be formed, when we say that the embroidery of the lettering alone will cost about one hundred dollars. The colors used are those of the Montana Stable.

A horse in Detroit wears spectacles. The farmer that owned him having come to the conclusion, from various symptoms, that the animal was short-sighted, got an occulist to take the necessary measurements, and had a pair of spectacles manufactured for him. They are made to fasten firmly into the headstall, so that they do not shake out of place. At first the horse appeared startled by this addition to his harness, but he soon got used to his glasses, and liked them. "If fact," says his owner, "when I turn him out to pasture he feels uneasy and uncomfortable without his goggles, and last Sunday he hung around the barn and whinnied so plainly that I put his headstall and goggles on him, and he was so glad that he rubbed my shoulder with his nose. Then he kicked up his heels and danced down the pasture." He could see what he was going to eat then.

It is estimated that at least a quarter of a million of dollars changed hands on the morning of the Great American Stakes, by St. Carlo, May 23d; $15,450 were bet in the mutuals, between $7,000 and $8,000 in the auction pools, and the balance in the books.

American Consul Griffin at Sydney, Australia, in his report to the Department of State, says a disease known as anthrax or splenetic apoplexy, which for so many years has been devastating herds of cattle in New South Wales and in Fair Way, are being very effectually checked by Pasteur's system of inoculation.

Only five of the famous brood mares in the country are out of the dams of 2:20 trotters, they being Beatrice (dam of Patron, 2:14¼), whose dam produced Elvira, 2:18½; Lady Bunker (dam of Guy Wilkes, 2:15½), whose dam procured Joe Bunker, 2:19¼; Belle Patchen (dam of Baron Wilkes, 2:18), whose dam procured Proteine, 2:18; Sable (dam of Sable Wilkes, 2:18), whose dam produced Romero, 2:19½; and Susie (dam of DeBarry 2:19¼), whose dam produced Nettie, 2:18.

Mr. Henry C. Judson, the noted breeder, came up from the Wildidle Farm, Santa Clara Co., last week, and on Saturday last paid us a very pleasant visit. He seems to have the true idea of the utility of a thoroughbred horse, viz., that outside of racing propositions, a thoroughbred sire can be used to great advantage for crossing with all classes of horses, and thereby produces a horse with more stamina and courage, with, at the same time, if judiciously mated, plenty of strength. Mr. Judson's object in calling on us was to have his name and address published in our Breeder's Directory; every breeder in the State ought to recognize and utilize this useful department of the paper, bringing as it does all breeders and would-be purchasers into contact.

The Hon. Jas. White, satiated with success, is looking for fresh fields to conquer and will send to England early in June Carlyon, Cranbrook, Abercorn and several two-year-olds. The three named horses are four-year-olds, all well known successful performers on the Australian turf, while among the juveniles two are entered in the Derby of 1890. Mr. White's great desire now is to win the English Derby, and of late he has been breeding a few of his best mares to English time. It is stated on very good authority that he has arranged with Matthew Dawson to handle his colts and fit them for the fray. No one better could be obtained for the purpose, as the ruddy-cheeked Newmarket trainer has experience and judgment second to no man's.

The steamship Baltimore, from Liverpool, arrived at Baltimore May 4th, having on board the thoroughbred stallion St. George, foaled 1883, by Cremorne, out of Strategy, she by Adventurer, out of Minerva, by Stockwell. As a two-year-old he ran three times, of which second for the Prendergast Stakes at Newmarket was his best performance. He ran five times as a three-year-old, winning the Visitor's Handicap, at 96 pounds, over the Bretby Stakes course, and the Stand Handicap, with the same weight, over the last five furlongs of the Ancaster mile, both at Newmarket. As a four-year-old he ran seven times without winning, while last year out of nine starts he won four times, viz.: Wheathamstead Stakes at Harpenden, a high weight selling handicap at Sandown, a Gentlemen Riders' Plate at Kempton, carrying 168 pounds, and the Cromwell Plate at Huntington, carrying 147 pounds. The last race was at a mile. St. George is owned by Mr. Edward Barber, who will take him to Warrenton, Va.

At Latonia, May 28th, the noted racer Proctor Knott, pride of Kentucky, was again beaten. The race is not to the swift, sure enough, in case some other racer is swifter in the finish. This is what has happened once more to Proctor Knott. Until these defeats, regarded as invincible upon the American turf, Come-to-Taw, ridden by the African jockey graced with an Irish name—Murphy—has now placed the namesake of the noted Kentucky statesman who gave celebrity to the proud city of Duluth, by his humorous speech in Congress years ago, in the rear of the procession of the equines which have made their names famous in turf registers; and if anybody now cares to offer $30,000 for Proctor Knott—as the story went early in the spring of such an offer—it is probable that the particular anybody can become the owner on payment of a much less sum. Come-to-Taw and Longfish both beat Proctor Knot in the race of one mile and one-eighth, in the not remarkable time of 1:58¾. the mile in 1:46. No, the race is not to the swift: the swifter wins it.

The Kempton Park Royal Stakes of 10,000 sovs; the owner of the second to receive 500 sovs. and the nominator of the winner 500 sovs. out of the stakes; three-year-olds to carry 8 st., four, 9 st. 5 lb., five and upwards, 9 st. 9 lb.; mares and geldings allowed 3 lb.; any winner of a weight-for-age race value 500 sovs. to carry 4 lb.; 100 sovs, 7 lb.; a winner of the Two Thousand Guineas, One Thousand Guineas, Derby, Oaks, St. Leger or Grand Prix de Paris to carry 10 lb. extra. One mile and a quarter. 240 subscribers, 109 of whom declared forfeit on October 4th, 1887, 44 on March 6th, 1888, and 49 on January 1st, 1889. Closed on October 12th, 1886.

BETTING AT THE START.

5 to 4 on Friars Balsam	30 to 1 Royal Star
100 to 30 against Melanion	50 to 1 The Baron
5 to 1 Ayrshire	50 to 1 Wishing Gate
10 to 1 Seabreeze

Ayrshire won easily by three-quarters of a length. His fortunate owner has now won the two big money races of the year. The other race, Prince of Wales Stakes, for three-year-olds, at Leicester, won by Donovon, was worth £11,000 to the winner. Seabreeze, who ran second, is by the same sire as Senator Hearst's black mare Gorgo. Senator Stanford at one time tried to obtain him, but his owner, Fred Gretton (partner in Bess & Co.), refused to put a price on him. After his death Isonomy was sold for, I think £8,000, but the Senator evidently missed his chance.

At the Oakland Track.

There are but few thoroughbreds (runners) now on the Oakland track, the trotters evidentty holding full sway there. On the inside of the track the feed has rapidly disappeared. No wonder, with upwards of a hundred mares and colts, and every one having mares and foals pastured there have to use hay and grain with a lavish hand in order to keep their stock improving and growing instead of retrograding. Old Three Cheers in his box in the rear of the stand looks as young and playful as a kitten, showing only the faintest traces of his age, and it is a great pleasure to see that at last the old horse is being well cared for and also getting a fair amount of choice mares, among whom are Rosetta, a full sister to Daisy D., who has a very nice colt by him at her side, with all the Newminister characteristics showing prominently in the blood like head and neck, with general racy appearance.

Sophie, a chestnut mare by Bazar, with dam by Jack Malone, grand dam by Glencoe, and great granddam by Priam, ought to be hard to beat as a brood mare. She has a colt at foot by Joe Daniels, which takes after the old four-miler in general appearance, being a chestnut with exactly the same markings as he has, and with that wiry thoroughbred stamp that carried him so successfully through his career. The colt ought to race for another reason. Joe Daniels is by Australian, and in Sophie you find the same cross just far enough removed, her sire Bazar being out of an Australian mare.

Before leaving Three Cheers I cannot help remarking on the lack of horse-lore which allowed a horse bred as he is to be so long neglected, his sire being by Newminster (the most sought after strain of blood in the world), out of Jovial by Bay Middleton, who always produced speed, which is now what we want, while young Lashin, his dam, possesses the stoutest strains of racing blood in America, being by Monarch (Priam-Delphine by Whisker), out of the celebrated Fashion, the great four-mile heat mare; she was by Cotton, dam Emma by Whisker.

Had it not been for Almont and Applause probably the old horse would never have had the chance he now has of leaying a name behind him. Applause is being given easy work at present, and looks very well, and with luck ought to again earn a bracket. Mr. Simpson gives Rathbone plenty of work to a sulky, and he seems to stand it well, and may perhaps be brought to the post that way in better condition than with a heavy boy exercising him.

Among the trotters Jas. Dustin has a large string under his care, and with all due consistency I will give the prize of place to Almont Patchen, pacer, record 2:15, who joined his string last Tuesday, after a short season in the stud at San Jose. The brown horse looks wonderfully well, and with average luck will lower his record two or three seconds this season. At present, of course, he is big, and is only doing slow work, with an occasional brush. Gus Wilkes', record 2:22, is an aged gelding who has been moved rather fast lately. On Wednesday morning I saw him sent an easy mile in 2:58. He will be campaigned again this season. Maggie E., 2:19¾, is the well-known bay mare that Donothan had in charge. Her back now looks all right, and she ought to lower her record a notch or two, for on Tuesday she beat 21, going within herself all the way. Addie is a three-year-old, sister to Adair. She is a beautiful bay, with a square, even gait, and shows quarters easily in 40 seconds. She is the property of Ariel Lathrop. J. R. is a three-year-old brown gelding by Richard's Elector. Judging from his style of going and a beat I saw him work, he ought to get well inside thirty this fall. A three-year-old black filly by Director has the old horse's style of going, and though she has only had a little work, shows great promise. A four-year-old green pacer by Cresco ought to make things lively before the next campaign ends, while the aged stallion by Administration has only been jogged, but shows a square, even gait. The Anteeo three-year-old is bound to trot, and already has compassed the back quarter in 39 seconds. Rebecca, a three-year-old daughter of Elector, is moving very well without a suspicion of breaking. The last three in the string are Dustin's own property, and consist of a two-year-old bay colt by Elector, dam by John Nelson out of a thoroughbred mare, who can now trot a half in 1:20; a yearling bay colt by Dexter Prince, dam Bessie, by Gen. McClelland, who shows great promise; the last is a two-year-old bay colt by Memorandum (three-year-old record 2:35), dam Edna (three-year-old record 2:35), by Nephew. He is a very racy-looking colt, and though very inbred, as his sire and dam are by Nephew, should soon repay his owner the cost of keeping.

Sam Gamble has the beautiful stallion Noonday in splendid stud condition, but as he has still some mares to serve he is only getting steady jogging exercise. Sam says he is making a highly successful season, very few of his mares coming back. A. L. Hinds has five in exceptionally good condition, of which Balkan, the big brown four-year-old stallion by Mambrino Wilkes, dam a thoroughbred mare, has a three-year-old record of 2:29½, which he ought to easily lower to twenty, as he is going in grand style just now. He also has a very pretty bay filly by Steinway, dam by Electioneer, who cannot help trotting. All of Mr. Hinds' string are the property of Irvin Ayres. Cricket is a five-year-old bay mare by Brigadier, with a record of 2:32, which she can lower without any difficulty. Clara P. is another five-year-old, by Mambrino Wilkes, and it is hoped she will beat 2:35 and thus make her standard. Veronica, a five-year-old Mambrino Wilkes, will be driven for a record this fall. She is now standard. Kaulbar, a black three-year-old stallion, also by Mambrino Wilkes, and out of a Drew McClelland mare, is one of the purest-gaited trotters on the track. The last of Hinds' lot is a four-year-old bay gelding, brother to Gus Wilkes, who ought soon to have a record approaching his brother's, for he trots in a wonderfully business like manner.

Dick Havey has Fleet, Valensin's speedy two-year-old, who looks wonderfully improved by her rest this winter, and a Sidney yearling out of a Crown Point mare who is one of the purest-gaited trotters I ever saw. Old Bonanza looks very well. Haverly is working on the road.

Palmer has five horses, all of whom have only had easy work as yet. The first is a five-year-old Anteeo gelding, who looks very racy and has a nice, even gait. The four-year-old gray colt, New Gifford, is wonderfully like his sire, Director, with the exception of a curb on his near hind leg. The five-year-old bay gelding by Abbotsford, dam by Signal, has only just been taken up, but is shaped like a trotter all over. The three-year-old gray filly by Director, out of a Paddy McGee mare, is a trotter sure, as is her half brother by Antevolo, who is one of the most even trotters, for a youngster, ever seen on a track.

John Rowen has a four-year-old gelding by Sidney, own brother to the two-year-old purchased by Robert Bonner at the Valensin sale this spring, who, although he has had no work, has yet shown some very lively quarters. St. Nicholas, four-year-old, by Sidney, dam by Echo, a beautiful bay stallion, whose picture we gave last year, has improved in appearance, if that were possible. He has made a highly successful season at the stud, though he has had rather too many mares, but Mr. Rowen says that thirty of them only took the horse once, so that if the other twenty do not come back again he will not be very hard worked. Matt Storn's colt, by Le Grand, is a big, strong, leggy colt, and ought to be rested for a year any way. Matt will probably drive him in his buggy this summer. Memo, who is also in Rowen's charge, looks in the pink of condition and has had a highly successful season. His leg looks as though it would stand hard work again, being, to all outward appearances, as sound as a bell. Johnny Goldsmith will prepare him for a record, which ought to be well inside twenty, as he has repeatedly gone the full mile many seconds better than thirty, and last fall, on trial, compassed the track in 2:20½.

Mr. Simpson is daily driving his Antevolo youngsters, one of whom looks as though he would rival the old horse, from his steady way of going and great gameness. Mike MacManus has ten under his care. Old Perhelion, 2:25, is going very well just now, and will probably be out for blood at Eureka, and then go through the circuit; so will the three-year-old pacer by Sidney, a grand chestnut mare with a silver main and tail, who is one of the quickest movers on the track. King David, five-year-old bay stallion, Kate Castleton, a six-year-old bay mare (a beauty), and Thora B., a two-year-old bay filly, are all by Admiral, dam Flory, dam of Sister and Huntress, and must surely trot for the jog in true trotting style; Scala, a three-year-old half sister to them, is by Director, and has her sire's well-known characteristics, while a grand yearling bay filly by Sidney, dam by Del Sur, can beat 2:50 now.

McManus also has a five year old bay horse by Speculator, dam a thoroughbred mare who goes in good shape, and a three year old brown colt by Sidney, dam by G. M. Patchen, Jr., who trots from the word go. Just outside the track, in a beautiful situation well shaded by trees, Dennis Gannon has his habitat, and when building operations are completed will have about twenty roomy box stalls. His charges have up to now only had easy work, not being rushed, as there is plenty of time before the fairs commence. He has four four-year-olds, viz., a gray pacer by Kansas Central, who is a big, raagy, green horse, and evidently very speedy; a good looking bay mare by Fleetwood; a bay horse by Anteeo, who has only been driven on the road, but is liable to do well on the track, and a useful looking black gelding by Monroe Chief; two three year olds by Director, one a big gray mare who cannot help trotting; the other a good looking black colt who trots as squarely as his well known sire, and if his off fore leg does not bother him will go a lively clip before the fall; five two year olds, three of whom are Antevolos, very stylish looking, and for what little work they have had, speedy; another of the youngsters is by Anteeo's dam by Geo. M. Patchen, Jr. A nice bay filly, though with rather upright posture. The other two year old is a Steinway colt, who was unfortunately badly knocked about on the cars, but is rapidly recovering. John Buckley has under Gannon's care a grand looking bay seven year old mare by Dave Hill, Jr., with a thoroughbred look about her, who will, without doubt, trot in 2:30 before long. Mr. Gannon's stallion Grover looks well, and has had a very fair season at the stud; his exercise is principally taken in the corral; he will probably be put into work shortly.

One of the most interesting features of the Gannon residence are the game chickens, principally Irish Grays, with an occasional quarter Jap. Probably one or two of them will be pitted this fall against some of their San Jose feathered confreres. I suppose it would be high treason to attempt to obtain possession of one or two—they are such pets.

Thoroughbred Blood in Trotters.

Hider Ali, the sire of Spokane, the winner of the Kentucky Derby and Clark Stakes a short time since, was out of Lady Duke, by Lexington, says the Cultivator. Lady Duke also produced Rysdyk, sire of Clingstone, 2:14. Spokane, since he defeated Proctor Knott, is regarded as about the best three-year-old that has yet appeared. All who are acquainted with the trotting history of the past few years know how great a horse Clingstone is. Here are two great performers, the one a runner, the other a trotter, the sires of both being out of the same mare, and she of course, a thoroughbred, for no mare otherwise bred could produce the sires of two great performers at the running and trotting gaits. Nor is the case of Spokane and Clingstone an isolated one. Lightsome, by imported Glencoe, second dam Levity by imported Trustee, and third dam by imported Tranby, bred to Alexander's Abdallah, produced Fadette, and she in time became the mother of Favonia, 2:15. Lightsome, bred to imported Bonny Scotland, produced that great race-horse, Luke Blackburn, and he got Proctor Knott, one of the present stars of the running turf. Waxy, by Lexington, produced the great race mare, Alpha, 1:45, and her daughter, Waxanda, is dam of the incomparable Sunol, two-year-old record 2:18. The list is a long one, and could be continued indefinitely. The several instances mentioned above are conspicuous examples and furnish a subject pregnant with suggestive truths to breeders who are willing and able to think for themselves, draw their own conclusions and act upon them.

How Hamilton Won the Brooklyn.

After the great handicap had been run at Gravesend, a reporter had a chat with jockey Hamilton as follows:

"You see, Mr. Lakeland, he never gives me no orders. He never says nothin' at all 'cept, 'You better win dat race, you black rascal, an' ef ye don't I'll break every bone in yer black body.' An' then I says, 'I always does my best'—as he knows

"I jes 'lowed dat horse Prince Royal needed a lookin' at, an' I kep' a-lookin' at him." 'You ain't a-gwine to get away from me, Mr. Royal,' I sez to myself. I didn't know we was off when de flag went down. We had had t'ree breakaways, an' me and Prince we kep' close up. Whenever Prince went I went. When I got off I says: 'Um, Mr. Exile got to git along; can't stan' no mo' foolin,' Mr. Exile; got to hump yo'self.'"

"Why did you let Juggler and Hanover get such a start on you going round the turn?" was asked.

"I never gave no notion to 'em," was Hamilton's reply. I said: 'No sellin' plater from Clifton ken come over here and beat Mr. Lakeland's horse;' an' I jes laid low an' watched ole Royal. He was the only other horse in the race for me. I let out a warp goin' round de turn when I see Royal creepin' up. 'You can't fool me, Mr. Royal,' I sez; 'I am a layin' low.'"

"When did you begin the run and give your horse his head?" asked a "bookie" who had joined the group.

"Royal, he came a bobbin' up around de back streteh an' I jes' came a bobbin' up 'longside Royal. Me an' Royal came around together. Then I let old Exile have his head. 'Good-bye, Mr. Royal,' I sez. I nearly died a laffin' when I see Mr. Garrison a whippin' an' a spittin' an' a swearin.' Why, ole Exile jes' made a monkey of him. 'Come on, my Exile,' I sez, ez I guv 'im the gaff, an' I knowed then it was all over fer Mr. Royal.

"You didn't draw the whip," suggested a listener admiringly.

"Whip!" exclaimed the little darkey, with infinite scorn "Them horses of Mr. Lakeland ain't that kind. None o of 'em need a whip when it comes to winnin' from cattle like yov got here. I jes' poked my knees up into his shoulders an' kind of lifted him up an sez, 'Come on!' an' Exile humped hisself. Never saw such a horse! All you got to do is to talk right to him, and he'll do anything you want him to do. If I had said, 'Hop along, ole man, you got to break dat record to-day,' he'd a done it. I like a horse you kin talk ter, not an old fool like Terra Cotta, what haint got no more sense than a fool nigger."

"You didn't think you were going to win, did you?" asked the reporter.

"I knowed I wer," was the sententious reply. "You don't raise 'em around here good enough to beat Mr. Lakeland," and proud of himself, proud of his horse, and proud of his employer, little Hamilton strutted off.

ROD.

The Fish Commissioners.

That disregard of the law which comes from the neglect of the officers of the law—those who are charged with its observance and upon whom devolve its administration and execution—should be taken into consideration whenever a transgressor is brought to answer. The prevalence of that spirit which commonly appears as disposition to ignore official recognition of the infraction and as purpose to abstain from prosecution, eventuates in general heedlessness and contempt for the law itself, and it falls into the category of obsolete or dead laws. To this condition the game laws of California have nearly fallen. It is not a case of innocuous desuetude, for the harm wrought is material to all and exasperating to every lover of the sports of stream, and field, and woods. The fault is not in the law—that is remedial and adequate. It is attributable mainly to the officers specially appointed for the purpose of commanding its observance, who are amply empowered to make provision for its usefulness, to guard against its infraction, and bring transgressors to the penalties allotted.

Under the game laws of California provision is made for the Fish Commission, and the powers and duties of the Fish Commissioners are clearly defined. The courts of the State stand to their support and the efficient enforcement of the law. The Commission now in authority so act as to warrant the general impression that there is too much of the law or too much committed to themselves. A former Commission acted as though the law was intended for their own recreation, to the length of indulgence in steam yachting upon the navigable waters of the State to deter delinquent fishermen and go a fishing themselves. The law was enlarged—it is misleading to say amended—to endow the Commission with this luxury of quest and inclination. It is to the praise of the present Commission that the steam yacht or launch has been discarded and sold. Nothing can be easier done without it, and the expense to the State is saved. Good wine needs no puff; nor are the puffing of the steam pipe and the piercing steam whistle the tests of good fishing. The Commissioners should themselves understand fishing and be competent. That high authority, Izack Walton, gave forth the standard: "If thou art a sour-visaged man, of acrid humor, and disposed to melancholy and severity, I shall not in the sweet pursuits of angling allow thee to be a competent judge." The revered brother of the rod might have comprehended a Commissioner, as honest Dogberry instructed his famous watch to "comprehend all vagrom men;" but "comparisons are odorous,'" and shall not be pursued.

What is required is a better observance of the law, by officials and others. Deer are killed out of season, slaughtered in season by skin hunters; birds suffer from the ravages of the pot hunter and vicious transgressor; fish are the victims of the explosive fiends. The earth, and the air, and the waters, alike witness the lawless devastation; but the officers of the law fail to witness it, and this order of killing, like an old English law was interpreted in Ireland, is no murder. The game law is shamefully, notoriously disregarded and violated in season and out of season. Evil examples descend from the top. The inattention, neglect, omission and laxity, manifested by those upon whom is devolved the enforcement of the law, is copied and seized by the offenders who are prone to its violation to their own personal gratification or profit, and their wicked indulgence in forbidden deeds. Town officers pay no heed. Sometimes they are involved as was the Kentucky jury in the trial of the defendant charged with stealing a hog; every man on the jury had been served with a generous cut of the pork. What show had the law or justice in that case? Once in this State, the Supreme Court "gave the law to the North and the nigger to the south." Town justices and town constables cannot be expected to rise above their superiors, and punish for violation of the law the culprit who has been generous with his game. A haunch of venison, a brace of birds, or a string of fish passeth the understanding of the bench and bar and officers when "good digestion waits on appetite," and the feeling rules that "mercy is an attribute to God" and is not strained by the consequent discharge of the offender and the official conscience.

The Fish Commissioners have a duty to perform. Full meed of praise awaits the faithful performance. All along the line, from the least in rank and authority, to the greatest, to whom is committed or upon whom devolve the duties pertaining to the maintenance of the game laws of the State, the approval of good citizens will reach. The true hunter will sound the praise to which his trained hounds will in full volume sonorously respond. The glad commendation of wing and feather sportsmen will in gratefulness and fervor redound, and from anglers and honest fishermen of every degree the hearty approbation will come to the thoughtful and wise conservators of the finny species which cultivated and epicurean mankind are every year finding stranger, to be taken in and done for. Lucullus could feed his slaves to his lampreys. May not the Commissioners of the law in this age of enlightment pursue to statute penalties perverse offenders?

THE KENNEL.

Dog owners are requested to send for publication the earliest possible notices of whelps, sales, names claimed, presentations and deaths in their kennels, in all instances writing plainly names of sire and dam and of grandparents, colors, dates and breed.

The Annual Bench Show.

Last week, beginning with Wednesday, marked the Second Annual Bench Show of the Pacific Kennel Club in San Francisco. The title is comparatively modern. Its distinctive origin is obscured. It is ancient that the dog is "the most complete, singular and useful conquest ever made by man of the brute creation." Each individual is devoted to his particular master, assumes his manners, distinguishes and defends his property, and continues attachment to him till death. The dog is the truest example of unconditional fidelity. The dumb creature examples this fidelity from friendship pure and simple, from gratitude without alloy. In these qualities it often puts mankind to the conscious blush. Neither riches attract nor poverty repels the devotion of the dog. The king may pat him; the ruffian may kick him; he leaps to the service and rushes to the defence and safety of the one and the other all the same. The lash of the harsh master wounds him; the caresses of the gentle and fair delight him; yet he will bound from the soft lap to the call of the lasher. The dog is the dumb companion of man. It would be flattery to bespeak of some men that they patterned the dog they habitually abused.

This similitude of natural parts may have had something to do with the nomenclature of these dogly exhibitions of the Bench Show. As with men and dogs, races and species, tribes and classes, families and breeds, have their distinctive characteristics. Mankind is the comprehensive term for Caucasian, American or Indian, Mongolian, Malayan and Ethiopian. Dogs are of the special Pugnaces, Venantes and Sagaces, agreeably as their instincts are to fight, to hunt, and to be useful or pleasing to the enlightened human family. It would be, however, an unadmitted license of description to say that the term "Bench Show" is the fair sequence of the similitude of men and dogs. "Bench" has its own definition in the pursuits of mankind. In ancient epochs the Athenian Areopagus and the Roman Curule seat were as the Bench of authority and justice, for however much these qualities went, from immemorial time since English chronicles, the Bench constituted the majesty of the law. The Benchers are the dignitaries of the inner court of the Temple. Likewise were Aldermen designated Benchers; to be sure, also was the term applied to the habitual sitters upon the benches of the taverns. Nowadays, this class is appropriately known as bummers. All through the varied forms, nevertheless, appears the connecting link 'twixt men and dogs, from noble qualities to lowest traits. The dog simply follows his master, high or low.

"Argus" was favorite of the hero Ulysses before the mighty Grecian departed upon his Odyssian ramblings of twenty years. For twenty years poor old Rip Van Winkle slept on Catskill heights. Each loved his dog. The skeleton of Rip's "Wolf" attested his devotion to his vagabond master. Aged "Argus," forced to the humiliation of his noisome lair, alone of all the household instantly recognized the familiar voice of the master he had missed and mourned. Faithful Bounce, the dog of Pope, the poet, drew from his master the retort to a friend who remarked that Pope seemed to believe that dogs have souls, "and if they have, what harm will that do us?" Sir Walter Scott's Maida, famous of the staghound breed, had more than ordinary human abnegation of vanity in turning from the many limners who strove to sketch his grand brute form. The story of Helvellyn is an Iliad of the dog's devotion, and Lord Byron has celebrated in fond inscription that which he felt for his Newfoundland Boatswain, which showed magnanimity of human type in his protecting care of the pet terrier of Byron's mother. Spencer's Beth Selert, the Twa Dogs of Burns, and the dogs of Crabbe, which learnt of man to scorn the poor and barked them from every decent door, illustrate how kin to man in nature is the dog. The "twa," they "got and shook their lugs; rejoiced they were na men, but dogs." But instances are innumerable.

The Bench Show leads to the development of the fittest. The familiar song goes—"As the farmer does his grounds, the huntsman loves his hounds." The fair and gentle have their favorites. The pet dog of unfortunate Queen Mary at Fotheringay drew repentance from Queen Elizabeth, from whom it refused food, and Bonny Heck is embalmed in Scottish minstrelsy, as the Irish wolf dog is still subject of song and story. Famous Barry of St. Bernard, with the noble record of the fifty lives he had rescued from death upon the snowy Alps, is more worthy of a page in history than many who are therein renowned. Reminiscences of the past bring into renewed notice instances which merit abiding record.

Since dogs are the brute companions of mankind for service, and for pleasure and sport, the same as horses, they can be better bred and trained to suit the nature and the wants and fancies of mankind. From mongrel cur to noble hound there is as wide difference as between Hottentot and superior Caucasian. From fice to mastiff is as from trifler to thorough manhood; from poodle and bulldog to dude and athlete are in similar lines; and from turnspit to greyhound, from pug to St. Bernard, is in kind and not in degree to rise from the plodder to the progressist, from the dabbler to the statesman. History is philosophy teaching by example. The improvement in years and species is taught by observation and comparison. As men have pride in good homes and good houses, they wish good in every quality. The hunting and sport-loving propensity lurks in man's nature. Its gratification inspires men to possession of the means required. Dogs are invaluable in the hunt. Many desire them as pets. As the candy makers say of their sweets, "children cry for them."

The Bench show is as the Commencement exercise in scholastic progress—an object lesson in material instruction. It causes fresh interest in the study of dogs. It teaches much that is valuable. It is as the art of dog learning without a master—as some essay the mastering of the modern languages. One acquires fair or sound knowledge of species and breeds, and cannot be tricked into the purchase of a painted cur for a coach dog, a spike-coated fice for a Skye, a stove setter for a Gordon, or a worthless beef eater for a St. Bernard. Dogs will be dogs, to be rated as they merit.

Pedigrees are attributes of value. The saying goes, "Blood will tell." As pedigree is traced and dated, values are measured and heightened. Dogs of famous breed and clear line command prices up to thousands in guineas in England, Scotland and Ireland; in the United States values are every year advancing from hundreds to thousands. In some of the States dogs are yet estimated in law as no property. A dog is property, the same as a horse or a cow, and enlightened law makers recognize this just measurement of values. The breed and the blood are the arbiters. The Bench show will instruct as to these qualities. Encouragement of the animal exhibitions will promote the interest and redound to the breeding.

We present a characteristic portrait of Judge Graham, the man so much lauded and abused—as the case may be. In our next issue we will try and speak more at length concerning this gentleman, whom we consider to be one of the most honorable and versatile dog fanciers, remarkable not only for the thorough knowledge he possesses of dogs in general, but for the impartial manner in which he acquitted himself as judge.

The Bench Show.

Time limitation prevented the publication last week of any notes about the dogs shown at the P. K. C. show, and the special prizes were awarded so late in the week as to preclude their presentation to readers. The show closed with a handsome balance on the wrong side of the account. Precisely what the loss is, it is impossible to state until all assets are called in and all bills paid, but is probable that five hundred dollars will not cover it. The fact that the show did not pay its way is regrettable, but it will not preclude future events of the kind. Already Secretary Watson is thinking of a show to be given next winter where everybody is in town and money is more plenty. When members of the Executive Committee meet, they wear ludicrously dolorous faces and there is a commiserating manner about them which enables anyone to pick them out in a crowd. Mr. Schreiber and Mr. Haight did a vast amount of work in preparing the show and were assiduous during its continuance, so that they feel particularly blue when they consider the inevitable draft upon their already freely opened purses to make up deficiencies.

President Wilson was lavish in offering cash prizes and in his subscription to the guarantee fund, but with his usual pluck he is cheerful under the adverse result of the show. Mr. H. R. Brown is despondent, but he is such a sound and thorough admirer of pointers that he may be relied upon to assist when show-time comes again. Colonel Gregory and Mr. Sandbach did a lot of effective work about the show, and deserve commendation. As usual in San Francisco the sporting classes were by far the largest, and in point of quality were very creditable.

The mastiffs, of which twelve were shown, were, with two exceptions, Mr. Richard Scott's Dick 10549, and Mrs. Preston's Actress 3915, all ordinary, being small, deficient in character, and lacking quality. Actress has filled out into a very good bitch indeed, moving well and being able all over. Mr. A. W. Manning's Judge 7512 has justified the notes made on him last year, and although now but two years old, is right in coat and color, rather small. The others shown were only ordinary.

A fairly good Newfoundland puppy, Nero, was shown by Mr. F. A. Schule. In great Danes, Mr. Perham W. Nahl swept the bench with the dogs formerly owned by Mr. Albert Hoeppner. Cæsar 10523 is of good quality, but rather small. Dora 10531 is good in all points.

Mrs. Nahl showed a puppy of excellent quality in her blue Leda. The greyhound exhibit was good in all but numbers; only seventeen were shown, instead of seventy-five, which should have been benched. Mr. Walton's Saturday Night is good all over. Second was won by T. J. Cronin's Snowball, and third by J. F. Carroll's Monarch, much alike, the latter showing age plainly. J. F. Carroll's Jennie June won in the bitch class, beating her little sister Brunette, because she was cleaner about the shoulders. P. F. Canavan's puppies "Chronicle" and "Examiner" were much alike and both good. In the bitch pup class M. B. McGowan's Menlo Maid was on condition. The foxhounds were mostly of the bloodhound type and very common, except the winners of first, Mr. Savage's Roy, and second, Mr. Wilson's Nip, in dogs, and first in bitches, Mr. McCarthy's Echo, which all showed a good deal of quality, the latter being a very nice level bitch.

The heavy pointer dog class was won by B. F. Naphthaly's lemon and white Pat P., 10058, a dog which won second in the dog puppy class last year. Pat P. was shown in bad coat and under his proper show weight but won nevertheless. He is a nicely made dog, with good feet and legs, splendid neck and shoulders, and quality of the proper sort. Mr. C. M. Osborne's Professor, well shown, won second, a little loaded in neck and shoulders, but a good mover and a good dog. Mr. C. A. Haight's Dick H., 10027, larger than the others, plain in head, and lacking the quality of those placed over him, won third. A. B. Truman's Rush T., 10069, won third last year, but was put back a peg, to V. H. C., res in this show.

Senator Pinder's Scout Croxteth 6277 got an H. C. He is a dog very much to our fancy, except about the eyes; is full of character, but moves badly.

Heavy bitches brought G. W. Bassford's Blossom to the front, a grand looking, level made bitch of great quality and character. Second was given to Mr. H. R. Brown's Donna Sensation 10095; well shown; not so good in head as Blossom, but of high quality. Mr. Brown's Manzanita, a puppy, was also shown in the bitch class, and won third. She is good all over but for plainness in head.

Pointer dogs, under 55 pounds, was given to B. Power's Wade Hampton; very good, except for lack of stop; second going to H. Spencer's Matchless, and third to E. W. Briggs' Climax, both good in middle, but short headed. A. B. Truman won the bitch class, under 50 pounds, with Patti Croxteth T., a very clean, typical bitch, with fine head, good legs and feet, just a little wide in front. Mr. Geo. B. Polhemus took second with Cora, a very likely bitch, seemingly immature and badly shown, being out of coat and poor. G. H. T. Jackson's Wanda received third, a very plain bitch about the head but good in body, roomy and well coupled, and having a good stern.

In dog puppies Wm. Lumbard won with Ponto, a good, big one. Mr. R. K. Gardiner taking second with Tennis, a fine puppy. Third went to A. B. Truman's Rob T., of high quality.

Bitch puppies were good. H. R. Brown's Manzanita, also a winner in the aged class, won first. G. A. Dickerson taking second with Donna Blanca, a nice puppy, rather light in bone, but of high quality. A. V. Stubenrauch with Diana, a pup of fine size and quality, getting third.

English setter dogs were of high average goodness. Thos. Higg's got first with Rover H., 10,225, a well-ribbed dog of good size, level made, but plain in head, and carrying too high a tail. J. E. Lucas' Bruiser was a good second, not so well sprung in ribs and a bit light as was H. B. Hosmer's Rector, winner of third. In bitches, P. D. Linville's Florine received first, and could win almost anywhere, a well-made, handsomely marked bitch, and a good mover. H. S. Wort's Beezy, a nice, clean little bitch, got second, third going to Geo. Muller's Ophelia, badly shown, having recently whelped. One dog pup and one bitch pup were shown, S. A. Watson owning the former and taking a first, and G. A. Watson the latter, also getting a first. Both were quality pups, but light and lacking substance. A. B. Truman's Mike T., finely shown, won in Irish setter dogs, plain in head, but good otherwise. John Stack's Grouse got second, a dog light in bone and leggy.

In bitches Mr. Truman's Lady Elcho T. won easily, a grand animal, perfect except that she needs a little more skull. She also won as the best setter in the show.

John Stach's Lena I. got a first, although having a litter, a nice typical bitch. In dog puppies, A. K. Truman won with Dash T. a good pup, but a little coarse. In Gordons there was but one really fine entry J. V. Birke's Ben Nevis; of proper type, coat and color. Senator Pinder won in Irish water spaniels with Nora P. a good bitch but out of coat. A good cocker dog Giffie was shown by H. P. Rennie and got first, as did the bitch Woodstock Belle, shown by Mrs. Rennie, both of good type and well shown. The Beagles, Dachshunde, and bull terriers were very common.

In fox terrier dogs, A. L. Langerman received first for Trump, very good in coat legs, middle, a little full about the eye.

In bitches, J. B. Martin's Golden Gem won easily enough, a nice bitch, good all over, fit for competition anywhere. Second prize winner, Mrs. Neale's Daisy, is also good, too full in eye and thick in shoulders.

In puppies, Mr. Martin's Golden Gem won first, duplicating her success in the open bitch class. One white hairid fox terrier was shown, Antrim, by Mr. J. E. Watson, a little devil not worth notice except that he is the first of his breed to be benched here.

Mr. Dave Eiseman showed a rarely good toy black and tan, in his Dixie, a very small, but perfect specimen.

Mr. C. H. Kingsley exhibited a very fine Airedale terrier, Nip. The dog is typical and about right in every way. Fit to win anywhere.

A fine skye terrier was shown by Miss A. A. Pierce's Phoebe, of proper color, coat, etc.

The Yorkshires were ordinary except Mr. Seerk's Mash, showing age, but a good dog.

Mrs. C. E. Rankin's Daisy won in the bitch class, a nice, dainty, little thing, a bit too light in color.

But one pug was shown. Buttsie, owned by Mrs. Jackson, and a very nice dog.

Two poodles were benched by Mr. P. W. Nahl, neither of high class.

After the Show.

She is waiting in the darkness, she is waiting by the door, and she hears the sad sea moaning as it beats the sandy shore; and she hears the night-bird crying, and the wailing of the trees, and upon her fevered forehead gently blows the southern breeze; but in vain she stands and listens for the coming of the one who to her is prince and hero, who is brighter than the sun. Close the door, oh weeping lady, close the door and weep alone, to the sighing of the branches, to the ocean's sullen moan; to the screaming of the night-bird, to the sobbing of the rain, as it falls like tears from heaven, plashing on the window pane. Let your eyes this night be rivers, and your hair a mourning veil, let your soul float out to heaven in a wild, despairing wail; for the footsteps of your hero do not echo on the shore, and to-night you'll never see him though you're waiting by the door; and you will not hear the music of the voice you love so well, you will only hear the moaning of the ocean's restless swell. Close the door, oh weeping lady, look no more for him you love, better look for hope and comfort to the sombre sky above; to your side your love and hero all your watching cannot win, for he got "tight" in the city and the peelers ran him in.

[This is atrocious, but it is not half so bad as can be perpetrated by that arch kennel paragrapher, Editor Clement, of the London Shooting Times—Ken. Ed.]

Dr. Davenport to Mr. McKoon.

Editor Breeder and Sportsman:—If you will give me space in your valuable paper to reply to my friend, McKoon's letter, (the careful breeder of cocker spaniels) in your journal of 18th inst., I will promise not to bother you with him again.

After giving you a dressing down he turns to me. Now, Mr. Editor, I am willing to leave it to any man, to receive a pair of puppies from a "careful" breeder of Gilt Edge stock with promise to please or no sale have them come poor, dirty and lousy, (just covered with vermin which Dr. S. N. Cross can testify to) and then answer him pleasantly I can say I am not the man. I do think from the way the puppy looked that he was kept about four weeks waiting for the other to get old enough to ship and that he could not have been fed on anything a great deal better than gravel. Dr. Cross received one in company with mine, and it was he who called my attention to the condition of the puppy. If any thanking should be done, Mr. McKoon ought to thank me.

Now, if Mr. McKoon wanted to help me as a friend with the pedigrees and colors of my bitches, why didn't he write me on the subject the same as he did Mr. E. Cohoon, instead of rushing into print and trying to show that I was breeding injudiciously, etc., when he had done the same thing and sold them as gilt-edged stock? He cannot say anything against the blood of my dogs, for I have a daughter and granddaughter of his Col. Stubbs, (which he says is the best dog in America), a daughter of his Jet, and a niece of one of his brood bitches. Now, I have a letter from Mr. E. Cohoon, of Handsome Brook Kennels, N. Y., in which he gives me the privilege of using any or all of the letter to defend myself. It is in reply to one I wrote, and the one that was in your paper of April 20th, which I sent him.

Mr. Cohoon says: "I had a letter from (Mr. McKoon) him a few days ago, and I saw he was quite stirred because you had bought two or three nice cocker bitches, intending to breed them, and that he wanted to scare you out if possible.

In his letter to me he does not allude to injudicious breeding and mating, only to the mixed up mess of dates and colors, and charges you with calling your bitches liver and white when they are liver, etc., and says, 'I mistrust the errors are mostly Dr. Davenport's,' and in his letter published April 20th, he says the errors do not appear to fall at Dr. Davenport's door. Now, as he has called my attention to the dates, I notice that in one thing he is right (he is raising one of the litter of pups, of which your Vic is one, for a stud dog, and calls it Black Bob). When I sent the pup to him I gave him pedigree and date of birth. I had this recorded in an old book, and in arranging a new book, less than a year ago, I entered the date as October 27th and it should have been December 27, 1887; this is as I gave it to McKoon. In giving you the date I was guided by my new book, and gave it as October 27th, not noticing the error until he called my attention to it, so I promptly acknowledge the error. I unintentionally called Vic two months older than she was, but does that prove that her pups are worthless? Not by any means She was the best developed bitch at thirteen months of age I ever saw. She had a perfect heat which lasted nearly eighteen days, and was in as good condition and in as perfect state of development to raise a good litter of pups as many bitches are at sixteen to twenty months of age; and as to Cherry, she was fifteen months old. He (McKoon) charges the same injudicious breeding with her.

Something over a year ago I sold McKoon a sister of Beauty, Vic's dam. She didn't come in heat until she was fifteen months old, and he wrote me to breed her at that age if she had a good, square heat. Now what is this careful breeder of cocker spaniels of proven reliability doing? He is trying to down you and reflect on me so that the public will not patronize us because we have done just what he has done himself and would do again. He says he is seeking information both for your best interest and the public's as well as his own. That is well put in. He is seeking to show to the public that your stock is about worthless—when he proves it to be just as good as his.

I can bring to mind several instances where I have sold bitches to other kennels in the Eastern States and elsewhere, and they have bred them even younger than Vic with good results. I sold a pup to a party in this State not long since from my Fanny at the age of your Vic, she, too, being well developed and forward, and this man wrote me that he had owned cocker spaniels for fifteen years, and had some of McKoon's, and had never had or seen as fine a pup as the one sent him.

Now Mr. D., the drift of it all is as I said before, he means to scare you out. I know him better than you ever will. Keep right on, offer your pups for sale and sell them. I am very sorry he has taken this course, and I am very sorry the error in date occurred. Anything that I can do for you I will do, and rest assured that your pups are all right. I have been a breeder of cocker spaniels for eight years, and know something about breeding them."

The English Kennel Club's Field Trials.

The English Kennel Club's field trials were run on April 20th and May 1st and 2d, on the Duke of Portland's estate, near Welbeck, Nottinghamshire. Out of ninety-four nominations for the Derby, there were but seventeen starters, nine pointers and eight setters. The judges were Colonel Le Gendre Starkie and Mr. C. H. Berk, the latter acting in place of Mr. S. E. Shirley who was prevented, by illness, from judging. The first day was rainy and unpropitious for good work, but favorable weather prevailed during the two following days. Mr. F. R. Hitchcock, the secretary of the Westminister Kennel Club was in attendance. The Derby was a sweepstake, 50 per cent. to first; 20 per cent. to second; 10 per cent. to third, pointers and setters respectively; and 10 per cent of the whole entry fee to be added, to go to the absolute winner, The puppies, except one or two, were a very poor lot. In setters, Mr. F. C. Lowe's Trip of Kippen (Tuisham Trip—Dido) won first; Mr. C. Bishop's Blossom of Hazleworth (Pride of the Hills—Essex Belle), second; Messrs. F. Warde & C. Gibb's Aldon Trip (Tutsham Trip—Penelope) third. In pointers, Mr. O. Morren's Banco of Brussels (Master Bang Bang—Lorna Doone of Kippen) won first, Duke of Portland's Dodona (Kent Cob—Magpie), second; Rev W. J Richardson's Rene R. (Byrsa—Regent of Milton), third. Trip of Kippen beat Banco of Brussels, and was the absolute winner. Among the notable dogs in the All-Age Stake, were the pointers Woolton Game, Polites, and Moor; and the Irish setter Drogheda and the English setter Blue Maid of Carnfield. Banco of Brussels here suffered his first defeat, although the heat with Trip of Kippen, the winner, was not wholly satisfactory. Rene R. was considered as being in great luck to get third place.

The All-Age Stake had the full limit, sixteen starters; the winners were as follows: First, Sir T. B. Lennard's pointer Polites (Priam—Duchess); second, Mr. C. C. Ellis' Irish setter Drogheda (Frisco—Grouse II); third, Mr. H. Harter's setter Blue Maid of Carnfield (Ranging Aaron—Little Bess); fourth, M. P. Caillard's Belle des Bordes (Young Bang—Polly). The prizes were £50 to first, £25 to second, and £10 each to third and fourth. The London Field, in its comments of the winners, says: "Much upheaval of reputed form took place in the All-Aged Stakes, won by the five-year-old pointer Polites, who, though somewhat lucky, made few errors and proved himself quite as good as of yore as a game-finder and game-stander. Something to talk about would have been found had this stake been won by the Irish setter Drogheda, who, according to the ruling of the judges, was beaten in the first round. 'That new rule,' already explained, led to his being called up again, and although he did not win the stake outright, he ran second, and was not beaten for the premier honors. Mr. Ellis' handsome dog does not go so fast and recklessly as he did last year; we thought him almost the most careful and quite the best dog in the stake. He, like Polites, committed few so-called crimes, and the form in which he found birds and behaved to them stamps him as possibly the best Irish setter of all times, although usually he is very shaky in backing an opponent."

The kennel of English setters owned by Mr. H. M. Gorham is being broken up, as the appended note will attest:

Editor Breeder and Sportsman:—I have purchased from Mr. H. M. Gorham, Gold Hill, Nev., Mollie C., the dam of Bohemian Girl, and Jill, a little sister of Bohemian Girl. I broke Jill for Gorham my first season in North Carolina, and she was one of the English setters I proposed to turn loose on Mr. Malcolm's Gordons. As the race did not materialize, I did not have the pleasure of showing what Jill was capable of doing; but she will run in at least three of the trials this Fall, and if fit and well I think she will not disgrace her illustrious sister or her breeder.

Typical Dogs.

The Breeder and Sportsman, with commendable enterprise, produces in its last issue six very good portraits of "typical dogs," and has chosen for its illustrations the English setters Sirius, owned by Thomas Bennett of San Francisco, and Jolly Planter, owned by H. T. Payne, of the Tribune; the Irish setter Lady Elcho T., owned by A. B. Truman of San Francisco; the pointer Climax, owned by E. W. Briggs of San Francisco; the mastiff Actress, the property of Mrs. E. F. Preston, and the fox-terrier Teddy, owned by Mrs. J. K. Newton. These dogs were all winners in the show which closed Saturday night last, except Mr. Payne's Jolly Planter, who was not sent to the show on account of his being in bad coat; therefore the Kennel Editor of the Breeder and Sportsman has paid him a high compliment in placing him among the typical dogs of the State.—Los Angeles Tribune.

Mr. Geo. T. Coles, of Los Alamo, offers through the business columns some purely-bred St. Bernard puppies. Particulrrs may be had by applying to Mr Coles.

A lemon and white pointer slut belonging to Mr. T. L. Potter, was lost at Alameda Point on Sunday last. She answers to the name Jean, and sportsmen should keep their eyes open for such an animal.

Mr. Geo. T. Allender writes from Watsonville that he has room for three or four more young setters and pointers, to be prepared for field trials,

A Distinguished Fancier Abroad.

The proprietors of the Fancier's Gazette gave a complimentary dinner at the Holborn Restaurant on May 7th to Mr. F. R. Hitchcock, of New York, other guests being the Right Hon. the Earl of Cork (formerly Master of H. M. Stag-hounds), Mr. Keeley Halswelle (the well known artist), Mr. W. Huscroft (of the American Field), and Mr. E. Wylam (of Spratts Patent). Mr. Shirley, Professor Horsley, Mr. Aspinall and other gentlemen who were invited were unable to attend, the matter having been arranged on short notice, as Mr. Hitchcock, who has since gone to Paris, and is going through Belgium to Berlin, returns to America on May 25th, says the English Kennel Gazette. Mr. Edward Brown, the editor-in-chief, made a capital chairman, ably supported by Messrs. Everett Millais, F. Gresham, S. P. Page, L. C. Verrey and R. Stacey.

The health of the Queen and the Royal Family, coupled with that of the President of the United States, having been duly honored, the toast of the evening, that of the Westminster Kennel Club and its Honorary Secretary, Mr. F. R. Hitchcock, was feelingly responded to by that gentleman, who expressed his deep sense of the honor paid to him and to his club, and through them to the American kennel world, by the hospitality thus shown to him. He concluded by proposing increasing prosperity to the Fancier's Gzaette.

This was responded to by Mr. Everett Millais, who dwelt on the fact that some of our most successful breeders and exhibitors are gentlemen belonging to the medical profession, attributing their success chiefly to their knowledge of physiology, a science which would, he believed, eventually do for live stock what chemestry has already done for agriculture. He concluded by proposing the health of the guests, coupling with the toast the name of the Earl of Cork.

His Lordship in replying said that he had listened with very great interest to the remarks of his kinsman, Mr. Millais, as to scientific breeding. Speaking for horses and hounds, of which he had some knowledge, he would say that there were two things absolutely necessary to success in breeding, first, to have a sound pedigree, and then to mate sire and dam so that whatever is weak or faulty in one may be counteracted by strength or quality in the other. He was glad to know that the gentlemen who had so ably discharged the duty of hosts on this occasion are all practical and successful breeders, and he was sure that the journal which they conducted would do much for the education of breeders. It had afforded him very great pleasure to be present, especially as he had, during a residence in America, made the acquaintance of a gentleman whom he now knew to be Mr. Hitchcock's brother, and he desired to express his acknowledgments for himself and for the other guests for the happiness derived from the hospitality shown them on this occasion. He concluded by proposing the health of Mr. Brown, who had so ably filled the post of chairman.

Mr. Brown having responded suitably, a few short speeches and some excellent songs (the latter from Mr. L. C. Verry) brought the business of a very enjoyable evening to a close.

THE GUN.

An Old Time Turkey Shoot.

Not many years ago, when the breech loader had not been adopted by many shooters, the muzzle loader having full swing, there habpened a laughable incident to a friend of mine in a small mining town in Pennsylvania, which told in his inimitable way, still furnishes many a laugh in club rooms.

Friend Jim and chum happening to strike the little town of G—— during a local fair or blow out of some kind, every body being out in their best clothes and Sunday smiles on.

One of the events of the day was a turkey shoot, competitors in which each fired a shot from their gun at a paper target cut in the shape of a turkey, 50 yards distant. The shooter putting in the most pellets in his target got the turkey there being some 50 turkeys altogether.

Now the muzzle loader most prevalent in that locality seemed to be of 13 bore, and double B's the proper shot to use in their estimation.

The breech loader was a very expensive article in those days and rare and not at all the excellent article that it is today, with its improved mechanism and choke bored barrels. But those using them were usually better posted and more expert shots.

Jakey Allen was the first man to face the enemy, bracing himself carefully with legs widely separated, head well forward in regulation style, a look of determination on his bronzed face, he slowly raises his gun and when muzzle covers target he pulls the 12-lb. trigger. There is a loud report and Jakey is hurled violently backward and his load of B. B. as violently lammed up against the target.

Jakey is a good shot, and much excitement prevails at result of shot, he having put five corns in the victim. His chances seem good, and pandemomium prevails, but soon there is a lull. Bill Giles, a very bad man, is at the bat, and when he carefully and scientifically spits four ounces of tobacco juice some yards ahead of him and takes a lowing squint along his 40-inch tube, the silence is so oppressive that your ears ring. The boys can feel that something is going to happen. Bill has blood in his eye. With suppressed breath and wildly beating hearts the result of Bill's shot is watched, and when the referee yells 6 corns, the pent up excitement of the cracks assembled finds vent in great enthusiasm and many yells of 2 to 1 on Bill, and one more enthusiastic admirer of Bill's than the others, even ventures on 3 to 1 with no takers.

After Bill had shaken hands with his adherents for the third time, and taken his fourth smile out of the hard cider barrel, the next contestant, Rob Hopper, takes his stand at the chalk line, but no such interest is centered in him, as he is as yet unknown amongst G—s shooting society, and is therefore supposed to be out of the race, but the boys consider it their duty to guy and bully him, and more than one even goes so far as to intimate very loudly his belief that he doesn't even know enough about the art of shooting and loading to make his ramrod rebound out of barrel while pounding down his powder. But the better natured citizens in the audience say this is going too far. Bob is slightly nervous, and a perceptible quiver of his knees, and palsy of his hands delay matters a little, but by a superhuman effort he gathers all his scattered wits about him, shutting his eyes,

Sales of Kentucky Yearlings.

New York is now the principal sales depot of racers and trotters, thoroughbreds and high grades. Kentucky breeders find it their best market, and California has leaped to great favor and strongest competition in it. At the sale of eighty-three yearlings, Kentucky bred, of Elmendorfs and McGrathians, May 14th, a total of $72,300 an average of $750.60. The highest price paid was $7,000, for a brother to J. B. Haggin's Firenzi, after sharp competition. P. W. Walden was the purchaser—it is believed for J. A. and A. H. Morris. The colt was from the Elmendorf lot. The lowest sale was $175, a filly by Bersan—Penny, by Jerome Edger, dam sister to Gouverneur. A bay colt by Alain, half brother to Fremont, sold for $6,700. The next highest price was $1,550, for a bay filly, by Glenelg—Mme. Dudley by Lexington.

Of the McGrathian lot a chestnut colt, by Onondaga, Nellie—Booker by Australian, brother to Bookmaker, sold for $1,800, and the lowest price, $150, was for a brown colt by Duke of Montrose, Volta by Voltuma, half brother to Redlight. A filly by Onondaga, Black Maria by Bonnie Scotland, sister to Once Again, sold for $1,600, and a filly by Pizarro—Perhaps by Australian, for $1,325.

Contrasted with the sales from California breeding farms this year—which occurred under unpropitious circumstances—these from Kentucky farms show much in favor of the Californians. But it is stated that these sales of Kentucky yearlings encountered discouragement consequent upon the strained situation between turfmen and bookmakers, the solution of which has yet to come.

The Dwyers were not present or represented at the sale on this account. It is reported that the brothers take the stand that, if the bookmakers are to manage or control racing, they will retire from the turf. That their absence affected the sale is apparent, but among the buyers were Pierre Lorillard and his son Pierre, Ben Ali Haggin, Milton Young, Leslie Bruce, Col. Warburton, the Lakeland Brothers, James Galway, Henry Stedeker, Capt. W. M. Conner, D. T. Pulsifer, and other notables of the turf. Still, after all allowance, the figures and the results show materially to the advantage of California breeders. Every year this advantage will become better apparent.

Bookmakers and Bookmakers.

A tremulous and indignant fledgling author has poured forth his remonstrances and lamentations from harrowed soul and craving pockets. He addressed an authority on Turf matters, in vigorous and ornate protest against the injustice of harsh criticism or condemnation of "Bookmakers." Lord send the young man relief. He is of the guild who are ambitious to make books to read and be assigned favored place in the library. It was in a publication of high rank, devoted to noble sporting, that he read the article which perturbed his soul, aroused his too utterly too sensitive nature. The criticism was directed toward a possible evil of the Turf; the condemnation was launched upon the actually delinquent of the fraternity. Authors were not aimed at or hit. The great poet found "tongues in trees, books in the running brooks, sermons in stones, and good in everything." It will be well to remark, however, that in Shakespeare's period the bookmaker of the Turf had not reached existence, otherwise he might have substituted the running of other than "brooks," and left nothing to the imagination, nothing for similitude. The bookmaker of the Turf writes for coin only, and he is his own cashier. His publisher may find himself defendant in a libel suit—claimed damages away up; actual damages no plummet can sound—in some instances. Still, it may serve as well as, or better than, the old mode, agreeably to which John Randolph of Roanoke, as famous for love of racing as for his eccentricities, felt constrained to cry out, as his offer of a wager was accepted: "Who'll hold the stakes?" and to the quick response, "Colonel Humphreys!" followed it with "Who will hold Colonel Humphreys?"

The average bookmaker of the Turf is of ardent nature and keen perception. The Turf bookmaker has too clear judgment of humanity to think with Tallyrand, that speech is intended to conceal thoughts, or that notes of hand are given on the principle of the gifted Sheridan, who fervently remarked as he drew the urgently demanded note, "Thank God, that debt is acquitted!" and of the bookmaker it may be said that his is a world of promise.

There is obligations in his dealings. Shun, flout, spurn, or forget him, as you will, still he has put you in his book, and will take good care that you are not neglected—not this side of the grave; and unless caput mortuum be conditional, he will pronounce the hic jacet with sonorous distinction and suggestive frequency. Cleverer than Governor Foote, who said to Senater Benton: "I shall write a little book in which your name will be mentioned," and more magnanimous than "Old Bullion" who retorted: "I will write a big book in which your name shall not occur!" the ever mindful bookmaker of the turf makes up his book, and woe to the unfortunate Ben Adhem whose name leads all the rest, in the delinquent list. Rest on earth is no more for him. William the Conquerer had his domesday book compiled. It has existence this ninth century from its make up. Accept Eugene Sue's story of the Wandering Jew, and in the process of unrolled centuries will appear the never-say-die collector of desperate I. O. U.'s, sure not to miss your heirs and assigns on his perennial tour as champion globe trotter, as he makes studious inquiry of the oldest inhabitant for names and pedigrees.

The yealy aspirant to authorship of books—of thoughts that breathe and words that burn—he should look out for his books or insure them—need have no fear of the rivalry of the Turf bookmakers. He, of all mankind is safe. The bookmaker knows a hawk from a hand-saw, a dude from a duodecimo, a dubious signature from a gilt-edge oral obligation. He will never encroach upon the domain of literature, never obstruct the sale of volumes in calf or Russian. His book is not printed. Its binding is in the contents. It is not illustrated. Its cuts are to be avoided—blood or denouncement. The title is clear—"Play or Pay." All who enter here leave not their purse behind, is the sufficient admonition. There be bookmakers and bookmakers—authors and bettors. Which are the better or the worse, is for all to determine agreeably to rare Ben Jonson, "Every man in his humor."

Breeding Considered.

There is varied and wide opinion among turfmen and breeders of trotters in reference to the limit of speed possible in the trotting horse and as to probability of this limit—whether it shall be attained through breeding or happen in the performance of a phenomenal trotter, without clean pedigree, as Lady Suffolk was. To fairly present a case as to the possible, care should be observed against expression of bias. An open question ought to be absolutely free to all, whatever their opinions may be or their arguments are worth. It will be enough, as with the Judge upon the Bench, to patiently give ear to testimony and pleadings, from which to form reasonable and impartial conclusions. It will not answer to dogmatize and declare that the limit of speed in trotting has already been attained; that the speed of Maud S. is phenomenal and will never be surpassed; that a mile in two minutes is impossible; or that there is not reason to believe that thorough breeding on both sides will better produce the accomplishment; that the two-minute trotter must be born, not trained and wrought to the performance. Upon a ground of deep deliberation, together with sound ratiocination and clear perspicuity for the examination of the case, must be superimposed for its hearing, figuratively, a table perfectly blank to receive everything offered and reject nothing that is to the purpose of the quest, and from the mass presented then to determine. To add to this the most potent reasoning and grace it with lucid exposition is the province and quality of the impartial judge, in order that the good and sound shall thereafter prevail in practice, and that delusive, misleading and mischievous theories shall no longer find followers, to the deterioration of sires and dams, by harmful coupling and the consequent decadence of the turf in respect to trotters. As to running horses, the unchallenged experience of two hundred years, intelligently directed, stands an impregnable wall of demonstration, buttressed by substantial proofs. It is with trotters that similar process remains to be definitely elucidated through equally intelligent and equally studious means.

Taking Maud S. as the example for theory and argument—for the sufficient reason that she maintains the greatest record of trotting speed—our writer upon the subject has put forward the belief that the trotter to excel her record is likely to come from a family outside of recognized lines of thorough breeding. This belief leaves the gates wide open to graded breeding or no breeding at all. The get of a draught-horse or of a common dam might prove the phenomenal trotter. As if blood and bone are mere accidents of breeding. This is extravagant, but once admit the probability, and only the impossible can be rejected. That this is in the face of sense and reason is apparent; yet to such extremity must the sophistry be pressed to impress some with the comprehension of the absurdity. And simple as it appears, there are some, even many, to whose understanding this has yet to be made clear. They are, too, owners and breeders of horses—only very common horses, to be sure, but nevertheless they persist in this order of breeding every year, because it is cheap and produces for them the kind of horses they have use for. The farmer, of all men who raise and breed horses, can commit no more sorry blunder, with harm to himself, than the pursuance of this "old fashioned" custom. As well might he cling to the old-fashioned cradle to cut down his cereal crops or use only the old fashioned plow in his field. There is too much profit in good horses, too much money in the value of a fine horse, for every purpose, to neglect the breeding nowadays. Besides, the better breeding of horses and of all farm animals, likewise developes and elevates, improves and refines the farmer and his family.

Intelligent breeding has developed in every land in which it has been followed, superior horses and other of the genus of domestic animals. It is most noticeable in thoroughbred runners and in cattle, in every country in which attention has been directed to the advancement—mainly to turf performers, to pleasure and draught horses in England and in France, and other nations of the continent of Europe; to beef and dairy cattle and sheep—in all of these. In the United States the improvement has been marvellous. Upon the best stock of England there has been notable improvements in valuation, besides the quality. Years ago, in New York, thoroughbred cattle of imported famous English lines, were sold to English bidders at the highest figures ever obtained for cattle in any part of the enlightened world. Within the last twenty years, horses have sold in the United States for larger sums than in England. There, runners command top figures. Here, trotters hold the topmost valuation. It was by studious and intelligent breeding that English thoroughbreds were brought to the perfection now attained. They are more valued now than ever before, and sell for higher prices. The introduction of trotters in England is one of the certain innovations to flow from the increasing inpour of American wealth, personality and push. The American "colonies" in England and on the continent, will have their fast trotters. The cost is no object—the trotters are wanted. This is enough. They will be had—imported home-bred, or from imported sires. But the home market is illimitable, constantly increasing and expanding, with better valuation. England will yet have her trotting races as she has her Derby, her Oaks, St. Leger, Doncaster, Ascot, Newmarket, Goodwood, Cesarovitch, Cambridge, Chester, and so on. Paris will come to her trotting Grand Prix. The trotters proudest period is coming. The trotting sires must come from the United States.

With less than forty years of breeding of trotters in this country, comparable with the breeding of runners in England, the results are already amazing—from 2:26 down to 2:08¾. From less than ten in the 2:20 class, the advance in twenty years has increased the number to hundreds, and each succeeding year records are reduced. Values have advanced from thousands to tens of thousands of dollars, and offers for the most famous of many, many tens of thousands, are refused. The blood of Messenger and Glencoe, of Belmont and Mambrino Chief, of Hambletonian and Wilkes, of Sultan and Clay, of Electioneer and Nutwood, of Pilot Jr. and Patchen, pervades and prevails. Other great sires and noted dams attest their superior quality. Breeding farms supply these. Stables are selected from them. Turf records are brilliant with the lustre of their performances. The lover of horses and the prideful, sagacious farmer have ready opportunity to become the possessor of the coming king or queen of trotters. It is all in the breeding, with judicious management. Blood will demonstrate its nobler quality. Training will assert its efficacy. California has attained distinction. No State has greater. The future trotter of two minutes is likely to be of California breeding.

Advertising Notes.

The Toomey Sulky.

At this season of the year, sulkies and light track wagons are in great demand, as the various breeders throughout the State are beginning to condition their horses preparatory to the coming campaign. Of all the firms engaged in manufacturing sporting vehicles, there are none that surpass Toomey & Co. in the elegance and durability of the work turned out. Mr. W. D. O'Kane, of 767 Market Street, S. F., has been appointed agent for the Pacific Coast, and will take pleasure in showing to any that may call, the advantages possessed by the Toomey Truss Axle Sulky over all others offered for sale in this market. The company have made such a success of their standard and training sulkies, improved skeleton wagons and light driving wagons that they have discontinued the manufacture of the heavier style of vehicles, and turned their entire attention to track work. Those contemplating the purchase of anything in the Sulky line will do well to call or send to the city agent for estimates.

Henry Vaughn has just arrived from the East bringing 15 head of thoroughbred registered Holstein cattle, which he has sold since his arrival to Mr. Andrew Smith of Redwood City. These cattle have been pronounced by all good judges who have seen them, and some of our best cattle men have inspected them, to be some of the finest ever brought to this State. He has also brought in the same consignment, eight thoroughbred registered Hereford bulls. These are all of grand type and the finest breeding obtainable, all ready for service, and are also guaranteed breeders. We wish Mr. Vaughn success in his constant endeavors to introduce good stock to our people.

Conversation with several prominent California horse breeders leads to the belief that several will journey Eastward shortly to purchase thoroughbreds at the coming sales. On Friday, June 21st, there will be sold at Washington Park, Chicago, a choice lot of yearlings from Kennesaw, Peytona, and other well-known breeding establishments, by Messrs. Bruce & Kidd, of Lexington, Ky. The young ones comprise the get of such famous sires as Geo. Kinny, Aretino, imported Glengary, Luke Blackburn, imported Pickwick, Bramble, Planeroid, Bertram, etc.. and out of Arizona (dam of Aranza, Amerique, etc.), Kennebec, half sister to George Kinney, Pearlash Azellia, Albatross, Amerique, Bessie Bell (dam of Gracious), Kathleen (dam of George Kinney, Kennesaw, John Happy, Kershaw, Summer, etc), Sierra Nevada (dam of Mountain Range), Ensue (dam of Agnes B.), Patricia (dam of Everett), Pansy, Lucia (dam of Carter), Mountain Range, Glen Hop (sister to Carson, Fond du Lac, Reed and Kirkman), Lizzie B., Kate Fisher (dam of Kingsland, Joe Mitchell, Col. Clark, Glenfisher, etc.), Planetta (dam of Howison and Brigonette), Tradewind, Eliza Carr, Emma Wilson, Maria Barnes, Mollie Wyman (dam of Glen Clark, Rico, etc), Emma Harrison, Belle, Tiara, Messalina, Malaria (dam of John Henry, etc.), Princess Ida and Palie.

This is a splendid opportunity to secure a few first-class fillies and colts at a reasonable price, and will repay a visit to Chicago.

Remember that entries close to-day for the fall meeting of the Pacific Coast Trotting Horse Breeders' Association.

Letter from Goodwin Bros.

NEW YORK, May 21, 1889.

EDITOR NEW YORK SPORTSMAN:—Your readers are doubtless aware that a few weeks ago we made a public offer through the press, both sporting and daily, to issue our work of Official Stake Entries at the low price of $2 per copy, providing we could obtain orders to the number of two hundred and fifty. As this offer has proved a total failure, consequent upon our having received but eight replies, we shall be compelled to charge the same price as last year, viz., $10 each.

This work will contain the entries which have already closed, for 1889-90-91, of the following clubs: American, Coney Island, New York, St. Louis Jockey Clubs, the Monmouth Park and Saratoga Racing Associations; also all stakes that have closed for 1890-91 of the Brooklyn Jockey Club and West Side Park (Nashville).

In addition to the above will be included a voluminous and complete list of yearlings of 1889. There will be only a limited number of copies of this work issued.

Respectfully yours, GOODWIN BROS.

The Colt at Weaning Time and After.

Mr. Seymour Brooks, of Wisconsin, in a paper before a recent Wisconsin Farmer's Institute, gave the following valuable suggestions as to the proper method of handling the trotting bred colt at weaning time and after:

At weaning time tie the mare in a box stall, put a halter on the colt and tie him by her side. That will be satisfactory to both of them. Let loose the colt three times a day to nurse, for a few days. Do not give the dam much water; it will help to dry her milk. Keep a pail of water before the colt, also bran and oats. In about four days take the mare away and put her to work. Let us aim to keep the colt thrieving. It can be done with feed. Different colts will need different amounts. Do not be afraid of feeding too much; it will not hurt him. American Eclipse was fed six quarts of oats the first year and it did not hurt him. Do not get the idea that because you are feeding the colt all the hay he can eat you are doing for him all you can. A colt's stomach is small and does not need much hay. What he wants is concentrated food, rich in phosphates, to build up the bones and the tendons. Oats and wheat bran contain the elements needed, with a little hay to distend the bowels. Give him liberty in a small yard during the day.

When the colt arises go up to him, put your left hand under his neck and your right hand around his hips. Hold him still; he will be afraid and struggle some, but you can hold him. He will soon quit struggling and look at you. Pat and rub him; he will like it. Keep hold of him until all fear is gone; then let him loose and he will probably follow you. Do this several times a day for a few days, and he will expect to be fondled when you come, and pleasant relations will be established between you. Have a little lump of sugar in your pocket for him; he will like it and come to you for his sugar. Pick up his fore feet, rub and pat him (do not forget the sugar.)

We left him tied in the box stall. What are we going to do next? I should go in there alone, taking a rope along with me about twenty feet long. Now find the middle of it and put the loop end over his hips, down in the curve of the stifle. Tie a knot where the neck sets on the shoulder; put each end on either side of his neck, and both ends through the rings of his halter. Untie him and lead him out, which you can do about as well as you did his mother. He will not pull back much, neither can he rear up and fall over backwards, as they do sometimes, striking their heads on the ground, which is very dangerous. Give him a couple of lessons in this way; then tie one end of the cord around his neck, put a loop in his mouth, and you have perfect control of him. Stand a little away from him and tell him to come. Of course he does not know what it means. Twitch the rope a little. It hurts, and he will come to you. Step off again and repeat, and you will teach him very soon to come by the word without the cord. One thing more should be taught him while the rope is in his mouth; the most important point in colt breeding, and which needs to be followed up to horsehood—the word whoa. Give him to understand that when he hears that word it means implicit obedience. Speak the word at the same time you give a twitch on the rope. Repeat until he minds the word without the cord. This preliminary work faithfully done, harnessing and driving will be a mere pastime. My excuse for consuming so much time in colt breaking is that a high-spirited colt spoiled by education becomes a worthless brute, and the fault lies at the door of the teacher.

Sell at any time you are offered a good price. Do not wait to get the last dollar in them. Give the buyer a chance to make something on them.

A trotting mare owned by John J. Scannell, of New York City, who has a cottage at Saratoga, was almost destroyed there one day last week, by a dog owned by Sullivan, his coachman. The dog attacked the mare in her stall and tore her savagely about the head and limbs. The dog had to be shot before it could be removed from the stall. The mare cost Mr. Scannell $2,300 and had a 2.22 record.

Answers to Correspondents.

Answers for this department MUST be accompanied by the name and address of the sender, not necessarily for publication, but as proof of good faith. Write the questions distinctly, and on one side of the paper only. Positively no questions will be answered by mail or elegraph.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—I notice in "Answers to Correspondents," in issue of last week, you give the address of the American Jersey Cattle Club as J. W. Maillard, 405 California Street, S. F. You probably refer to the Pacific J. C. C. The address of the A. J. C. C. is, or was, Thos. J. Hand. His address given in last volume I have is No. 9 Cedar Street, N. Y. EDWIN F. SMITH.

W. C. Chisholm, Windsor.

Some weeks ago we gave the mile record of Gen. Taylor as 2:48 to harness and 2:44 to saddle. Mr. George Bement, former owner of the horse, notifies us that Gen. Taylor has a record to harness of 2:44 and to saddle 2:41½.

M. J. S., Salinas.

Please give an interpretation of Rule 6, Sec. 4, of Rules and Regulations of the National Trotting Association, as applied to the following case:

A enters a colt in a stake. After making two payments, he finds a colt entered in races in a neighboring country under the same name. Is it necessary under Section 4, of Rule 6, in ordea to change name, to procure a record thereof in the office of the Secretary of the National Trotting Association?

Answer—You need not change the name unless you want to; if so, simply notify the Secretary of the stake, unless the colt has already started in a race, then you will have to have the name changed by the N. T. A., which will cost you $50.

Names Claimed.

I claim the name Vandalaria for a sorrel filly foaled April 23, 1889, by Jack Nelson by John Nelson, dam by the California Patchen. JOHN FRICK.

LIVERMORE, May 24, 1889.

I hereby claim the name of Anteos for bay colt, foaled 1889, by Anteeo, dam Young Miami, by Paul's Abdallah.

Also, the name of Lisbet for black filly, three years old, by Young Kisbar, dam Cassanolia by Altamont.

WOOD WATTLES, Healdsburg.

I do not know whether Dan McCarty is trying to engage all the riders in the East or not, but only a few days before he left San Francisco he old me that Hamilton would ride Sorrento in the American Derby, and within a very short time his brother quietly informed me that Hamilton would surely ride the sorrel colt. By the New York Spirit of May 25th it seems that Fitzpatrick will have the mount on Dan's colt, so you simply pay your money and take your choice.

Urbana was disqualified and all bets changed at the Brooklyn meeting a fortnight ago because she had not carried her correct weight, although she did carry the weight allotted her by the officials. Since then the following rule has been adopted by the American and Coney Island Jockey Clubs: "If a horse be disqualified on account of incorrect weight, the decisior shall not apply to bets provided the weight published in the programme or corrected on the Notice Board was carried."

gritting his teeth, he nerves himself for the boom, which ends his suspense, and comes near ending his career, as his gun muzzle, after covering every bit of space within 20 yards around the target, excepting the immediate section of the horizon hidden from view by the target, at the crash of the burning powder, is seen to rush wildly backward as if trying to bore a hole in poor Bob's right lung. The poor fellow succeeds in keeping his feet but is pushed some few yards back from score. The gun, after its first mad and Sullivan-like rush, seems to change its mind, and apparently perfectly satisfied with making Bob's nose bleed, cutting his finger, blacking both eyes, developing a new bump on his forehead and leaving shoulder and arm of rainbow hue, sullenly drops into the mud, muzzle down.

When it is announced that Bob has missed the target entirely, the withering glances of scorn cast upon poor Rob by the grizzled veterans present would have forever crushed the rising ambition and budding renown of a less determined pupil of the Caverian science than Rob.

Now Jerry Mitchell, Dave Crackell, Buck Walker and several others of lesser repute, have their whine at the giddy target, some having their shooting clothes on, others finding it to be their off day, and you know one is apt to take a drop once in awhile, so it was this memorable day.

Many reputations were ruined and several made, but none as yet had equalled the target of the redoubtable Bill Giles, and his wonderful target threatens to be handed down to posterity as the "best on record."

Bill and his particular circle of adherents are away up, and many is the "Benzine" they have had to properly express their sentiments. He is the admired of all eyes, the envy of others, and by a big majority "the lion of the day."

"Kid" Smith's excellent score of four pellets is so far third best, Jakey Allen proudly sustaining the honors of being second fiddler to Bill.

Jim and his chum, having mildly and modestly as became them while in the presence of the great lights of the day, expressed a feeble desire to point their breech loaders at the target, after payment of the fee demanded to entitle them to compete with the champions, take their guns out of their cases and putting them together, Jim's chum steps to the chalk line, undismayed by the contemptuous glances of the boys upon his new fangled "britch" loading gun, the unanimous opinion of the swains gathered together being that the poor little bizness wouldn't throw the shot half way up to the target; one young buck telling his pardner that the blamed thing would bust and kill the sickly lookin dood. Bill Giles very considerately, considering that he was the recognized champion, offered to loan him his Killdeer, but Jim's chum remained unmoved, and declined all offers of assistance.

Throwing his gun out hastily and shooting at the same instant, he stepped back to make room for Jim and a new target.

A yell of derision went up from the rugged throats of the scarred and bemedaled champions present, at the crack of the little gun, everyone but Jim and his chum thinking he had failed to reach the turkey target.

But the yells of scorn speedily change to sullen, morose and sulky silence when scorer announces that the target is riddled and that they would have to adjourn the meeting and hire the village school master to count the holes, as the scorer could not count above 100. Finally Jim and his chum agreed to count them between them, with the local birch swinger as referee, but the job growing tedious they turned the target over to the teacher and one of his big puppies to finish, and as they found the job extremely dry they adjourned to the neighboring saloon, and when Jim and his chum left town that night they left them still counting, and may be counting yet for all they ever found out to the contrary. Jim himself now steps to the score, and the target he made was even better than his chums. Great is now the commotion. Such doings have never before been heard tell of in this burgh, various comments upon the matter being made more loudly than politely. Some suggest "tar and feathers," others suggest burning at the stake on the charge of spiritualism or sleight o'hand, others more credulous affirm that the charge of shot used by each had exceeded half a pound to each gun. None of them suspecting the innocent and mild mannered strangers had used only one and a quarter ounce of No. 10 shot, while they themselves had used No. 1 and B. B.'s, Next comes a dispute as to whom the turkey belongs, as the teacher and his pupie are no nearer finding out how many pellets there are in Jim's chum's target. Jim's target will have to remain forever uncounted as they have run out of counting talent. Finally Jim and his chum agree to compromise, one paying the other for his half of the turkey.

The boys object to letting them shoot, but finally agree to do so if they will handicap themselves 10 yards, and pay double the entrance fee each, the distance and fee to be doubled up after each shoot. In this way the boys hope to get these hoodoo's out of the country by moving them back each time. Vain hope.

After the 20 turkeys are exhausted the scores stand:

1st	Shoot—	Jim and Chum	Turkey
2d	"	Jim's chum and Jim	"
3rd	"	Jim and chum	"
4th	"	Jim's chum and Jim	"
5th	"	Jim and chum	"
6th	"	Jim's chum and Jim	"
7th	"	Jim and chum	"
8th	"	Chum and Jim	"

10th	"	Chum and Jim	"
11th	"	Jim and chum	"
12th	"	Chum and Jim	"
13th	"	Jim and chum	"
14th	"	Chum and Jim	"
15th	"	Jim and Chum	"
16th	"	Chum and Jim	"
17th	"	Jim and Chum	"
18th	"	Chum and Jim	"
19th	"	Jim and Chum	"
20th	"	Jim	"

The reason that Jim won the last turkey alone was that at the eighteenth bird only two shooters remained besides our two heroes, and these two, being gamblers in a small way, had decided to see the thing out if it took a limb, hoping luck would change and shine upon them again.

But when the nineteenth bird went the same way as the others, patience ceased to be a virtue, and our heroes had the field to themselves, one of the gamblers at parting offering to shake dice for the lot. But our heroes, being virtuous, were not to be deluded out of their hard-earned birds. They therefore kindly but firmly refused to gamble.

The proprietor now refuses to allow them to shoot for the remaining turkey for their two entrance fees, but upon their allowing him to shoot their gun and stand at ten yards from target he agreed.

He stepped to the ten-yard mark and fired the blank cartridge they had inserted in his gun, but he never touched it. Jim and chum now having been moved and handicapped back nearly into next county, were shooting a round ball wrapped in an old piece of flannel instead of shot Chum missed the target entirely. Jim also missed. There now being a tie, it was mutually decided to shoot it off on same terms, our heroes positively refusing to go back another yard, and demanded permission to shoot in the 1,000-yard style, prone on ground, which being granted, they very kindly, as before, gave the proprietor a blank cartridge with powder only, so he wouldn't hurt anybody At first there threatened to be trouble, the village constable appearing on the scene with a gun at the instance of the former sore headed and disgruntled shooters, having sworn out a warrant. The constable was directed to attach their guns, being charged with being bunco men and thimble riggers.

They finally persuaded the limb of the law of their innocence, and gained his permission to continue their sport, another entanglement occurring when the proprietor asked permission to use the constable's gun. They succeeded in persuading the prop that the reason he had missed before was because the guns were extremely choked, and he would have to aim as deadly and true as with a rifle, upon which he took ther shotless gun and scored another goose egg.

Jim cut the lower edge of paper with his bullet having to make allowance for drop of ball from a smooth bored shotgun, held his gun straight up in the air in line with target, and that the muzzle was held at right elevation was proved by hitting target.

That's how he came to win last turkey alone

On their way to depot that evening, they noticed skulking around in the rear of station, several of their late antagonists with a keg of turpentine, vigorously trying to get on the outside of it in their mad rush for a spell of forgetfullness.

Their grief is so great, however, that one barrel seems shockingly small to drown so much sorrow.

Jim's chum cruelly accosted the only one sober enough to understand English. Say! Bill, you didn't lose any turkeys nor nothin, did you?

Let's know when you have another shoot. We don't care nothin for turkeys, but do love to shoot with kind fellows like yourselves.

But the last sentence has been wasted on an empty air.

The grizzled and battle scared veterans have vanished under the platform.

Purse divided into four moneys—$10,000 to first, $5,000 to second, $3,000 to third, and $2,000 to fourth horse; three to enter and two to start; American Association Rules to govern. Any horse distancing the field, or any part thereof, shall only be entitled to first money. All nominations must be accompanied by amount of first payment, or will not be recognized as an entry, and all payments thereafter must be paid when due, or nominator forfeits all money paid in, but in no case will the nominator be held for more than he has paid in.

The Association reserves the right to postpone the race, on account of bad weather or track, until the first good day and track.

WEIGHTS WILL BE AS FOLLOWS:

2 year old	79	lbs.
3 " "	109	"
4 " "	122	"
5 " "	124	"
6 " " and aged	124	"

With the usual allowance in heat races of 5 lbs., mares three years old and upwards shall be allowed 3 lbs. Colonial-bred horses foaled in Colonial time, i. e., between August 1st and December 1st, allowed as follows: Two and three-year-olds, 8 lbs.; four-year-olds, 5 lbs.; five-year-olds, 3 lbs. No allowance for Colonial-bred horses over five years, except the usual sex allowance.

There will also be liberal purses offered for four days' racing, to be given the same week as the race takes place. Programme will be issued later on.

Entries close July 15, 1889, with Secretary, N. I. BALDWIN, P. O. Drawer "U," Fresno, Cal.

REMARKS.

The intention of the Directors of this Association is to make this place a central point for racing in California. They recognize the fact, that in order to do so they have got to give large purses in order to get first-class horses. Knowing they have as well-appointed grounds and as good a track as there is in California, having first-class stabling and the best Club House on any track in California, and plenty of fine grass for horses the whole year, and by dealing justly and fairly with the horsemen, we hope to receive their patronage. We are situated about half way between San Francisco and Los Angeles, which makes it an accessible point for the patronage of the whole State.

Being aware that the responsibility, to a great extent, of the Association, is not known outside of our own State, we herewith at ach a certificate, signed by the Banks of this City, as to the responsibility of the Association.

We, the undersigned, do certify that the Fresno Fair Grounds Association is perfectly responsible, and its statements are reliable:

LEWIS LEACH, President Farmer's Bank.
O. J. WOODWARD, President First National Bank.
LOUIS EINSTEIN, President Bank of Central California.
H. D. COLSON, President Fresno National Bank.
W. H. MCKENZIE, Cashier Fresno Loan & Savings Bank.

GUARANTEE PURSE - - - $2,000.

For horses that never beat 2:20 trotting. $200 entrance. $50 payable July 1, 1889; $50 August 1st; $100 September 1st, when horses are to be named. To be trotted at the Fall Fair, Fresno, Cal., Friday, Octobe 4, 1889. Four moneys—50, 25, 15 and 10 per cent. of purse. American Association Rules to govern. Horses are eligible June 1, 1889.

REMARKS.

This 2:20 CLASS GUARANTEE PURSE gives the party making the entry the privilege of naming any horse he sees fit, the 1st day of September, having no better record than 2:20 the 1st day of June, irrespective of the record he may get after that date. It will be seen by this that the nominator has almost a sure thing of getting his money back.

Any nominator failing to make payments when due forfeits all money paid in, and is held responsible for whole amount of entrance money. First payment must accompany nomination, or will be considered no entry.

The 2:30 Class previously advertised will be trotted the first day of our Fair—Tuesday, October 1, 1889—thus giving nominators a chance to trot the same horse in both races.

Entries close July 1st with the Secretary.

REMARKS AND CONDITIONS.

TROTTING AND PACING.

All trotting and pacing races are the best 3 in 5, except the two year-old, unless otherwise specified; five to enter, and three to start. But the Board reserves the right to hold a less number than five to fill, by the deduction of the entrance money from the purse for each horse less than five. Entrance fee, 10 per cent on purse, to accompany nomination. Trotting and pacing purses divided at the rate of 50 per cent to first horse, 25 per cent to second, 15 per cent to third, and 10 per cent to fourth.

The National Association Rules to govern trotting; but the Board reserves the right to trot heats of any two classes alternately, if necessary to finish any day's racing, or trot a special race between heats. A horse making a walk-over shall be entitled only to the entrance money paid in. When less than the required number of starters appear they may contest for the entrance money, to be divided as follows: 66⅔ to the first, and 33⅓ to the second.

In trotting and pacing races, entries not declared out by 6 P. M., day before must start.

In trotting races drivers will be required to wear caps and jackets of distinct colors, which must be named in their entries.

RUNNING.

The State Agricultural Society's Rules of 1889 to govern running races, except when conditions named are otherwise.

Colonial bred horses foaled on colonial time, i. e., between August 1st and December 31st, allowed as follows: Two and three-year-olds, eight pounds; four-year olds, five pounds; five year-olds, three pounds.

Please observe that in the above stakes declarations are permitted for a small forfeit.

In all the foregoing stakes the declarations are void, unless accompanied by the money.

Starters in stake races must be named on or before six P. M. of day before race. All entries in purse races not declared out by six P. M. day before must start

Non-starters in running races will be held for entrance, under rule.

Racing colors to be named in entries

Final settlement of all purses and stakes won will be made on Saturday morning, September 21st, at the office of the Secretary.

Entry blanks and racing rules will be furnished upon application to the Secretary. Entries in all, except otherwise stated, to close with the Secretary Thursday, August 1, 1889.

If it is decided to give a racing meeting in April of each year, commencing in 1890, the various stakes, conditions, etc., will be published in the blanks for entries, to be issued shortly, covering both meetings.

CONDITIONS.

1. Whenever the word "District" occurs in this programme, it is intended to mean the counties of Modoc, Trinity, Del Norte, Siskiyou, Humboldt, Mendocino, Shasta, Plumas, Lassen, Yuba, Sutter, Sierra, Nevada, Placer, Colusa, Tehama and Butte.

2. National Trotting Association Rules to govern all Trotting and Pacing Races. Entrance fee of ten per cent. of purse to accompany nominations.

3. In all Trotting and Pacing Races, the purse is to be divided into three moneys—six-tenths, three-tenths and one-tenth.

4. The rules of the State Agricultural Society to govern all Running Races.

5. In all the above races, five or more paid up entries required to fill, and three or more horses to start, but the Board reserves the right to hold the entries, and start the race with a less number, and deduct a proportionate amount of the purse or stake.

6. The Board reserves the right to trot or run heats of any two races, alternately, or to call a special race between heats; also, to change the day and hour of any race, if deemed necessary.

7. For a walk-over, a horse is only entitled to its own entrance fee and one-half of the entrance received from the other entries of said race, and to no added money. A horse winning a race is entitled to first money only, except when distancing the field, then to first and third moneys.

8. Non-starters must be declared out the day previous to the race they are engaged in, by 8 o'clock P. M.

9. Horses for the first race on each day will be called up at 1 o'clock P. M. sharp.

10. All entries for a race to close with the Secretary or President, at Chico, August 1, 1889, at 10 o'clock P. M.

11. The Board of Directors will have charge of the track and grounds during the week of races, and will see that the rules are strictly enforced, and purses and stakes will be paid when the Judges have rendered their decision, and before leaving the Stand.

The Thoroughbred Stallion

THREE CHEERS

Will make the Season of 1889 at Oakland Race Track, Oakland, Alameda County.

Pedigree.

Hurrah by Newminster (winner St. Leger 1851), dam Jovial by Bay Middleton (winner Derby 1836.)

Newminster by Touchstone (winner St. Leger 1831), dam Beeswing (winner of 54 races out of 64 starts) by Dr. Syntax (winner Doncaster Cup 1837, 40, 41, 42, the only horse that ever accomplished that feat.)

THREE CHEERS is bred in the speediest and stoutest lines. His dam, Young Fashion was the dam of Surprise, Scotland (the only horse that ever beat Asteroid a heat), Liverpool, Columbia and Bonnie Kate, the dam of Little Buttercup and the flying Bonnie Lizzie. His grandam, Fashion, was the greatest race mare of her era, defeating Boston in that historical match at four-mile heats, that is recorded as one of the greatest events in the annals of the turf. He is thoroughly sound in wind and limb, his family on both sides being noted for their exemption from curbs, spavins, roaring, or any other hereditary unsoundness. Horsemen, who can appreciate the highest type of the thoroughbred, are specially invited to inspect Three Cheers.

THREE CHEERS is the sire of Almont, Applause and Why Not, the only three of his get ever trained, and all are stake winners.

TERMS: $75 for the season. Mares not proving with foal can be returned the next season free of charge. Good pasturage at $5 per month. Mares cared for in any manner owners may desire, and fed on hay and grain, either or both, at reasonable rates. None but competent grooms employed, but no responsibility assumed for accidents or escapes.

N. B.—Mares sent from a distance in care of J. W. Morshead City Front Stables, San Francisco, will be forwarded without delay.

WILKES PASHA.

STANDARD 2618.

Dark bay with white hind feet, 16½ hands high, bred by R. P. Pepper, of South Elk Horn Farm, Frankfort, Kentucky. Sired by Onward, 1411, record 2:25¾, trial 2:17. He by George Wilkes, 2:22, sire of sixty-five horses in the 2:30 list, ten of them with records below 2:20. First dam Fisher (dam of Clara Wilkes, 2:29¾, trial 2:25) by American Clay, 34, sire of Granville, 2:26; Maggie Briggs, 2:27; Ella Clay, 2:27½; and the dams of Executor, 2:24½, Ranchero, 2:23½; Judge Hawser, 2:24¾; Ambassador, 2:25, and nine others in 2:30; second dam by Wilson's Snow Storm, sire of Jim Irving, 2:2a; third dam by Paddie Burns, thoroughbred.

Onward, 1411, is one of the noted sires of to-day. In 1887 he placed seven performers in the 2:30 list, including Houri, three-year-old record 2:19¾; while in 1888 he still further sustains his reputation by adding nine of his sons and daughters to the list. Onward combines the blood of the two great trotting families, Hambletonian 10 and Mambrino Chief 11, and derives his speed inheritance direct through the greatest son of the one family, and the greatest daughter of the other.

Onward's dam was Dolly (the dam of Director, 2:17, and Thorndale, 2:22½), by Mambrino Chief. Dolly was one of the greatest speed-producing brood mares that ever lived. George Wilkes stands at the head of the list of sires of fast trotters with 65 performers with records of 2:30 or better, and the combination of these two great producers will breed on with absolute certainty.

WILKES PASHA will make the season of 1889 at the stables of the undersigned, at the Trancas Bridge, two miles north of Napa, on the Soda Spring Road.

TERMS,

For the season ending July 1, 1889, $35 in U. S. gold coin.

Alfalfa pasturage $4 per month; natural grass $2.50 per month.

Every attention and care will be given to mares, but no liabilities assumed for accidents or escapes.

LONGWORTH.

High Bred Trotting Stallion.

WILL BE FOUR YEARS OLD IN MARCH.

Dark Bay, Black Points, by Sidney.

OWNED BY A. C. DIETZ, OAKLAND.

Also the owner of Bay Stallion Ringwood, four years old, by Sidney, half brother to Longworth, which has showed trials over the Oakland Track, 2:30; quarters, in 34 seconds—2:16 gait —as a three-year old.

LONGWORTH, for finish, style and form cannot be excelled by any four-year-old horse in the State. His gait is perfect; going low to the ground, with smooth, easy motion, and has shown wonderful speed with but two month's work. As a two-year-old, he showed a 2:40 gait; as a three-year-old showed—trial—full mile over the Oakland track, 2:26; half mile, 1:10; quarters, 34 seconds; eighths, 16 seconds—a 2:08 gait.

Longworth is the result of a long line of distinguished ancestors, endowed with speed on the sire and dams' side that follows back for generations—consequently he cannot help but produce great speed.

He is half brother to the great three-year-old Adonis, record 2 14¾.

Gold Leaf, three-year-old record, 2:15.
Memo, three-year-old trial, 2:20½.
Sister V., two-year-old trial, 2:32.
St. Nicholas, three-year-old trial, 2:27¼.
Ringwood, three-year-old trial, 2:30.
Miss Sidney, one-year-old trial, half mile, 1:38.
Brown colt, three-year-old trial, 2:40.
Black colt, three-year-old trial, 2:39.
Linda, one-year-old trial, one quarter, 40 seconds.
Sorrel colt, two-year-old trial, quarter, 34 seconds, and a number more that have shown remarkable speed. One yearling that has shown one-eighth of a mile in 16 1-5 seconds—a 2:10 gait.

Sidney, the sire of Longworth, has a record of 2:19¾; Santa Claus, the grand sire, has a record of 2:17¼; Sweetness, the grandam, record 2:21¼; Strathmore, the sire of Santa Claus, has twenty-two that have trotted below 2:30; Volunteer, the sire of Sweetness, has twenty-six that have trotted below 2:30. Volunteer is the sire of St. Julian, record 2:11¼.

Longworth's first dam Grey Dale, the dam of Daisy C., Silver Threads, and grandam of Phaceola; Grey Dale by American Boy, Jr.; he by American Boy, the sire of Belmont. Second dam Grey Poll by Winfield Scott, by Edward Everett; third dam Sorrel Poll by Sir Henry; fourth dam Daughter of Printer.

Grey Dale, the dam of Longworth, has shown herself a great producer of speed through Daisy C. and Silver Threads, the sire of Phaceola.

All letters pertaining to the service of this horse should be addressed to R. H. FARMER, Oakland, Alameda County, Cal.

TERMS: Fifty dollars, payable at the end of the season or sooner if the mares are taken away. Season will close June 15th 1889. The number of mares limited to twenty-five. The best of care will be taken to insure mares with foal. Pasture $5 per month, which can be procured at the Oakland Race Track. Mares at the owners' risk, as to escapes or accidents.

The stallion will be kept at the stables of the undersigned, at the junction of San Pablo Avenue and Park Street.

HERALDIC, Standard 8137.

$25. PEDIGREE. $25.

Sired by Sterling No. 6223. Sterling has been a very successful sire, Argent having a record of 2:24½, Acrobat a two-year-old record of 2:37, Beatrice, as a three-year-old, 2:38, while Brilliant, as a yearling, was given a public trial of a half mile in 1:13.

His sire, Egmont No. 1828, has five in the thirty class, including the well-known Combination, 2:25¾, and Wildmont, 2:28¾.

Sterling's dam Mary was a good producer, being the dam of Apex, 2:26, at four years old, and grandam of Creole, three-year-old trial of 2:20½, and at Sacramento this spring a record of 2.25.

Heraldic 8137, dam Sallie McKim, sired by Prompter No. 2305, with six weeks training at the close of a stud season, he won a stallion race of five heats, winning the last three heats and getting a record of 2:33¼; he has never been trained since.

Prompter has been a highly successful sire, having five in the thirty class, including Creole, 2:25, and Transit, three-year-old record, 2:26½.

Sallie McKim's dam, Susie Brown, had a three-year-old record of 2:42½. She was by that noted horse Reaves' Blackbird No. 402 who had a record of 2:22, and was by Simpson's Blackbird, sire of A. W. Richmond, who is the sire of Arrow, 2:14, Romero, 2:19½, and the dams of Anteo, 2:16¾, Antevolo, 2:16½, Little Fred, 2:20, and Western Belle, 2:24½.

Heraldic is a splendid looking horse, magnificent action, and has easily shown a better than thirty gait, and could with out much preparation do better.

Will serve 15 outside mares at the low price of $25 the season. Should the mare not prove in foal, the money refunded or mare bred following season. Service fee payable, when I pasture the mare, at the time of her removal; but if served outside, payable at time of service.

Good pasturage for a limited number of mares only, at $5 per month. Ranch 18 miles from the City, San Pedro Valley. Horses taken down at owner's risk.

This horse will stand in San Francisco, San Mateo, or Alameda Counties. Owned by

BALKAN,

Three-year-old Record 2:29 1-2; trotting many heats faster, when he did not obtain a record.

PEDIGREE.

Sired by Mambrino Wilkes, dam Fanny Fern by Jack Hawkins, son of Boston; second dam S. I. B. by Jim Crow.

It will be readily seen that this colt is from strong producing lines on both sides, Fanny Fern having produced Mollie Drew, May Queen, Onyx and Fred Arnold, all noted trotters and all by different sires.

This colt will be kept at the Oakland Trotting Park, and will be stinted to ten approved mares at $100 for the season.

The Electioneer Stallion

LANCELOT,

SEAL BROWN STALLION, 15½ HANDS,

FOALED APRIL 15, 1881.

Bred by C. C. BEMIS, San Francisco, Cal.

Sire Gov. Stanford's ELECTIONEER; first dam Lizzie Harris by Comus; second dam by Arnold Harris. Comus by Grece's Bashaw, dam Topsey by Prophet, son of Hill's Black Hawk. Young Bashaw by Grand Bashaw (Arabian-182), dam Pearl by First Consul (913); g d Fancy by imp. Rockingham. Arnold Harris by Whalebone, dam Sportsmistress by American Eclipse.

All the sons of Electioneer in the Eastern States have their books filled for the season. This is a rare opportunity to breed to Lancelot at a very low price. Lancelot has shown quarters better than a 2:30 gait, and had it not been for an accident would have had a record as low as the fastest of the sons of Electioneer.

The Nutwood Stallion

SALADIN.

Bred by C. C. BEMIS, San Francisco.

SALADIN, chestnut stallion, 16 hands 1 inch high; foaled April 9, 1880. By Nutwood; first dam Lady Utley Jr. by Speculation, son of Rysdyk's Hambletonian; second dam Lady Utley. Grandam of Western Girl. Record 2:27¾.

NUTWOOD (record 2:18¾), half brother to Maud S., 2:08¾, by Belmont, son of Alexander's Abdallah; first dam Miss Russell by Pilot Jr.; second dam Sally Russell by Boston; third dam Maria Russell by Thornton's Rattler; fourth dam Miss Shepard by Stockholder; fifth dam Miranda by Topgallant; sixth dam by imported Diomed; seventh dam by imported Medley; eighth dam by imported Juniper. Nutwood is the sire of Felix, 2:18¾; Dawn 2:19½; Manon 2:21; Menlo 2:21¾; Nuthreaker, two years old, 2:29¾; Nutwood Jr. 2:26; Mount Vernon 2:21; Woodnut 2:16¾, and several others that have trotted under 2:30.

The above stallions will make the season of 1889 at the Hoag stables, corner 1st and B Streets, Santa Rosa.

TERMS: $40 for the season for either of the above stallions.

Pasturage $3 per month. All mares at the owners risk. Apply or address,

GEO. W. BROOKS, Agent.

GROVER CLAY,

Bay Stallion, bred by Hon. W. W. Traylor, San Francisco. Foaled 1883. By ELECTIONEER.

First dam MAGGIE NORFOLK by NORFOLK son of Lexington.

Second dam by BILLY CHEATHAM.

Third dam by DORSEY'S GOLDDUST.

GROVER C. is a very handsome shade of bay, 15⅞ hands high, and showing as much quality as a majority of thoroughbreds. He is as square-gaited a trotter as can be, and has shown a great deal of speed for the amount of handling. Has been worked very little, though he can show a thirty gait or better whenever called upon.

TERMS.

Fifty dollars the season, payable at time of service. Proper care will be taken, but no responsibility incurred for accidents or escapes. Mares will be pastured inside of the Oakland Trotting Park, which is especially safe, having two fences which give ample security against escape. There is a never-failing stream of water which runs through the field, and the food is good.

Season commencing first of January and ending the first of July.

This is the only son of Electioneer standing in Alameda County, and the high breeding on the side of his dam is a guarantee that his colts will inherit qualities already made famous through the mixture of Electioneer and Lexington blood. Ansel, 2:20, is from a Lexington mare, and Sunol's grandam, two-year-old record 2:18, was by Lexington, both Sunol and Ansel by Electioneer, Lexington the sire of Norfolk.

ELECTIONEER STALLION

EROS,

Standard No. 5326.

Electioneer, his sire, has more 2:20 trotters than any living horse, and more 2:30 trotters than any stallion LIVING OR DEAD.

Eros has a record of 2:29½, made in the fifth and deciding heat against a field of eight horses in his maiden race, and with only four weeks preparation after coming out of the stud.

Dam Sontag Mohawk, dam of Sallie Benton (four-year-old record 2:17¾). Sontag Mohawk by Mohawk Chief, by Rysdyk's Hambletonian.

Progeny.

Eros had last fall but three colts trained; the oldest a three-year-old trotter, an exhibition mile during the San Jose Fair in 2:34, last quarter in 36½ seconds. A two-year-old (timed by the judges) made a mile in 2:46½, and the other two-year-old in 2:47. All of these trials being made without a single skip, and none of these colts had then been handled three months from the breaking harness.

TERMS: $50 for the season, from February 1st to July 1, 1889. Due at time of service.

STANDARD UNDER RULE 4 & 6.

The most successful stock horse in California for his opportunities. WHIPPLETON has no equal as a producer of carriage and general purpose horses. Sire of Lily Stanley, record 2:17¾, dam's breeding unknown; Homestakes, pacer, 2:16¼, dam's breeding unknown; Flora B., 2:30, dam's breeding unknown; Cora C., three-year-old pacer, 2:33¼, dam by Anubuc, Rachel, 2:38, dam's breeding unknown.

DESCRIPTION.

WHIPPLETON is a beautiful black, tan muzzle and flanks and exceptionally strongly made all over. He stands 17 hands high and weighs 1400 pounds. He is beyond doubt the most uniform breeder on the Coast for size, color and finish. Most of his colts are 16 hands or over, and all bay, brown or black in color. He has never sired a sorrel or white faced colt; if he does I agree to refund service money.

PEDIGREE.

WHIPPLETON, sired by Hambletonian Jr. (sire of Hancock 2:20), by Whipple's Hambletonian; dam Lady Livingston; (dam of Lady Blanchard 2:26¾, Bloomfield Maid, trial 2:22); by General Taylor (sire of dam of Wells Fargo 2:18¾, Nearea 2:23½, Bickford 2:29¾, Lady Blanchard 2:26¾) and Stella 2:30, son of the Morse horse.

TERMS.

Fifty dollars, with usual return privilege.

ALCONA, 730.

By the great Almont (sire of Westmont, 2:15¼, Puritan, 2:16, Fannie Witherspoon, 2:16¼, Piedmont, 2:17¾, and 31 others with records better than 2:30, and grandsire of Bell Hamlin, 2:13¾) by Alexander's Abdallah (sire of Goldsmith Maid, 2:14), he by Rysdyk's Hambletonian. Alcona's dam, Queen Mary by Mambrino Chief, sire of Lady Thorn, 2:18¾, Woodford Mambrino, 2:21¾ and 4 others in 2:30 list, and sire of the dams of Piedmont, 2:17¼, Director, 2:17, Onward, 2:25¾, and many others; 23 of his sons have produced 2:30 trotters.

Almont has 38 sons that have produced 2:30 trotters, which number is only equaled by his grandsire, Rysdyk's Hambletonian.

DESCRIPTION.

Alcona is a beautiful chestnut, 16¾ hands high, and weighs 1,300 pounds. His colts possess speed, style, finish and beauty, and if they don't trot fast they command the highest price for carriage and general purpose horses. Eleven of Alcona's colts that have been sold UNTRAINED brought $7,810, an average of $710 per head.

TERMS: $35. Usual return privilege.

Grandissimo,

Full Brother to GRANDEE. 3-year-old record 2:23 1-2.

Sired by La Grande (son of Almont, and out of Jessie Pepper by Mambrino Chief; Jessie Pepper is the dam of Ione 2:22, Alpha 2:23½, Sterling Wilkes 2:23¾, and others) dam Norma, by Arthurton (sire of Arab 2:15, Joe Arthurton 2:22½, etc).

Grandam Nourmahal, (full sister to A. W. Richmond, sire of Arrow 2:13¾, Romero 2:19, and sire of Columbine, dam of Anteeo 2:16¼, and Antevolo 2:19½ at 4 years old),

DESCRIPTION.

Grandissimo is 3 years old, will make a sixteen hand horse; he is a rich mahogany bay in color and perfect in style and action. Limited to ten mares, at $50 for the season. Usual return privileges.

In case any of my horses are sold before the next season, parties breeding mares have the privilege to return them to any other stallion I have making the season at the same price. Mares kept in any manner desired. Best of pasture the year round, at $4 per month. Some choice young stallions, colts and fillies by Whippleton, for sale reasonable. Correspondence solicited.

For further information send for circular or call at farm (one mile south of St. Helena.

STALLIONS.

DIRECTOR 2:17.

DIRECTOR will stand at Pleasanton from March 1st to August 1st, 1889, for fifteen good mares more than are now booked, at $2 0 for the season. Mares not proving with foal may be returned next season free of charge of service to same stallion, or money will be refunded, at option of the Stock Farm Co.

Pasturage $4 per month, hay and grain extra. Accidents and escapes at owner's risk. Service fees due at time of service and must be paid, together with pasturage, etc., before mares are taken away, or a good approved note given, payable August 1st, 1889, at which date all bills must be settled

THISTLE,

Full brother to Gold Leaf, pacing record 2:15 at three years old. By Sidney, dam Fernleaf, she the dam of stallion Shamrock, trotting record at two years old, 2:25. Thistle is a large, speedy pacing colt, showing more speed than Gold Leaf at the same age, and double the speed of his sire; so if anyone wants to breed pacers, here is a chance.

Thistle will stand for seven approved mares at $100 for the season, with same conditions and return privileges as Director.

JIB.

KATE GENNETTE IS A BELMONT AND BLACK HAWK MARE.

JIB is a fine mahogany bay; stands 15¾ hands; weighs 1,200 pounds. Received second prize as best horse of all work at Oakland Fair, 1886. Foaled May 1883. A sure and reliable foal getter

T. O., by Anteeo, is a dark bay, five years old; stands 15¾ hands; weighs 1,050 pounds. Received first prize as horse of all work at Oakland, 1886.

These fine stallions will make the season of 1889 at Oakland Trotting Park. Terms for the season, $40. Due at time of service. For further particulars call or address

MEMO.

The Fast Trotting Stallion, the Best Son of Sidney.

Will make the Season of 1889 at the Oakland Trotting Park.

He was bred by G. Valensin at the Arno Stock Farm, Sacramento County, California; foaled spring of 1885.

PEDIGREE.

By Sidney.
First dam Flirt by Buccaneer.
Second dam Mohaska Belle by Flaxtail.
Third dam by John the Baptist.

Sidney by Santa Claus, 2:17½, his dam Sweetness, 2:21½. Strathmore, the son of Santa Claus, has 22 of his get which have trotted in 2:30 or better, up to close of 1887, several having entered since, and Volunteer, the sire of Sweetness, has 28 in the same list. Buccaneer is the sire of Shamrock, two-year-old record 2:25, and of Flight, 2:29, and in him are combined the strains of Long Island Blackhawk, Vermont Blackhawk, and the dam of Rysdyk's Hambletonian. Flaxtail figures prominently in both pacing and trotting descendants, and is the sire of the dam of Apex, 2:26, Flight, 2:29, J. H. McCormack, 2:29, and Shamrock, 2:25.

PERFORMANCES.

Memo only trotted in public in his two-year-old form, obtaining a record of 2:49, though he was close to Grandee in a race on the Bay District Track, the second heat of which was made in 2:31¾, the first in 2:32. He exhibited phenomenal speed when three years old, and had it not been for a slight strain of his fore fetlock there is little question that he would have shown in public very close to the best record. On the Oakland track he was timed a mile in 2:20¾, and frequently trotted quarters in from 32½ to 34 seconds.

DESCRIPTION.

He is nearly if not quite sixteen hands high, and of powerful build throughout. His color is a glossy black, with both fore-feet white and a touch of white on his off hind quarters. His disposition is all that could be desired, and his action superb.

TERMS: One hundred dollars the season.

BOOK FULL FOR THE SEASON OF 1889.

JOHN ROWEN,

Oakland Trotting Park.

SIRE OF YOLO MAID, 2:14.

Alexander Button.

Alexander's Record, 2:31 1-4:

DESCRIPTION.

Alexander Button is a dark bay with fine flowing mane and tail; stands 16-3½ hands high; weighs 1,200 pounds, and is of excellent disposition. When three years old he made a record of 2:28½, and when four years old, in his first race, he obtained a record of 2:26½. Has been driven a mile in 2:16 in his four-year-old form, and has been driven a last half in 1:07. Alexander Button is a natural trotter, inherited through the speed-lines of his ancestors, and imparts his speed to his offspring with uniform certainty. Yolo Maid, as a three-year-old, paced 18 heats, never leaving her feet—carrying the world's record of 2:14. Rosie Mc, as a five-year-old, rarely ever breaks; has a record of 2:20¾. R. H. Newton's colt, with very little handling, paced a 2:16 gait, and there are several other colts that show gaits from 2:16 to 2:20. Considering that Alexander Button has never been mated with a standard-bred mare—his colts show him to be a wonderful producer—and with his breeding, and terms of service, he is the cheapest and most wonderful horse in the State.

PEDIGREE.

Alex. Button was sired by Alexander, he by Geo. M. Patchen, Jr., his dam Lady Button by Napa Rattler by Biggett's Rattler, he by Sir Henry, and he by imported Henry, dam of Biggett's Rattler by Rysdyk's Hambletonian, dam of Napa Rattler, thoroughbred.

TERMS: $75, payable at end of season. Mares not proving with foal may be returned next season free of charge. Good pasturage will be furnished at $2 per month, and due care taken to prevent accidents or escapes, but no liability whatever assumed.

Will stand at City Stable, Woodland, on Thursday, Friday and Saturday of each week. The remainder of the time he will stand at my ranch, which is situated about 1½ miles west of Yolo station.

All mares sent to Fashion Stable, Woodland, Yolo County, will be forwarded free of charge.

THE WILKES STALLION

Mambrino Wilkes, 6053

(Half Brother to Harry Wilkes, 2:13 1-2.)

Sire of Gus Wilkes, 2:22; Alpheus, 2:27; Balkan 2:29¼, three-year-old; John O'Brien, lapped out the winner in 2:36 as a three-year-old; H. A. W.'s Black Colt, trial 2:29 with very little work as a four-year-old.

Will remain in the future at San Miguel Stock Farm, Walnut Creek, Contra Costa County.

DESCRIPTION.

MAMBRINO WILKES is a black horse, 16 hands high, and considerably longer than his height; has immense muscular development and weighs 1,200 pounds. He has the utmost symmetry of proportion and elegance of finish. No competent judge who has seen this horse has failed to pronounce him a perfect individual, and his breeding is certainly fashionable enough to satisfy the most fastidious. His colts are large, stylish and handsome, and Balkan has been pronounced by many the most stylish trotter on the turf.

PEDIGREE.

Sired by George Wilkes, dam Lady Chrisman by Todhunter's Mambrino; second dam by Pilot Jr.

Todhunter's Mambrino by Mambrino Chief, dam Ripton's dam by Hunt's Commodore, son of Mambrino, by imp. Messenger; second dam by Potomac, son of imp. Messenger.

Mambrino Chief by Mambrino Paymaster, by Mambrino, by imp. Messenger.

George Wilkes sired 65 colts that have beaten 2:30. Of these 39 have average records of 2:23, 14 of 2:19 and 12 of 2:18.

TERMS.

Mares from a distance will be received at the Dexter Stables, Oakland, or Livery Stable, Martinez, the owner notifying Smith Hill, Superintendent at the farm. Good pasture and plenty of water. For the purpose of placing the service of a Wilkes within reach of breeders, the same rate will be maintained as last year, to wit, $75 for the season. Although it is not admitted thereby that this horse is inferior as a producer to the horses whose fees are placed at from $150 to $500.

The Thoroughbred Stallion

Judge McKinstry,

Will make the Season of 1889, from March 1 to July 1, at San Felipe Rancho, near Gilroy.

PEDIGREE.

Foaled 1879, by Grinstead or Thad Stevens, dam Katy Pease; second dam Minnie Mansfield by imp. Glencoe; third dam Allegrante by imp. Young Truffle.

DESCRIPTION.

JUDGE McKINSTRY is a bright bay with black points, 15¾ hands in height, of a conformation combining power and speed. His breeding is one that cannot be excelled. The families on both sides being noted for their gameness and fleetness. Speaking of JUDGE McKINSTRY, Matt Storm, the well-known trainer, says: "He is the fastest race-horse I ever saw on the Sacramento track. He has shown me trials that were marvelous, one especially of a mile and a quarter that was ahead of the present record." He was started in several races when not in condition to run, and even then developed an amount of speed that is characteristic of the noted families from which he descends. His performances are too well known to need repetition here. Good judges of horses state positively that there can be no doubt of his sire, as he is a perfect picture of Grinstead, but rule compels us to name both sires.

TERMS: $75 payable when the mare is moved from ranch, or, $100, with the usual privilege. Good pasturage, $3 per month. Mares at owners risk. All communications must be addressed to

COLE'S OSSIDINE

OSSIDINE

Results obtained at the well-known Kalamazoo Farm.

KALAMAZOO, Mich., Sept. 15, 1888.

GENTLEMEN:—We have used Ossidine for the past two years and consider it invaluable for Sprung Tendons, Curbs, Ringbone and Spavins; there is nothing equals it; and for us it effected a permanent cure where firing failed, although perfo med by one of the most successful veterinarians on the continent. We have recommended it to others with like success, and believe it has more merit than any blister ever used.

Very respectfully yours, S. A. BROWNE & Co., Prop's.

This scientific preparation is an absolute cure for all bony or callous lumps on horses, and is a more powerful absorbent than "firing," without creating the slightest blemish. After a few applications the excrescence is so palpably reduced that even the skeptical frankly acknowledge that it is by far the most valuable outward remedy for horses ever invented.

The ONLY preparation in the world that will remove a Bone Spavin after it has become ossified.

Owner of Eole, St Saviour, Eolist, etc., says; I have long used it in my stables, and find it to be all that is claimed for it in removing callous and unnatural bony growths, without leaving the slightest blemish. From my experience, I most strongly recommend the use of Ossidine, and feel that it is a necessary adjunct to every stable. Yours respectfully,

APEX,

The property of S. N. Straube, Poplar Grove Breeding Farm, Fresno, Cal.

Having given in the last two issues of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN correct and faithful likenesses of Clovis and Pasha, we this week present to our readers a splendid picture of Mr. Straube's third stallion Apex, by Prompter, dam Mary by Flax Tail. This magnificent specimen of the equine species is making the season at the grounds of the Fresno Fair Association, of which Mr. Straube is one of the Directors and largest stockholder. It is not material to the description of Apex to state who owned him prior to his falling into the hands of his present owner, suffice it to state that his present record of 2:26, was not a measure of his speed when at Santa Rosa, in the fall of 1886, he got the mark. It was well known to the stable and a few intimates that he could at any time necessary, trot in 2:20 or 2:21, but it would not have suited the book of those who were handling him to give him such a low record. At the invitation of Mr. Straube, the writer but a short time ago, paid a visit to the beautiful grounds of the association which is already becoming famous on account of the large purse which will be run for on the 20th of next November. A visit to the livery stable in which Mr. Straube keeps his own driving team, resulted in our finding a beautiful pair of mares already hitched up and awaiting our arrival. They are Lela S. by C. P. Duane, he by St. Clair; and Baby S. by Nephew, dam Lady Burns; Baby S. is a full sister to Baby Mine, 2:27. Away we went through the city until we reached Ventura avenue, along which the finely matched pair went at a 3:20 clip, out to the gates of the park. On reaching the stables we found the old reliable John Donahoo in charge of Mr. Straube's string of trotters, looking after the welfare of his pets. At our request Apex was brought out of his large, roomy box stall, and he is fit to show in company, being a particularly handsome type of the American trotting horse. He is a beautiful bay, with black legs and left hind foot white, the only other white on him being a star in forehead. He is an elegantly proportioned horse, being built from the ground up. He stands 15½ hands in height, and weighs in the neighborhood of 1100 pounds. He is of kind and gentle disposition, having none of the vices, and a great favorite with all the men, who are at work on the grounds. In gait he is simply faultless, having exceedingly fine action, and a clean frictionless way of going that impresses the beholder favorably. Apex has been long enough in the stud to stamp him as a sure foal getter and a great producer of speed, for all of his get are exceptionally good trotters. When the season is over Mr. Straube may possibly have him preparde to beat his present record, as the horse in daily exercise can now beat 2:30. Apex, as stated above, is by Prompter 2305, he by Wilson's Blue Bull 75; first dam Mary by Flax Tail, he by Pruden's Blue Bull. Flax Tail is the sire of the dam of Buccaneer (five-year-old record 2:24½), Pride, yearling (record 2:44½), and Shamrock (two-year-old record 2:25 in third heat); second dam by Bright Eyes, son of Boanerges. Prompter is sire of Transit, 2:26½, by Wilson's Blue Bull. Prompter's dam is Prairie Bird by Flax Tail.

From the above it will be seen that Apex is a closely inbred Blue Bull, which makes him a horse that should be much sought after, now that the Blue Bull blood is considered so precious. This very desirable stallion has had a heavy season, mares having been sent to him from all over the State. Mr. Straube himself sent quite a number of his gilt-edged mares from the ranch up to the race track to be served by this glorious son of Prompter, and feels assured that he will ere long have as speedy trotters as any other breeder in the State. Among the brood mares to be seen at the track are Silver Dollar, by Silver Threads, dam Silver Tail. She has a stylish filly at her side by Strathway, and has been bred to Apex. Silver Dollar, it will be remembered, is out of the same dam that foaled Mr. Valensin's Tow Head. She is only eleven years old and should prove one of the queens of the harem. Another fine mare is the beautiful chestnut, Lottie, 7 years old, by David Hill 857, dam by Echo. Lottie is full sister to Artist 2:26¼. She is a grand individual, of great power and muscle, and can go any distance, withal she is kind and gentle, a lady being able to drive her anywhere. A fine looking bay filly next claimed attention, she being Gertrude, by Pasha, dam Gitana, by Echo. In close proximity were two brown fillies both by Pasha, one being out of Six Bits by Hock Hocking. These three youngsters just mentioned, are all bred to Apex and will undoubtedly prove themselves worthy matrons. In all Mr. Straube has 21 mares, which he has bred to Apex, and it should not be long before the fame of Apex, as a sire, should be heralded from Siskiyou to the Mexican line.

Mr. Donahoo has quite a number of Mr. Straube's horses in training, and even this early in the season, they look in fine enough fettle, to stand a campaigning. A beautiful bay named Consolation, is a grand mover and gives every indication of great speed. She is by Dexter Prince, dam Nigger Girl by Peerless.

A bay colt by Anteeo, dam Maude Medium by Milton Medium, is a fast youngster, and will make the fire fly when he meets his rivals on the turf. He is a shapely bit of horseflesh and is as promising a colt as the writer has seen this year.

Dot is only a yearling, being one of the get of Apex but she showed a quarter in 53 seconds, and is as yet hardly bridle wise. It is just possible that with careful preparation, Dot may lower the present yearling record.

Castro, is a fine specimen of the typical trotting horse. He is only two years old, by Clovis, dam Carrie Stoner by Steinway. He has already shown eighths in 19 seconds, and quarters in 42½, and every day is improving in speed. Castro is a magnificent iron grey, standing almost 16 hands in height, and will prove a hard one to beat.

Mr. Straube and J. A. Clark, of Bakersfield, own together a nice bay gelding six years old, named White Ash, who made a record this spring of 2:35. He is by Bay Allen, he by Ethan Allen, Jr., dam by Chieftain. White Ash is a very large horse, and must weigh at present about 1,300 pounds. Mr. Donahoo feels confident of placing him well within the "30" list before the summer finishes.

Geo. Rupert has at the track, and also under Mr. Donahoo's charge, the bay stallion Archie Dean, by Richard's Elector, dam by Corsican, he by Lexington. The colt is only three years old and is of great promise, showing a good turn of speed already.

Ex-Congressman Loutitt, of Stockton, has at the track, the five-year-old Congressman, 2:32½, a record which he got at Fresno last year, in the three minutes class, the three heats being trotted in 2:32½, 2:33½ and 2:34. He will lower this very materially during the present season.

After a look at the horses, we were shown all over the grounds of the association, and must confess that the track and surroundings have not an equal in the State. At the meeting last fall, there was not room enough to accommodate all who wanted to occupy the grand stand, so the Directors have determined to tear down the old stand and replace it with a handsome new edifice that will hold at least three times the number that the present one holds. The new club house for members use is an elegant building consisting of parlors, sitting rooms, dining rooms, kitchen, etc, with accommodation on the porch for three hundred persons to sit and view the races. There is now stalls to the number of over two hundred, and there will be additional ones built before the next meeting. Five hundred shade trees have been put out this spring and fifteen hundred more will be planted next year. The walks from the main entrance, up to the track have been bordered with trees, many of them being what is known as the umberella tree, which are excellent for shading purposes. Flowers of all kinds are in abundance, lending a pleasant sight to the eye. The track itself is in splendid condition, and cannot be improved on, the water-cart, harrow and roller all playing an important part in keeping the course perfect. The directors have diplayed unusual liberality in the purses offered for trotters and runners this fall, the $20,000 purse especially, having advertised the city of the plains in a manner which in time is bound to bear good fruit.

The most encouraging reports comes from Manager Baldwin, who is at present in the East, and it is confidently believed that several of the noted cracks will visit the golden shore not only to try and win the heavy purse, but also to reap the benefit of a winter in this glorious climate.

Guenoc Stud Farm.

By Grim.

"Nature, she hath done her part,
Do thou but thine."—Milton.

The words of the poet are easily quoted but my task is no easy one. Nature hath indeed done her part, in the section of Lake County visited last week by me, but it would require the pen and descriptive faculty of a George Augusta Sala to attempt to portray the beauty and grandeur that nature has bestowed on the region of country, lately purchased by Fredric Gebhard Esq., of New York. After several visits to the coast, Mr. Gebhard determined to start a stock farm in California, feeling assured that it was the best State in the Union, in which to breed horses; so a commission was given Gen. W. H. L. Barnes to purchase the best farm procurable for the purpose. After looking up several places that were for sale the General finally selected the breeding establishment now known as the Guenoc Stud Farm.

C. W. Aby was at once secured as general manager and superintendent, his long years of service with the Harpers at the Nantura Stud in Kentucky peculiarly fitting him for the responsible position. In June of last year Dr. Aby visited the farm, saw what was necessary in the way of immediate improvements, left orders for the needed changes and started back East again to bring out the horses which were to form the nucleus of the breeding portion of the farm. After a short stay the return trip was commenced on August 12, 1888. On the morning of the 13th the accident occurred at Shohola Glen in which so many horses were killed, and from which Mr. Aby and Matt Storn so narrowly escaped death. Of the three stallions and nine broodmares in the car, only two were saved, St. Savior, by Eolus, dam War Song by War Dance, and the mare Mineral by Spendthrift, dam Potash II. by Lord Clifden, were the fortunate ones; all the others being killed.

Just prior to the death of Eole, Mr. Gebhard had refused $30,000 for a three years' lease of Eole for stallion purposes, as he was desirous of taking him to the California Farm. When it was known the services of the horse could not be leased, a bid of $45,000 was offered for him outright, but this was also refused.

After a lengthened stay in the doctor's hands, the trip was again resumed, Mr. Aby reaching San Francisco on Oct. 19th, going up at once to Guenoc to straighten out affairs which had become complicated owing to his unavoidable delay. Lumber of all kinds and posts was ordered in profusion and plans for the various paddocks, meadow lands, grain and hay fields drawn up, so that the workmen could continue the improvements, which had been at a standstill for two months or more. On the 12th of December he started East once more to buy the very best stallion that money could procure, to replace those lost, and also to bring out what mares Mr. Gebhard still had left. A careful scrutiny was made of all the desirable stallions in the market, and the choice finally fell on Greenback by Dollar, out of Music by Stockwell. This horse had been consigned to Mr. Wm. Easton of New York, and was considered the best horse ever imported into America, many of the Eastern horsemen claiming that they had never seen his equal. The return trip was made and this time the car load of horses arrived safely.

As soon as the new comers were safely housed an advertisement was inserted in the Breeder and Sportsman notifying the public that the stallions were going to stand for public service, and already more than thirty of the finest thoroughbred brood mares in the State have been sent to the embrace of either St. Savior or Greenback. When in San Francisco a few weeks ago Mr. Aby invited the writer to visit the farm and see the latest acquisitions to the breeding interests of the State. Last Friday morning a start was effected, and at 11.30 Calistoga was reached. After a hurried luncheon the stage started for Middletown, a distance of eighteen miles, over the St. Helena Mountains. The grand panoramic view which is to be seen from the stage road of the upper section of Napa Valley is well worth the entire trouble and cost of the trip. Stretching for miles and miles, the eye is entranced with the charming effect, the thousands of acres of vineyards lending their enchanting color to the golden hue of the grain, causing a blending that is particularly plessant when viewed from an elevation of 2,300 feet. Nestling away off in one corner, seemingly, is the bustling little city we left so lately, now only assuming the dimensions of a hamlet, it is so far away. The summit is reached, and after a refreshing glass of ice cold spring water we are off again, making the descent and headed for Lake County. At 3.30 we arrive at Middletown, where Mr. Aby is in waiting with carriage and four, the gold-mounted harness glittering in the sun and the four "bang tails" eager to be away. The drive of eight miles was only interrupted once, and that by meeting the school teacher on her way home from the school, and something about the breeching was wrong. An offer of assistance was refused, as the lady had almost completed the repairs necessary when we arrived at the spot. From Middletown to Mr. Gebhard's is about ten miles, the road being on the edge of the valley, most of which is owned by two persons only.

On arriving at the residental quarters, servants were at hand to take charge of the horses and the baggage, and Dr. Aby cordially invites us to enter. And what a sight as we enter the door of the main room or office. The walls are literally covered with pictures of race-horses and bric-a-brac. Over the mantel piece is a magnificent picture of the mighty Eole, painted by that prince of artists Henry Stull; Billy Donahoe is in the saddle, wearing the colors of Mr. Gebhard, the picture being so natural that the spectator could almost imagine that the horse would step out from the canvas. Another elegant painting is the plantation at Newmarket, England. The scene has been taken from life, there being lots of familiar faces on the sheet. The Prince of Wales is standing talking to some of the set, while Sir George Chetwynd is evidently giving Fred Archer his final instructions. The Duke of Beaufort is in earnest conversation with Lord Grosvenor, and Mr. Gebhard is seen in the midst of friends. The picture is filled with well known celebrities, both ladies and gentlemen. Still another picture represents the jockey's dressing room, and almost every face familiar to the racing public can be seen in their respective colors. Archer, Watts, Osborne, Fordham, Loates, Martin, the two Barretts, and a host of others, give a color to the scene that is enjoyable to those who have witnessed the boys dressing at old Newmarket. "The start," "Tottenham corner" and "The finish for the Derby" are exquisite representations of that classic event. There are beautiful pictures of American Eclipse, Lexington, Longfellow, Tenbroeck, Iroquois, Spendthrift, Hindoo, Tom Bowling, Freeland and Miss Woodford, but the gem of the picture gallery is a representation of a pack of fox-hounds in full cry after reynard; a fence has impeded the chase momentarily, but some are already over, while others are on top or stuck in the holes in the fence. One is in the act of jumping, and has left the top of fence, but is still in the air, and the comical expression on that dog's face is enough to make anyone forget the blues for a month.

"What is the matter with you, the dinner bell has been ringing for twenty minutes. Come, you can look at the pictures again."

The long ride gives one an appetite, especially, when you find out that the chef, is Black Henry, one of the best cooks that Kentucky ever produced. There are no secrets in gastronomy to him, from gumbo to corn pone and possum, he is a master.

After dinner we were shown all over the house, bedrooms without number, store rooms, veterinary room containing every thing that may be wanted in case of illness or accident, sporting room, with every conceivable style of rifle and shot gun, fishing poles and tackle, ammunition, etc., bath room, parlor, dining room and kitchen go to make up one of the cosiest country residences in the State. While enjoying a pipe on the verandah, Dr. Aby points out the improvements made and those contemplated. Directly in front of the house will be the race track, on which the youngsters will be put through their paces, the porch being the grand stand from which to view the colts. Between the house and the track, a beautiful lawn and flower garden has been commenced which when finished, will rival the famous lawn and promenade at Flemington, Australia.

When sufficiently rested, a walk is taken to the stable and the stud groom is requested to bring out Greenback. As the beautiful animal is led out, a little cry of surprise rises to my lips, where have I seen an exact representation of that horse before? the head, neck, shoulders, brisket, every thing is the exact prototype of some horse that I have seen away back in the past somewhere.

He is a deep seal brown in color, fourteen years old, stands almost 16 hands in height, has good legs, plenty of muscle, great, wide hips, rangy in body, and gives every evidence of having a good constitution and any amonnt of vigor. In movement he seems to resemble the eel, having a quick, serpentine motion as he glides along. And now the thought comes, that motion recalls one of the best race horses I ever knew. Old Lady Amanda is the horse I had been trying to think of, and by comparing the tabulated pedigree of Greenback it will be seen that there is a close relationship by the Bay Middleton blood.

Greenback, as will be seen, is a superbly bred horse. He is a son of the French horse Dollar, who was by Flying Dutchman, dam Payment by Slave. Dollar's dam was the dam of Florin, the sire of Florentin, winner of the French Derby in 1866, and of Mantilla, the champion French two-year-old of 1878. Dollar's merit as a sire is famous, as he got Salvator, St. Cyr, Peria, Almanza, Nethan, Fontainebleu, Salvanos, Torrent and Androcles. One of his daughters, Nellie James, produced Jack of Hearts, Jacobus, etc., in Mr. Belmont's stud. Salvator won the Grand Prix de Paris and French Derby in 1875, and Salvanos won the Cesarewitch in 1872. On the side of his dam Greenback is glorious. His dam was the Duke of Hamilton's great mare Music, the best brood mare in Europe. She has foaled Ossian, Fiddler, Song, Songstress, Nina, Poetry, etc., Nina being one of the best two-year-olds of 1885, winning the Clearwell, Bretby, and Homebred. As for Ossian, she won the St. Leger, while Fiddler beat Foxhall for the Alexandria Plate. Music is a daughter of Stockwell, from the invincible One Act, by Annandale; 3d dam Extravaganza, by Voltaire, etc., gives Greenback an infusion of Blacklock blood. Greenback was a really good race horse, winning the Sketchworth Stakes, at Newmarket, as a two-year-old, and the Earl Spencer Plate, at Northampton, as a three-year-old. The Peel Handicap, the Queen's Plate at Ayr, and the Caledonian Cup at the same place, also fell to his share. He has got several winners, having sired Greenlight, Greenjacket, Greenshank, Greenwave, Greenhorn, etc. He is the only direct representative of Bay Middleton's male line in America, and will be a grand outcross for our native mares.

Of St. Savior it is hardly necessary to say anything, for his career on the turf gave him such a reputation that almost every breeder in the country knows exactly what and who he is. Only beaten once in his racing career, and then by that first class horse Rataplan, he would not have been defeated then, but he was struck on the off fore leg and came under the wire second, on three legs only, in a field of twelve. A creditable performance even if beaten.

In color he is a golden bay, black legs, with three white feet, star in forehead and white snip on muzzle. He was foaled in 1881, stands close to 17 hands, and weighs almost 1300 pounds. St. Savior "is built from the ground up," being the personification of immense strength and quality. Although very large, in fact strong enough for a work horse, there is not a particle of coarseness about him, and yet a person not versed in the highest type of thoroughbreds, would not hesitate an instant in picking out St. Savior as his choice from the largest band of running horses ever brought together. The Eolus stock are all noted stayers, and simply revel in mud, consequently this grand stallion will undoubtedly have next season all the mares he can attend to.

Among others, the following mares have been bred this season to these two famous stallions:

Ch m Leveret by Lever, dam by Capt. Beard, dam of Lloyd Daily and Lonelay. Owned by C. W. Aby. Bred to Greenback.

Ch m Katy Pease by Planet, dam Minnie Mansfield by Glencoe. Owned by Jas. B. Chase, San Francisco. Bred to Greenback.

Br m Mineral by Spendthrift, dam Potash 2d by Lord Clifden. Owned by Guenoc stud. Bred to St. Savior.

Ch m Eda by Hock-Hocking, dam Eva Coombs by Billy Cheatham. Owned by Dr. C. E. Farnum, San Francisco. Bred to Greenback.

Ch m imp. Fleetwing by Emperor, dam Passion by Marigyrnong. Owned by J. K. Newton, San Francisco. Bred to St. Savior.

Br m Night Hawk by imp. Haddington, dam Napa Queen by Norfolk. Owned by Judge J. McM. Shafter. Bred to St. Savior.

B m Wah-ta-Wah by War Dance, dam Date Tree by imp. Mickey Free. Owned by Judge J. McM. Shafter. Bred to Greenback.

B m Proserpine by Dan Boone, dam Anna F. by Lee Paul. Owned by Judge J. McM. Shafter. Bred to Greenback.

B m by Dan Boone, dam by Beacon. Owned by J. McM. Shafter. Bred to Greenback.

B m Miss Hooker by Joe Hooker, dam Napa Queen by Norfolk. Bred to St. Savior.

Gr m Her Lillyship by Wildidle, dam Frolic by Thunder. Bred to Greenback.

B m La Lee by Shannon, dam Demirep by Melbourne Jr. Bred to Greenback.

Ch m Glen Queen by King Ban, dam Gleneva by Glencoe Jr. Bred to St. Savior.

B m imp. Restless by Orest, dam Lady Middleton by Surplice. Owned by Mrs. Langtry. Bred to St. Savior.

Ch m imp. Lizzie Hampton by Hampton, dam Dynasty by Sterling. Owned by Mrs. Langtry. Bred to St. Savior.

Ch m Sunlit by Monday, dam Lillie Reis by Longfellow. Owned by Col. H. I. Thornton. Bred to St. Savior.

After an inspection of the stallions and mares we meandered back to the comfortable easy chairs on the porch, where the evening was pleasantly spent listening to stories of Dr. Aby's early life, and arranging for a fishing and hunting excursion next day. On the following morning all hands were up at 5 o'clock except the scribe, who, I must confess, was thoroughly tired out with the traveling of the previous day. At 7 o'clock a good, hearty breakfast was disposed of, and before 8 we were on our way to the mountains, passing in our rambles the field hands busily cutting hay in the mammoth enclosure set aside for that crop. Great waving fields of grain and immense pastures luxuriant in alfilree and clover grasses are gone through as we wend our way to the hunting grounds. At the extreme further side of the valley from the residence there is a large pond 170 acres in extent, filled with cat fish and carp, many of which were caught before the return home was made. Doves in quantity were killed, and the fried fish and pot pie which garnished the breakfast table Sunday morning attested to the skill of the Nimrods and disciples of Walton.

There are altogether 3300 acres in the farm, including the foothill lands, but at present there are only about 800 acres under cultivation. Prior to Mr. Gebhard buying the place only 300 acres had been cultivated and it has necessitated a great deal of work and a large expenditure of money to get things into their present good shape. After the harvest season is over Dr. Abey will go East again, to purchase a lot of brood mares for the farm, it being the present intention of the proprietor to make the breeding establishment second to none in the country.

Guaranteeing Soundness in Selling Horses.

What constitutes an unsound horse or other animal? Perhaps, says a writer, the best definition is that given by an English judge, in an exchange, a good many years ago, and which had been often quoted in the courts since: "If at the time of the sale the horse has any disease which either does diminish the natural usefulness of the animal so as to make him less capable of work of any description, or which in its ordinary progress will diminish the natural usefulness of the animal; or if the horse has either from disease or accident undergone any alteration of structure that either actually does at the time, or in its ordinary effects will, diminish the natural usefulness of the horse, such horse is unsound." It is held by the English courts, and generally in this country, that a warranty of soundness is broken if the animal had any infirmity which rendered him less fit for present service; that is not necessary that the disorder should be permanent or incurable. In Massachusetts, however, the supreme court has said that lameness, if only accidental and temporary, would be a beach of warranty, and it is probable the law that a temporary and curable trouble, athough existing at the time of sale, if it does not injure the animal for present service, is not an unsoundness. From what has been said above it will be seen that many things which diminish the value of an animal do not make it unsound. Balking, backing, biting, shying, running away, kicking, etc., are vices in a horse which are not covered by a warranty of soundness, but would be covered by a warranty of freedom from vice. It has been argued both in medical books and in the courts whether cribbing is an unsoundness or only a bad habit. It has been decided that if the cribbing has affected his health and condition so that the horse is less fit for present service the animal is unsound. It is also claimed that the habit, if confirmed, is the indication of disease, such as will constitue unsoundness.

It is a universal fact that fraud vitiates every contract. No man is bound by a bargain into which he has been led by a fraud. The party who is defrauded in a sale may treat the bargain as of no effect, may return the property bought and bring suit for the money paid, or defend successfully against an action for the price, if he has not already paid it. He must elect to treat the contract as void within a reasonable time after he has discovered the fraud, or he will be held to have acquiesced in the purchase and affirmed the contract. If, instead of holding the contract to be void, he chooses to recognize and affirm it he may do so, and bring suit to recover damage he has sustained by the fraud. Fraud is defined to be any kind of an art emp'oyed by one person for the purpose of deceiving another. Every false statement, however, made by a person trying to sell a horse is not considered fraud in law. The law recognizes the fact that such a person is apt to indulge in talk magnifying the value of his goods and praising his wares, and will even let him lie a little as to how much the property cost him. The law considers such words and statements as "sellers-talk," concerning which "let the buyers beware," and which are not sufficient foundation for an action for fraud. False statements, to be the grounds of avoiding the sale, or for an action for deceit, should generally be concerning the animal itself, and not be wholly confined to a collateral matter. The purchaser must have been deceived by the fraud before he can take advantage of it. If he did not believe the false representations made to him he was not injured by them, and cannot make them the basis of any action. Only the defrauded party can rescind the sale on account of fraud. The guilty one is bound by it unless the other is willing to release him. No one can take advantage of his own wrong.

The difference between a simple warranty and a fraudulent misrepresentation is one of knowledge on the part of the person making it. A vendor, in order to make a sale, says a horse is sound. If he honestly thinks so, although the animal proves to be unsound, the purchaser is bound by the bargain, but may bring an action for damages for breach of the warranty. If, however, the seller knew the horse was not sound when he made the statement, it is a fraud, and the purchaser may send back the animal, and sue for the money paid, or may keep and sue for his damages in an action for deceit. It is held that if the vendor refuses to take the animal back, the purchaser, after he has offered to return it, may sell it for the best price he can get, and collect the difference, together with the cost of keeping. The ordinary damages for a breach of warranty is the difference between the actual value of the animal and what it would have been worth if it had been as warranted. The rules of law in regard to warranty and fraud apply to an exchange of property the same as in cases of sales for money.

When a person sells an animal which he knows to be infected with a contagious disease that is in consequence communicated to the herd of the purchaser, the seller is liable for all the loss to the cattle in the purchaser's herd by reason of their catching the disease. When a horse was represented to be perfectly gentle and kind, the purchaser knowing such representations to be false, and the first time the purchaser hitched up the horse ran and kicked and overturned the buggy, throwing out the driver, it was held in a suit for damages that the purchaser could recover for the injuries to the buggy and to his person.—Kentucky Stock Farm.

3. Alex. Lewis ns ch m Susie S., by Hambletonian Mambrino, dam Bellfounder Girl. Steel grey.

Oregon Purchases.

On a recent visit to the Eastern States, the Hon. Van B. De Lashmutt purchased quite a number of trotters. The following description is taken from the Rural Spirit:

Pilot Champion, b h, 3, by Pilot Medium 1597, he by Happy Medium 300, by Hambletonian 10, dam Tackey, 2:26, by Pilot Jr. 12, the dam of Class Lender, 2:22½, Naiad Queen, 2:20¼, Pilot Boy, 2:20. Pilot Champion's dam by Royal Champion, by Scobey's Champion 807. Royal Champion's dam by Field's Royal George 83. Pilot Champion's 2d dam a Blue Bull mare. Pilot Medium, the sire of Pilot Champion, is the sire of Jack, 2:19½, Lady Bullion, 2:21½ as a four-year-old, Girflue, 2:28¾ as a three-year-old, Knight, 2:29½. These are all records got in public races, in large fields of horses. Jack won more money than any horse out in 1888, having won $15,103.50, and beating such horses as Guy, Geneva S., and many others of the best ones out. Pilot Champion has had no training to speak of; has only been hitched to a sulky a few times; has showed quarters in 0:43; he will surely make a grand trotter, as well as a great sire.

Lady Grey, gr m, by Confederate Chief 423, dam by Gen. Knox 140; 2d dam by Hiram Drew; 3d dam by Withers' Messenger. Lady Grey trotted a trial, to wagon, in 2:27¾; in foal to Electwood, by Electioneer.

Mattie B., b f, by Durkee (Viley's), dam by John Dillard; 2d dam by Grey Eagle. Durkee, by Dictator 113, dam by J. C. Breckinridge. Mattie B is in foal to Electwood by Electioneer.

Eliza Sprague, b m by Gov. Sprague Jr., dam Susie Ross, record 2:31½; 2d dam roan pacing mare.

Katy Powers, br m, by Resolute 4358, dam by The Thayer Horse, by the Morse Horse 6.

Laura Louise, rn m, by Hambletonian Hunter, by Hambletonian 10, dam by Kemble Jackson.

Nelly Middleton, blk m, by Bay Middleton 2850, dam by Night Hawk.

Bay mare by Chief Justice, by Satelite, by Hambletonian 10.

J. K. M., b g by King Rene.

Dan McCarty in Chicago.

Dan McCarty is cutting a swath at Chicago. Of the original thirty-three trotting horses in his string, but very few of them are left. However, Dan has almost fifty horses now. He sold Sunflower, 2:28, by Elmo, to J. B. Travis of Chicago for an equivelent of $4,500. He also sold Harry Mack for a good figure to Harry Romain. Last, but not least, he has sold the running horse Tom Daly to James Murphy, of which the Horseman has the following to say:

Jim Murphy, Chicago's well-known bucket-shop man and road-rider, made his advent in the second race as an owner, having entered, in his trainer's name, the six-year-old chestnut gelding Tom Daly, by imp. Kyrle Daly, out of Columbia, by imp. Bonnie Scotland, which he recently purchased from Dan McCarty, of California, possessor of the famous white hat. Some of the bookies did not have a very high estimate of Jim's horse, and put up 10 to 1 against him, but by the time the ex-pool-room keeper had gone "down the line" his horse was favorite, with only 3 to 2 against him. He won in runaway style, and as it was a selling race there were a number of bidders for the California winner, which was entered to be sold for $500. Jim had to put up $355 over the entered price to retain his horse, but that made only a small hole in the amount he won from the bookmakers. Before leaving the track, however, Jim and George West sold the gelding to G. W. Poole for $1,000, which was an advance of $250 over the price paid to McCarty for him on Friday. As is well known in Chicago, Jim Murphy has a great passion for pacers on the road, and generally has from four to six good ones in his stable; but having wandered momentarily from the side-wheel path, he feels that he is entitled to a champion record as an owner of bang-tails, as he never lost a race from the time he first invested in the runner until he closed out his entire thoroughbred holdings at a good profit. The trotting-horse trainers at Washington Park were on Sunday very good-natured over the fact that George West and Jim Murphy should pick up a strange bang-tail that was lingering among the trotters and quiety go over to the West Side and do up the whole gang, bookmakers and all. W. M. Murry, the Californian, gave the horse his preparatory gallop at Washington Park, and accompanied him to the West Side track. Dan McCarty, who sold the horse to Murphy, telegraphed to his brother in San Francisco to put on $200 for him there, where the odds was 20 to 1 against him at the opening. It proved a very clever coup, without much preparation or premeditation.

A Queer Meal.

A venerable and sedate horse at East Great Plain, near Norwich, Conn., which has an inquiring mind and is disposed to swallow things, depending on chance for favorable results, recently bolted a large bolt of wrapping twine. The ball rolled in easily, but a knot at the end of the cord anchored itself to windward between the animal's front teeth, and the visible piece of twine served as a key to the situation when the young groomswoman visited the stable and inspected her steed. There was a somewhat troubled look on the horse's face as he stood with feet braced, ears lopped, mouth open, and in his eyes was a mute appeal that betokened a growing suspicion that probably the case was hopeless. The lady unloosed the knot, wound six inches of the cord around her hand and began to unravel the mystery. The horse kept his mouth open, looked wise, and seemed to perfectly understand what was going on—and out. Yard after yard, fathom by fathom the animal uncomplainingly yielded up his peculiar dinner, and on neither side of the manger was a comment uttered, except that now and then the grateful beast emitted a sigh, as he observed the external ball swelling in magnitude and felt the internal one steadily diminishing. Finally the last yard of cord was reeled out of the horse, wound up, and the ball taken into the house, where the animal could not get at it again; and his look of commingled penitence and thanksgiving was sufficient assurance that he had had twine enough for all coming time.

Racing in India.

Owing to the favor of Rudyard Kiplin, the well known journalist and author, who is just returning from a seven years trip in India, we are enabled to give some slight idea of racing and the way it is conducted in India. The first, and to most racing men the most important, feature is the betting. There are a few books, but the principal and favorite way of betting is the lottery, which is arranged as follows: Everyone who wishes to be in puts up say five rupees. If there are twenty in the first lottery and only ten horses, of course when the drawing takes place half of them get blanks. The one hundred rupees is taken by the pool-seller, who auctions the tickets off, and whatever they fetch is equally divided between the drawer of the ticket and the fund, all of which goes to the last holder of the ticket. Only the original subscribers can bid in the auction, with the exception of the owner of any horse, who is always allowed to take half of each and every pool on his own horse if he wishes it. The whole amount less five per cent. then goes to the winner. It is evident that there is a great deal of chance in this way, for if one draws a favorite it is sure to sell for more than cost price, and there is a win before ever racing starts. The Totalizator has been imported from Australia, and has a slight patronage. It is precisely the same as our Paris mutuals. The Umballa Derby Sweep, which was nothing more than a gigantic Louisiana lottery with the English Derby as a basis, has been stopped by the Government. The furore caused by it was tremendous, money coming in from all over the world, and it was productive of so much gambling that it had to be stopped.

The tracks in India are oval in shape, varying in distance up to two miles, though a mile and a half is the favorite circuit, they are all turf or at least are supposed to be. They have to be littered for months to keep moist and green. Calcutta has a beautiful course of nearly two miles, while Simla has one of the prettiest minature tracks in the world, situated in a valley, one might almost say a pit, 1500 feet below the city. It is only a third of a mile round and on that account, upsets all form, as in wet weather it necessarily from its location, is a perfect mud hole.

The class of horses used varies a good deal, around Calcutta and the big meetings, Australian and English are the favorites, while the best of the country breeds come to try their luck with them. Several attempts are being made to raise good horses, and General Parrott's stud at Kurnal (near Umballa) at one time swept the deck with the produce of native mares crossed with Australian and English sires.

The General, who is a retired officer, sold out his stud last year. The Rajah of Jodhpore has a tremendous stable of over a thousand horses of the best breeds that can be obtained, Australian, English and stud bred (Governments imports and stands horses free of charge), and the best of the native or country bred ponies. The Rajah's track is very sandy and is consequently, five or six seconds slower than the ordinary tracks. He never uses any bedding for his horses except silver sand. Lord William Beresford has for the last few years imported a good many English horses and though he has been very successful the general opinion is, that the Australian is better adapted to the country. The boys who ride are nearly all Australians, occasionally a native boy or two gets to ride fairly, but the amateurs at times ride better than the professionals, though possibly they are just as unsafe to back.

Fifty rupees for a losing and 150 for a winning mount is the regular price. A rupee is equal to about 34 cents. The racing season is from November to the end of April.

The crack race of the year is the Civil Service Cup at Lucknow, when all the crack horses in the country turn out, and every marriageable and unmarriageable girl is there, regardless of time and money. The regular meetings are Lucknow, Merut, Umballa and Dehradum in Northern India. Dehradum is the Newmarket of that district, on account of its beautiful situation on a plateau right under the hills where it is cooler and easier to work horses than anywhere else. Calcutta of course has its own little precinct. Its two mile course is said to be unsurpassed, while at Ballynguing close to Calcutta, they have a good steeplechase course. The best of the racing ponies come down to meet the Australians (generally called Whalers), and the Beresford and military element. Bombay and Poona are the best meetings in Western India, as are Bangalore and Madras in the Southern country.

The planters have a few meetings too at Kurg and Mysore, while every plain station has its regimental fortnightly where they race principally ponies, 13.2, carrying a maximum weight of 144 pounds, with a seven pound allowance for each half inch. The Hussars, Carbiners, Bengal, Cavalry, and in fact every mounted regiment, has its polo and racing ponies. Lahore is the great horse market for them, the dealers bringing them in from Thibet, Turkestan, Persia and all the outside countries to sell there. One hundred and fifty dollars is nothing for a speedy, good looking pony, that a few years ago could be bought for half the price. Lucky Boy who was the crack in Northern India for the last two years, was bought for about three hundred rupees out of an Ekka cart at Umballa by a sub in a marching regiment. Every one laughed at him when he obtained his pony, but "he laughs best who laughs last," and the despised scrub beat the whole crowd right along.

In pony racing a horse does not lose his maiden until he has won a race of 200 rupees. Mr. Kiplin says that race meetings are held there principally as a means to get people together and pass the time with races and polo tournaments, varied with a good cock fight, which is a fashionable pursuit; but for real sport a hours fight between two stallions is better than all the rhino, elephant, cock and prize fights in the world. The rajahs give in their territories free horse fights every once in a while for the public delectation.

Mr. Kipling tells many good stories of life in India, one of his best being a brochure which appeared in a volume entitled "Plain Talks From the Hills," published in Calcutta last year. It is so good we copy it entire:

THE BROKEN-LINK HANDICAP.

There are more ways of running a horse to suit your book than pulling his head off in the straight. Some men forget this. Understand clearly that all racing is rotten—as everything connected with losing money must be. Out here, in addition to its inherent rottenness, it has the merit of being two-thirds sham, looking pretty on paper only. Every one knows every one else far too well. How on earth can you rack, and harry, and post a man for his losings, when you are fond of his wife, and live in the same Station with him? He says, "on the Monday following":—"I can't settle just yet." You say:—"All right old man;" and think yourself lucky if you pull off nine hundred out of a two-thousand-rupee debt. Any way you look at it, Indian racing is immoral, and expensively immoral. Which is much worse. If a man wants your money, he ought to ask for it, or send round a subscription list, instead of juggling about the country, with an Australian larrikin; a "brumby," with as much breed as the boy; a brace of chumars in gold-laced caps; three or four ekka-ponies with hogged manes, and a switch-tailed demirep of a mare called "Arab" because she has a kink in her flag. Racing leads to the shroff quicker than anything else. But, if you have no conscience and no sentiments, and good hands, and some knowledge of pace, and ten years' experience of horses, and several thousand rupees a month, I believe that you can occasionally contrive to pay your shoeing-bills.

Did you ever know "Shackles"—b. w. g., 15.1¾—coarse, loose, mule-like ears—barrel as long as a gatepost—tough as a telegraph-wire—and the queerest brute that ever looked through a bridle? He was of no brand, being one of an earnicked mob taken into the Becephalus at £4-10s. a head to make up freight, and sold raw and out of condition at Calcutta for Rs. 275. People who lost money on him called him a "brumby," but if ever any horse had "Harpoon's" shoulders and the "Gin's" temper, "Shackles" was that horse. Two miles was his own particular distance. He trained himself, ran himself, and rode himself; and if his jockey insulted him by giving him hints, he shut up at once and bucked the boy off. He objected to dictation. Two or three of his owners did not understand this, and lost money in consequence. At last he was bought by a man who discovered that, if a race was to be won, "Shackles," and "Shackles" only, would win it in his own way, so long as his jockey sat still. This man had a riding-boy called Brunt—a lad from Perth, West Australia—and he taught Brunt, with a trainer's whip, the hardest thing a jock can learn—to sit still, to sit still and to keep on sitting still. When Brunt fairly grasped this truth, "Shackles" devastated the country. No weight could stop him at his own distance; and the fame of "Shackles" spread from Ajmir in the South to Chedputter in the North. There was no horse like "Shackles," so long as he was allowed to do his work his own way. But he was beaten in the end; and the story of his fall is enough to make angels weep.

At the lower end of the Chedputter race-course, just before the turn into the straight, the track passes close to a couple of old brick-mounds that enclose a funnel-shaped hollow. The big end of the funnel is not six feet from the railings on the off-side. The astounding peculiarity of the course is that, if you stand at one particular place, about half a mile away, inside the course, and speak at ordinary pitch, your voice just hits the funnel of the brick-mounds and makes a most curious whining echo there. A man discovered this by accident while out training one morning with a friend. He marked the place to stand and speak from with a couple of bricks, and he kept his knowledge to himself. Every peculiarity of a course is worth remembering in a country where rats play the mischief with the elephant-litter, and Stewards build jumps to suit their own stables. This man ran a very fairish countrybred. A long, racking high mare with the temper of a fiend, and the paces of an airy wandering seraph—a drifty, glidy stretch. The mare was, as a delicate tribute to Mrs. Reiver, called "The Lady Regula Baddun"—or for short, "Regula Baddun."

"Shackles'" jockey, Brunt, was a quiet well-behaved boy, but his nerve had been shaken. He began his career by riding jump-races in Melbourne, where a few Stewards want lynching, and was one of the jockeys who came through the awful butchery—perhaps you will recollect it—of the Maribyrnong Plate. The walls were colonial ramparts—logs of jarrah spiked into masonry—with wings as strong as church buttresses. Once in his stride, a horse had to jump or fall. He couldn't run out. In the Maribyrnong Plate, twelve horses were jammed at the second wall. "Red Hat," leading, fell this side, and threw out the "The Gled," and the ruck came up behind, and the space between wing and wing was one struggling, screaming, kicking shambles. Four jockeys were taken out dead; three were very badly hurt, and Brunt was among the three. He told the story of the Maribyrnong Plate sometimes; and when he described how Whalley, and the dust hid a small Hell of men and horses, no one wondered that Brunt had dropped jump-races and Australia together. "Regula Baddun's" knew that story by heart. Brunt never varied it in the telling. He had no education.

"Shackles" came to the Chedputter autumn races one year, and his owner walked about insulting the sportsmen of Chedputter generally, till they went to the Honary Secretary in a body and said: "Appoint handicappers, and arrange a race which shall break "Shackles" and humble the pride of his owner." The Districts rose against "Shackles" and sent up their best—"Ousel," who was supposed to be able to do his mile in 1:53; "Petard," the stud-bred trained by a cavalry regiment, who knew how to train; "Gringalet," the ewe-lamb of the 75th; "Bobolink," the pride of Peshawar, and many others.

They called that race The Broken-Link Handicap, because it was to smash "Shackles;" and the handicappers piled on the weights, and the Fund gave eight hundred rupees, and the distance was "round the course for all horses." "Shackles'" owner said: "You can arrange the race with regard to "Shackles" only. So long as you don't bury him under weight-cloths, I don't mind." "Regula Baddun's" owner said: "I throw in my mare to fret "Ousel." Six furlongs is "Regula's" distance, and she will then lie down and die. So also will "Ousel," for his jockey doesn't understand a waiting race." Now, this was a lie, for "Regula" had been in work for two months at Dehra, and her chances were good, always supposing that "Shackles" broke a blood-vessel —or Brunt moved on him.

The plunging in the lotteries was fine. They filled eight, thousand-rupee lotteries on the Broken-link Handicap, and the account in the Pioneer said that "favoritism was divided." In plain English, the various contingents were wild on their respective horses; for the handicappers had done their work well. The honorary Secretary shouted himself hoarse through the din; and the smoke of the cheroots was like the smoke, and the rattling of the dice-boxes like the rattle of small arm-fire.

Ten horses started—very level—and "Regula Baddun's" owner cantered out on his back to a place inside the circle of the course, where two bricks had been thrown. He faced towards the brick-mounds at the lower end of the course and waited.

The story of the running is in the Pioneer. At the end of the first mile, "Shackles" crept out of the ruck, well on the outside, ready to get round the turn, lay hold of the bit and spin up the straight before the others knew he had got away. Brunt was sitting still, perfectly happy, listening to the "drum, drum, drum" of the hoofs behind, and knowin that, in about twenty strides, "Shackles" would draw one deep breath and go up the last half-mile like the Flying Dutchman. As "Shackles" went short to take the turn, and came abreast of the brick-mound, Brunt heard, above the noise of the wind in his ears, a whining, wailing voice on the off-side saying, "God ha' mercy, I'm done for!" In one stride Brunt saw the whole howling, seething smash of the Maribyrnong Plate before him, started in his saddle, and gave a yell of terror. The start brought the heels into "Shackles'" side, and the scream hurt "Shackles'" feelings. He couldn't stop dead; but he put on his feet and slid along for fifty yards, and then very judicially bucked off Brunt—a shaken, terror-stricken lump, while Regula Baddun made a neck-and-neck race with Bobolink up the straight, and won by a short head—Petard a bad third. Shackles' owner, in the stand, tried to think that his field-glasses had gone wrong. Regula Baddun's owner, standing by the two bricks, gave one deep sigh of relief, and cantered back to the stand. He had won, in lotteries and bets, about fifteen thousand.

It was a Broken-link Handicap with a vengeance. It broke nearly all the men concerned, and nearly broke the heart of Shackles' owner. He went down to interview Brunt. The boy lay, livid and gasping with fright, where he had tumbled off. The sin of losing the race never seemed to strike him. All he knew was that Whalley had "called" him, and the "call" was a warning; and, if he were cut in two for it, he would never get up again. His nerve had gone altogether, and he only asked his master to give him a good thrashing, and let him go. He was fit for nothing, he said. He got his dismissal, and crept up to the paddock, white as chalk, with blue lips, his knees giving way under him. People said nasty things in the paddock, but Brunt never heeded. He changed into tweeds, took his stick and went down the road, still shaking with fright, and muttering over and over again: "God ha' mercy, I'm done for!" To the best of my knowledge and belief he spoke the truth.

So now you know how the Broken-link Handicap was run and won. Of course you don't believe it. You would credit anything about Russia's design or India, or the recommendations of the Currency Commission; but a little bit of sober fact is more than you can stand!

Proctor Knott and Spokane.

A VOICE FROM NASHVILLE.

Thousands of people in this and neighboring cities who saw Proctor Knott's head pulled off for the Two Thousand at West Side Park, June 2d, were completely dumbfounded at his defeat by Spokane for the Louisville Derby and the Clark Stakes. In the Derby Knott acquitted himself with much credit, though he lost the race, and his admirers looked for him to redeem himself in the Clark Stakes, especially as the distance was a quarter of a mile less. But they were thunderstruck when the Montana horse again ran away with the prize. They cannot account for it, theorize as they may. In the Derby Knott should have won but for the swerve in the stretch and "Pike" Barnes' inability to hold him. In the Clark Stake he couldn't have won had he been ridden by Garrison himself.

That Proctor Knott is one of the greatest horses seen on the American turf in many years is beyond question, and though he is, for the time being, a fallen hero, yet I am not without faith that he may show the best of them the road before the leaves begin to turn in the autumn. Proctor Knott is a big, stout-looking horse, but he is not made of iron, and observing trainers at Louisville were not surprised at his defeat in the Derby, and expected him to be beaten in the Clark.

A few days before the Derby was run, Bryant worked Knott a mile and a half in fast time, the first mile in 1:43. This was a corker for a big, heavy-headed horse like Knott so near to a race. Men on the track who saw that work shook their head dubiously, and when the day for the actual race came, put their money on the field. On Sunday morning before the race for the Clark Stake, Bryant sent the big gelding through the stretch at Louisville at a killing pace. When the time for actual racing came Proctor was off his feed and couldn't run a little bit.

Proctor Knott has been overtrained. He has been worked and physicked so much that he is bodily ill and "track sick." Bryant has hammered him around and put boys on his back that have see-sawed him until the great gelding has lost his courage and won't try when the time to try comes. In the hands of careful men like B. J. Johnson, Johnny Campbell or Major Buck Elliott, Proctor Knott would be simply invincible. Either of the three men would handle him with the greatest of care, and would train him upon entirely different lines from Bryant. Properly trained and ridden by a man like Isaac Murphy or "Snapper" Garrison, who could "place" him in a race, and nurse him for the struggle in the stretch, it would take a mighty great racehorse to beat him. Doubt is expressed by many good trainers, however, as to the ability of aby jockey to "place" him. They say he connot be restrained, but this is all "popycock." It's dollars to dimes that "Snapper" Garrison, Isaac Murphy, Jimmy McLaughlin or Wm. Hayward could "place" him and win with him over the best three-year-olds in the country.

In the Clark Stake the track was slightly heavy, just the kind of going which Proctor Knott never did like. Bryant's instructions to Ritchie and Finnegan were to restrain Knott and Come-to-Taw until the first six furlongs had been covered. Then the pair were to begin their race, and were told to come wide on the stretch, so as to strike the good going next the fence. Ritchie held his mount for the first three furlongs, Spokane being the pacemaker, but rounding the first turn from the stand Ritchie let Knott get away from him and cut out the running. Once in front he led all the way into the stretch, hugging the rail all the time. When Spokane collared him it was all over—the pacemaker quit and quit, like nine horses out of every ten will when they have run themselves out.

I do not wish to detract from the merits of Spokane. He is a great colt in every respect, and will be hard to beat at any distance, but he was in better condition for a race than his adversary. Rodegap had handled him with more care and had been preparing him slowly. He was thoroughly seasoned. Knott, on the other hand, had been rushed in his preparation, his surplus flesh had been taken off by physic, and he was brought to Nashville on edge. The horrible way in which he was pulled and hauled in the Two Thousand and the stiff work at Louisville was too much for a colt already weakened by bad handling, and he went to pieces when the crucial test came.

Spokane comes from speed-producing families, inheriting through his sire the invaluable blood of Leamington and Lexington. Through the sire of his second dam, Lightning, he gets a second strain of the famous Lexington blood, while from his third dam he obtains the blood of the sturdy Glencoe. Spokane was bred at Carlinville, Ill., but was foaled in Montana.
